 "There is a great deal of insincerity in the current excuse as to not buying such a work as this 'till it is finished.' For it is rather a collection of excellent monographs than an ordinary lexicon; and the importance of monographs, in any other case, would be at once admitted. So prevalent is the ignorance of our own language, that but few people can give the plain reasons why this dictionary is superior to all others; and there must be thousands who would buy it at once if they could only grasp this fact."—Professor SKERT (Academy, Aug. 29).

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.

The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.

The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.

The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Oct. 21; Madras, Oct. 22; Bombay, Oct. 24.

A last meeting of the Viceroy's Executive Council was held at Simla on Oct. 13 for the transaction of urgent business before Lord Lansdowne's departure for Cashmere.

On the occasion of the Viceroy's visit this month to Gwalior, Bhopal, and Indore, there will be no formal durbars, but only the usual interchange of ceremonial visits, and probably State banquets.

Lieutenant-Colonel Donald Robertson, Political Agent, will be posted temporarily to Bhopal during the Viceroy's stay there.

The Governor of Bombay, accompanied by Mr. Edgerley, private secretary, and Captain Fowle, aide-de-camp, left Poona on Oct. 20 on a visit to Ahmednugger and Sholapore.

At Salem, on Oct. 19, Lord Wenlock paid a graceful tribute to Mr. Caine's labours in the cause of temperance. So far as Mr. Caine's disinterestedness is concerned, the compliment no doubt is a well-deserved one; but for our part, says the Madras Mail, we cannot yet forget the hysterical exaggeration and even untruthfulness with which he and Mr. Smith first began their campaign.

The nomination of Sir William Lockhart to command the Oude district on General Perkins' retirement next April, says the Pioneer, implies that the former officer will be promoted to the rank of major-general as a reward for his services on the Samana Expedition. This is one of those cases of promotion by selection which will be universally approved, for General Lockhart is a soldier of exceptional ability. The command of the Punjab Frontier Force, which will fall vacant by his transfer to Lucknow, will probably devolve on Colonel Lance, now commanding at Ferozepore.

A Reuter telegram from Srinagar, dated Nov. 5, says:—Captain Younghusband, Lieutenant Davison, and Prince Galitzin, with a few Russian followers, have arrived here, and are awaiting the return of the Viceroy.

It is understood, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times states, that Captain Younghusband will shortly proceed to England on leave. He and Lieutenant Davison speak highly of the civility which has been shown them by the Russian officers who were charged to prevent their further explorations.

The Maharaja of Mysore, a Bangalore paper declares, really intends shortly to visit Europe. Domestic reasons appear to have influenced his indecision hitherto.

A Committee was sitting at Simla when the mail left, under Mr. Baines, census commissioner, of the officers connected with the census operations in the different provinces. Among those present were Messrs. Gunion (Central India), Drew (Bombay), Eales (Burma), and O'Donnell (Bengal).

The Government of India has sent home a despatch dealing with the opium question as raised by the memorial of the Anti-Opium Association to the Secretary of State last year.

More land is to be taken up for defence works at Quetta.

The forty-second anniversary of the Laurence Asylum at Sanawar was celebrated on Oct. 15, in memory of the gallant founder, whose name is so dear to and revered by all those who are fortunate enough to benefit by the advantages he has perpetually secured to the children of the British soldier in India.

The extension of the Sind-Sagar Railway from Mianwali to Murree, opposite Kalabagh on the Indus, is practically ready for traffic, and will shortly be opened.

Provision will be made in next year's Railway Estimates for the grant of 100 lacs for frontier railways. This will include between 30 and 40 lacs for the Mushkaf project, 20 lacs for the Mari-Attock line, and a large sum for re-grading the North-Western line between Jhelum and Rawul Pindi.

The proposals of the Government of India for the new provincial contracts have now been issued to all the local Administrations, except Burma. It is not likely that the total increase in favour of the Central Government will be more than 40 or 50 lacs.

Recruiting for the Border Militia, which are in future to hold the Hazara border, has already begun among the trans-frontier tribes, with the exception of the Hassanai and Akazai.

Under the orders of the Local Government, the two accused, Mustafa Khan and Saidulla Khan, who were recently tried in connection with matters pertaining to the murder of General Azimuddin Khan, late Vice-President of the Rampore Council of Regency, have been discharged from bail.

The QUEEN has been pleased to approve the appointment of the MARQUESS OF DUFFERIN AND AVA, K.P., to be Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports and Constable of Dover Castle, in the room of the late RIGHT HON. W. H. SMITH, M.P. It is stated that the fact of LORD DUFFERIN having accepted the Lord Wardenship is no indication that his Excellency is about to relinquish his post as British Ambassador to Italy. His Lordship will occupy Walmer Castle when he is on leave of absence in this country, and will continue to represent Great Britain at Rome.

WE have referred more than once to the extremely lax way in which the Indian news published by the Times at considerable expense is often edited. The following, which we transferred into the Homeward Mail last Monday from the preceding Saturday's Times, would be difficult to beat:—

The Commission to inquire into land indebtedness will meet at the end of January. Sir Charles Crosthwaite, who first made his mark as a settlement officer, will act as president. The Governor (sic) of the North-West Provinces has nominated Mr. Evans as member of the Commission for the Punjab, Rivaz (sic), and Bombay, but has not yet nominated a member for Bengal. Madras will not be represented. The first business will be to inquire into the working of the Deccan Ryots' Relief Act, and whether it should be extended to all parts of the Presidency. The next question to be considered is the indebtedness of the landed interest in the Punjab, the North-West and the Central Provinces, and whether its condition calls for relief, and what measures should be taken. The subject is vast and complicated, and will occupy the Commission probably for a year.

Why the "Governor" of the North-West Provinces should concern himself about the nominations for the Punjab, "Rivaz," Bombay, and Bengal has probably puzzled a good many people. What the Calcutta correspondent evidently meant to convey was that the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces has nominated MR. EVANS—MR. H. F. EVANS, we presume—as member for the Commission for these provinces; that MR. RIVAZ—RIVAZ is a man, not a place, as the sub-editors in Printing House Square imagine—will represent the Punjab; that Bombay has not yet chosen its member; and that Bengal and Madras will not be represented.

Prince Henry of Orleans will shortly leave Paris (Reuter telegraphs) on another journey of exploration in the Far East, and will be absent for about six months. He will start from Marseilles on Nov. 29 for Haiphong, whence he will proceed up the Black River to the Upper Mekong district. It is not yet known whether he will return via Siam and Burma, or by the French route from Lakhon, Cochin China, to Vinh.

The Secretary of State for India in Council has been pleased to sanction a grant of 1,000*l.* a year for the maintenance of the collections of the economic productions of India to be permanently installed at the Imperial Institute, and Mr. J. R. Royle, C.I.E., of the India Office, the son of the distinguished Indian botanist, the late Dr. Royle, has, under this arrangement, been transferred to the staff of the Imperial Institute as curator of the Indian section about to be opened there. Mr. Royle held for several years the post of Superintendent in the India Museum before its transfer to the South Kensington authorities, and has held prominent posts in the Indian sections of numerous International Exhibitions since 1867, in more recent years the post of Executive Commissioner for the Government of India at the Amsterdam Exhibition, 1883, and Official Agent for the Government of India at the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, 1886.

A marriage has been arranged, and will take place early in January, between James John Pratt, Indian Medical Service, civil surgeon, Bahraich, Oude, East Indies, and Ethel Mayne Fendall, daughter of Colonel Fendall Currie, commissioner, Faizabad, Oude, East Indies.

The ninth annual report of the Board of Indian Civil Service Studies at Cambridge states that there are now thirty-nine selected candidates in residence at Cambridge, of whom twenty-five were selected in the open competition of 1890, and will undergo their final examination in July 1892. Fourteen were selected in 1891, and will undergo their final examination in July 1893. The Cambridge probationers are distributed among the different colleges as follows:—Clare, 6; Pembroke, 4; Trinity Hall, 3; Gonville and Caius, 1; King's, 2; Christ's, 4; St. John's, 4; Magdalene, 1; Trinity, 6; Emmanuel, 8. Of these, fourteen hold, or have held, scholarships or exhibitions. Nineteen candidates underwent their final examination in July 1891, and all of them passed. Mr. Brunyate, Trinity, obtained the 60*l.* prize for law; Mr. Reid, Emmanuel, the 40*l.* prize for Bengali; Mr. Cargill, Emmanuel, the 25*l.* prize for geology. Of the candidates who passed, eight were in a higher, eleven in a lower, place than in the open competition. The Board expended 724*l.* 12*s.* in stipends to lecturers in law, Indian history and geography, political economy, Tamil and Telugu, Hindoostani and Hindi, Bengali and Sanscrit, Burmese, Persian, Marathi and Gujarati, and agricultural chemistry.

As has become usual with regard to changes in the Army during the last ten years, says the Morning Post, the new rules as to the appointment of officers to the Indian Staff Corps have scarcely come into force before it is rumoured that the regulations are once more to be revised, and it is now nearly certain that an early announcement of the fact will be made. When the Staff Corps regulations were altered so as to obtain officers direct from Sandhurst and the Militia, it was decided that the old system of drawing upon the subaltern officers of British regiments should cease altogether, except in the case of British officers commissioned prior to Sept. 1, 1892. It has since been discovered that there are many reasons why the system of transfer to the Staff Corps from British regiments should remain in force, not the least of which is the contingency of a large number of officers being required in an emergency, with no means of obtaining the necessary supply except from among a number of untrained cadets. Other reasons have also been brought to the notice of the authorities, and it is most probable that the regulations will be altered so as to provide for a small number of British officers being annually transferred to the Staff Corps on the old system in addition to the number obtained under the new.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS MUDDLE.

THE large number of memorials which have been signed and sent forward by officers of the Indian Staff Corps is in itself a sufficient proof, if, as SIR JOHN GORST declared, the Secretary of State was uninformed about it, that there is a widespread feeling in the Service of dissatisfaction with the present regulations. Such a feeling among a body of men so influential cannot but be a matter of some anxiety to the authorities, and is indeed one worth their attention. But between the evidence of a feeling of discontent and the proof of just grounds for it there is a wide gulf, and this is just the point which those who have somewhat more zealously than discreetly undertaken to work up the movement that is attracting so much attention in India and in this country appear to have overlooked. They of course are honestly satisfied—as are all who signed the memorials—that the case they have put forward is a good one and that their statement of it is sufficient to ensure a verdict in their favour, even from outsiders unacquainted with military affairs. They have not, however, in the somewhat bald exposition they have drawn up of their alleged wrongs, by any means made out clearly any well-founded grievances, and although there is reason to suppose that when so many gentlemen of an intelligence above the average concur in allegations of unfair treatment there are good and real grounds of complaint, the demonstration of that fact is still defective. The Pioneer of Oct. 11, in an article which, as we read it, is by no means unfriendly to the Service, declares that "the case for the Staff Corps could not in fact have been worse stated," and this opinion, which probably comes from an expert, only confirms the impression produced on the mind of an uninitiated person by a perusal of the circular lately issued. The Pioneer proceeds to show wherein it conceives the allegations of the circular are wanting in accuracy. The comparison, for instance, which was instituted between the relative rates of promotion in the British and Indian Services includes British Cavalry where, from exceptional circumstances promotion is very rapid. The gentlemen who undertook to argue the case for the Staff Corps ought to have avoided an argument open to such destructive criticism. In a memorial of this kind candour is of the essence of effective demonstration; yet, as the Pioneer says, "the memorialists leave out of sight the notorious fact that the promotion of the British Service is now getting slower every day." And so on; we need not discuss the whole document. As we hinted last week it has evidently been hastily prepared. A judicious advocate would have foreseen these strictures and either have met them in advance or avoided giving an opening for them. On one point we differ from the Pioneer—that, namely, as to the "taste" of instituting a comparison between British officers who have seen no active service and Staff Corps officers who are older and have been in action. If it be true that the latter are often superseded by the former we do not see why the fact should not be used in argument. It can be no disparagement of a junior British officer to plead that he ought not to supersede a Staff Corps veteran. However, in the main the Pioneer's criticism of the circular is candid enough, and as we have said, it does not seem to us to be unkindly meant. It only shows that the case has been badly argued. There surely must be some solid grounds for the discontent evidenced by the large number of signatures obtained for the memorials.

The Times of India and Bombay Gazette refer sympathetically to the movement, but they make an allegation as to MR. KING's present relations to it which our explanation of last week will show to have been inaccurate. We have little to add to that explanation beyond an explicit declaration that MR. KING has never committed himself to an advocacy of the alleged grievances of the Indian Staff Corps. He has undoubtedly given a good deal of time and attention to representations which have been made to him on the subject, but from the outset—a year ago—he has pointed out to influential persons who have consulted him about it, that the first step to take was to array the facts and arguments in favour of their contentions, and he expressed his readiness, if convinced, to assist so far as he could in the redress of any proved injustice. Beyond that it was naturally impossible for any Member of Parliament, who paid a serious regard to his responsibilities, to go, and the several points made by the Pioneer against the arguments of the circular and memorial show the reasonableness of this position. So far as he is concerned MR. KING is still waiting for information. It was as much due to the seriousness of the cause, as to his own reputation, that he should have before him a case so clearly stated as to secure conviction. He could hardly be expected to commit himself to circulars and memorials which he never saw before they were issued. The appeal to the House of Commons, as we said last week, is made without his approval. We understand that the Indian Military authorities, having got wind of the movement, have issued a memorial declaring that an appeal to Parliament is contrary to military traditions. We should hope they have done nothing so absurd. Parliament, in both Houses, has been again and again appealed to in military matters, witness the case of the Warrant Officers last session. The contretemps which has occurred in this instance is much to be regretted, and is due to too hasty action. It need not, however, discourage the Staff Corps if they have legitimate claims for redress. Their motto for the present should be—Reculer pour mieux sauter.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times :—

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

Nov. 3.—Nearly all the tea districts report that the season is closing early, owing to the want of rain, and that not much more tea is likely to be made. Although the year's crop will fall far short of the estimate, yet the exports up to date greatly exceed those of last year's total.

Nov. 5.—The danger of great distress in portions of the Madras Presidency is not over yet. The districts of Kurnool, Bellary, Salem, and Ganjam cause the most anxiety, but much depends on the rainfall of the next few days. Many Bengal districts report short crops and high prices. Cyclonic weather is now prevailing in the Bay of Bengal, and rain is falling at Calcutta to-day, which, if general, will do much good.

Nov. 8.—A cyclone of some intensity passed across the northern portion of the Bay of Bengal last week. It does not appear to have done any damage, and it gave two days of rain to a great part of Southern Bengal. This ought to do much good to the crops, but there can be no doubt that the harvest will be considerably below the average in many districts. In Madras the condition of the district of Ganjam continues to cause much anxiety. It is believed that Lord Wenlock will visit that district shortly.

AGRARIAN RIOT IN KURNOOL.

A serious agrarian riot occurred in Kurnool on Thursday. This is now one of the most distressed districts in Madras, and owing to the rise in prices thousands of people assembled and sacked the grain shops. A great quantity of grain was carried away; but little violence was shown, and there were no bad cases of personal injury. Order was restored by the local officers after some difficulty.

ATTEMPT TO MURDER MAJOR VINCENT.

Some days ago, while Major Vincent, vice-president of the Council of the Rampore State, was inspecting the local gaol he was suddenly set upon by a number of convicts, and but for the gallant defence which he and two native orderlies made there is but little doubt that he would have been murdered. The troops had to be called in, and the convicts were fired upon. The inquiry into the matter made by the Council clearly showed that the rising was deliberately planned with murderous intent. Five of the ringleaders have been executed.

SERIOUS RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

The following have been received through Reuter's Agency :—
BOMBAY, Nov. 5.—A terrible railway accident occurred this morning near Nagpore. A train conveying a number of British and native soldiers ran off the line and was wrecked. Five British soldiers were killed and thirty-one British and four native soldiers were injured. The Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Presidency, Sir George Greaves, and his staff were in the train, but it is believed that they have escaped.

The train which met with the disastrous accident near Nagpore was a heavy mail train which left Bombay this morning. It was drawn by two engines. The wheel of one of the engines broke while the train was travelling at a good speed, and the train ran off the line. Besides the five English soldiers, the drivers of both engines, the two firemen, and the guard were killed on the spot.

BOMBAY, Nov. 6.—Three of the soldiers injured in the accident at Nagpore have succumbed, making a total of thirteen killed. Eight of them belonged to the North Lancashire Regiment. Sir George Greaves, the Commander-in-Chief, and the members of his staff escaped with a shaking. None of the officers were injured.

The following are the names of the soldiers killed and injured in the railway accident near Nagpore yesterday :—Killed.—Privates Halstead, Smith, Willis, Hogarth, Mabby, Russell, Horn, Dawson, and Mulloy. Injured.—Sergeant Door, Privates Balshaw, O'Hara, Gorsley, Kinsella, Richardson, Stration (? Stratton), Thornley, Goulding, Alexander, Webster, Lawless, Southworth, Molloy, Pittard, Reddy, Poole, Connor, Fanburnt, Clark, Hales, and Kenny. The funeral of the victims took place this morning. The ceremony was attended by Sir George Greaves, the Commander-in-Chief, the members of his staff, and officers and men from several regiments. Two of the injured are in a precarious condition. The damage done to the rolling stock is estimated at 130,000 rs.

BOMBAY, Nov. 9.—Privates Gorsley, Clark, and Thornley, who were injured in the railway accident near Nagpore on the 5th inst., died to-day. The other injured men are progressing favourably.

CYCLONE IN THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 9.—A telegram from Port Blair announces that this morning the steamer Enterprise, one of the ships of the Indian Marine, foundered in the harbour during a cyclone which raged with severity throughout the bay. Out of a crew of eighty-three only six were saved, the remainder going down with the vessel. The pilot brig Colerston is also missing, but at present there is no reason to believe that she has been lost. The Enterprise was an iron steamer of 540 tons and 150 horse-power.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 10.—Immense damage was done in the Andaman Islands by the recent cyclone in which the Enterprise went down. The tornado broke with terrific force over the Indian Penal Settlement, and reduced many of the buildings to ruins. Sixty convicts were killed, and 200 injured by the falling buildings.

GUP.

ON Oct. 20 the first public function of the Madras season was held, the Governor giving a breakfast held in the banquetting-hall. It was very largely attended in spite of the heavy rain that beat down steadily from an early hour. Lord Wenlock, accompanied by Mr. J. D. Rees and Captain Holmes, A.D.C., arrived punctually, and His Excellency having shaken hands with many of those present, breakfast was served. A good deal of attention was bestowed afterwards on a picture of an engaging and ingenuous youth, in the robes of a baron, which has just been hung on the walls of the banquetting-hall. It is labelled Baron Connemara, K.C.I.E. This was the picture for which a public subscription was made. It is, says the Madras Times, as good a likeness of our ex-Governor as the portrait in the same hall is of Sir M. E. Grant Duff; only this time the painter has erred the right way.

The Indian Jurist becomes quite hysterical over Lord Wenlock's controversy with Mr. Caine:—"Nothing, for many a long day, has given us such unalloyed delight as the Madras Governor's powerful attack on Mr. Caine, M.P., an attack which (we trust) will set a mark on the would-be slayer of his official brother, and make his punishment greater than he can bear. Certainly, Lord Wenlock bowled admirably well. The ball came true and swift at the middle stump, without a bit of break on it, and, easily passing the cane-handled hat, knocked both balls into space. For a while, let the vanquished one lie low. Lord Wenlock, we salute thee. Macte tua virtute puer!"

The committee of the New Club were to meet on Oct. 20 to consider whether liquidation should be adopted. This is, says the Pioneer correspondent, almost certain to be decided upon, in which case a general meeting will be summoned a fortnight hence to pass the necessary resolutions. At a small informal meeting of a few residents, the question was discussed of forming a social amusement club, with a view to taking over the buildings of the New Club. A committee was appointed, but no definite conclusion was arrived at. It is just possible an effort will be made to carry on the New Club after the present company has been liquidated.

The Poona Observer reports what it declares to have been one of the grandest weddings we have ever had in Poona, which took place on Oct. 21 at "Polo Vista," the residence of General and Mrs. Pottinger. The marriage ceremony was performed in St. Mary's Church, which was very tastefully decorated for the occasion. The church was crowded, not only by the large number of guests, but by a very fair gathering of the Poona public, with whom Captain Hobday and Miss Pottinger have always been such popular favourites. The Rev. Mr. Lochee, chaplain of Kirkee, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Beck, chaplain of St. Mary's, conducted the marriage service, which was a full choral one. As soon as the bride, who was most exquisitely dressed, arrived at the church with her father, General Pottinger, the choir burst forth with the hymn, "The voice that breathed o'er Eden." This was sung as the bridal procession moved up the aisle. The bridesmaids were the bride's four sisters, Misses May, Rose, Irene, and Dorothy Pottinger, who looked very charming in their snow white dresses, each wearing a pretty gold brooch, in the form of a gun and carriage, the gift of the bridegroom. The bride and bridegroom, having taken their usual place at the altar rails, the former, attended by her father and the bridesmaids and the latter by Captain Allison, the "best man," the interesting service was proceeded with, and at the close Miss Wiseman, officiating organist of St. Mary's, played the Wedding March, and the newly-married couple walked back together to the vestry, where the necessary signatures were then taken in the marriage register. In the meantime a phaeton with three postillions (Messrs. Stevens, Kelly, and McMunn, of the Royal Artillery) was driven up to the church door for Captain and Mrs. Hobday, who, on getting into the carriage, were greeted with a shower of rice, two trumpeters at the same time sounding the "Salute." The happy pair were then driven off, followed by Sergeant-Major Gillan and Quartermaster-Sergeant Haines, of the Royal Artillery, as escort. The wedding party next assembled at "Polo Vista," where the time-honoured custom, among the military, of the bride cutting the wedding cake with the bridegroom's sword was followed. The Hon. Mr. J. G. More proposed the health of the bride and bridegroom in a very happy little speech.

In the history of remarkable rides must certainly be reckoned the journey made the other day from Leh to Srinagar by Captain Evans Gordon, Political Department. Starting from Leh at 3 A.M. on Oct. 10, Captain Gordon crossed the Phota Pass (13,300 feet) and the Mamika Pass (13,000 feet), and reached Dras at a quarter past nine in the evening, having, when an allowance is made for a half-hour's halt, covered 151 miles in under eighteen hours. After resting for seven hours, Captain Gordon and his faithful syce started again in a blinding snow storm for Mattain, only a dozen miles distant, which was not reached till two hours later. Here the weather had temporarily improved, but snow was again falling before Baltal was reached. By this time it was noon. Pushing on, the traveller found that Sonamarg was deep in snow, and that two days' heavy rain had made the track to Srinagar very nearly impassable; but by dint of perseverance the Residency was reached at eight o'clock in the evening, 250 miles having been actually got over in something under thirty-three hours. The ponies were changed twenty-five times. Such a feat to those who are acquainted with the country and road over which the journey lay needs no enlarging upon in order to appreciate the endurance and determination shown by Captain Gordon and by his syce, Ramzam.

The Germans are extending their notorious ingenuity in false imitations to India. A correspondent writes from Calcutta:—"The Customs officers here have made a considerable seizure of shawls imported from Germany by three foreign firms here with Cashmere marks, and intended, after treatment by some peculiar washing process, to be sent up-country and sold as genuine Cashmere shawls. Their cost is about 10 rs. or 15 rs., and it is said as much as 100 rs. and over is obtained for them. The importers have been heavily fined and the marks removed."

A correspondent writes to the Englishman:—"Here's an item of news which may interest your readers, particularly naturalists. Yesterday a guard employed on the East Indian Railway at Howrah turned up a centipede in the goods shed. It had grown black with age, had scales on the body about the size of a tamarind seed, measured a foot long, and was fully 1 inch in breadth."

PERSONAL.

COLONEL OTTLEY, on returning from leave to England, has resumed his duties of chief engineer for irrigation in the Punjab.

Major Drummond, private secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, has rejoined his appointment from furlough.

Mr. Hoskins, D.S.P. at Meerut, goes to Rampore as a temporary measure, to restore order.

Mr. J. Sladen, C.S., has been appointed to act as assistant commissioner in Sind, pending further orders.

Mr. G. M. Urquhart, C.S., has been permitted to revert to his appointment of assistant collector in Sind.

Mr. J. S. Roche, 21st Hussars, with Mrs. Roche, left India for England on Oct. 15, via Bombay.

Mr. M. J. Ogle, Deputy-Superintendent of the Survey of India, is granted furlough for twelve months.

Mr. Mackworth Young, C.S., was to relieve Colonel Grey, of the Financial Commissionership of the Punjab, on Nov. 10.

Mr. Latham Brown has been appointed Deputy Accountant-General for inspection duty in the Public Works Department of the Government of India.

Mr. C. E. S. Steele has been appointed Head Assistant Collector, Sind Commission, instead of Mr. S. W. Tyndall, who has retired, and Mr. M. D. Mackenzie has been appointed Second Assistant Collector, Sind Commission, in Mr. Steele's place.

We (Times of India) learn that Mr. A. Smith, commissioner, Presidency Division, Calcutta, who is now acting for the Hon. Mr. Halliday, will be confirmed from the end of October, when Mr. Halliday goes, till the middle of December, when Mr. Smith also retires; and that Mr. C. C. Stevens, Commissioner, Patna, will then be appointed a member of the Board of Revenue, Bengal.

Mr. Upcott, engineer-in-chief of the Gauhati-Lumding Railway, will collect his staff in Calcutta about the middle of November. The following officers will be placed under his orders:—Messrs. McCudden, Stent, Oddie, and K. S. Chatterji, executive engineers, and Messrs. J. Willcocks and McElhinny, assistant engineers.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Captain William Chimmio, R.N., retired, who died on Oct. 30, at Westdowne, Weymouth, was born about the year 1828, and entered the Royal Navy in 1841. Soon afterwards he saw much service during the first China war in the Modeste, 18, and Cornwallis, 72, in which latter ship his relative, Mr. Benjamin Chimmo, R.N., was at the time secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker. He was present in the operations in the Canton river, at the capture of Chapoo, Woosung, Shanghai, and Ching Kiang, and at the blockade of Nankin. Subsequently he served in the Dido, 18, Captain the Hon. H. Keppel, in the operations in 1843-44 against the pirates of Borneo. In the latter year he became a midshipman, and before his promotion to a lieutenantancy in 1850 he was employed in the Herald, 8, Captain Kellett, in one of the early searches for Sir J. Franklin. In 1852 he was again appointed to the Herald for service in the iron paddle-steamer Torch, of which for a considerable period he had command. He was fortunate enough to be able to rescue the shipwrecked crew of the Ningpo, which went ashore at D'Entrecasteaux Reef, and to capture the murderers of a Government geological exploring party off the Percy Islands. In 1856 he joined the Junco, 26, on the Australian Station, as additional lieutenant for special service, and led the successful search for Mr. Gregory's expedition in Torres Straits. In 1856 he was appointed to the Porcupine, 3, for service in the gunboat Seagull, in which he conducted a survey of part of the west coast of Scotland. He remained for many years engaged in hydrography, and was for a time borne on the books of the Fisgard, 42, flagship at Woolwich. During part of this period he acted as secretary to the hydrographer of the Admiralty. After his promotion in 1864 to the rank of commander, Captain Chimmo became for a few months in 1865 inspecting officer of Coastguard at Yarmouth; but soon obtained command of the Gannet, 3, and, proceeding in her to the West Indies and North America, undertook the survey of the coasts of Trinidad and Labrador. His last service afloat was in the Nassau, 4, in which he explored the Sooloo Islands, and had a hot engagement with the Illanoon pirates, killing 190 of the enemy, and losing three officers and two men wounded. He retired with the rank of captain in 1873. Captain Chimmo, who was for some years honorary secretary of the Weymouth and County Club, was a Fellow of the Royal Geographical, Linnean, Royal Astronomical, and other learned societies, and was an officer who leaves modern hydrography much indebted to him. He possessed the China medal with clasp for Canton and the Arctic medal.

Major-General W. W. Lodder, Retired List, late 59th Regiment, died recently at Ulverstone, Tasmania. He joined the Army March 7, 1834; became captain, February 6, 1841; major, June 20, 1854; lieutenant-colonel, November 1, 1858; colonel, March 18, 1865; and retired with the honorary rank of colonel, July 18, 1865. He was present with the 59th Regiment in China—before and capture of Canton—in 1857 (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp).

Colonel E. E. Oakes, Bengal Staff Corps, died at 19 Wynnstay Gardens on Oct. 22. He was son of the late R. M. Oakes, 1st Life Guards. He joined the Army December 11, 1847; became lieutenant-colonel, December 11, 1873; and retired with honorary rank of colonel, October 13, 1877. He served in the Punjab Campaign of 1848-49, and was present at the second siege operations before Mooltan, including the attack on the suburbs; afterwards present at battle of Goojerat (medal with two clasps).

The death has been reported of Major-General Playfair, retired from the Bengal Staff Corps, an officer who served in the Persian, Bhootan, and Afghan Wars. He left the Army in 1882, and died on Sunday last, aged sixty years.

Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel Mouat died on Oct. 20 at Belgaum of apoplexy. As chief medical officer, says a Belgaum telegram, he rendered valuable service during the five years he has been there, regardless of his own health and comfort. He was unremitting in his care of the sick, and the British soldier in hospital never had a more sincere friend. He was highly esteemed.

An Indian contemporary records the decease of Dr. Beatson, civil surgeon of Gaya, which occurred on Oct. 15. The cause of death was blood-poisoning contracted at an operation performed at Gaya Hospital about ten days before.

The Allahabad paper announces the death at Mirzapore from enteric fever of Mr. J. Oakeshott, the judge of that station. At his death he had completed nine years' service in India. His last appointment before joining the Judicial Service was assistant commissioner of Naini Tal, where his loss will be lamented by a host of friends. By Mr. Oakeshott's untimely death the Government of these provinces loses an officer of exceptional ability and promise.

A Madras telegram of Oct. 17 says:—News has just been received here of a terrible accident on the Periyar Works, resulting in the death of Mr. Henry Scott Taylor, executive engineer, Public Works Department, and a son of Mr. George Noble Taylor, an ex-Madras civilian, and the present chairman of the Madras Railway. The deceased, who was superintendent of the works, while showing Colonel Pennycuik the working of the wire rope tramway for conveying concrete from the workshops to the main dam at Periyar, was knocked down by the machinery, when his legs passing between the spokes of a revolving horizontal pulley, he was carried round against the wooden framing whereon it was mounted, with the result that both his legs were torn off. Mr. Taylor succumbed to the injuries very soon after. His wife, who was present, witnessed the whole occurrence. His death has cast a gloom over the little colony of English engineers who were assisting him in the successful carrying out of the great irrigation project on the Periyar river, of which he was in charge, and it deprives the State of a very valuable officer.

We (Pioneer) greatly regret to hear that his Grace the Archbishop of Agra, Dr. Jacopi, died at Mussoorie on Oct. 14. The late Archbishop was one of the many priests belonging to the Church of Rome whose devotion and talents have shed a bright lustre on its record in foreign lands. The jubilee of his Grace's service in India was celebrated only last January, so that for more than fifty years he has laboured in this country, winning the respect and esteem of all with whom he came in contact, not only for the earnestness of the faith that was in him and the vigour of his piety, but for his services in the cause of the education of the Catholic community, and for his unweary-ing assiduity in those works of humanity and mercy which give savour to religious profession, whatever the creed may be. Among these enduring testimonies to the generous spirit of the man may be noted, as due either wholly or mainly to his enthusiasm and exertions, the Roman Catholic Cathedral at Lahore, the convents at Murree and Simla, the orphanage at Simla for destitute orphan girls of European parentage, and the orphanage for boys at Mussoorie. In educational matters the Archbishop's zeal was untiring, and the success of St. Peter's College at Agra and St. George's School at Mussoorie is due in no small measure to his hearty support. By the members of the Church of Rome the Archbishop will naturally be missed and mourned in an especial way, but such a prelate is a public benefactor as well as an ecclesiastic representing a particular creed, and his loss will be followed by the regrets of the community.

THE VICEROY IN CASHMERE.

THE Viceroy's movements en route to Cashmere are detailed in this mail's papers, but have been anticipated by telegraph. He was accompanied by Lady Lansdowne, Ladies Evelyn and Beatrice Fitzmaurice, Lord William Beresford, Colonel Aradagh, Sir Mortimer Durand, and other members of the Staff, and proceeded via Umballa, Rawul Pindi, Murree, Domel, and Uri. The special correspondent of the Times of India telegraphed from the camp at Srinagar (Oct. 23) the following account of the arrival of the Viceregal party, which was favoured by splendid weather. His Highness the Maharaja, accompanied by his ministers, arrived in his State barge at Parana Chuni, five miles below the city, punctually at 1.30. At the same point Colonel Prideaux, the Resident, waited his Excellency's arrival, accompanied by Colonel Neville Chamberlain, Dr. Dean, Residency Surgeon, Mr. Logan, Accountant-General, Punjab, and a number of officials and residents. Captain Evans Gordou, Assistant Resident, went on by steam launch to meet the party. The Viceregal party was expected about 1.30, but it was not till a few minutes past two before the scarlet-clad towers of the State barge, with the Viceroy on board, could be seen on the opposite bank, as they rounded a wide sweep of the river about a mile off. Slowly the long procession of State house boats came into view, and shortly afterwards Colonel Prideaux and the other officials went on board the Maharaja's State barge, which was put off into mid-stream to meet the Viceroy. The array of large State boats, manned by rowers in scarlet uniform, made a striking picture in the bright sunshine, with a setting of beautiful river scenery, and a background of snow-capped mountain. It was not, however, till the precincts of the city were reached that the procession was swelled to its full proportion, the multitude of small boats being prevented from going below a certain point. After the officials had been presented to the Viceroy, the procession proceeded on its way, the boats being towed for some distance. At Gaskhana, a mile further up, a regiment of the Maharaja's infantry, in showy scarlet uniform, was drawn up, and the Maharaja's band was also posted at this point. When the Viceroy's boat came abreast the ferry, the troops began to march along the bank, the band playing a lively tune. This order was preserved for some distance, and at the same time the guns of the picturesque Fort of Hariparbut could be heard firing a royal salute. The first of the seven bridges of the city was passed by the leading boats at 3.15, and here a swarm of boats fell into the line of procession, threatening at first to block the whole width of the river. The police officer, however, continued to reduce the jostling crowd to order, and further progress of the procession was admirably managed. The various bridges were kept clear of sight-seers for prudential reasons, but the approaches were crowded, and every point of vantage among the quaint houses which line the banks presented an unbroken sea of turbaned heads. The crowd was undemonstrative, but after the fashion of such crowds it was most orderly and appreciative. The attempts at decoration were confined to the bridges, the Maharaja's Palace, the Pundit's School, and a few private houses, but the great water highway of Srinagar, stretching for some three miles through the city, stands in no need of gala setting, and was looking its best. The whole population seemed to have turned out, and the broad river, the blue-sky, the gay barges, and the bright-liveried crews made up a magnificent picture, closed in by the lofty hills beyond the Lake I-Suliman, which was brightly and exquisitely lit up by the glow of the evening sun. The procession reached the Residency at 5.15, the landing of the Viceroy being the signal for the firing of another royal salute. The Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne are looking remarkably well after their journey, and their entrance into the capital of Cashmere has taken place under the most auspicious circumstances. The procession on the river passed off without a single casualty.

The Times correspondent telegraphs (Nov. 8):—

The Viceroy during his stay at Cashmere has had frequent interviews with the Maharaja and the members of the State Council, and has discussed the question of reinstating his Highness with some of the powers which he voluntarily surrendered in March 1889. His Excellency has given the Maharaja assurances that the Indian Government has never ceased to regard him as the legitimate ruler of the State, and has always been anxious to maintain the dignity of his position.

During the last two and a-half years the State Council has initiated many important reforms, in the execution of which the Indian Government has freely afforded the assistance of the following skilled officers—viz., Mr. Lawrence, in connection with revenue administration and land settlement; Colonel Neville Chamberlain, for organising the army; and Mr. Logan, for revising the financial system. The Maharaja has intimated his readiness to accept and continue the reforms already initiated by the Council, and has voluntarily proposed to reduce his personal expenditure, which has hitherto been a heavy charge on the State.

In view of this guarantee and of a personal examination which Lord Lansdowne has made into the various affairs of the State, the Indian Government now proposes, as an experimental measure, to revise the existing system of administration in the sense above indicated. It is understood that the State Council shall remain unchanged, and if any difference of opinion arises between the Maharaja and the Council, it is open to either party to refer the matter to the British Resident, without whose concurrence no step of importance shall be taken. Under the new arrangement the Maharaja becomes the President of the Council, and Raja Amar Singh the Vice-President. As a mark of the care and discretion with which the latter has conducted the affairs of the State during the last two and a half years, the Queen has, on the recommendation of the Viceroy, approved of the honour of Knight Commander of the Star of India being conferred on him.

The most interesting event connected with Lord Lansdowne's visit to Cashmere during the past week was the arrival in the Viceregal camp of the Russian traveller, Prince Galitzin. This appears to have given rise to a number of strange rumours, but, as a matter of fact, the Prince is merely on a sporting tour. He entered Cashmere from the north, and it is understood that he will proceed to India, Burma, and Ceylon. The Viceroy and party were to start on their return journey this morning. The last few days have been devoted to sight-seeing, and his Excellency's only public utterance was a speech which he made to the boys of the Church Mission School at Srinagar on Friday.

THE IMPERIAL DIAMOND CASE.

THE case, in which Mr. Burder was called upon to produce certain notes or their proceeds which he had received from Mr. Jacob, the defendant in the Hyderabad diamond case, and which the High Court, on the application of the Nizam's counsel, had insisted should be deposited with the police magistrate, came on for hearing on Oct. 22 at Calcutta. Mr. Burder stated that the process of the Court had been served upon him through the Secunderabad Cantonment Magistrate's Court while he was engaged upon the Commission appointed to examine the Nizam, and as there had been delay in the examination of his Highness consequent on his illness, and as he was not likely to be able to reach Calcutta in time to be present on the date the process was returnable, he had submitted a statement of his defence in writing, which he had asked his Calcutta solicitors, Messrs. Morgan and Company, to present to the magistrate. The police court was, however, closed on Oct. 15 on account of the Doorga Poojah holidays, and his solicitors could not present the letter. He, therefore, proposed reading it to the magistrate, as it embodied all his arguments in his defence. The magistrate having heard the statement through, said that the High Court left him no option in the matter, and Mr. Burder must deposit the proceeds of the notes with him till the conclusion of the Nizam's case against Mr. Jacob has been decided as to the latter's right or otherwise to the money in dispute. The money was deposited to the extent of one lac and forty-nine thousand and odd, allowance being made for a few hundreds actually spent by Mr. Burder in Calcutta.

On the conclusion of Mr. Burder's case a further hearing of the case against Mr. Jacob was resumed. The prosecution filed an evidence taken on the Commission from the Nizam and the Manager, Alliance Bank, at Simla, and closed the case. Mr. Inverarity said he did not object to the incorporation of the evidence taken on the Commission in the general proceedings of the case, if they were accepted subject to the objections he had already urged. The Nizam had admitted, he said, that this was a private prosecution by himself, and under these circumstances, as a ruling chief or not, he would have to come and give evidence against Mr. Jacob, otherwise his absence would be fatal to the prosecution.

A statement by Mr. Jacob was next read to the Court, in which Mr. Jacob acknowledged the very great kindness the Nizam had always shown him, and attributes the failure of this transaction to the animus of the Resident and to the eagerness of certain palace officials to blackmail him. Mr. Jacob was eventually committed to take his trial at the next sessions of the High Court, but he was enlarged on the same bail as previously accepted. It is generally believed that Mr. Jacob will get off in the High Court on the technical objection that the Nizam, being a private prosecutor, must attend, and that, if he be absent, his case must fail.

The scene of the "Imperial" Diamond case, says the Englishman, has once more shifted. The work at Hyderabad has been completed, and the principals engaged in the case returned to Calcutta on Oct. 20. Mr. Woodroffe, Mr. Ernest Cowie, and Mr. Jacob arrived at Howrah station by the same train. A great deal has been said about the way in which the famous diamond was taken to Hyderabad and back again—for it is once more safely lodged in the vaults of the Bank of Bengal. To Mr. Ernest Cowie must be given the sole credit. On the journey to Hyderabad he carried the diamond in a belt round his waist, and on the return to Calcutta it was brought in an iron chest. Mr. Cowie was accompanied, in the first instance, by Sergeant Eagleton of the Calcutta Police; but on the return journey Mr. Fellowes, Assistant Inspector-General of Police, was added to the party.

THE RETIREMENT OF SIR JAMES LYALL.

THE PRESENTATION TO LADY LYALL.

THE subscribers to the farewell testimonial to Lady Lyall assembled at Barnes Court, Simla, on Oct. 7, chief among them being the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne. The testimonial took the shape of a handsome set of Cashmere silver work, of the lotus pattern.

Sir Frederick Roberts, speaking on behalf of the committee, said:—

Your Excellency, Ladies, and Gentlemen,—Amongst the drawbacks which counterbalance the many advantages of an Indian career, one of the greatest, to my mind, is the fleeting and changeable condition of society, which necessitates the frequent breaking-up of our pleasantest associations, and must, in a measure, tend to harden our hearts to the pain of having to part with those who, if it were possible, we would gladly keep always in our minds. But even people who, like myself, have undergone a long course of this hardening process, cannot part unmoved with old and valued friends, though they may be able, as in my case, to look forward to a not very distant renewal of the friendship in the old country. I cannot contemplate the approaching departure of Sir James and Lady Lyall without the deepest regret, both on private and public grounds—a regret which is felt by all who have had the privilege of their acquaintance, though perhaps not so keenly as by me, who have had that privilege longer than almost anyone else here to-day. This must be my excuse for consenting to preside at this meeting, about which I had some hesitation, feeling, as I do, that some one might have been found who could express in happier terms all that is in our hearts on this occasion. I have known Sir James Lyall for a considerable number of years. Most of our service has been passed in the Punjab, and for the greater part of the time we were absent from Northern India we were both employed in far-off Madras, where we were more or less associated. Ladies and gentlemen, I will not take up your time by expatiating on all that Sir James Lyall has done for his country in India. It is not for me, nor is this the occasion, to do so; but I will, with your permission, give a very brief sketch of his official career. Sir James was among the very last of the Haileybury men, and was a contemporary of Sir Philip Hutchins, Sir Charles Bernard, Sir Charles Grant, Mr. Elsmie and Mr. Rivett-Carnac. He arrived in India in April 1858, and for the first six years carried on the duties of an Assistant Commissioner in various parts of the Punjab, and was then appointed Assistant to the Settlement Commissioner. This was the turning point in Sir James Lyall's career. He rapidly passed through the various grades in the Revenue Department, and in 1867-68 he became Settlement Commissioner, and at the beginning of 1879 Financial Commissioner, with a little more than twenty years' service. This will be considered very early promotion, but it was universally admitted that Mr. Lyall's marked success in the work of a settlement officer fully justified his being placed at the head of his department. It was, indeed, as a revenue officer that Sir James Lyall made his name in the Punjab. He was distinguished for his intimate acquaintance with land tenures, and for his great sympathy with, and knowledge of, the people. His settlement work was chiefly carried on in the districts of Gurdaspore and Kangra, and I recollect being greatly struck, when I was travelling through those districts a few years ago, by the kindly manner in which he was remembered there. Sir James Lyall was then Resident at Mysore and Chief Commissioner of Coorg, and numerous were the inquiries made about him, and the expressions of hope that he would be the next Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. Sir James Lyall's sojourn in Mysore lasted for less than four years, but that was long enough to make his and Lady Lyall's departure felt as a very great loss by all in that part of India. A year or two after they left, the Maharaja of Mysore came all the way to Lahore to see Sir James and Lady Lyall. I met his Highness in Calcutta, and on remarking that it was a long journey for him to take, he replied, "I would go twice the distance to see my friends Sir James and Lady Lyall." (Applause.) In April 1887, just twenty-nine years after his first arrival in India, Sir James Lyall was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab and its dependencies, and it is on the occasion of his being about to vacate this high office that we, his friends, have assembled to assure him of our great esteem and respect as our local ruler, and of our unfeigned sorrow that we are so soon to lose him and the lady who has shared in his labours and graced his establishment for nearly twenty years, who has won all our hearts by her generous kindness, her warm sympathy and her genuine unselfishness, and who, by her cordial, genial manner, will cause the Barnes Court hospitalities to be looked back upon as among the most cherished of our Indian reminiscences. (Loud applause.) Ladies and gentlemen, before I conclude there is one little incident I must relate, as it shows better than any words of mine how generally Lady Lyall has made her influence felt throughout Simla society. When it was proposed that some little present should be offered to her as a tribute of our affection and esteem, several children begged to be allowed to join and get something for "dear Lady Lyall." That something is now here, and I am deputed by Lady Lyall's many Simla friends to ask her kind acceptance of it. (Applause.) Lady Lyall, on behalf of all those friends I beg you will allow me to say how greatly we shall miss you, how heartily we wish you and Sir James Lyall a long and happy life, and what pleasure and delight it will be to us to meet you both again in years to come. (Applause.)

Sir James Lyall, in replying, was deeply affected, and, on behalf of Lady Lyall, expressed her high appreciation of the good-will and kindly feeling which had prompted the present being made. He said: Sir Frederick Roberts has spoken so kindly that it is very difficult to find words which will sufficiently express for my wife and for myself what we feel. I expected to have to say a few words on her behalf, but was not prepared for any mention of myself or my official career. It is a new experience to me to have to attempt to reply, before so many friends, to a speech, full of so many kind expressions, and if I break down you will excuse me. As for Sir Frederick Roberts' remarks on myself, all I can say is that I am very grateful for them, and that there is no man from whom I would rather receive praise, or whose good opinion I value higher than I do his. (Applause.) On behalf of my wife I beg to say that she will always remember this day with the greatest pleasure and gratitude, and will take home the very beautiful and magnificent farewell gift which you have so kindly presented to her with as much pride as a soldier brings back from a campaign a sword of honour. As long as she lives the sight of it will awaken in her mind grateful affection for the kind donors, the hope of meeting them again, and regret that she had not done more than she has done to deserve so much kindness. As to regret, both my wife and I expect to feel it keenly hereafter—regret of a most selfish kind, at being separated for ever from the very free and agreeable and gay, but well disciplined, society of Simla. (Applause.) We never expect to find ourselves elsewhere in a society so pleasant and so friendly, beg to thank you all for the farewell gift and for the honour you have done us in coming here to present it. We shall remember to-day as one of the proudest in our lives. (Loud applause.)

THE AMEER'S POLICY.

We extract the two following notes from the Pioneer of Oct. 22 :—

A statement has recently been made that the Ameer of Cabul is not inclined to resent Russian supremacy over Wakhan and the Pamirs. Those who have thus made themselves responsible for Abdul Rahman's opinions may have some occult means of discovering what his "inclinations" are, but his Highness has certainly made no sign so far that he will meekly acquiesce in Russian aggression. On the contrary, everything points to his feeling keen resentment at any intrusion into Wakhan, for since the Panjdeh affair in 1885 he has jealously asserted his authority in the petty States in the Upper Oxus. It is as if he felt that his prestige had suffered by events on his North-west frontier, and that, therefore, he was bound to uphold it all the more strongly on the north-east. The Afghan outposts in Shignan, Roshan, and Wakhan have been increased, and all Europeans have been turned back when trying to pass them. Whenever the question of his right to occupy the territory above indicated has been raised, he has shown an obstinate determination not to withdraw a single soldier. The country is a wild and barren one, but he regards it as part and parcel of Afghanistan, and it will indeed be wonderful if a ruler of his strong character suddenly changes his opinion. It is, we believe, far more likely that when he comes to understand exactly what has happened and how the Russians have, as it were, outflanked North-Eastern Afghanistan by annexing the Pamirs right down to the Hindu Kush, he will feel keen resentment against them. In 1883 General Tcherniaeff urged the St. Petersburg Government to insist on the withdrawal of Afghan troops from Shignan; M. de Giers pressed this point upon Earl Granville; and later on there was a sort of veiled threat that force might be used if the Ameer persisted in holding his ground. He himself learned the danger that he saw of a collision with Russia, but he was not intimidated. When he recalls this affair of seven or eight years ago he will no doubt understand that the Russians, now or next spring, will not rest content with having seized the Pamirs, but will once more demand that Shignan shall be declared non-Afghan territory. Under these circumstances, for Abdul Rahman to declare his acquiescence in the last move in Central Asia would be to encourage his enemies—for such he must consider them—to advance still further and to raise fresh claims to his territory. It is, in reality, a very delicate position, for his Highness is much more likely to demand from the British Government protection from Russian aggression than to sit still and see his outposts forced back next year.

We quite fail to see what good can be done at the present juncture by casting aspersions upon the good faith of the Ameer of Cabul, and by insinuations that he has for years past been playing a double game. His Highness is furnished regularly with extracts from Indian newspapers, and though his interpreters doubtless gloss over remarks which are not complimentary to him, there are others who may make it their business to poison his mind against the British Government by showing how he is being attacked by newspaper writers. It is easy enough for the Lahore paper to question Abdul Rahman's sincerity, to declare that he may at any moment throw himself into the arms of Russia; and that he is still sorely offended with the Government of India by reason of the protest made against his vindictive policy against Isakh Khan's adherents; but there is absolutely no evidence forthcoming in support of these charges. In a somewhat illogical way it is argued that, because the Ameer has shown reluctance to reply to the Viceroy's invitation to visit India, while announcing to his people that he intends journeying to England, therefore he is guilty of some grave offence. As a matter of fact, the invitation was sent many months ago, and his Highness replied to it, stating that the then state of his health would not admit of his travelling. Since then he has grown much stronger, and a sudden fancy has taken possession of him to see Europe. Why or wherefore is not clear; we should not be in the least surprised if one or other of his English employes has not pictured to him that he would be lionised like the Shah if he were to appear in London. The idea of his getting a certificate from his subjects, setting forth that he is a just and benevolent ruler, and flourishing this in the face of the Government of India as he passes through the country on his way to England, is altogether too absurd. It can only have arisen from a mistaken notion of what really occurred in 1889. The protest then made against his severity towards the rebels was unequivocal no doubt, but it contained more than an expression of disapproval of his actions. He was warned that the continuance of his policy would in all probability give the Russians an excuse for interfering in Afghan Turkistan, and that therefore he should moderate his fury against the adherents of Isakh Khan, then a refugee in Bokharan territory. His self-interest was appealed to as well as his humanity, and in spite of his resentment against interference from without he must have recognised the justice of the protest. That he was annoyed at the time has been admitted: a man whose troops have been within an ace of losing a pitched battle, and who has himself narrowly escaped assassination, looks at the question of punishing rebels from a different standpoint from that of his friends at a distance. That Abdul Rahman, however, thought for a moment of carrying his resentment to the point of breaking his alliance with England is not credible. He has a wholesome dread of the Russians, as most Asiatics have; he knows that they are bent upon extending their territory, and that they would swamp his northern provinces to-morrow with troops if it were not for the fear of embroiling themselves with England. On the other hand, he recognises that the policy of the British Government is to leave Afghanistan intact, that any activity on the long frontier line beyond the Indus is due to the desire to protect India, not to absorb his territory; and that 50,000 men would be on the move in a week to repel any attack made upon that territory. The Ameer, with all his faults, is an astute and far-seeing ruler. He may in his vanity feel resentment that he should in any way be dependent upon an outside Power—he is always posing in the eyes of his people as the King of Islam—but he realises that the subsidies of money and munitions of war received from India have confirmed him in the possession of his kingdom, and that if they were suddenly stopped his prestige would decline. His people know full well that Shere Ali lost his throne and his life through his intrigues with Russia, and they would soon show their disapprobation in the practical form of widespread rebellion were their present ruler to follow the fatal example set in 1878. We are not concerned to champion Abdul Rahman; we do not say that as an ally he can ever be other than an unsatisfactory one owing to his jealous distrust of his friends and his impatience of advice; but we do protest against treachery and double-dealing being imputed to him, when a crisis seems approaching in Central Asia, without any evidence being adduced in support of such charges.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

THE WUNTHO DESPATCHES.—OFFICERS COMMENDED.

IN the Despatches relating to the operations carried on in Wuntho territory from February to April last, as published, the Commander-in-Chief concurs in the commendations bestowed by the Commander-in-Chief of Madras on Brig.-General Wolseley and the troops under his command, and also in the high terms in which the services of Capt. H. D'U Keary, commandant, Shwebo Military Police, are mentioned. The death of Capt. Gray, deputy assistant quartermaster-general, was a great loss to the column, as he is described as a most valuable and capable officer. The conduct of the officers and men of the Military Police is specially mentioned by Sir James Dornier. Brig.-Gen. Wolseley in his report states that the objects of the expedition were briefly, firstly, to suppress a sudden outburst of rebellion which had broken out almost simultaneously in the extreme northern and southern limits of the hitherto independent State of Wuntho; secondly, to depose, and, if possible, capture the Sawbwa and his father, failing which to drive them and all their adherents out of the country; thirdly, to annex, disarm, and permanently secure the future peaceful administration of the country. After a somewhat lengthy description of the operations, he says of the troops under him :—"None could have behaved better from start to finish. They evinced throughout a cheerful and willing spirit which, considering the hard and trying marches, reflects great credit on all officers and men." The medical arrangements under Surgeons Henderson and Hale are highly praised, as well as the services of Surg. Castor. The Commissariat arrangements under Lieut.-Col. Franklyn at Mandalay, and rations in the field under Lieut. Taylor, were admirably arranged, and transport was energetically conducted by Major Kitchener, Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. Special thanks are also due to Capt. Bawrick, of H.M.I. Marine, and Mr. Richard, superintending engineer, who was ably assisted by Mr. Bligh.

Lieut. Fraser, R.E., and Mr. Walling are specially noticed, and praise is given also to the Sappers and Miners under Lieut. Chapman, R.E. The Telegraph operations were satisfactorily conducted. General Wolseley says that he cannot speak too highly of the services afforded by Mr. E. Fowler, Political Officer, and the good services of Mr. Emile Martin and Mr. Collins are also mentioned, together with those of Mr. George, Survey of India. General Wolseley also submits, at the instance of Col. MacGregor, who commanded the Northern Column, the name of Mr. Prendergast Folger, and says : "Had Capt. Hutchinson lived, he would have been specially mentioned" with Capt. Pond, Lieut. Stirling, and Inspector Trotter, Burma Police."

The despatch closes :—"I desire to bring prominently to notice the brilliant services of Captain H. D'U Keary, commanding the Shwebo battalion of Military Police. I submit the names of the following officers for favourable consideration for good service during the operations :—Lieut.-Col. C. R. MacGregor, D.S.O., who commanded the northern column throughout the operations; Major O. S. Smyth, D.S.O., who commanded the southern column; and Captain H. O'Donnell, D.S.O., 44th Bengal Inf., who commanded the Mogaung column. These officers maintained the high reputation they have already gained for good and gallant service; Captain T. A. H. Davies, Devonshire Regt., for the gallant manner in which he conducted the attack on the enemy's entrenched position at Kyaing Kwintang; Captain S. Custance, Duke of Cornwall's Light Inf., for excellent service when in command of the mounted infantry of his regiment. Had Capt. N. A. Bray, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, lived, I should have brought his name to notice as deserving of special recognition, as I cannot overrate his valuable services to the expedition. The health of Capt. A. B. Murray, 10th Regt. (1st) Burma batt. Madras Inf., my senior staff officer, I forgot to say, broke down soon after arrival in Wuntho, but he struggled bravely to carry on his duties, although his health would not admit of his doing so. He was always keen and willing. My orderly officer, Second-Lieut. Bruce, Royal Art., ably and energetically performed his varied duties, and I consider him an officer of much promise. Since the death of Capt. Bray, Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster-General, Intelligence Branch, the official diary of the campaign has been admirably carried on by Second-Lieut. H. C. Holman, Devonshire Regt. I have tried this gallant young officer in many duties, and for one so young I have never met one who so successfully achieved all that he was called upon to perform. I anticipate a brilliant career for this young officer, and I commend his good services to special notice. In conclusion, I beg to offer my special thanks to Mr. D. G. Burgess, C.S.I., Commissioner, Northern Division. I could never have carried out my orders so expeditiously, and I trust satisfactorily, had it not been for the invariable help and support I received from this officer. I therefore desire to close this despatch by soliciting that his valuable services on this occasion may be brought specially to the notice of the Local and Supreme Governments."

Good-Service Pension.—It is notified that, on the recommendation of the Government of India, Her Majesty's Government has been pleased to confer a good-service pension on the undermentioned officer, with effect from May 20, 1891, in room of Col. C. J. Anderson, Staff Corps, succeeded to the Colonel's allowance :—

LIEUT.-COL. AND COL. JAMES GALLOWAY, C.B., STAFF CORPS.

Egypt, 1882—Battle of Tel-el-Kebir; march on Zagazig, and occupation of Cairo (mentioned in despatches; medal and clasp and bronze star; 3rd Class Medjidie and C.B.).

The Aligarh Cavalry Camp.—At the Aligarh Cavalry Camp, in addition to the staff already published, the following appointments have been made :—Field engineer, Capt. A. C. Macdonald, R.E.; principal medical officer, Brig.-Surg. Churchill; principal commissariat officer, Capt. Spence; orderly officers, Lieuts. De Rougemont, R.H.A., Luck, and Punjab Cav., Marsham and Sutton, 7th Hussars, Resaldar-Major Khan Bahadur Khan, 10th Bengal Lancers. The following will be the composition of the forces :—Royal Horse Artillery, 1st Brigade Division, Col. Yeatman Biggs, commanding; troops, A and T batteries. 2nd Brigade Division, Col. Lockhart, commanding; troops, C and Q batteries cavalry: 1st Brigade, Col. Grant, commanding, Capt. Fagan, 10th Bengal Lancers, Brigade major; troops, 7th Dragoon Guards, 6th Bengal Cavalry, 10th Bengal Lancers. 2nd Brigade, Col. Jennings, commanding, Capt. Kirk, brigade-major; troops, 5th Lancers, 7th and 8th Bengal Cavalry. 3rd Brigade, Col. Gough, commanding, Capt. Pirie, brigade-major; troops, 16th Lancers, 4th Bengal Cavalry, Central India Horse. 4th Brigade, Col. Macpherson, commanding, Capt. Haig, brigade-major; troops, 18th Hussars, 2nd Bengal Lancers, 3rd Bengal Cavalry. One company of Sappers and Miners will attend the camp. In the final manoeuvres the Southern Division will be commanded by Col. Cooke, with Major Muir as assistant adjutant-general, and Captain Edwards, adjutant, Behar Light Horse, as D.A.A.G. This force will be composed of A, C, and T batteries, and the 2nd, 3rd and 4th Brigade. The Northern Division will be commanded by Col. Buller, Central India Horse, with Major Roche, 3rd Dragoon Guards, as A.A.G. This division will consist of two brigades, one under Col. Grant, composed of the 7th Dragoon Guards, the 10th Bengal Lancers, and four squadrons of Imperial Service Cavalry: another under Col. Clifford, comprising the 6th Bengal Cavalry, two squadrons of Central India Horse, and some squadrons of Imperial Service Cavalry.

The Commander-in-Chief will arrive at camp on Dec. 8, and on the following day there will be a field day for his special benefit. On the 11th the force, formed into two Divisions, will move towards Meerut. The Northern Division, under the command of Colonel Buller of the Central India Horse, will be supposed to be retiring, and will be pursued by the Southern Division, commanded by Col. Cooke, assistant adjutant-general at Army headquarters. After some three days these operations will come to a close, and a fresh pursuit be started, mainly with a view to test the stamina of horses and men in long marches, some seventy miles having to be covered in the last two days. If the line of retreat is upon the Hindun river, opportunity will be taken to try the experiment of crossing that stream by swimming, due precautions being taken against accidents. In India there is but little chance given to the cavalry for this kind of practice, which may prove so useful in a campaign.

Major Buckingham's Retirement.—After several years of command, Major J. Buckingham, of the Sibsagar Mounted Rifles, hands over the regiment to Capt. Showers. A hard working and earnest soldier, says the Englishman, Major Buckingham's tenure of office has been signalised by a great increase in the efficiency of the corps, and, what is nearly as important, a well-filled coffer. The balance at credit of the Sibsagar Mounted Rifles is now such as to make it absolutely independent. The commandant's retirement will be keenly regretted by his men. He was very popular and universally respected. In his farewell order, Major Buckingham writes :—"In handing over command of the Sibsagar Mounted Rifles, I have to thank all ranks for the invariable support I have received during the seven years I have had the honour to command, and without which it would have been impossible to have arrived at the success we have. I now only ask that the same support may be extended to your present commandant."

Leave to Warrant and Non-Commissioned Officers.—The Government of India have sanctioned the following grant of furlough to warrant and non-commissioned officers. All who have completed eight years' continuous service abroad since last departure from home are eligible for six months' leave, if recommended by the commanding officer. Other warrant officers, sergeants, corporals, and bombardiers who have re-engaged and completed five years under the same terms will be granted six months, but the numbers are limited—viz., Bengal to 61, Madras to 20, and Bombay to 19. Free passages by troopship are to be granted, a deduction of one penny a day being made on board for rations. Applications for leave during the winter season to be made by Aug. 15, and during the summer season by Feb. 15.

The Artillery Camp at Gurgaon will commence on Dec. 28 and close on Jan. 18.

Sixteen men of the 19th Lancers are stated to have died from cholera at Trimulgherry.

The Royal Welsh Fusiliers and No. 9 (British) Mountain batty. were to be withdrawn from the Black Mountain on Nov. 1.

A scheme for applying to batteries in India the warrant reorganising the Royal Artillery has been sent to England for the approval of the Home authorities.

Proposals are under consideration for converting the Bombay Marine battalion into a local corps, to be stationed at Aden and recruited in part from races on the Somali Coast.

On the Samana border there are no signs of disturbance, and the 27th Punjab Inf., now in reserve at Kohat, will be shortly withdrawn for their march to Jullundur.

A coolie corps, 1,500 strong, is to be raised in the Darjeeling District for columns operating in Upper Burma during the ensuing cold weather. Lieut. Knowles, Royal Irish Regt., is in charge of the recruiting.

The Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the grant in future of honorary ranks of captain and lieutenant to deputy commissaries and deputy assistant commissaries of the Indian Army Departments in the same Gazette as that in which the promotions to those grades are notified in India.

One of the concessions to be granted to Volunteers in India is, the Civil and Military Gazette believes, one which we have several times recommended, namely, a remission of the income tax. It is hoped others will follow to make volunteering more popular.

Three thousand maunds of compressed fodder are to be forwarded to Gilgit for the use of the transport animals there. Over 1,000 mules have been taken with the detachment of the 5th Goorkhas now on the way to Cashmere, as the outpost garrison there needs to be a very mobile one.

The 49th Field Battery, R.A., consisting of 4 officers, 113 men, 36 women and children, and a draft of the 4th battalion, King's Royal Rifles, consisting of 2 officers and 312 men, arrived on Oct. 14 at Poona from Bombay, which they reached by the troopship Malabar. The 49th Field Battery were to leave for Secunderabad on Oct. 17, and the draft for Madras on the 27th.

It had been arranged by the Admiralty that the crew of H.M.S. Brisk, consisting of about 180 men, shall return to England by the Oriental, sailing on Nov. 7.

The military authorities in Burma have applied for five hundred mules for the cold weather operations. These will be sent from Bengal in the course of the next few weeks.

Major Bruce, who has been on special duty in Persia in connection with the purchase of mules for the Transport Department, has forwarded one thousand animals to Kurrachee. A similar number may be expected to be purchased in South Africa by Capt. Hamilton.

The question of the introduction of an improved type of lines for Native Infantry Regiments has for some time been under consideration, and it has now been decided to build an experimental set of lines at Jullundur for the 27th Punjab Infantry according to a pattern suggested by Lieut.-Col. Young, A.Q.M.G. at Army Headquarters.

The Punjab Frontier Force Command, which will become vacant by Gen. Lockhart's transfer to Lucknow, will probably fall to Colonel Lance, commanding at Ferozepore now.

Col. M. W. E. Gosset, C.B., has been selected for the command of a second-class district in India.

Col. T. M. Ward, Indian Staff Corps, has been allowed to retire from the Service.

The services of Col. E. C. Ross, C.S.I., Staff Corps, have been replaced at the disposal of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

Col. Sanderson, Judge-Advocate-General, probably proceeds home on eight months' leave next spring, Col. Swinton Skinner officiating in the appointment.

Col. Harris, deputy adjutant-general at Army Headquarters, probably takes two months' leave on Feb. 17, preparatory to vacating the appointment on promotion to major-general on April 17. Col. Stedman will officiate in the first instance, being ultimately confirmed in the post when it becomes vacant.

Major C. Parker-Jervis, Durham Light Inf., is permitted to proceed to England on promotion to a half-pay lieutenant-colonelcy.

Major Carpenter has arrived at Deolalee from Aden and taken over command of the detachment, 1st Connaught Rangers, at that station.

Deputy Surg.-Gen. Bradshaw, Rawul Pindi district, will succeed Surg.-Gen. Thomson as principal medical officer to her Majesty's forces in India next March.

Capt. G. S. Goldsmid, Staff Corps, will, on return from furlough, be attached to the 18th instead of the 23rd Bengal Inf. as previously ordered.

Capt. G. H. Symonds, Royal Irish Regt., has been appointed station Staff officer at Lucknow.

The Indian Congress.—The Rast Gofstar says :—It is no longer a secret that, despite urgent and pathetic appeals to honour and patriotism, it is getting very difficult to carry on the work of the Congress, and as a congregation of Indian orators and patriots in London will entail a very heavy expenditure, the British Committee have very wisely resolved to save what money they can by denying the country the blessings of the Congress for one year. We cannot tell what party will be in power by the year 1893. The Congress party will, no doubt, wish that the Liberals may command a majority in the next Parliament because Mr. Gladstone has spoken amiable pleasantries to a deputation which waited upon him last year, and because Indian politicians believe that their liberal aspirations will have better chances of being fulfilled by a Liberal than a Tory administration.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Oct. 21.

Projected Legislation.—There is plenty of matter to engage the attention of the Legislative Council when they reassemble in Calcutta, says the Englishman. It is not unlikely that the Madras Small Cause Court Bill which has recently created so much discussion in that province, together with the Bill to amend the Indian Christian Marriage Act, and an Electric Lighting Bill will be on the first list of business which will be brought forward. We understand, too, that a Bill may be introduced to amend and consolidate the Merchant Shipping Acts, together with a second to amend and consolidate the law of bankruptcy and insolvency. The leper question is almost certain to require some consideration, and a proposal to protect railways from adjoining mines is already receiving attention from Government, and may also be brought forward during the cold season.

Gold in Bengal.—In reviewing the administration report of the Chota Nagpore division for last year, the Bengal Government remarks that the opening of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway, as well as the extraordinary development of mining speculation, effected an appreciable rise in the wages of unskilled labour throughout the division, and a marked diminution in the number of emigrants, which fell from 24,730 in 1889-90 to 10,660. "No reliable evidence," the resolution adds, "of the existence of lead, silver, or gold in paying quantities has yet been found; though a few companies and individuals appear still to be prospecting with perseverance."

Bengal Salt Department.—The annual report of the Bengal Salt Department refers to the growth in the consumption of crushed Kurkutch salt, and the decline in the importation of Cheshire salt. The Collector of Customs expresses the opinion that Liverpool salt will gradually disappear from the market, giving way to the cheaper substitute. It is admitted, however, that at present in Orissa, Liverpool salt is selling at 3-12 rs. a maund, and competes successfully with the local product at 3 rs., owing to the preference of the people for Liverpool salt; but the collector considers Liverpool salt will not be able to hold its ground permanently against the cheaper salts of country manufacture. The net import of salt increased last year, because the high price of Liverpool salt in the preceding year had reduced it to an abnormal degree; but, on the whole, the improvement in the railway communication and the lowering of freights is enabling the Punjab and Rajpootana salts to compete more successfully with imported salts, and drive their limit of consumption nearer the sea. The Government resolution remarks:—"This is a subject for congratulation, since salt is an article India ought to manufacture for itself, and not import."

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Oct. 22.

The Governor.—H.E. Lord Wenlock, Governor of Madras, accompanied by Mr. J. D. Rees and Captain Holmes, A.D.C., arrived at the Central Station on Oct. 17. The morning was a very wet one, notwithstanding which there was a good attendance at the station. The platform was carpeted with the usual red baize for some distance, and the train was so drawn up that his Excellency's carriages were brought within the centre of the coloured covering. A guard-of-honour of the 6th M.N.L., with band and colours, was drawn up to face the train, the band, on his Excellency alighting, commencing to play. Among those present on the platform to receive his Excellency were the Maharaja of Vizianagram, Dr. G. W. Oppert, Mr. J. M. Maskell, Dr. D. Duncan, the Hon. Mr. H. E. Stokes, Dewan Bahadur Raghoonatha Row, Mr. W. Grant, Captain Kerrich, Mr. Kuppasami Iyer, the Kumara Raja of Pittapur, the Hon. Mr. Garstin, C.S.I., Mr. N. Subramanyam, the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Grose.

On Oct. 13 the Governor resumed his journey from Coonoor to Sankerydroog. He accomplished the first six miles in tongas, when the road became impassable, and he left the vehicles and walked to Burliar Bridge, which had been carried away by a torrent the night before. A passage was effected across the boulders and rocks. The party proceeded on foot to Kullar Bridge, which had also been washed away by floods. The passage of the river was effected in coracles, and on the other side a tonga was available to proceed to Mettapaulam. Great damage, says a telegram, has been caused by the rains, the benefits accruing from which, however, are incalculable.

Kumaon.—The Provincial Gazette of Oct. 17 contains a Resolution signifying the adoption of a scheme of administrative redistribution for the Kumaon Division. The old districts of Terai and Kumaon are to disappear, and in their places, with some alterations of the existing boundaries, there appear the new districts of Naini Tal and Almora. Moreover, the anomalous official nomenclature that has clung to the Kumaon Division is to be abolished also; and the superintendent of the Terai and the senior assistant commissioner of Kumaon reappear, like the district officer of Gurhwal, as deputy commissioners.

The Madras Observatory.—The question of removing the Madras Observatory to a station in the Palneys or Neilgherries is occupying the attention of the Governments of India and Madras. The transfer is recommended in order to obtain an atmosphere with the minimum of cloud. If this project is carried out solar observations will be carried on there, instead of at Dehra in the North-West Provinces. The Meteorological Department has arranged for a trial of observations in 1892, at Kodai Kanal, on the Palneys, and Kotaigiri, on the Neilgherries. Mr. Michie will continue at present to officiate as Government astronomer. The Astronomer Royal will be consulted next year on any future programme that may be suggested.

The Mysore Assembly.—The eleventh annual assembly of representative ryots and merchants from all parts of the provinces met at the Rangachari Memorial Hall on Oct. 15. The British Resident, Sir Harry Prendergast, and his staff, and the principal officers of the State were present. The number of representatives present was more than 250. This was the first meeting of the assembly after the introduction of the election system sanctioned last year. The Dewan read his address welcoming the representatives who have been elected by the people themselves. The financial results of the year 1890-91 were most favourable, the receipts, 145 lacs, being the largest ever realised by the State. The increased revenue was principally under excise, forests, and gold mines. The total expenditure of the year was 122 lacs. These figures do not include the railway receipts, which amounted to 1,25,000 rs., and the payments made on account of railways, 11,10,000 rs. The net surplus of the year was thus 12,64,632 rs., which, added to the opening balance of 92,11,424 rs., gave a closing balance of 1,04,76,056 rs. The Dewan then touched upon the working of the several departments of the State. In the Public Works Department the Hindupore railway is being vigorously pushed forward, and it is expected that the section of the line to Doddaballapore will be opened for traffic in April next. The extension to Nanjangud has been all but completed by the Southern Mahratta Railway Company, and will shortly be open for traffic. The railway lines under contemplation are a line from Kolar Road station to the Kolar goldfields, a line from Birur to Shimoga, and branch lines to connect Chikmagalur and Hassan. Stress was laid on the importance of well-irrigation, and reference was made to the concessions sanctioned to the ryots in regard to forest-trees, kumri cultivation, and fuel. In the Educational Department, the girls' schools have been placed under the direct control of local committees, and the inspecting staff has been reorganised. The most important point referred to in the address was the grant of the privilege of election to the Municipalities of Mysore and Bangalore. Half the number of municipal commissioners will be elected by the people under the new system. It is proposed to overhaul the muzroi institutions, and place them on an efficient footing. A scheme for the training of men with high and liberal education for the higher grades of the Service will be introduced. Four sub-divisions, under separate officers, will be constituted. The address ended with congratulations for the recent rains, which have removed all fears of drought and consequent scarcity.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Oct. 24.

The Governor's Tour in Sind.—The Governor was to leave Poona on the morning of Oct. 30 for Tanna, stay there the whole day and proceed to Bombay in the evening, arriving there at seven o'clock. He would remain at Bombay on Saturday and Sunday and embark in the steamer Canning on the evening of Nov. 1, for Kurrachee, where he was expected to arrive on the morning of the 4th. The week would be spent at Kurrachee, and on the 8th his Excellency would proceed to Hyderabad, Kotri, Arabjiwaha, Sukkur, Quetta, Shikarpore and Jacobabad. He was to be at Quetta from Nov. 25 to 30, and then commence his return journey, reaching Kurrachee on Dec. 3 and Bombay on the 5th.

A Miracle.—The Hindoos are claiming an extraordinary miracle to have been wrought by their gods. Some time ago a young bunnia lad reported that he had had a vision in which he saw an idol appear out of the sand on the shore. He made known his dream among the community, pointing out the spot where it had been foretold him in his curious dream the idol would appear. The place was accordingly watched, and early on Sunday morning, so the story goes, a figure suddenly sprang out of the ground at the very spot pointed out by the young bunnia. The idol is now visited by worshipping hundreds.

Farewell Dinner at Poona.—The members of the Club of Western India have given a farewell dinner to the Hon. Mr. J. G. Moore at the Club, Poona, at which there was a large attendance. The guests included General Blundell, the Hon. Sir Charles Pritchard, K.C.I.E., Hon. Mr. J. R. Naylor, Lieutenant-General Bottinger, Colonel Rhodes, M.S., D.S.O., Colonel Firebrace, Colonel Goldsmith, Brigade-General Gatacre, Brigade-General Hogg, Colonel R. Westmacott, Colonel Willoughby, Colonel Hibbert, Colonel F. Hughes, Colonel C. A. Cunningham, Colonel R. L. Curteis, Colonel E. Carrington, Colonel J. Hill, Colonel Humfrey, Colonel W. Merriman, R.E., Colonel A. M. Rawlins, Colonel Stopford, Captain Anderson, Mr. E. A. Bulkley, Surgeon-Major Bull, Mr. C. Browne, Mr. C. J. Burke, Captain Brownrigg, Mr. K. M. Chatfield, Mr. W. Clerke, Mr. E. L. Cappel, Mr. J. G. H. Collister, Surgeon A. E. Croly, Mr. J. Dunsterville, Mr. W. W. Drew, Mr. F. Dobson, Mr. S. B. Doig, Captain A. D. Fordyce, Mr. W. M. Fletcher, Mr. F. L. Goldsmid, Mr. W. B. Huddleston, Surgeon-Major G. W. R. Hay, Mr. W. S. Howard, Mr. W. Hughes, Captain A. M. Horrocks, Mr. T. B. Kirkham, Mr. Tom Le Mesurier, Major Lister, Rev. J. MacKay, Mr. C. H. Mein, Mr. E. F. Nicholson, Dr. John Pollen, Dr. A. D. Pollen, Mr. H. T. Ommamney, Mr. G. B. Reid, Mr. A. S. Shuttleworth, Captain Upperton, Mr. F. J. Willaume, Mr. H. Wenden, Dr. Warren, Mr. E. Whitehouse, Mr. J. B. Whiting, Mr. E. F. Nicholson, and Mr. W. B. Huddleston. The arrangements, as is usual with the Club, were all that could be desired.

Nursing Association.—An association, styled the Mofussil Nursing Association, for securing trained nurses to attend sick Europeans in Poona and the Mofussil, is being formed at Bombay. Mr. Lee-Warner signed the prospectus, and Lady Harris has consented to become the first patron. Dr. Thomson, of the College of Science, is the honorary secretary, and Surgeon-General Pinkerton, Major-General Blundell, Dr. Theodore Cooke, and Mr. Lee-Warner, are the first four trustees. Nurses will be supplied by, and be under the control of the Sisters of Charity of the Cowley Mission. They will receive 1,000 rs. per nurse supplied, until the Association secures six nurses. The proposed fee for the attendance of a trained nurse is 5 rs. per diem.

Precaution against Stupid Law.—As one of the consequences of certain abortive prosecutions which have taken place recently, says a Bombay paper, the following circular, which has been issued by one of the leading banks in Bombay, needs no comment:—"The verdicts given by juries here and in Calcutta in cases of embezzlement of funds belonging to public companies by persons in their employ, have rendered imperative an increased vigilance on the part of banks and establishments having large money transactions. I therefore call your attention most particularly to 'No. 2 of the Bank's Rules in Accounts Current,' and request you 'in your own interests,' to make a point of always sending in your pass book when paying money into account, and seeing that the entry in the pass book bears the initials of a European officer of the bank."

Somnambulist Accident.—A case of somnambulism is reported from Kurrachee. The other night Mr. R. Beaumont, of Messrs. Cooper and Company, who was staying in Mr. Macpherson's house, walked out of his bedroom on the upper storey while asleep into the verandah, and fell to the ground below. He sustained serious injuries and bruises, one of his thighs and an arm being broken. Fortunately the noise of the fall awakened a servant who was sleeping by, and immediate help was rendered. Mr. Beaumont is making fair progress towards recovery.

The final census returns for the Bombay Presidency show that the total population is 26,916,358, the number of persons in Native States being given as 8,059,314.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received from the correspondent of the Times at Rangoon:—

NOV. 3.—The court-martial on Lieutenant Lowry of the 8th Madras Infantry, who is accused of cheating at cards, will commence on Nov. 11. Colonel Campbell of the 31st Madras Infantry will act as president. The Court, consisting of eleven officers, will sit in the Rangoon Assembly Rooms.

NOV. 8.—An untoward incident has occurred on the Bhamo frontier. A small body of Chinese troops, numbering about 100, have crossed the Kampoung stream and advanced some fifteen miles to Myothit, which is within six miles of Manoung. Their object is stated to be to escort some caravans. This advance occurred after the Chinese authorities had been notified that British troops would be stationed on the Kampoung river, and that thenceforward they would escort the caravans thence to Bhamo. The troops and military police had not yet left Bhamo when the Chinese advanced to Myothit. The troops and police have since left Bhamo, and have now probably reached Manoung. The Chinese have been requested to withdraw, and it is anticipated they will do so. Letters have been sent to the Chinese military authorities at Sale, in Chinese territory, informing them that Chinese troops must not pass the Kampoung river in future, and similar instructions have been sent to the Deputy Commissioner at Momeik. The Chinese also recently seized the Kachyen Tsawbwa within our border, but they subsequently released him.

The responsibilities of the Deputy Commissioner at Bhamo are daily increasing, and it is important that this post should be filled by some tried and experienced officer.

The various columns for the Chin country, details of which have already been published, are about to start. So much work remains to be done among the Chins that the opening of the road to Assam will not be attempted this season.

In 1889 and 1890 the policy which had previously been successfully pursued by Major Raikes, C.I.E., chief political officer in the Chin country, was altogether reversed, and Colonel Symons, who commanded the troops, was given a free hand on being appointed chief political officer. Extraordinary precautions were taken that no news of an expedition which he organised, except from official sources, should reach the public. At its close it was officially announced that the new policy had been thoroughly successful, and the pacification of the Chin country practically completed. The severe fighting which occurred last year in the Chin country, the discovery of the fact—carefully concealed at the time—that our troops were repulsed at Thella in 1890, and, finally, the necessity for the present despatch of troops show how unwarranted these official representations were.

Much light has been thrown on this question by a minute written by Colonel Woodthorpe, C.B., the distinguished head of the Intelligence Department in India. It severely criticises the Chin Lushai policy which was adopted by Sir C. Crosthwaite and Colonel Symons. This minute, if published, would give much useful information on the policy which was adopted by the late Chief Commissioner towards the Chin tribes, and would afford an excellent means of judging of the value of the official reports issued on the same subject prior to Sir A. Mackenzie's arrival.

The prospects in several of the distressed districts in Upper Burma are worse, owing to the rain holding off. Rain-making experiments are about to be generally tried in the Upper provinces by the sending up of balloons filled with hot air, but not carrying fire, with a charge of dynamite or gun-cotton attached, which will be exploded by time fuses. It is anticipated that such balloons will carry 10 lb. of dynamite. Officers of the Royal Engineers who have been consulted think that the plan is feasible.

The number of persons employed on the relief works in Upper Burma has considerably increased. The price of rice throughout Upper Burma continues to be very high; also in Rangoon the price of rice is again rising. In Lower Burma rain, which was urgently wanted, has fallen. In the ten chief rice-producing districts of Lower Burma the area under cultivation is 200,000 acres in excess of what it was last year. This will be counterbalanced by the large quantity of rice which the Upper Provinces will require next season.

Sir James Dormer, Commander-in-Chief in Madras, arrived in Rangoon yesterday, and was received with the usual military honours. He will proceed on a tour of inspection through Burma to Mandalay, and will eventually visit Bhamo.

WITH REFERENCE to the Lowry court-martial the Indian papers say:—"The delay has been caused by the absence of Major Hobday, Survey of India, the prisoner's chief witness for the defence, but the latter arrives here from home on the 20th inst., and will probably proceed immediately to Burma. Colonel Skinner, Judge Advocate General, Secunderabad, who goes to Rangoon, will conduct the proceedings, and Captain Lambert, Judge Advocate General, Rangoon, prosecutes. The proposal to try the case in Madras has fallen through. The feeling in Burma is said to be strongly against Lieutenant Lowry."

THE Pioneer correspondent writes from Rangoon on Oct. 16:—"The Karen police sent out from Mansi in pursuit of the ex-Tsawbwa of Wuntho, have succeeded in capturing Bo Byu, one of his lieutenants, and two of the Tsawbwa's ponies. Bo Byu promises to lead the police to the hiding place of the ex-Tsawbwa. The police of the Upper Chindwin are co-operating, and hope to cut off the Tsawbwa's retreat in case he should attempt to escape in that direction."

THE GOVERNMENT of India have sanctioned the scheme for the reorganisation of the Lower Burma Police forwarded to them in December last, subject to certain modifications since agreed on. The Lower Burma Military Police will consist of two battalions, one of 20 companies, with its headquarters in Rangoon, and one of 12 companies, with headquarters at Toungoo. The former will consist of natives of India, the latter mainly of Karens. The battalion will supply a detachment to other districts, and one result of the scheme will be a sensible increase in the total strength of the force. Arrangements will be made for the establishment of a training school at the headquarters of every district, on lines sanctioned in the recently published scheme for the reorganisation of the Upper Burma Police.

A FORT WHITE telegram to the Allahabad paper says:—"Work has begun in earnest for the next cold weather operations, and already barracks are in course of erection by Burman coolies for the accommodation of British troops. This work has for the present devolved entirely upon Burmans, as the detachment of No. 1 Company of the Madras Sappers, which had been left here, has just gone down en route to Assam. No. 2 Stockade is to be re-occupied for transport work about the middle of next month, by which time it will be tolerably healthy, and shortly afterwards the 39th Garhwals will garrison Nos. 3 and 4 Stockades and free the 4th Madras Pioneers, whose headquarters will probably be brought up here for road-making. The Nwengals have been forced to give up twenty-six captives whom they took some three or four months ago in a raid on the friendly Kanhow village of Sinnun, and Captain Rose has further weakened them by allowing one of their Chiefs to take an oath to us; but the Yahowk, who are neighbours of the Nwengals, are reported to be threatening strenuous opposition to us, and to have even started on a raid on Mwelpi, though this they eventually abandoned."

The rains are practically over and fortunately they have passed without causing an excessive amount of sickness. At present the general health is very good.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

WE ARE GLAD (says the Pioneer) to be able to announce that the Government of India have come down generously in the matter of the Simla waterworks and drainage extension scheme, for the execution of which between seven and eight lacs of rupees are required. They are willing to present as a free gift a sum equal to that which the Punjab Government will give, and to lend the remainder. The combined amount thus given by both Governments is not to exceed four lacs. The Punjab Government is to be allowed to include in its two lacs the 89,000 rs. representing the cost of supervision and establishment, which it already has notified it would not make a charge upon the Municipality.

ONLY a poor cotton crop is expected in the Punjab. The area under cotton is estimated at 605,900 acres, against 871,100 last year. The only district in which the area exceeds that of last year is Multan, where the Sidhni canal has flowed well. The locusts did much damage to the young crops, and the rains began late.

A TELEGRAM from Bareilly says that, under the orders of the Local Government, the two accused, Mustafa Khan and Saidulla Khan, who were recently tried in connection with matters pertaining to the murder of General Azimuddin Khan, late Vice-President of the Rampur Council of Regency, have been discharged from bail.

DURAJ SING, a notorious dacoit, who has given much trouble of late years on the borders of Bundelkhand and Central India, was captured some time ago and imprisoned in the Punna State, pending his trial. He has now escaped, was joined by confederates and supplied with arms and ammunition, so that his re-capture may not be effected without another struggle.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

IT is said, writes the Berlin correspondent of the Standard, that the Russians intend to build a road through Pamir to the Indian frontier next spring, in order to save the commercial caravans from Bokhara, Turkistan, Kashgar, and Yarkand the long roundabout route through Badakshan. Most of the Pamir tribes are believed to be very friendly to Russia. The Russian agents are promising them that if they attach themselves to Russia voluntarily, she will grant them the same privileges as the other Central Asiatic tribes which have joined Russia since 1883. These privileges include the abolition of duties between them and Russia, a matter of great importance to them, as they get most of their manufactured goods, including rifles and ammunition, from Russian Turkistan, which takes from them agricultural products and cattle in return. The Chiefs of these tribes—the so-called Akzaks—have recently had several meetings, and resolved to hold a general assembly of all the tribes on the Murghab River early in the spring, to take a final resolution on the question of their attaching themselves voluntarily to Russia, a proposal which it is expected will be agreed to by an overwhelming majority.

The Berlin Post contains a long and, apparently, inspired article on the Pamir Question, the writer of which arrives at the following conclusions :—

Russia evidently has at present no far-reaching plans against China or India, but the British principle of following every step of Russia's in Central Asia with suspicion is by no means a mistake, for the present situation there will remain unaltered only till it is changed. England, therefore, regards Russia's advance in the Pamirs as an encroachment on her interests, and a menace to her position in India, especially as Russia is constantly pressing forward into Afghanistan and China, in the integrity of whose possessions England is deeply interested, as well as in the maintenance of her influence there. In the Pamir Question, therefore, it is not the Pamir so much as the principle involved that is at issue, and this explains the great interest taken in it by the English Press. . . . Anxious minds in England are already calling for comprehensive measures of precaution in India and Afghanistan; but we believe that there is at present no real ground for alarm.

Advices received at St. Petersburg from Bokhara state that the Extraordinary Mission, sent to Russia by the Ameer of Afghanistan in order to conclude a Russo-Afghan Commercial Treaty, is already on its way to the Russian capital.

The presentation to the Czar of the Ameer of Bokhara, and the Envoys of the Ameer of Afghanistan, who are expected at St. Petersburg shortly, will, says a telegram, take place at the Imperial Castle of Gatchina, towards the middle of December.

Referring to Prince Galitzin's arrival in the viceregal camp from his recent visit to the Pamirs, the Novosti expresses the hope that the interview which the Prince and Captain Younghusband will have with Lord Lansdowne will materially assist in dispelling English alarm and distrust, and in throwing some light upon the confused question of the Pamir frontier.

The Novoe Vremia, in a leader on the question of the Pamir, draws attention to a report presented to Lord Salisbury by Mr. Eliot, Secretary to the British Embassy in St. Petersburg, on the results of his recent investigation of the Russian administration of Central Asia. This semi-official organ is of the opinion that it will not be unprofitable at a moment when that Minister is suspected of intrigues with China with respect to the Pamir that he should know the unassailable position attained by Russia since the conquest of Tashkend and Samarcand.

The St. James's Gazette of the 6th inst. contains the following note :—A representative of the St. James's Gazette yesterday had a conversation with an English traveller who has within the last forty-eight hours arrived in London fresh from the scene of the recent "misunderstanding" on the Pamirs. This gentleman had travelled overland direct from the south-eastern borderland of Asiatic Russia, and is therefore the first Englishman home from the immediate neighbourhood of the recent dispute in Central Asia. His opportunities of first-hand information on the spot were exceptionally good, and his narrative is therefore of considerable interest. He fully confirms the details of the report recently received of the arrest of Captain Younghusband. This officer, he says, soon after entering Boza-i-Gombaz—or Gombaz-i-Boza, for both names are equally correctly applied to it—was placed under arrest by order of Captain Iawnoff (not Banoff, as the name is spelt in the latest Indian papers to hand), who was in the territory in command of a body of some five-and-twenty Russian soldiers. Captain Younghusband, who was without escort, was only kept in custody till he consented to sign papers in which he promised not to traverse certain prescribed passes. After this he was released, and went south in the direction of Cashmere; where, it is expected, he will have been able to see the Viceroy before he leaves Srinagar on the 8th inst. As to Lieutenant Davison, the case was somewhat different. He also was arrested on the Alichur Pamir, but was complacently passed through Russian territory by way of Firgana and Khasgaria back into British India. There were several interesting points on which our representative's informant was able to give an opinion well worthy of consideration as coming from one who was practically on the spot throughout the recent transactions. First, as to the intentions of the Russian Government. There is, it seems, no doubt that the whole affair was a deliberately planned coup. It is quite certain that the Russian officer in command—Captain Iawnoff—who arrested Captain Younghusband did not act on his own responsibility, as it has been suggested he may possibly have done. Messages passed frequently between him and the Governor of Russian Turkestan, who was on the other side of the Alai Passes. Secondly, it is clear that the Russian Government had no desire of keeping the matter secret. It was to be done before all men. This is borne out by the presence of a member of the British Embassy at St. Petersburg in the encampment, of the Russian Governor of Turkestan. Thirdly, till the present bold stroke was brought off, there was no doubt that if the territory in question was to be disputed with anyone, it would be with the Chinese; for by the arrangement of 1873 the Russians were plainly understood to be definitely fixed on the western margin of Lake Sarikul. Lastly, and chiefly, it is worth noting, as the opinion of experts on the spot, that Russia is making a bold attempt to come much closer to our North-Western frontier in India. No doubt she will "climb down" considerably in the course of diplomatic discussion; but she is anxious to get a few steps nearer, even at the risk of forcing on an increase of our frontier garrisons in order to counterbalance her own occupation of a slice of territories dangerously close to the native states over which we keep a necessarily watchful eye. These, at all events, are the views of an Englishman just home from the Pamirs.

The Pioneer says :—As the Pamir incident is likely to be much before the world for some time to come now that the question has become an international one between England and Russia, it is important to be as certain as we can about the original facts. It has been rumoured that Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison were actually made prisoners by the Russians before they were compelled to leave the Pamirs. This was not the case, so far as present information goes. As regards Captain Younghusband the case is clear enough. He was informed by Colonel Yanoff that he must leave Boza-i-Gumbaz as he was on territory claimed by Russia, without having in his possession any authority for travelling in that region. His first answer was that he declined to leave, as he naturally enough would not admit the right of the so-called exploring party to exclude him from the Lesser Pamir. He was then informed that his protest was unavailing, and he had to submit to what was nothing short of force majeure. With no escort he could not offer any opposition; it was a case of thirty to one, and forcible expulsion was an easy matter for the Russian colonel to carry out. Captain Younghusband accordingly left Boza-i-Gumbaz and marched eastwards to the Tagdambash Pamir, an undertaking having been extorted from him that he would not return to the Lesser Pamir with a view to crossing the Hindoo Kush by the passes leading into Chitral. There the incident ended. Colonel Yanoff apparently knew that a British officer could be trusted to keep his word, and well satisfied with what he had done he himself marched his detachment northwards towards Alai, where the main body of the "exploring" party had concentrated. As for Lieutenant Davison, who had previously gone off to the Alichur Pamir, it is, we believe, perfectly true that at the outset he was rather welcomed than otherwise by the junior Russian officer whom he met on the shores of the Yahsil Lake. But the commandant of the force, whoever he may have been, was determined to show that the Pamirs were closed to British officers, and the young subaltern also got his marching orders. He left the Yahsil Kul, as we know, by the northern route for Yarkand, and there is nothing to show that he was made a prisoner or roughly treated. The most significant point in connection with the whole affair is that the Governor-General of Russian Turkestan has since proceeded to the supposed Russian frontier on the Alai Range, as if by his presence there to support the action of the "exploring" party. He may, of course, have acted on his own initiative, but as Tashkend is connected with St. Petersburg by telegraph, there is good reason to suppose that he was in communication with headquarters. The Pamir affair has not attracted that attention in England which it would certainly have done had Parliament been sitting; but if our Foreign Office would like to drop it, China evidently does not mean to, and in the next few months it will in all probability come to the front in a very marked manner.

The Times correspondent telegraphs from Calcutta (Nov. 5) :—Representatives sent to Cabul by the Calcutta firm of Walsh, Lovett and Co., the Ameer's mercantile agents in India, report that the Ameer received them most kindly, and told them that he feared his feelings of true friendship towards the English were only partially recognised, but he hoped a better understanding would be brought about as trade developed.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been published since our last issue :—

HIOGO, Nov. 2.—The convulsion of nature in last Wednesday's earthquake was so tremendous that even yet no trustworthy estimate of the damage or loss of life is procurable; wild statements of many thousands being killed are current, but so far there is no evidence that the deaths number more than 3,000. The chief fatalities are at Ogaki, where at least 1,000 were killed, chiefly by falling buildings. At this place, and also at Gifu, great conflagrations followed the earthquake, in which many perished. The principal shock lasted less than two minutes, but was of extreme violence. No subsequent shocks were strong enough to do damage in ordinary circumstances, but they sufficed to shake down walls already cracked, and added immensely to the terrors of the night. Even up to to-day slight earthquake shocks continue at irregular intervals. The total destruction of bridges and railroads over a long line of country and the paralysis of all ordinary occupations prevent trustworthy news from reaching the capital. Great fissures have appeared in the ground at many points, rendering roads impassable and travelling dangerous. One striking feature has been the subsidence of the land to some depth over large tracts of country. From the towns of Ogaki, Kitagata, Ichinomiya, Tirauna, Kiyonsu, Kamatsu, and other places, chiefly along the coast, has come news of great destruction. The city of Nagoya suffered to a less extent, although seriously. The volcanic mountain Nakusan belched forth enormous masses of stones and continuous streams of sand and mud, and the contour of the mountain has been completely changed by the eruption. Great distress prevails in the destroyed towns, and the Government is embarrassed in its efforts by the prevailing panic and the absence of means of communication.

The Bishop of Exeter, Dr. Bickersteth, and a party were travelling in the Northern Islands. They were on their way to the district affected, and would have reached it a week later; but a telegram received from the Bishop announces his safety and that of his son, the Bishop of Japan. The loss of European life has been very small, but business houses have suffered great losses.—Times Correspondent.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 2.—Until to-day it has been impossible to telegraph an accurate statement of the loss of life and property occasioned by the recent earthquake. Even now the figures can only be given in round numbers, and they are subject to correction at a later date. Every effort has, however, been made by the Japanese authorities to obtain information regarding the extent of the calamity, and the following figures represent the official estimates :—Killed, 4,000 persons. Injured, fully 5,000. Houses destroyed, 50,000. The area covered by the earthquake was wider than was at first supposed. It extended inland to the region of the lakes. Several large towns are reported to have been laid in ruins. The disaster has caused dreadful suffering. No Europeans have lost their lives.—Reuter.

The following official report of the earthquake, which occurred in Japan on Oct. 28, has been received at the Japanese Legation, London:—"The earthquake affected the prefectures of Aichi and Gifu. It is calculated that the deaths amounted to 6,500, and the injured to 9,000; further, that 75,000 houses were destroyed, and 12,000 damaged."

SINGAPORE, Nov. 3.—Advices from Hunan twelve days old say that the litterati and gentry there have issued a manifesto ordering a search for and the expulsion of native Christians, resident or visiting. Christian native officials are threatened with disfavour at Peking. The manifesto says that all Christian churches should be destroyed and their property seized. The Hunanese will defend China and expel the "foreign devils." Tientsin advices fifteen days old say that General Tchêng Ki-Tong has been brought there for trial by Li-Hung-Chang. The trial is expected to lapse by delay. The railway work is proceeding rapidly.—Times Correspondent.

VICTORIA (B.C.), Nov. 4.—The Empress of Japan brings news that a fire at Hankow, China, has destroyed 1,500 houses, and that more than 200 women and children perished in the fire. The conflagration gave rise to a serious riot, which was quelled, thanks to the presence of the gunboats. The political situation is vastly improved.—Dalsiel.

SINGAPORE, Nov. 6.—Mason, the British subject who on Oct. 29 pleaded guilty at Shanghai to the unlawful possession of dynamite and was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, will have to pay the costs of the trial and afterwards find security for his good behaviour or be deported. The Hong Kong magistrate has decided that bunker coal is not cargo, and that the Sunday labour ordinance does not prevent loading bunker coal.—Times Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—Advices have been received by Chang-hsu, Governor of Hunan, that the prison of the district magistrate at Hsupu had been set on fire by a band of lawless characters, who released the prisoners. As Chang-hsu was afraid that the city would be attacked, it being without walls, he ordered a brigade to proceed to the locality and suppress the outbreak. Reports from the Wen-Kuang district magistrate state that he had arrested a Chinaman named Gensu-shun and three other members of a confederated band of evildoers and sent them for trial. While the case was proceeding several hundred men forcibly entered the prison, set fire to it, and released the prisoners. Ten persons were killed in the mêlée. Lieutenant Tien-Hseng-yuan, who was in charge of the troops, was severely wounded. After the mob left at daybreak the lieutenant managed to extinguish the flames. Six of the released prisoners surrendered, the rest remaining at large. Troops were sent to scour the country, and they captured twelve of the mob, who were tried, sentenced, and executed. Heavy rewards are offered for the capture of the remainder of the gang.—Dalsiel.

The summary of news in the China Mail of Oct. 7, which has just arrived in London, is as follows:—

Little change has occurred in the situation in China. The Imperial Government has so far implemented its promise to the foreign Powers. Two cruisers of the Northern Squadron have arrived at Shanghai, and the rest will follow after being docked in Port Arthur. The provincial officials now seem more anxious to maintain order, and are displaying some zeal in hunting down members of the secret society. They doubtless feel that nothing in the meantime is to be got by protecting the rebels, and they are anxious to recommend themselves to the imperial authorities. Considerable uneasiness, however, still prevails at all the river ports, and it is impossible to withdraw the gunboats. There are also some indications of the trouble spreading to the northern provinces, and even the loyalty of Viceroy Li's troops is questioned. At Tientsin a meeting of foreign residents has been called with a view to form a Volunteer corps. The feeling at Foochow is much quieter. The dissemination of filthy anti-foreign tracts still goes on. Chang Chi Tung, however, has issued a very strong proclamation threatening to instantly behead anyone found sticking up slanderous placards; and there seems evidence of a genuine effort to suppress even this form of hostile feeling. Mr. Mason's erratic connection with the Ko-lao-hui in the purchase of arms has led to his arrest on a charge of being in possession of dynamite for a suspicious purpose.

As regards Mr. Mason, there is nothing in the papers by this mail to elucidate the mystery which envelopes his proceedings. The North China Herald of Oct. 2 says:—

Mr. Mason was arrested at the Central Hotel on Saturday afternoon by Inspector Wilson on a warrant issued by the Supreme Court, on a charge of having in his possession five pounds of dynamite supposed to be for an unlawful purpose. In referring to the affair, a correspondent at Chinkiang under date Sept. 25 writes:—"Some further developments are on the tapis in regard to the Mason affair, which is still occupying the attention of the Customs and other local authorities. As a result of the disclosures in Mason's diary and papers, two Chinese Customs' officials, one a weiyuen in the opium godown, the other a tingchai, and the No. 1 of the ex-concession road coolies were sent to the Tao'ai's yamen, and the first named was sent thence to Nanking for examination. The other two seem to have given satisfactory proof of their innocence as they were set at liberty yesterday. E Tung ling, the general in command at Silver Island, has been removed from his post and transferred to a place about 60 li beyond Nanking, where he has command of a small garrison, but his case is still under consideration and it is thought that he will eventually be deprived of his rank altogether. It would appear that the arms and ammunition seized in Shanghai were done up in packages bearing his (E Tung-ling's) official stamp, which would exempt them from Customs' examination, and it really seem as if by that means the whole country might be flooded with arms without the Customs being any the wiser. General Li Tsun-shan has arrived here to take E Tung-ling's place, and the present garrison at Silver Island, which consists chiefly of Hunan men who so distinguished themselves by participation in the looting and burning during the riot at this port two years ago, is to be changed at once and replaced by a larger force of men, natives of the Liang, Kiang. It remains to be seen whether that will be an improvement."

Later news, however, is to the effect that there was no Chinese official stamp on the arms, and nothing to connect General E Tung-ling with them.

Meantime there are evidences that the movement in China is supported by persons who have resources for the purchase of arms. The correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury for instance wrote from Tientsin on Sept. 26:—

It is an open secret that the villagers at Chintung and Ho-hsi-hoo, and the inhabitants of the villages between Peking and there, and of the country between this port and Peking, as also Chin-chi-ko and Taku, are armed, more or less, with Winchester rifles and cartridges to match. These places are reported to be strongholds of the Kolao-hweis. Even to-day a steamer from Hong Kong, the Sunkiang, was boarded by the Customs officers, who found 150 rifles and other arms and ammunition on board, which were promptly seized; and on the last trip of this vessel, a large quantity of arms was also seized. A strange feature in these affairs is that after the captures the Customs hold no inquiry into the matter, and do not seem a bit anxious to find out by whom the arms were shipped, to whom consigned, or anything else in connection with the matter, but they simply confiscate the arms and reward the informers to whom the seizures are due.

According to the North China Herald it is seriously averred that officials high and low are implicated in the rebellious movement in the Yang-tse Valley.

Interesting discussions of the causes and motives of the outbreaks appear in the leading and correspondence columns of the Anglo-Chinese journals. The North China Daily News after discarding the theory that the riots were due to the popular dislike of missionaries and the Christian religion, or to the hatred of foreigners, writes:—

The third explanation remains, that these outbreaks are part of a political movement for the expulsion of the present dynasty. Mr. Drummond drew attention to this long before the first outrage occurred this year, and he may well adopt Virgil's Sic vos non vobis; for while his theory is generally approved at home by all writers on the subject, from the Chinese Minister to London down, he is rarely credited with it out of China. There is throughout China, and especially throughout Central China—the Valley of the Yang-tse—a feeling of unrest, an undefined conviction that something is going to happen, and such feelings are apt to fulfil themselves. The last Emperor of the Mings just before he died remarked:—"It is not I who ruined the Empire, it is my servants who ruined it for me." This speech, we learn, is current in the mouths of the people now: it is not the Emperors who are bringing down their dynasty, it is the officials. It is the corruption that is rife throughout mandarinism which the Emperor is powerless to check, that is turning the people against the dynasty; and there is an unexpressed belief that the T'ings are at the end of their tether, and that the Mings are coming back. It is to the return of the Mings that the enigma sent us by General Mesny refers. Whether there are any Mings to return is doubtful; their name is used to conjure with by the ambitious, the disaffected, and the discontented. These, with the Kolao Hui at their head, are making use, as we said before, of the anti-Christian feeling of some of the mob, and of the race-hatred of some of the more educated; but it is not with the ultimate object of destroying Christianity or expelling foreigners; the corrupt bureaucracy of the Empire is the real target. The real leaders of the movement and their aims, their numbers, and how far they are working in harmony for a common end, are undisclosed as yet; but they have succeeded in making the people believe that a revolution is at hand; and the people with something to lose and little to gain by a rebellion are more afraid of this undeclared conspiracy, than they are of the threatened foreign intervention. The Viceroy Li is the only man now who can stop the movement, if he cares to do it; perhaps he will show his hand when the whole of his fleet is assembled in the Yang t'ee.

On a later date the same paper says:—

The coming rebellion, however, has not made the progress that was expected of it. The feeling of unrest, of upheaval, has been confined, so far as we can see, to the Valley of the Yang-tse: it has made no signs either in the north or south of China. There have been indeed some small outbreaks in Fukien, but they have been entirely local, such as often occur in China when some official more grasping than usual tries to impose an extortionate levy on the people. But our Ministers can point out to the Peking government that there are no pressing indications of the existence of such a rebellion as need prevent their making reparation for the outrages that are past, and taking sufficient precautions to prevent any more in the future. . . . Another fact that contradicts the idea that a rebellion of any magnitude is imminent is the quiet with which the examinations have passed off. They were looked forward to, as our readers know, with the gravest apprehension at every provincial capital; but the tens of thousands of students have met and dispersed without, as far as we know, one unfavourable incident. The pressure that the foreign Ministers have been exercising will, no doubt, partly account for this; but this is not an argument for relaxing that pressure, but rather for maintaining it until our full demands are granted. We do not wish it to be understood that we discredit the idea of there being a rebellion in contemplation; but it is not menacing enough at the moment to be allowed as an excuse to the Chinese government for postponing the satisfaction of our demands. . . . With this political movement our governments are not primarily concerned: we only see that the central government has the power to control its officials, if it chooses to do so; and we appeal to it as the de facto as well as the de jure government to carry out the treaties. If it continues to procrastinate, we must coerce it, and that coercion should obviously not be postponed for much more than five months after the first outbreak. If the foreign Powers are waiting to settle who is to command the allied squadron, England, which is interested four times as much as all the other Powers put together in the trade of China, had better undertake the task alone. The dispute, if it exists, can only make the Chinese laugh at us.

Meantime the efforts to excite the people against foreigners had not ceased. On Sept. 24 Mr. G. John wrote from Hankow:

Our principal native evangelist left us on Monday last for Huangpi, a city distant from Hankow only twenty or thirty miles. He returned last night, and came to see me early this morning. He has brought back with him two printed copies of one of the Hunan publications, which is now being printed and actively circulated in the city of Huangpi through the medium of the pawnshops. There are seven of these shops in the city, all of which, with one exception, are busily engaged in this diabolical work. They are large and wealthy establishments, and thousands of people frequent them every week. The book is given away gratuitously, so the circulation must be immense. These two copies were given to one of our converts at two of these shops. At one of the shops he was told that their old supply was used up, but that they would have a new supply soon. At another of the shops he found them busily engaged in cutting new blocks. The whole thing is done publicly, and no attempt at concealment is made. At the beginning of last year one of our converts in Hunan sent me a printed copy of this book, so there can be no doubt as to its origin. It is written in fluent mandarin, and is entitled—"The Devils' Religion ought to die." Of all the Hunan publications, I do not know one more violent, more abusive, more filthy or more inflammatory than this. It finishes up with a song, which is committed to memory by the children of Huangpi, and sung in the streets. I felt inclined for a moment to give you a translation of this song. But it is impossible. It is too dirty and vile for your columns. You could not print it. I may, however, translate the word of exhortation with which the book closes:—"Let fathers and seniors teach the children to sing this song, and thus accumulate merit and secure bliss. Let the little boys learn to sing this song, and thus remove calamity and escape danger. Why fear because the demons are many? We are firmly resolved to exterminate them utterly." . . . The magistrate of Huangpi knows perfectly well what these pawnshops are doing and yet he allows the thing to go on without lifting a finger or uttering a word.

The attacks which were made on Tch'eng Ki-tong by the Paris correspondent of the Times and others appear to have failed, for we read in the North China Herald (Oct. 7):—M. Broyois writes us from Tientsin that he has taken up the defence of Tch'eng Ki-tong because he is convinced, on good evidence, that that gentleman has been guilty of nothing more than weakness in incurring a few debts that he was not able to discharge before he was recalled from Paris. M. Broyois has learnt that this is the view taken by the Viceroy Li; and he has been informed by the Viceroy's secretary, Mr. Lo Fang-lu, that Tch'eng will be shortly restored to favour, and will be summoned to Tientsin and given a post of importance.

The Japanese Fiji Shimpō publishes a letter from its Seoul correspondent on the subject of the rumour of trouble in the Korean capital. The communication is dated Sept. 11 and 12, and runs as follows:—"After his return from captivity in China, the Tai-on-kun lived in strict seclusion, but suddenly, on the 9th inst., he ordered his largest reception-room to be opened to visitors, numbers of whom at once began to arrive, the old statesman welcoming them all. His conversation was reported to be always political, and much uneasiness was felt by the Government. The Min family regarded the position as one of danger, but as the Tai-on-kun is the King's father, he cannot be summoned to Court and questioned as to his real intentions, nor does any one dare to put a direct query to him at his own house. Many rumours are afloat. Some allege that the Tai-on-kun has always desired to see Corea under Chinese protection, and that as he deems the present time critical, he is resolved to attempt the consummation of his wish. Others are of opinion that his activity is primarily caused by his enmity to the Min family, whose power and influence in the State he thinks too great to be overlooked. Another explanation is that the Tai-on-kun has been approached by Mr. Yuan, the Chinese representative, who has consulted him in respect of many important affairs, among them being the Quelpart disturbance, which is regarded as a favourable opportunity to sever the relations between Japan and Corea. The truth has still to be elucidated."

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS AND TROOPSHIPS.

THE undernamed officers were to embark at Portsmouth yesterday and to-day in H.M.S. Orontes for stations named:—

Her Majesty's troopship Serapis arrived at Bombay on Nov. 7.

The troopship Tyne arrived at Portsmouth on Oct. 31 from Malta and Gibraltar after having disembarked half a company of No. 14 Southern Division Royal Artillery at Portland, with half of No. 15 Company, which will be stationed in Fort Purbrook, in the Portsmouth command. Major Hopkins, R.A., was in command, and her military totals, including a few drafts and time-expired men, were three officers, 162 men, ten women, and sixteen children. There were also several naval invalids and time-expired men from the Mediterranean Station. The voyage was fine and uneventful.

The troopship Malabar, Capt. J. G. Jones, sailed from Bombay on Oct. 21 for England with P batty., Royal Horse Art., and 79th Field batty., Royal Art., and details consisting of 38 officers, 13 ladies, and 11 officers' children; 1,174 men rank and file, 35 women and 62 children. The following are the names of the officers:—Col. J. H. and Mrs. Campbell, Leinster Regt.; Brig.-Surg. and Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. J. B. Hamilton, Bengal Med. Staff; Lieut.-Col. C. E. Parker-Jervis, Durham Light Inf.; Major J. Cooke, Army Pay Dept.; Major H. H. Costobodie, R.H.A.; Surg.-Major J. A. Gormley and sister, Madras Med. Staff; Major and Mrs. S. INDIAN POLO ASSOCIATION.

AN Umballa telegram of Oct. 15 says:—The meeting advertised for the 14th was duly held at the Sirhind Club, a very large number of people interested in the subject being present, General Prettyman, commanding the Umballa Division, President, having come down specially from Kasauli for the purpose. This fact is a proof of the interest in polo taken by those in high authority. The General introduced the Polo Association, which, he said, was intended to be formed for the praiseworthy purpose of encouraging polo, and also to act as a governing body to deal with all questions that may come up in connection with that game. He went on to state that certain questions in relation to the Association had been circulated to every regimental polo and station club, and a large number of answers had been received, evidencing the widely-felt interest in the welfare of the Association; and this meeting, from the numerous interests represented, might be considered an absolute representative meeting, and that such regiments or clubs that had not sent any answers or were unrepresented could not urge that they had not been afforded an opportunity of doing so.

The following regiments and polo clubs were represented by letter or by individuals:—The Queen's Bays, the 3rd Dragoon Guards, the 7th Dragoon Guards, the 5th Lancers, the 7th Hussars, the 16th Lancers, the 8th Hussars, the Royal Horse Artillery (Umballa), the Viceroy's Staff, the Queen's Regiment, the Northumberland Fusiliers, the West Yorkshire Regiment, the Royal Irish Regiment, the King's Own Scottish Borderers, the Worcester Regiment, the Durham Light Infantry, East Lancashire Regiment, Oxford Light Infantry, the Royal Warwickshire, the Leinster Regiment, the Derbyshire, Highland Light Infantry, Rifle Brigade, the 6th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 15th, 16th, and 18th Regiments Bengal Cavalry, the 2nd Bombay Lancers, the Calcutta, Madras, Barrackpore, and Murshidabad Polo Clubs.

The following propositions, which were drawn up at the meeting held at Simla on Sept. 7, and circulated widely, were then seriatim put to the vote:—

I. Are you in favour of Captain Swinton's scheme?—Question withdrawn.

II. Are you in favour of not allowing ponies to play for which more than a fixed price has been paid to the dealer, and if so what?—Negated by 29 votes against 8.

III. Are you in favour of not allowing ponies to play for which more than a fixed sum has been given by present owner after some future date?—Negated by 33 against 4.

IV. Are you in favour of not allowing ponies to play which have ever won a race of (1st) 50 rs. (2nd) 200 rs.?—Negated by 25 against 12.

V. Are you in favour of the above rule being restricted to certain length of time after winning, and if so what length of time?—Negated by 25 against 12.

VI. Are you in favour of reducing the number of periods, and, if so, to what number?—Carried by 29 against 8.

Here the question of number and duration of period was put to the vote and carried in favour of four periods of ten minutes each.

VII. Are you in favour of limiting the number of ponies in each team, and, if so, to what number?—Carried by 26 against 11.

The number of ponies for each team was put to vote, and after some discussion was eventually carried in favour of 18.

VIII. Are you in favour of not allowing ponies to play which have not been a certain time in possession of owner, regiment, or clubs, and, if so, what length of time?—Negated by 23 against 14.

IX. Are you in favour of the rules of the Association being carefully revised at this meeting in October instead of in March, as originally suggested in the prospectus, and all questions connected with polo being in future brought up through the Association?—Carried by 26 against 10.

X. Of any assistance being asked by the Polo Association from the Government with the view of State assistance being given to the breeding of ponies?—Carried by 28 against 9.

XI. Of all tournaments being held under the rules of the Association?—Carried by 30 against 1.

XII. Of it being necessary for all regiments and clubs competing in tournaments to be members?—Carried by 24 against 4.

XIII. Of the rules of the Association, which may be passed at the Umballa meeting in October, being applicable to the tournaments of 1891-2-9?—Negated by 18 against 16.

Then the following three proposals by the sub-committee were put to the vote:—Fourteenth, that as the following questions were not submitted to all clubs belonging to the Association, they do not become law till after the meeting of the Inter Regimental Tournament. The proposal was carried unanimously. Fifteenth, that the same hold good with regard to the rules of polo that are revised. This was also carried unanimously. Sixteenth, that in future any propositions must be submitted to the Secretary of the Polo Association at least one month before any general meeting be held, in order that it may be circulated to all members. Carried unanimously.

The following questions, proposed by the 7th Hussars, were also put to the vote:—

Seventeenth, that no regiment or club which is eligible to become a member of the Indian Polo Association be allowed to compete in a tournament under I.P.A. rules unless it becomes a member of the Association. Carried unanimously.

Eighteenth, that no regiment or club belonging to the I.P.A. is to enter a team in a tournament which is not held under the I.P.A. rules, under the penalty of being disqualified from entering any tournament held under the I.P.A. rules for five years. Vetted unanimously.

The printed proposals of the revised rules of polo, in accordance with proposition 15, were all passed, and will become law after the next Inter-Regimental Tournament, unless thrown out at the Polo Association meeting, which will be held during the tournament in March next. These rules will be published later. The rules not referred to remain unaltered. The great point in the discussion was whether these rules and proposals should come into law at once or after the next meeting, but it was considered undesirable to impose any new points on which all members of the Association had not had an opportunity to vote. This was the reason of proposition 14 being introduced. The meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to General Prettyman, which was carried enthusiastically and unanimously.

It is right to mention that Captain Swinton, who initiated all the discussion which resulted in the formation of this Association, is entitled to public gratitude, while Mr. Follett, of the 7th Dragoon Guards, hon. secretary of the Association, has placed all lovers of polo under a lasting debt by his exertions and hard work, entailing wide correspondence, in a laudable desire to promote the interests of the game and to establish this Association, and it is only just to add that the work of revising and framing proposals has been much helped by that well-known authority on polo.

The Indian Companies Act.—In reviewing the working of the Indian Companies Act, the Government of India state that 144 joint stock companies were registered in 1890-91, with a nominal capital of 4,429,381 rs. Deducting defunct concerns, at the end of the year there was a total of 928 companies with a nominal capital aggregating over 35,000,000 rs., and an actual capital of 23,600,000 rs. The capital invested in mills (mainly cotton mills) increased about 4.7 per cent., but the report for 1891-92 will probably show a pause in the investment of capital in this class of business, the industry being temporarily unprofitable in consequence of the fall of prices for cotton yarns caused by overabundant supplies. There was an addition of about 11 per cent. in the capital invested in railways and tramways; in mining and quarrying an increase of about 20 per cent., due to the addition of one gold-mining company (out of forty-six registered in Bengal during the year) with a paid-up capital of 1,21,160 rs.

RUSSIA AND THE PAMIRS.

AN important statement published in last Friday's St. James's Gazette goes far towards clearing up more than one doubtful point in connection with recent events on the Pamirs. This statement embodies the information obtained by an English traveller who has just returned from Central Asia; and who, at the time of CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND'S arrest, was not very far from the scene of that extraordinary incident. He probably learnt little more than what the Russians chose to tell him; but they were wonderfully communicative. Particular stress may be laid on the fact that "CAPTAIN IAWNOFF" (query—IVANOFF or IONOFF) acted in pursuance of orders received from the highest authority in Central Asia. "Messages," we are told, "passed frequently between him and the Governor of Russian Turkestan"; meaning, of course, BARON VREVSKY, the Governor-General. We may safely assume, therefore, that the Russian Government has deliberately resolved to put forward claims to a district some way south of its present frontier; and it remains to be seen how these claims can best be met. It may here be observed, perhaps, that the St. James's Gazette is scarcely justified in saying that "by the arrangement of 1873, the Russians were plainly understood to be definitely fixed on the western margin of Lake Sarikul." In 1873, the Russian frontier ran some three hundred miles to the north of the lake; and seeing how little was known in those days, of the geography of the Pamirs, it would have been impossible to fix definite boundaries.

In a recent article we discussed the proceedings and probable intentions of Russia with special reference to Afghan rights on the Pamirs. The Anglo-Russian agreement of 1873, we pointed out, was unsatisfactory in many ways. It was vague, and it was based on geographical assumptions which have since proved incorrect. Although by this understanding, Wakkan was to belong to the AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN, the frontiers of Wakkan were not defined; indeed, according to SIR HENRY RAWLINSON, they were not even discussed; while, in the second place, it is now beyond doubt that the river which was looked upon as the main stream of the Oxus, is merely a tributary of that river. In these circumstances, we must not depend too much on the agreement of 1873 to show the extent of Afghan claims. The case is no less vague as regards Chinese territory; and we now propose to consider the question from this point of view. In June, 1873, when LORD NORTHBROOK was Viceroy, the Governor-General in Council wrote to the Secretary of State as follows:—

We were unwilling, during the continuance of the recent negotiations regarding the boundaries of Afghanistan, to give expression to any views which would have had the effect of introducing a fresh element into that discussion. Now, however, that those negotiations have been carried to a satisfactory conclusion, we feel ourselves at liberty to represent to her Majesty's Government the expediency of taking advantage of the good understanding that exists at present between the two Governments, to arrive at a definition of the northern and western boundaries of Yarkund. Such a definition, we consider, would be advantageous to the peace and tranquillity of Central Asia, and would complete the good work which has been so far carried out with the assistance of the Russian Government.

The DUKE OF ARGVLL was of opinion that the above suggestion should be acted on; but EARL GRANVILLE "did not think it expedient to run the risk of raising without absolute and pressing necessity any question with Russia respecting the frontiers of Yarkund." Thus the opportunity was missed; and this is why, notwithstanding all assertions to the contrary, it is now impossible to say how far Chinese claims to a portion of the Eastern Pamirs can justly be maintained. In 1873, the reader may be reminded, Kokand, which abuts on the Pamirs from the north, was an independent State; while Kashgaria, abutting on the Pamirs from the east, was in the possession of YACOOB BEG. Since that time, Russia has annexed Kokand and the Chinese have reconquered Kashgaria.

The Russians, we presume, will maintain, in the first place that as Masters of Kokand, their territorial rights extend over a considerable part of the Pamirs; and secondly, that, in the eastern portions, what is not Chinese is theirs. In regard to the first point the English Government will have very little to go on; while as for Chinese rights we shall be in a dilemma. It would be unwise in the extreme to persuade the Chinese to make claims which they could not maintain without assistance. Their position in Kashgaria is very precarious; and a frontier dispute between China and Russia in this quarter would inevitably bring about a Russian occupation of Eastern Turkestan. On the other hand, England cannot well make common cause with the Chinese in Central Asia. Indeed this may be dismissed as an impossible alternative. It would be much better, in fact, to accept the theory that the Pamirs form a debatable ground, at present a no man's land; and then to strike the best bargain we can for a partition. The opposite theory that the Chinese and Afghan frontiers touch is almost certain to be found untenable. At the same time there is another boundary question to be settled. It is of the highest importance that the southern boundary of Chinese Turkestan should be delimited. This, of course, is a question which we shall have to discuss with the Chinese. At present there is no fixed boundary between Cashmere and Chinese territory. It is necessary in the first place that the outlying feudatories of our dependency should be brought well within the frontiers of the area under our protection; and that we should hold the passes. As long as the Chinese are in occupation of Kashgaria there is no danger in this direction; but they are not likely to remain there very much longer. Sooner or later they will be replaced by the Russians; and it would hardly do, for instance, to have Russia asserting her rights over Kanjah and holding passes which would give them easy access to Cashmere.

TIMES TELEGRAMS FROM BURMA.

IT is a matter of surprise that the Times should think it necessary to print the telegrams sent to it every week from Rangoon—at any rate without curtailment. One half of the messages sent by their correspondent consist of petty items of local intelligence of no manner of interest or importance. The other half are misrepresentations and exaggerations, in which personal motives are indistinctly veiled. The only explanation is that the paper has a contract with the Telegraph Company for the use of the wire on Sundays. As long as the correspondent confines himself to that day the quantity and quality of the stuff he transmits are of no money importance. It would cost no more if he telegraphed the Bishop's last sermon, or the latest amenities between the Rangoon bar and the bench. The object of the last telegram—so much of it, that is to say, as refers to the Chin expeditions—is to cast dirt on a distinguished officer, COLONEL SYMONS, who, for reasons well known, is an object of the correspondent's dislike. So far as can be judged, the inaccuracy characteristic of this correspondent is not wanting. MAJOR RAIKES, who is credited, no doubt deservedly, with some success, was political officer with GENERAL FAUNCE'S expedition, which was sent up to chastise the Siyin and Kanhaw tribes. This was in 1888-89. The Siyins and Kanhaws may be roughly described as the tribes lying between the Manipore River on the south and the boundary of the Manipore State on the north. They were very roughly handled by GENERAL FAUNCE, and if punishment could have availed, they should have submitted. As a matter of fact MAJOR RAIKES never got into touch with them. During the year following the Siyins continued their hostility, annoying us in every way, especially by cutting the telegraph wire, and the Kanhaws held entirely aloof and submitted neither in name nor reality. The powerful tribes south of the Siyins, and those lying between Burma and the Lushai border, were not dealt with by GENERAL FAUNCE's expedition at all. So much for MAJOR RAIKES' success.

In 1889-90 the business was resumed not only against the Kanhaws and Siyins, who had been punished but not subdued, but against the Tashons, Hakas, and other tribes. Under the orders of the Government of India an expedition was organised. The chief military and political command was given to BRIGADIER-GENERAL SYMONS. That GENERAL SYMONS succeeded admirably in his task, and that without bloodshed he brought the tribes with whom he personally had to deal into submission, is a matter of history, although it may not be known to the correspondent at Rangoon. It was never supposed or said that the whole of the work in the Chin hills was completed. As a matter of fact a strong post was established at Haka, and throughout the year following GENERAL SYMONS' expedition the mails were regularly carried and the road kept open by Chin labour. MR. ROSS, who had served under GENERAL SYMONS, kept on good terms with all the tribes throughout the year. Towards the end of the year the Thettas, against whom GENERAL SYMONS had not had time to act, became openly hostile, and an attempt to coerce them failed, as it certainly would not have done if GENERAL SYMONS had been in command. The tribes against whom GENERAL FAUNCE and MAJOR RAIKES had acted were dealt with first by MR. ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER CAREY, and secondly, on MR. CAREY's becoming disabled by illness, by CAPTAIN RUNDALL, of the 1-4th Goorkhas. These officers succeeded in establishing relations with the Siyins and Kanhaws; and CAPTAIN RUNDALL succeeded in bringing both tribes to submission, but not until he had inflicted further chastisement on the Kanhaws. The principles of the policy followed throughout were laid down by the Government. How or in what particulars MAJOR RAIKES's policy was reversed we are not told and do not understand. It may be true that COLONEL SYMONS organised an expedition and took extraordinary precautions that no news of it should reach the public. His precautions, however, were so good that no news of this secret expedition has as yet reached anyone. The expedition which he directed was openly organised with much preparation and publicity by GENERAL GORDON, who commanded in Burma at the time, and under the orders of SIR CHARLES ARBUTHNOT, the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army. As no independent newspaper correspondent, not even the enterprising and dashing individual who supplies Rangoon news to the Times, volunteered to go with the expedition, and as casual travellers able to give information to the British public are as yet unknown in the Chin hills, any information of what occurred could come only from officers of the Government. What, therefore, the correspondent has to complain of is not very clear. Probably he means that the officers then at the head of affairs were not his familiars, and did not consult him or take him into their confidence, as, if they had been wise, they certainly would have done. As regards the minute said to have been written "by COLONEL WOODTHORPE, C.B., the distinguished head of the Intelligence Department," nothing can be said until the contents of it are made known. Meanwhile it will be prudent to withhold credit to the statement that this officer has allowed himself to criticise matters of which he can know little and with which he has no concern whatever, even though the statement is made by so great and trustworthy a person as the correspondent of the Times, to whom even he seems to wish it to be implied, COLONEL WOODTHORPE's heart is open. But we are extremely cautious about accepting any statements in the Times correspondence from Rangoon.

SIR JOHN GORST.

WHILE we can heartily congratulate SIR JOHN GORST on his appointment to the Financial Secretaryship at the Treasury, we cannot but regret the withdrawal from the India Office of his shrewd and keen intelligence. If the work he has done has not always been appreciated at its proper value in India, that is because those who criticised him were unaware of the influence which he quietly but effectively brought to bear on details of policy and administration. He has of course not been in a position to dictate a policy, but has undoubtedly subjected all matters that were brought before him to a candid criticism, and his penetrating judgment cannot but have been useful from time to time in influencing decisions on matters of great importance. The Premier will find it difficult to fill his place. In his new post he will have greater scope for his varied and admirable abilities, and it is no doubt but the stepping-stone to that higher position which many competent judges think that he had long since earned.

THE writer of the fortnightly articles on Indian affairs in the Times begins a lengthy discourse on the Pamir question with a Telugu proverb. Perhaps a couple of lines from the opening quatrain of FITZGERALD's translation of OMAR KHAYYAM would have been equally appropriate:—

And lo! the hunter of the East has caught
The Sultan's turret in a noose of light.

But he has failed to catch the exact bearings of the Pamir incident. To say that "CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND had been exploring, chiefly with reference to commercial matters, in Kashgar and Wakkan," is either to betray unexampled ignorance or to exhibit superfluous insincerity. A less obvious blunder may be detected in the reference to "the work which was, for good reasons at the time, left unfinished by the Delimitation Commission of 1884-86." A few lines lower down we read: "The Commission was, however, unable to complete its work along the whole borderland." Now the work which the Commission was appointed to carry out did not include the delimitation of the frontier of Afghanistan on the north-east. Its task was to demarcate a frontier between the Heri Rud and the Oxus; and this task was fulfilled. Nothing was left unfinished. On another point the writer does not exactly make a misstatement, but he is evidently unaware of an important fact. He says "the States of Hunza and Nagar have been slow to accept the more rigidly-enforced authority of Kashmir." As a matter of fact, Hunza and Nagar threw off their allegiance to Kashmir some years ago, sent tribute to the Chinese in Kashgar, and received peacock's feathers in return. Last of all, we may notice the extraordinary misapprehension which underlies the following remark: "It is questionable whether even Russia's activity from the westward during the past twenty years has been more effective than China's activity from the eastward." Every recognised authority on the subject—including COLONEL MARK BELL, MR. CAREY, and CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND—says exactly the opposite. The position of the Chinese in Eastern Turkestan is weak in the extreme, and Russia may annex the country whenever she desires.

MR. C. L. TUPPER, Chief Secretary to the Punjab Government, has been invited to deliver an address to the members of the London Chamber of Commerce. MR. TUPPER returns to India in March.

THE FOREST RULES.

THE Bombay Gazette says:—A year ago, in reviewing the annual returns of the mortality caused by wild beasts, we took the opportunity of ventilating the opinion of local shikaris as to the objectionable and invidious forest rules which had then but recently been brought into operation. We pointed out that the number of dangerous animals was rather likely to be increased than diminished, and the total of deaths augmented. By the report which reaches us this week we find that the Governor-General in Council is of a similar opinion, and that the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces has come to the conclusion that it was a mistake to enforce the rules. During the past year throughout India there has been a marked decrease in the number of wild animals destroyed—14,604, as compared with 17,638 the previous year. The mortality caused by wild beasts during 1890 was considerably below that of the previous year, the Central Provinces showing a decrease of forty-six, but the percentage on the population is still higher here than in any other part of India proper. A Government Resolution suggested that all possible facilities should be given for obtaining rewards, shooting parties encouraged, and licenses under the Arms Act freely given. In most provinces these measures have been adopted, but the steps taken in the Central Provinces come in for special mention. The Chief Commissioner proposes to relax the forest rules so as to permit and encourage shooting in Government reserves, and to free shooting-parties from restrictions as much as is possible consistently with safeguards for fire-protection. The Governor-General not only approves these proposals, but commends them to the consideration of other administrations. It is also suggested that rewards for the destruction of dangerous animals be increased. For although there have been fewer deaths, and the number of animals destroyed was a thousand less than a year ago, the figures are still alarming, and higher than they ought to be, one person in every 88,392 of the population throughout India having been killed by wild animals. Tigers and leopards have been less destructive, persons killed by these animals aggregating but 977, as against 1,244. The number of cattle killed in the year amounted to 64,532, as against 66,757—an apparent decrease of twelve hundred, but the authorities are not quite certain whether the decrease is real. There is a want of uniformity in the classification of cattle in the returns. The Central Provinces hold the term to embrace sheep, goats, and pigs. The Government of India declare that horses, ponies, asses, mules, oxen, cows, and buffaloes, and no other animals shall be included, so our near neighbours are as much puzzled as to how pigs sheep and goats shall be classed as was the railway parcels clerk over the tortoise. How it comes that fewer animals have been destroyed no attempt is made to explain. The diminished aggressiveness of the animals has perhaps enabled them to save their skins. The number of arms licensed is practically the same. We imagine, however, that Government having approved of the relaxation of forest rules, the increase of rewards and the issue of more game licenses, the number of deaths and cattle destroyed will be brought down and the number of dangerous animals killed will be increased.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, October 20.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on Oct. 15, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 3½ per cent.

Below are the figures given of the Bank's statement for the week ending Oct. 13:—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 26,78,783	Decrease
Do. at Branches.....	26,54,283	Decrease
Other Deposits	18,53,548	Increase
Post Bills	60,712	Decrease

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	Rs. 1,48,970	Decrease
Loans.....	7,19,297	Decrease
Accounts of Credits.....	15,295	Decrease
Mercantile Bills	3,95,611	Decrease
Cash at Head Office.....	27,45,692	Decrease
Do. at Branches	8,87,415	Increase

The analysis of the above figures shows a decrease of nearly 29½ lacs in the ordinary trade demand for money on this bank, made up as follows:—By an increase of over 18½ lacs in "Other Deposits," together with a decrease of nearly 7½ lacs in "Loans," over ½ of a lac in "Accounts of Credits," and nearly 4 lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus about ¼ of a lac in Post Bills. The Treasury Balance stands reduced by over 26½ lacs at head office, and over 26½ lacs at the branches. The Bank's investments were realised to the extent of nearly 1½ lac. The final result of these changes is a decrease of about 27½ lacs in the cash at head office, while there is an increase of 8½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 4,69,93,566 rs., equal to 58.1 per cent. of the liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 57.9 per cent. last week.

STERLING EXCHANGE.—Although the Banks have been open during the greater portion of the week, there has not been the brisk business which was confidently anticipated in some quarters. There has been very little movement to record, the market being decidedly dull as regards the number of transactions, and there has been generally little inclination to operate till after the holidays. Cash Telegraphic Transfer has been available throughout at 1.5 to 1.4-31/32, and Mercantile Credits have been saleable at 1-5½.

TEA.—The market has been closed.

JUTE.—A steadily advancing market, with a good business doing for shipment this month, and some few transactions for the first half of November, but beyond that period balers will not sell. Good jute continues very scarce, and an early closing of the season about Narainunge is confidently predicted. Good 1st marks sold at 33 rs. Even 33-8 has, it is said, been paid for November; C.D.M. and Co. quality 31-8; S.C.C. 29-8, and the tendency at the close is upwards.

GUNNIES.—The market opened firmer after the holidays. Owing to a further rise in the price of jute, mills are less inclined for business. Sales are of small extent, but buyers are in the market for forward.

HESSIANS are quiet, but prices steady.

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—There has been a fair amount of business put through, and the market has been unusually brisk for this time of the year. The transactions in gold shares have been both large and numerous, and the prospects of some of the most favoured gold companies appear to be much more encouraging. Satisfactory reports continue to be received from the district, principally from Pat-Pat and Sonapet; and now that fair weather has set in the actual work will be carried on more easily, more vigorously, and more expeditiously. Pat-Pat showed a material rise over prices that have been ruling for some time past, and Sonapets are firm. A fair demand set in for Western Patkoom, and transactions are reported as high as 6 a.; but they weakened at the close, as also did Pat-Pat. The business in jute has been principally confined to Howrahs, though all stocks of this class are steady, almost inclining to firmness. Fairly good lines of India general have changed hands at slightly increased rates. In other stocks very little has been doing. Tarkessur railways are reported at 135 rs. Goosery cottons at 163 rs. New Beerbhoom Coal Co. at 168 rs. Nainital Brewery at 136 rs., and a forced sale of Riversides at 53½ rs. Nothing has been done in tea. The Murree Brewery Co.'s Debenture Loan was successfully floated, and taken up almost immediately.

BANK OF BENGA.
Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 3½ per cent.

BOMBAY, October 23.

With little stimulating news from the consuming markets business in exports has not been lively, and, for the principal staple, demand from local spinners has been very slack. Wheat has latterly become quiet at some reduction in rates, and seeds have been taken to only a moderate amount by shippers, generally on the basis of previous quotations. Rates of exchange have not varied more than 1-16d., and close lower to that extent in bank bills, and 1-32d. in credits than on Oct. 16. Government paper, after fluctuating, is now 3-16 per cent. higher in Fours. Freights are firm, but there is not much demand for tonnage for near shipment. There has been a rather better retail demand for staple imports, and prices of some goods have rather an upward tendency, but the wholesale inquiry is still unusually slow for the time of year.

MONEY.—Following the falling off in the cash balance of 47½ lacs shown at the close of the week before last, the decrease disclosed by the Presidency Bank's statement of affairs, issued on Oct. 19, was comparatively small at 8½ lacs. The increased demand for money for the purposes of trade which was indicated by the last return had, however, continued to some extent, and though the diminution in private deposits was very much less than in the week preceding, at 26 lacs, and the increase in bills discounted smaller, at 2½ lacs, the amount in loans had become materially larger, say, by 5½ lacs, the total expansion in trade requirements being represented by some 34 lacs, or 10½ lacs less than the increase shown by the previous return, the balance having been helped last week principally by an increase in public deposits, and the realisation of Government securities. No change was made at the board meeting on Oct. 22, and 2 per cent. remains the bank's minimum rate.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—There has been a slightly improved retail demand for staple grey goods, but wholesale buyers have been operating sparingly. Prices are generally the same as before, though the tendency is rather upwards. Dealers are very willing to make sales at current rates as a rule, though in a few exceptional cases they demand a slight advance. Stocks are being gradually reduced. There has been a moderate demand for staple makes of bleached goods at previous rates. Dyed turkey red, and printed, as well as local goods, are unchanged in value and position. The off-take of imported goods from the bazaar is estimated at about 3,000 packages; that of local goods at about 1,600 bales.

YARNS.—Only a small business has been done in imported twist, and the tone of the market has been quiet, with prices quite unchanged. Sales of local spinnings at Hong Kong and Shanghai having been small, China buyers have shown a marked disinclination for fresh business except at lower rates. Spinners have refused to meet them beyond making a small concession in No. 20s.; but the bazaar dealers have accepted a decline of more than 1-16 s. per lb. China Exchange, at 222 rs., is half a dollar up. The sales are given at about 2,000 bales, and the market closed steady.

METALS.—Copper has been quiet in tone, with only a small business passing, and prices are quite unchanged. In yellow metal, a moderate business has been done in a quiet market, and at a reduction of 2 as. per cwt. in rates. Iron has been in moderate request, and is steady at last quotations.

COAL is steady. Sales have transpired of 750 tons of ready Beys, Merthyr, Cardiff, ex Inchlonga (s.) at 14½ rs. per ton; and about 1,500 tons of Davison's West Hartley, November-December shipment, at 14½ rs. per ton. There have been forward sellers of Powell's Duffryn, Cardiff, and Davison's West Hartley, at 15½ rs. and 14½ per ton, respectively. The stock on the Bunder is now estimated at 90,000 tons.

Exports.—COTTON.—The feeling has been quiet when not actually dull, with very little inquiry from the mills, and less from shippers, prices, however, having been quoted as before. The purchases of old stuff for export have hardly exceeded 2,000 bales of Oomra and Dholera kinds, Bengals, and Westerns, but some contracts in Bhownugger of the new crop, for May delivery, have been reported: while, for local consumption, under 4,000 bales have been taken from godown, consisting of Oomra descriptions, Bengals, and ginned Compta. The market closes quiet, with prices the same as quoted a week ago.

WHEAT was firm on last mail day with a moderate business passing at previous prices; but, on reopening on Oct. 19, the market was less firm, and thereafter became quiet, while transactions were on only a small scale from day to day, and rates gave way ½ a. per cwt. on Oct. 21, and again to the same extent on the 22nd.

SEEDS.—Linseed advanced in value a little at the close of last week in a firm market; but the tone generally became steady afterwards, and latterly quiet, with only a moderate business passing in any description, while the price of linseed is rather lower again.

DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLO-RODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE IN-VENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr.
Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.
—See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY,
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH,
LONDON. REPORT that it ACTS as a
CHARM, onedose generally sufficient.
Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETE-LY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."
From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY
has given rise to many UNSCRU-PULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists,
Is. 1½d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Oct. 28; Madras, Oct. 29; Bombay, Oct. 31.

A Times telegram says:—The Viceregal party arrived at Rawul Pindi on Nov. 12 and spent the 13th in inspecting the new defence works. The party started on the same night for Umrtsar, where they arrived on the 14th. The Viceroy, a Reuter telegram adds, was received by the municipal authorities, who presented his Excellency with an address. In reply, Lord Lansdowne praised the chivalry and loyalty of the Sikhs, and alluded in terms of regret to the pending retirement of Sir James Lyall from the post of Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. There were splendid illuminations and a fine display of fireworks at the Golden Temple in the evening.

The Rangoon correspondent of the Times says the Viceroy has decided not to visit Burma during this cold season.

The settlement of the Cashmere question, which was announced last week, is generally accepted as satisfactory, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times states. Even the native newspapers, which have hitherto been the loudest in their complaints of the treatment of that State, find it difficult to urge any serious objection to the terms of the settlement. It should now be obvious to all that the Government of India has no intention of annexing the country, and the Maharaja may rely on its friendship and support so long as he remains faithful to his promises of continuing the reforms which were recently initiated.

His Highness the Maharaja of Indore has sanctioned a sum of nearly a lac of rupees for the purpose of meeting the expenses to be incurred for the reception and entertainment of His Excellency the Viceroy during his tour there, on Nov. 23. Grand preparations are being made for the purpose, and ornamental gates and triumphal arches are in course of construction; while the summer residence of the Maharaja, beautifully situated on the Vomri lake, is being thoroughly repaired, as it is probable that a picnic party is to be given in honour of Lord Lansdowne at that delightful spot.

The Commander-in-Chief is now on a tour in Beloochistan.

A telegram of Oct. 25 says:—The Governor of Bombay has gone to Panchgani for a few days. His Excellency was much pleased with his Ahmednagar-Sholapore tour. He was enthusiastically received everywhere. The addresses he delivered dwelt chiefly on education, waterworks, and drainage, His Excellency giving wise advice and promising all possible assistance to the memorialists.

Lord Harris left Poona on Oct. 30 on his Sind tour. On Nov. 1 he was to leave Bombay by the Indian Marine steamer Canning for Kurrachee.

Lord Wenlock, the correspondent of the Times says, has started on a visit to the distressed district of Ganjam, whence he will proceed to Calcutta to visit the Viceroy.

Lady Wenlock has issued a circular announcing her intention of holding a fancy bazaar, in aid of the Countess of Dufferin Fund, in January next.

The following is the statement which the Times correspondent meant to transmit and on which we commented in our last issue:—"On the return of Sir Charles Crosthwaite to India, it is believed, he will take up the post of president of the Land Indebtedness Commission. The Commission is to consist of four other members and a secretary. The North-West Provinces Government has nominated Mr. H. E. Evans, and the Punjab Mr. Ewaz, as members; Mr. Leslie Porter, officiating Deputy Secretary in the Legislative Department, will possibly be selected as secretary."

A telegram from the same correspondent, published in this morning's Times, says:—It is announced that Sir C. Crosthwaite has declined the presidency of the Land Indebtedness Commission, and the appointment will probably not be filled till the Viceroy arrives in Calcutta.

When Mr. Rees accompanied Prince Albert Victor on his tour through Southern India, the winter before last, says the Madras Mail, he did not allow his literary instincts to lie idle, and a volume of his impressions de voyage on that occasion will shortly be published in London. Despite its tardy appearance the volume will no doubt have a large sale if it is written in the same attractive style that distinguished Mr. Rees's record of Lord Connemara's tours.

The latest reports received from Cabul state that the opinion is gaining ground there that the Ameer no longer seriously contemplates visiting England. He has not yet, however, made announcement of any change of plans.

The Maharaja of Darbhunga and suite contracted fever on their return from Simla. All, however, are doing well, and there is no cause for anxiety, a Calcutta paper says.

The ex-Regent of Manipore, his brother, Angao Sena, and other Manipore State prisoners, numbering thirteen, arrived in Calcutta on Nov. 9, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times says, and are detained at present in Alipore gaol, but they will be sent to the Andaman Islands shortly.

Influenza was pretty general in Madras when the mail left.

The Chief Political Officer, Manipore State, has received permission to raise a force of 500 police from among the Maniporis. The force will be armed with Sniders, which are to be obtained from Kohima, and when organised will relieve the troops of the garrison of such outposts as Kaopum and those on the Kohima-Manipore road.

The Preparis Islands in the Bay of Bengal are to be placed under the administration of the authorities at the Andamans.

We, Madras Times, have often referred to the preparedness of Government for the worst in case of the present monsoon proving a failure, as it was apprehended. Collectors have been warned, as we have already stated, to have ready lists of work which may be put in hand at once as relief works, the superintending engineer having been requested to help in the selection of such works; and the railway authorities have also been asked to have ready certain works to be started in case of an emergency. Fortunately the present monsoon promises to be a bumper one which will allay the fears of Government and lighten the hearts of the people.

Mr. O'Callaghan during the next month, says the Pioneer of Oct. 29, will inspect the work done on the East Coast Railway. It seems certain that the Godavery will have to be bridged, as it is undesirable that the new direct line from Calcutta to Madras should be broken by a steam ferry.

A find of Roman coins near Bangalore has recently been reported. The Calcutta Museum authorities have been requested to apply to the Mysore authorities for any that they may require for their collections.

In connection with the Sikkim-Thibet negotiations, the Chinese representatives at Darjeeling are said to be awaiting a despatch from Pekin regarding the terms of the final arrangement which has been matured during the last few months.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE RECENT CYCLONE.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Nov. 10:—

Accounts which are now coming in from several quarters show that the recent cyclone did more damage than was supposed. In Orissa several houses were blown down and some lives were lost. The pilot brigs and lightships at the Sandheads were driven from their positions and suffered some injury. The emigrant ship Lena was dismasted near the mouth of the Hooghly, but the vessel has been towed into port safely. It is believed that some native coasting vessels have been lost. But the most serious catastrophe occurred at the Andaman Islands, over which the centre of the storm passed on the morning of the 2nd inst. The steamer Enterprise, belonging to the Indian Government Marine, lying at Port Blair, being unable to get up steam in time, was driven on the rocks and went to pieces at once. All on board, numbering about eighty persons, perished, except four Lascars, one fireman, and one native steward. The officers lost were Captain Macarthy, First Officer Smith, Second Officer Shortland, Third Officer Andrew, Chief Engineer Fennell, and Assistant-Engineers Joseph and Gonsalves. A band of female convicts opposite whose prison the wreck occurred showed great heroism. They of their own accord rushed into the water, formed a chain by joining hands, and tried to assist the crew. The six survivors owe their lives to this act of courage. Much damage has been done throughout the islands. Sixty convicts were killed, and 200 were injured by falling buildings, two steam launches and nearly all the boats were destroyed, while the rice crops have been ruined. The bright side to the storm is that it seems to have brought plentiful rain in Madras. As regards Bengal, the rainfall has not been sufficient to do much good.

Nov. 12.—Much anxiety is felt regarding the pilot brig Coleroon, which was driven from her position at the Sandheads during the recent cyclone, and has not yet been heard of. However, it is still hoped that she weathered the storm. Two steamers have been sent in search of her.

Nov. 15.—No trace has yet been found of the missing pilot brig Coleroon. The search continues, but the sanguine hopes which were entertained of her having weathered the cyclone are now becoming faint. It is believed that the storm has caused a great loss of native coasting vessels, the exact extent of which will probably never be ascertained. Further news from the Andamans show a terrible destruction of life and property. Houses have been blown down or unroofed, the crops have been ruined, and 200 or 300 persons killed or hurt, exclusive of about seventy who perished in the Enterprise. The gallant conduct of the female convicts who saved seven survivors from that vessel has attracted general attention, and it is hoped that they will meet with a substantial reward. The disaster has again brought into prominence the necessity of laying telegraph cables to the Andamans. The want of such cable is the greatest defect in the Bay of Bengal storm-warnings service.

RAIN-MAKING EXPERIMENTS.

MADRAS, Nov. 15.—Several rain-making experiments on a small scale have been recently tried in various parts of the Madras Presidency by private agency. They have been partially successful, and it is possible that further systematic trials may be instituted by the Government. Explosions of dynamite on the summits of hills of an altitude of from 500 feet to 600 feet above the plains affected an area of about four or five miles radius, inducing smart showers. The experiments are of especial interest in regard to the question of the practicability of arresting clouds, which in the dry season pass over the coastal districts and discharge their contents a few miles out at sea.—Reuter.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES.

We have received the following telegrams from the India Office for publication:—

"FROM VICEROY, Nov. 10.—Indian Marine steamer Enterprise totally wrecked by cyclone at Port Blair on 2nd. Gale arose suddenly, and ship driven ashore before steam could be got up. Following officers lost:—Macarthy, Smith, Andrews, and Shortland; Engineers Fennell, Josephs, and Gonsalves. Native crew numbered sixty-four, of whom only six saved. Chief Commissioner reports:—Port Blair desolated. Many convicts killed, and no shipping left afloat."

"FROM GOVERNOR, Madras, Nov. 10.—Rainfall during past fortnight has been good over southern districts, and there has been marked improvement in the affected parts of North Arcot, Chingleput, Coimbatore, and Salem, except the Trichengode taluk. In northern and central districts rainfall very deficient, and there is cause for anxiety regarding Ganjam, Bellary, Kurnool, and Anantapore. In these districts rain urgently required to save standing crops. Sowing of later crops in ceded districts and Kurnool also retarded by want of rain. In southern districts agricultural operations brisk, and pasture and water supply much improved; prices generally stationary; 5,626 employed on works in Chingleput, 5,391 in North Arcot, 4,233 in Coimbatore, 3,854 in Salem, 551 in Cuddapah; total, 19,655, as compared with 20,435 reported in last telegram, a decrease of 4 per cent. Numbers on gratuitous relief—1,443 in Chingleput, 2,273 in North Arcot, 856 in Coimbatore, 264 in Salem; total, 4,836 as compared with 6,321 last reported—a decrease of 23 per cent. Governor starts for Ganjam on the 13th."

"FROM VICEROY, Nov. 13.—Agricultural prospects during past fortnight about the same. Northern and Central Madras in need of more rain."

"WOODEN SPOON" in the Pioneer gives a review of the Bombay Sports Week. He writes on Oct. 17:—Last night the Bombay Athletic Tournament concluded with a dinner at the Gymkhana. The meeting has been a very successful one this year, and Messrs. Stewart and Proctor, the hard-working and courteous honorary secretaries, are to be cordially congratulated on the results of their labours. Each day during the week the ground has been crowded with spectators. Bombay is very full just now, and all Bombay was there. His Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda, who had given a cup for the meeting, was present nearly every day. Among others I noticed Captain Hobday, who has just concluded three wonderfully successful performances with his amateurs. Some exceptionally good athletes have come to the fore this year, and the performances in some of the events were good enough for a crack English meeting. Surgeon Peterkin was in splendid form, winning the $\frac{1}{4}$ -mile in 54.2.5 sec., the 120 yards hurdles in 17.2.5 sec., and winning the 16 lb. hammer with a throw of 104 feet. Levick, who is undoubtedly the fastest sprinter in India, romped home in the 100 yards and 150 yards, and also won the long jump. Lieutenant Vanderzee (Hyderabad Contingent) made a splendid bid for the $\frac{1}{4}$ -mile against Peterkin, and, though beaten, did inside 55 sec. He also ran well in the 150 yards and won the $\frac{1}{4}$ -mile steeplechase anyhow.

Lieutenant Martin (Connaught Rangers), an ex-amateur champion walker, won the Gaekwar's Cup for the walking race, doing his mile in 8 min. 19 sec., and winning by nearly a quarter of a mile. This was on Monday, and on Wednesday evening the Gymkhana Committee offered Lieutenant Martin a medal if he did inside 8 min. 11 sec. and established an Indian record. Mr. Martin accepted the offer, and cut all previous amateur records in this country by covering his mile in 7 min. 40 sec. (timed by Lund and Blockley): he walked his first quarter-mile in 1 min. 43 secs., and his last in 1 min. 55 secs. Mr. Martin, who appeared to be going well within himself and was not distressed at the finish, was loudly cheered both during the walk and when the result was announced. This was the most remarkable performance of the meeting. Comparing it with English records, it must be remembered that Lieutenant Martin walked on a heavy grass course, and that the Bombay climate, especially in the month of October, is all against fast times. Some of the papers have made the mistake of quoting the English and American "fastest on record," which is taken for walks done on a cinder track and not on grass. The fastest time on record for a mile walked on grass, either in England or America, is a shade inside seven minutes. Allowing, therefore, for the state of the Bombay track, the difference is not great. Lieutenant Martin has been invited by his Highness the Gaekwar to walk at Baroda. The mounted sports were excellent, and brought out large fields; in fact, large fields were the order of the day throughout the meeting. In the Gretna Green race considerable amusement was caused by the attire of the "ladies" in the preliminary canter past, and a good deal more when the fair ones shed their locks, hats, and veils in the race itself. The jumping for horses and ponies was also good. Captain Hobday had hard luck in the final of the Polo Ball race, through breaking his stick.

The "Young Challenge Cup," for winning the greatest number of events, was carried off by Dr. Peterkin. On Wednesday evening the prizes for the athletic sports were distributed by Mrs. Robinson, and on Thursday evening the prizes for the mounted sports were given away by Mrs. Forrest. Golf, racquets, tennis, &c., have also been going on during the week, and the Bombay tournaments have altogether been one of the biggest, and at the same time most successful, meetings ever held in the country.

At a meeting of the Committee of the New Club at Simla it was resolved to address a circular letter to all members, in order to ascertain what support would be given to a scheme for carrying on the club for another year. If the replies are unsatisfactory, liquidation will be resorted to.

In a retrospect of matters theatrical this year at Simla, says the Lahore paper, it must be admitted that the Amateur Dramatic Club for the first time for years did not meet the expectations of the Simla public. Insuperable difficulties seemed unaccountably to spring up throughout the season; and, perhaps, the preparation and production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" absorbed too much of the talent of Simla for too long a period. Almost every well-known amateur was pressed for that play, and it is no wonder, therefore, that the aide-de-camp fell behind somewhat.

The trooping season is in full swing at Deolali, wrote the Times of India correspondent on Oct. 27, and it is a busy time with the depot officials. The arrival of each troop at Bombay brings a crowd of drafts into camp—men for Bombay, Bengal, Punjab, and Central Provinces. It is only the Madras troops that do not come here. Crowds of youngsters fresh from England are to be seen here, jostling the homeward-bound time-expired men, who have done with India and soldiering, and are only waiting the departure of the troop. It is almost a pity that the young soldiers should so soon have their illusions about the sunny East rudely shattered by contact with time-expired and invalid soldiers, who have done their drilling in the Indian plains and have very little good to say of India. It is rather a shock to a hardy youngster, full of health and spirits, to see a procession of broken down invalids dragging their way along wearily, or being carried, as is often the case, to the troop-train which is taking them to the troop. It is not an overencouraging topic for him to reflect on at the very threshold of his career in India. However, such things must be. The number of troops in camp often runs to over 3,000 men. It is always varying; one day 3,000, the next perhaps 700 or 800. Deolali is just a big hotel, ever filling and emptying.

The Civil and Military Gazette is responsible for the following:—Although Mrs. Annie Besant is coming to India, the Theosophists need hardly rejoice, for Mdme. Colomb is neither dead nor asleep. The lady is now, we believe, in Bombay, and has betrayed a desire to prove, to the satisfaction of any committee of unprejudiced judges, that Mdme. Blavatsky was the author of "the most extraordinary delusion ever known in the world." Let Mrs. Besant meet Mdme. Colomb and prove to the world that the latter is unreliable, before she begins perambulating the country on a Theosophic tour.

PERSONAL.

SIR DENNIS FITZPATRICK gave a farewell dance at the Bolarum Residency, Hyderabad, which was largely attended. All the arrangements were perfect, a correspondent says, and the guests spent a most enjoyable evening. Notwithstanding the domestic bereavements with which Sir Dennis has been visited since his arrival, he has done everything to keep up the reputation for hospitality for which the Residency is famous. Mr. Plowden arrives from Berar on Nov. 8, and Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick leaves on the 12th.

Lieutenant-Colonel John Robertson, the new President of the Simla Municipality, has arrived on the scene of his labours.

The Hon. Mr. J. G. Moore was to leave Poona for Bombay on Nov. 1, and would hand over charge of the office of Commissioner, Central Division, to Mr. Reid on the afternoon of the 5th.

Mr. Ney Elias, British Consul-General for Khorasan, will halt some little time at Teheran on his way to Mashad. He is expected to reach the latter place early in December.

Mr. F. P. Beachcroft, Divisional Judge in the Punjab, resigns the Civil Service from Nov. 1.

Mr. P. Nolan succeeds Mr. Lowis as Commissioner of the Rajshahye Division. Mr. D. R. Lyall, late Commissioner of Chittagong, will probably go to Patna, and Mr. John Beames will succeed Mr. Smith in the Presidency division.

The Englishman of Oct. 28 says:—Mr. Adams, the Permanent Commissioner of Benares, is expected to arrive on the 17th proximo, relieving Mr. Wright, who goes to Allahabad, displacing Mr. J. D.

Latouche, Commissioner there. Lieutenant A. J. Shaw, Cantonment Magistrate of Benares, is also about to leave on a year's furlough, so that changes are the order of the day, and many familiar faces will be missed.

During the recent voyage from Australia severe influenza broke out on the Massilia. Among the Indian passengers were Surgeon-General Brook Smyth and Mr. Bourdillon, who were badly attacked. The Rev. Mr. MacDonald, who was returning to Howrah from Australia, was a passenger on board. No less than forty cases of influenza occurred in one day.

We (Englishman) hear that Mr. Luttman-Johnson, judge and commissioner of the Assam valley districts, will, on his return from furlough next December, be appointed to a first-grade district judgeship in Bengal; Mr. Wace, collector of Bhagulpore, who is at present officiating for Mr. Luttman-Johnson, being confirmed in the appointment held by the latter in Assam. Mr. Luttman-Johnson, who was private secretary at Belvedere when last among us in the Lower Provinces, is an officer who has chosen the executive branch of the Civil Service, and the arrangement alluded to above is therefore likely to cause a good deal of heart-burning among the judicial officers whom he will supersede, and in the judicial branch of the service generally.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Surgeon-Major Ritchie, Senior Medical Officer, General Hospital, Madras, died at sea, near Aden, on Oct. 12, and was buried at sea. He was on his way home on eighteen months' furlough on medical certificate.

The death is announced of Mr. S. F. Downing, Principal of the C.E. College, Seepore, which took place at Coonoor on Oct. 16. The deceased gentleman was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and was a graduate of Dublin University in Art and Engineering. He went out to India in 1869 as Professor of Civil Engineering in the Engineering Department of the Presidency College, Calcutta, and when that Department was amalgamated in 1880 with the Dehree Training School and transferred to Seepore with the title of Government Engineering College, Mr. Downing was chosen as first Principal of the new college. In no college in Bengal, says the Englishman, has so strict a system of discipline been introduced. The beneficial results of that system, consistently adhered to in the face of strong native opposition, have long been apparent, and the present flourishing condition of the college affords perhaps the best monument which could be erected to the indomitable perseverance and uniform justice of the administration of its late Principal. In his younger days Mr. Downing was a most enthusiastic sportsman. A finished horseman and a fearless rider, he was equally at home with rod or gun, at polo or in the pig-sticking field; but over-exertion eventually told its tale, and a weakened heart condemned him for the past ten years to a life of unintermittent pain, and forced him to give up violent exercise of any description.

The death of the Rev. Dr. Hay, London Missionary Society, is announced in Madras.

Hon. Samuel Brown, Surveyor-General, Hong Kong, died on board the Ancona on Oct. 10 and was buried at sea. He was on his way back to the colony from Japan, whither he had gone for his health.

THE VICEROY IN CASHMERE.

SPEECH BY LORD LANSDOWNE.

A STATE banquet took place at Lal Mandir Palace, Srinagar, on Oct. 24, and was the occasion of a grand display on the river. Shortly after seven o'clock the Viceroy, the Marchioness of Lansdowne, Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice, Sir Mortimer Durand and his Excellency's staff, accompanied by Raja Amar Singh and Pundit Suraj Koul, the Financial Minister, left the Residency, and proceeded in a barge down the river, the buildings and ghâts en route being illuminated. The ghât at Lal Mandir was very effectively decorated, and brilliantly lit up. Their Excellencies, on their arrival, were received by the Maharaja, Colonel Prideaux, and the principal State officials. A guard of honour of Cashmere troops was drawn up outside the palace. Here about sixty ladies and gentlemen, visitors to and residents in Cashmere, were assembled to meet their Excellencies. After the introduction of the guests to the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne had taken place, the company adjourned to an ante-room, where they were entertained for about twenty minutes with a nautch, in which the three principal female singers in Cashmere, elaborately decked with jewellery and kincob, appeared. The banquet took place in the large hall of the Palace. The table was beautifully laid out with Cashmere fruit and copper vases, some of them of great size and elegant workmanship. This novel but very effective method of decoration suggested itself, in the absence of flowers, to Captain Evans-Gordon, under whose superintendence the banquet arrangements, which were in every respect admirable, were carried out. Besides the Marchioness of Lansdowne and Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice, there were also present Mrs. Prideaux, Mrs. Hilton, Madame la Marquise de Bourbel, Mrs. Vincent, Mrs. and Miss Lossack, Mrs. Collett, Mrs. and Miss Brodie, and many other ladies.

After dinner his Highness the Maharaja entered, and took his seat to the right of the Viceroy. Colonel Prideaux then rose, and, on behalf of the Maharaja, proposed the health of the Queen. After a brief pause, Colonel Prideaux again rose and spoke as follows:—

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I have been commissioned by His Highness the Maharaja to express the great gratification he feels at the visit which their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne have paid to his capital. (Applause.) Colonel Prideaux concluded by asking the company, on behalf of his Highness, to join him most cordially in drinking to the long life and happiness of their Excellencies the Viceroy and the Marchioness of Lansdowne. The toast was very heartily received.

His Excellency the Viceroy then rose and said:—

Your Highness, Ladies, and Gentlemen,—I thank your Highness cordially for the kind manner in which, by your Highness's instruction, Colonel Prideaux has proposed my health. The visit which I am paying to Cashmere is the realisation of a wish which I have cherished for a long time. There is, I suppose, no part of the British Empire which any Englishman arriving in India is more anxious to see than that of which your Highness is ruler. Its marvellous beauties have, from the time when European visitors first found their way into the Valley, been celebrated by the traveller and the poet, and even on my way here I have seen enough to convince me that the expectations which I have formed are not likely to be disappointed. (Applause.) Having now had some experience of the scenery of India, as well as of that of the North American Continent, I will venture to say that the Jhelum Valley need not fear comparison in point of beauty with any other part of the world. (Applause.) I am glad to have this opportunity of expressing my thanks for the arrangements which were made for our journey, both by land and water. Nature provided the scenery, but we should not have enjoyed it as we did but for the excellent new road along the valley, a thoroughfare to which Colonel Prideaux has just referred, and the importance and convenience of which can hardly be over-estimated. Even if the Cashmere State has to wait for a few years before it is connected by a railway with British India, the existing cartroad supplies an admirable channel of communication, which I have no doubt is specially appreciated by those who, in former years, were condemned to travel by the old road. (Applause.) But, your Highness, anxious as I was to visit your State, it was certainly not merely with the object of seeing its great natural beauties that I undertook my present tour. If I had been coming here merely as a tourist I should have regarded my visit with much less interest than that which I feel in it at the present moment. It is not necessary for me to remind your Highness that almost from the time of my arrival in India, affairs in Cashmere have constantly engaged my thoughts. The principal cause of my anxiety not to postpone my visit to you was the desire which I felt to make your Highness's personal acquaintance, a desire which I am glad to think was reciprocated by you, and to effect a full and frank interchange of ideas with you upon a matter of interest to us both. I was also anxious to meet again your Highness's brothers, Raja Amar Singh, President of the Council, and Raja Ram Singh, the Commander-in-Chief, and to hear from them something of the work upon which the State Council has recently been engaged. That work has been of an exceptionally important character. The reports of the Council claim for it, and, I am glad to say, claim for it not without reason, that it has, during the last few months, initiated several very substantial improvements in the administration of the State. I say initiated, because the real difficulties of reformation begin when reforms which have been elaborated on paper come to be submitted to the test of practical application. I believe, however, that the Council has made a good and courageous beginning. (Applause.) The preliminary work of revenue settlement has, I am glad to learn, made good progress, and the whole question of revenue administration is under consideration. In this branch of administration Raja Amar Singh has, I know, taken a particular interest. (Applause.) At this moment a British official—I refer to Mr. Logan, an official of special experience in financial matters—(applause)—whose services we have temporarily placed at the disposal of the Durbar—is engaged in a full inquiry into the finances of the State, an investigation which the Council has done well to court, and which it has, I am happy to say, facilitated to the best of its powers. The results of this inquiry will, I hope, be laid before me shortly. I trust that amongst those results will be the introduction of a sound system of audit and account, which I need not say is the very backbone and essence of good administration, whether in a native State or in an Indian province. (Applause.) In the Judicial Department, presided over by Pundit Bagh Ram, several changes are likely to produce useful improvements if they are properly carried into effect. They have, I am told, been approved by the Council. Last, but not least, the administration of the army has been vigorously taken in hand by Raja Ram Singh—(applause)—who holds a commission in the British army, upon which I beg to congratulate him, and has, I rejoice to know, been greatly assisted by Colonel Neville Chamberlain—(loud applause)—an officer who, at the special request of the Council, I placed at its disposal nearly two years ago. (Continued applause.) I believe I am not exaggerating when I say that in place of a large and irregularly paid force, indifferently equipped and badly disciplined, the State is in a fair way of obtaining a smaller force, much more efficient, and much more likely to prove a source of strength to the State and to the empire. (Applause.) Your Highness will, I am sure, think it only natural that I should desire to satisfy myself upon the spot of the extent of these reforms, that I should wish to learn from the Resident, who, I am glad to know, enjoys the entire confidence of your Highness, from the Council, and from your Highness, what has already been done and what yet remains to be achieved. I have only been a few hours in Srinagar, and we have, as yet, been able to do little more than commence the discussion of these important subjects, but before I leave the State I shall, I hope, be able to obtain much information which will enable me to form a clearer opinion with regard to the measures which it may be desirable to adopt for the future government of the State. (Applause.) Your Highness may depend upon it that I shall approach the consideration of these questions, in which you are so deeply interested, with feelings entirely friendly towards your Highness. (Applause.) I am indeed glad to be able, on this interesting occasion, to assure your Highness publicly, as I have already done in my private communications, that the Government of India has throughout entertained towards your Highness and towards the Cashmere State no sentiments other than those of sincere goodwill and sympathy—(loud applause)—coupled with an earnest desire to assist you in surmounting the many difficulties and in bearing the heavy load of responsibilities with which you have been confronted. (Continued applause.) I trust that the assurance which I am thus able to give your Highness will dispel once and for ever the mistaken idea that in its dealings with the Cashmere State the Government of India harbour for a moment any ulterior designs upon its rights and privileges.

(Applause.) The connection of the Cashmere State with the Government of India has always been of a specially intimate character. The State owes its very existence to the grant made to your Highness's ancestor in 1846, and upon more than one occasion in its subsequent history it has given evidence of its loyalty and attachment to the Government and the Crown. I feel no doubt that the loyalty of the Cashmere State is at the present time entirely above suspicion, and that, just as it came forward at the time of the Mutiny as our staunch ally, so, if an opportunity should again arise, the Cashmere troops, commanded by your Highness's brother, Raja Ram Singh (applause), and particularly that portion of them which have been placed under special discipline for Imperial Service, will be again found ready to take their place by the side of ours. (Applause.) I shall be glad if my visit to Cashmere serves to strengthen and to consolidate the amicable relations by which the State has been bound to the Government of the Queen-Empress, and I offer to your Highness and to the State Council my sincere thanks for the manner in which you have received Lady Lansdowne and myself in the State of Cashmere. (Loud and continued applause.)

His Excellency resumed his seat, and after a brief interval rose and proposed the health of his Highness the Maharaja, which was received with acclamation. The party then adjourned to the terrace overlooking the river, whence they witnessed a brilliant display of fireworks.

Oct. 26 was spent by their Excellencies in visiting the Cashmere State Hospital and the Art Exhibition.

TRAINING OF H.M.'S INDIAN MARINE.

WITH the approval of H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, the Government of India have issued the following rules for the instruction in England of officers of H.M.'s Indian Marine in gunnery and the use of torpedoes, and in other scientific branches of their profession. All officers and engineers of the Indian Marine, whether in India, or on leave on furlough in England, are at liberty to apply for permission to attend all courses and classes open to officers or engineers of the Royal Navy on full pay, including the courses at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich. There will, in future, be no restriction on the number of officers or engineers undergoing instruction at the same time. The courses are:

For officers—(1) Short course for lieutenants, consisting of eight weeks each of gunnery and torpedo. (2) The session of the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, for captains, commanders, lieutenants, and navigating officers, which commences on Oct. 1 of each year, and lasts till June 30 following.

For engineers—(1) Courses on board the Vernon and Excellent, the former beginning in January, March, and April, and lasting for forty-five days each; the latter commencing in February, April, and June, and lasting for twenty-five days each. (2) A course at the Royal College, Greenwich, which usually begins in October of each year.

Every officer or engineer permitted to attend a course will be on duty for the period he may be under instruction; and if on leave or furlough, except leave on medical certificate, such period will be reckoned as in addition to his leave or furlough.

Officers and engineers attending courses will be entitled to full grade pay, together with subsistence or travelling allowances for that period.

Officers and engineers failing to qualify, except on account of sickness, if on leave or furlough, lose all advantages of being on duty during the period of instruction, i.e. they will be restricted to their grade or furlough pay as the case may be.

It is, therefore, to be understood that officers and engineers while under instruction will be granted their full pay subject to adjustment under preceding paragraph; but the subsistence allowance will be withheld until the termination of the course, as it will only be admissible to officers who pass.

Should the Government of India select an officer or engineer to undergo instruction at home either on board the training ships, or at Royal Naval College, Greenwich, or elsewhere, or to go through a combined course at more than one centre of instruction, he will be given a free passage to England and back, and will be considered on duty while under instruction, and will also receive full pay and subsistence and travelling allowances, subject to the operation of the preceding paragraph.

If an officer so selected and sent to England at the public expense fails to obtain a certificate at the termination of the course, he will be placed on furlough pay for the period of his absence from India.

The cases of all officers prevented by sickness from completing a course of instruction will be considered as they arise.

In forwarding applications from officers on leave or furlough for permission to undergo instruction, the Director of Marine should be careful to see that no infringement of the furlough regulations is likely to take place from the furlough being granted. No officer will be selected who has not sufficient leave unexpired at the commencement of the course to enable him to return to duty on its termination, or who cannot be granted an extension of leave under existing furlough rules.

The Director of Indian Marine should also satisfy himself that applicants are likely to qualify in the subjects in which they desire to receive instruction. In the case of engineer officers desirous of being admitted to study at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, the Director of the Indian Marine will, before forwarding their applications, cause them to pass an examination based on that which has to be undergone by engineer students of the Royal Navy.

Officers in future when applying for permission to attend courses of instruction should specify the particular course or courses which they desire to enter. Their applications should be forwarded to the Government of India in time to allow of the Secretary of State's sanction being obtained before the commencement of the course; and recommendations for permission to allow officers to undergo instruction should be made by the Directors of the Indian Marine as soon after their departure from India as possible, especially in the case of officers on general leave.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

THE Times of India of Oct. 31, says:—We understand that when the Hon. Mr. J. G. Moore, C.S., retires from the Service on the 7th proximo, Mr. G. B. Reid, C.S., the present Collector of Poona, will be appointed as Commissioner of the Central Division. It was originally believed that when Mr. Keyser, C.S., returned from furlough, he would have resumed charge of the Office of Acting Commissioner, Southern Division, and that the Hon. Mr. Nugent would have been transferred to the Central Division; but now, we believe, it is in contemplation to post Mr. Keyser, on his return from furlough, as Collector of some district, while Mr. Nugent will retain the Commissionership of the Southern Division. Mr. Waddington, C.S., Collector of Ahmednugger, retires on the 20th proximo, and it is just possible that Mr. Keyser may be sent to Ahmednugger, if Mr. Snow, C.S., from Sholapore, does not get Nugger. It is understood that the Hon'ble Sir Raymond West contemplates retiring from the Service at the end of March next. His place in Council will be taken either by Mr. Justice Birdwood or the Hon'ble Mr. J. R. Naylor, C.S.I., Legal Remembrancer to Government. The former has gone home on leave to push his claims, but it is believed that Mr. Naylor has a very fair chance of being appointed. Sir Charles Pritchard, it is said, will be promoted to the Viceregal Council at about the same time that Sir Raymond goes away, when, it is believed, Sir Philip Hutchins will retire. Mr. Trevor, the Commissioner in Sind, and Mr. James, the Acting Commissioner, are believed to be in the running for the appointment which will fall vacant by the promotion of Sir Charles Pritchard.

The Bombay Gazette, on the other hand, says:—The statement which has found its way into print that a Bombay civilian, whose name is given, will be appointed to the Viceregal Council when Sir Philip Hutchins retires, anticipates matters too much. Sir Philip Hutchins does not retire for a long time to come, and though, when he does retire, it will be in accordance with an unwritten law that a Bombay civilian should replace a Madras civilian, it does not necessarily follow that things should take that precise course. Were Sir Charles Cross-thwaite not to return to India in the cold weather the vacancy at present existing in the Supreme Council would very possibly be filled by appointing a member of the Bombay service to the post. As a matter of fact, Sir C. Cross-thwaite has decided to return almost immediately, and doubtless he will receive back his seat on the Council and resume charge of the Public Works Department. The time to consider the successor to Sir P. Hutchins has not yet arrived. The name of Sir A. Mackenzie, at present Chief Commissioner of Burma and formerly Secretary in the Home Department, has been mentioned in connection with the succession to that particular seat. All that can be said on the subject as yet is exactly what we stated last January, that nothing is settled, and in the usual course nothing could be settled as yet in regard to a vacancy so remote. On another point a statement equally wide of the fact has been put forward. It is not true that Mr. Justice Birdwood has gone home to "push his claims" to the seat on the Bombay Council which will be vacated on the expected retirement of Sir Raymond West in March. Mr. Birdwood went home on two months' leave under stress of ill-health. His claims to the prospective vacancy on the local Council could not be affected, except adversely, by any such procedure as that which is wantonly imputed to him. When the time comes to make the appointment, the claims of Mr. Naylor, who has twice acted on the Council, will be weighed, as well as those of the senior civilian judge on the High Court Bench. No civilian judge on that Bench has a record of an acting appointment on Council, and for this reason—that there is a standing order of the Secretary of State prohibiting such appointments, which interfere with the regular work of the Courts, and are further open to the possible objection that it might be supposed, however groundlessly, that judges are dependent on the local Government for favours. But the absence of an acting appointment on the Council is not of itself a bar to the pucca appointment, as might be understood from the fact that Sir Raymond West, who never "acted," was transferred from the seat on the Bench to the seat on the Council which he now holds.

THE COURT-MARTIAL ON LIEUTENANT LOWRY.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Rangoon correspondent of the Times :—

Nov. 12.—The court-martial on Lieutenant Lowry began to-day. Colonel Campbell was the president; Colonel Skinner, the judge advocate-general; and Captain Lambert, prosecutor. The Court consisted, in addition to the president, of four field officers, four captains, and two subalterns.

Two charges were preferred against Lieutenant Lowry. The first was a charge of behaving in a manner unbecoming to an officer and a gentleman on May 26 at Mandalay, when playing cards in the Upper Burma Club with Dr. Wilson, of the Indian Medical Service, and Mr. Stephen, bank agent at Mandalay, by unfairly dealing himself cards from the centre of the pack instead of dealing them in succession from the top. The second charge is that he was guilty of unfair play on the same occasion in dealing himself the king of diamonds from the bottom of the pack instead of dealing the cards in succession from the top. A preliminary objection to the form of the charges was overruled.

Dr. Wilson deposed that Lieutenant Lowry asked Mr. Stephen and himself to play poker at ten rupees limit. They agreed to play, but declined to exceed a five rupee limit. Lieutenant Lowry shuffled the cards so that he could see their faces, and he looked at them intently while shuffling. When Lieutenant Lowry's turn came, he took cards from the centre of the pack. Witness at once complained of this, but Lieutenant Lowry denied taking cards from the centre. Afterwards further disputes occurred. Witness and Lieutenant Lowry then temporarily left the table. Witness, on returning, hastily warned Mr. Stephen by words and signs that Lieutenant Lowry was playing unfairly. Lieutenant Lowry was near at hand when this was done. Witness then ceased playing, but Lieutenant Lowry and Mr. Stephen continued. Soon afterwards Mr. Stephen charged Lieutenant Lowry with having the king of diamonds in his hands, although he had seen that card at the bottom of the pack. Lieutenant Lowry made no explanation, and Mr. Stephen rose and left the table. Lieutenant Lowry subsequently denied cheating, but he seemed dumbfounded, and remained seated at the table with his head in his hands.

Dr. Wilson was then cross-examined at some length, especially as to the rules of the game of poker, and as to whether Lieutenant Lowry was not justified in what he did, assuming all his statements to be correct.

Captain Lambert, the prosecutor, said that as he was not acquainted with the rules of the game of poker, and could not explain them thoroughly, he would put in as evidence a book of the rules of the game.

Mr. Cuffe, Assistant Engineer in the Public Works Department, deposed that he was in the card room of the Upper Burma Club on the occasion, and watched the game of poker which was being played by Dr. Wilson, Mr. Stephen, and Lieutenant Lowry. He was struck with the peculiar manner in which Lieutenant Lowry handled the cards. When dealing Lieutenant Lowry dealt very rapidly, holding the cards in a fan shape. The witness had never seen cards dealt in that manner before. He left before the disputes occurred.

In cross-examination, the witness said that he had never himself played the game of poker, and at the time did not suspect any unfair play.

Mr. Stephen, bank agent at Mandalay, deposed to hearing Dr. Wilson charge Lieutenant Lowry with taking cards from the middle instead of from the top of the pack. Dr. Wilson warned him that Lieutenant Lowry was playing unfairly, but at the time the witness did not notice anything wrong, and continued playing. Soon afterwards he distinctly saw the king of diamonds at the bottom of the pack, and that card was afterwards found in Lieutenant Lowry's hand, although all the cards were not out. Witness then refused to continue playing. Lieutenant Lowry asked the witness to speak to him outside, and the latter did so. Lieutenant Lowry said that the matter was a very serious one, and he must mention it to his commanding officer.

In cross-examination, Mr. Stephen said that he could not have been mistaken in having seen the king of diamonds at the bottom of the pack.

A number of questions were then asked on behalf of the prisoner, apparently to show that what Lieutenant Lowry was alleged to have done was equivalent to revoking at whist, and was merely a breach of rules and not necessarily unfair.

The Court then adjourned.

Nov. 13.—To-day at the court-martial on Lieutenant Lowry, Colonel Chambers, who was commanding officer at Mandalay in May, deposed that Lieutenant Lowry made no communication to him. He became aware of the facts owing to communications from Surgeon Wilson.

The case for the prosecution then closed.

Lieutenant Lowry stated that he would not call any witnesses. Besides Dr. Wilson and Mr. Stephen there were several other persons present when the charge was originally made against him. One of them, Major Hobday, has returned from Europe to give evidence on behalf of the accused.

A written statement of the facts was handed in by Lieutenant Lowry. It stated that Lieutenant Lowry played for an hour, dealing and shuffling in his usual manner, before Dr. Wilson remarked that he had taken cards from the centre of the pack. The cards taken from the centre did not benefit him. Dr. Wilson saw those cards, and Lieutenant Lowry appealed to him to withdraw his objection. He did not then understand that any unfairness was being imputed to him, or he would have ceased playing. As to the incident about the king of diamonds, Lieutenant Lowry emphatically denied taking the card unfairly. As Dr. Wilson, when he spoke to him outside the card room, said that he would say no more about the matter, Lieutenant Lowry was under the impression that the awkward incident was closed. He was only passing through Mandalay at the time, as he had to proceed to Madras. He had intended to report the case to his own colonel, whom he expected to meet in Rangoon, but he missed him. On his return to Rangoon he reported the matter, but it was already under investigation. Lieutenant Lowry admitted having committed a grave error of judgment in not immediately reporting the case, but that was due to the fact that he was confused and alarmed in a strange station.

The Court decided to examine Major Hobday, who deposed that on the occasion in question he sat behind Lieutenant Lowry, on his right hand. Lieutenant Lowry dealt the cards before the witness began to watch the game. He heard Mr. Stephen ask Lieutenant Lowry if he had the king of diamonds in his hand, and Lieutenant Lowry admitted having it. Major Hobday then said that Lieutenant Lowry did not, at any rate, take it in. The witness had not seen the king of diamonds at the bottom of the pack, nor did he at any time see the bottom card. During the short time that he was present, he saw nothing suspicious about Lieutenant Lowry's play.

Nov. 14.—Mr. van Someren, advocate for Lieutenant Lowry, addressed the Court. He said that the question was whether the word "unfair," which was used in the charges made against the accused, amounted to a charge of moral turpitude. The fact of merely going contrary to the rules of the game was not morally wrong. Dealing cards from the centre of the pack might be contrary to the rules, but it was not morally wrong unless some distinct motive was proved for doing it. Both the charges against Lieutenant Lowry depended on the uncorroborated testimony of one witness. Possibly Mr. Stephen had been mistaken about the king of diamonds being at the bottom of the pack. Nothing had been shown by the prosecution to justify the Court in characterising Lieutenant Lowry's conduct as scandalous and unbecoming to an officer. Mr. van Someren then read a letter from the Assistant Adjutant-General at Mandalay, informing Lieutenant Lowry that he might either send in his papers or stand his trial by court-martial.

The prosecutor replied.

The Judge Advocate-General then addressed the Court. He referred to the Gordon-Cumming baccarat case, explaining the difference in procedure adopted in the two cases. Lieutenant Lowry was brought to trial by a general court-martial instead of being left to bring a civil action against his accusers, because the charges were made against him in a club in a military station.

The Court was then cleared.

After an interval of twenty minutes it resumed, and the President announced the verdict of the Court to be that the prisoner, Lieutenant Lowry, was "Not guilty" on all the charges.

Colonel Campbell, President of the Court, then said to Lieutenant Lowry:—"Let me give you a word of warning before you go. You have heard what the Judge Advocate-General said in his summing up regarding the rules of poker, and how open they are to dishonest play. As an officer of thirty-one years' service, I give you a word of warning to go and leave poker and all games of cards alone."

During the trial Lieutenant Lowry stated that he had been unable to obtain legal advice at Mandalay, as the Assistant Adjutant-General had informed him that if he took legal advice he would be breaking his arrest.

THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH OFFICERS.

It is rather disheartening, says the Lioner, to be obliged to call attention once more to the case of the officers of the Indian Telegraph Service. But though the grievances of the Department, after a prolonged agitation, received recognition at the hands of the Government not so long ago, it would appear that they have not by any means obtained redress. It may be remembered that in 1887 the Secretary of State sanctioned a reorganisation scheme, which was conceived in a liberal spirit, and was intended to settle once for all the grievances under which the service was then labouring. The Direction, consisting of the Director-General, the Deputy Director-General, the Director of Traffic, and the Director of Construction, together with the four senior superintendents, under the title of chief superintendents, were to be kept distinct, and the remainder of the superior officers were to be divided into six classes. The Government of India, while professing to give effect to this reorganisation scheme, substituted one of their own, which entirely nullified any benefits that were granted to the Department by the Secretary of State. Classes I., II., and III. were filled up by the four officers on the Direction, and the superintendents, including the four chief superintendents, were formed into Class IV., this class being subdivided into three grades. At the same time a needlessly vexatious rule was introduced prohibiting officiating promotions from grade to grade. This rule presses very heavily on the Department. For example, four senior officers are at present on long furlough, two of whom retire at the expiration of their leave, yet their places cannot under this rule be filled temporarily by officers in the grades below them. The junior officers are thus forced to fill the senior appointments without receiving any extra remuneration for the increased duty and responsibility thrust upon them; and the State thereby effects a considerable saving at the expense of the Department. The Director-General, it is understood, has strongly urged the restoration of officiating promotion from grade to grade, but the Government of India have refused to reconsider the matter. The Viceroy has also been memorialised by officers of the Department, but with no better success. It is difficult to understand why a deaf ear has been turned to these representations. The refusal of Government to rescind their arbitrary rule, prohibiting officiating promotion from grade to grade, contrasts very unfavourably with their recent treatment of the Financial Department, the superior officers of which have lately been undergoing a similar reorganisation. The officers of the Telegraph Department now intend to memorialise the Secretary of State on the subject; and the Government will probably have to yield in the end, when it will have the satisfaction of knowing that it has earned no thanks for the concession, but has encouraged other branches of the public service to feel that their only chance of justice lies in the India Office.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The Black Mountain Tribes and the Border Militia.—The experiment of enlisting men from among the Black Mountain tribes for the force of Border Militia which is to keep order upon the Hazara frontier will be watched with much interest, says the Pioneer, particularly as Hashim Ali, the leader of the malcontent clans, is still at large. The presence of our troops for so many months in the heart of the country has no doubt had a salutary effect upon the tribes, who have seen that the old policy of scuttling out of the hills after a few skirmishes has been abandoned. We have now to note the effect of the withdrawal of the small force under Brig.-Gen. Hammond's command. The 230 militia are to be drawn in the first place from the tribal sections that were not in opposition during the last expedition, but no doubt in course of time the Hassanzais and Akazais will be allowed to furnish their quota to this small body of men. The headmen of each clan will be held responsible for the good behaviour of this frontier militia, and the pay given by Government will encourage them to discharge their duty loyally. It has to be seen whether Hashim Ali, whose influence has been greatly lowered by the continued occupation of Seri, will make yet another attempt to disturb the peace of the border. At present he is a fugitive, and he dare not return so long as our troops are in the hills, but on their withdrawal he may possibly think that a good opportunity will offer for his appearance again on the scene. The tribal leaders affirm that they will have nothing to say to him: their agreement with General Elles was that he should be permanently expatriated, and they have now to see that he does not return. He is, however, a bold and enterprising man, and he may give the local headmen some trouble in the next few months. The question is whether the small force of 230 militia will be equal to preventing his followers from committing some outrage on the frontier which may once again revive this troublesome Black Mountain question. The political authorities apparently consider that there is no danger of fresh complications, and this being so the Commander-in-Chief is justified in withdrawing the troops. A month hence it will be possible to calculate whether the new arrangement is likely to prove a permanent and satisfactory one.

The Miranzai Campaign.—Home Despatches.—The following despatch on the Miranzai operations is published:—From the Secretary of State for India to the Government of India:—"I have to acknowledge your Lordship's despatch dated July 14, 1891, forwarding despatches describing the operations of the Miranzai Field Force, together with the General Order issued on the subject. I cordially concur in the views expressed by your Government in this General Order regarding the vigour and ability displayed by Brigadier-General Sir W. S. A. Lockhart, K.C.B., who commanded the force, and the gallantry and endurance of the troops under his command. I have communicated the papers to the Secretary of State for War, and his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief. You will observe from the enclosed copy of a letter from the War Office, that Mr. Secretary Stanhope and the Duke of Cambridge fully concur in commending the manner in which the operations were carried out."

Sept. 5, 1891.—From the Under-Secretary of State for War to the Under-Secretary of State for India:—"In reply to your letter of Aug. 28, forwarding copy of a despatch from the Government of India, with enclosures relative to the operations of the Miranzai Field Force in January and February, and in April and May last, I am directed to acquaint you that Mr. Secretary Stanhope and his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief entirely concur with the Secretary of State for India in Council in appreciating the vigour and ability with which Brig.-Gen. Sir William Lockhart, K.C.B., C.S.I., has conducted these operations, and also the gallantry of the troops under his command."

The approaching tour of his Excellency, Sir James Dormer, K.C.B., to Burma will probably be the last of its kind that a Madras Commander-in-Chief will make in that country, as the military authorities at Simla are anxious to have the Burma command transferred to the Bengal Army command, and to this end we (Madras Times) hear proposals have already been submitted. The Burma command was handed over to the Madras Army command in April 1888, and since then everything has gone on smoothly, though there have been some instances in which considerable delay and inconvenience have been caused by references having to be made to the Simla authorities, which would have been avoided if all matters military in Burma were left entirely to be settled by the Commander-in-Chief of Madras.

Col. H. R. Hope proposed leaving Ootacamund on Oct. 28 for Madras and would take over the duties of Secretary to Government, Military Department, from Brig.-Gen. A. R. Kenney-Herbert on the afternoon of the 30th. Col. Hope's name will probably appear in the next Gazette, placing his services at the disposal of his Excellency the Governor of Madras. It having been definitely settled to appoint Col. E. W. Begbie, D.S.O., as Deputy Adjutant-General, Lieut.-Col. W. Stainforth, 21st Madras Infantry, from Secunderabad, has been summoned to Army headquarters to take up the appointment of Assistant Adjutant-General. Col. Stainforth was some years back Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry at headquarters.

The undermentioned officers had received permission to appear before the Civil and Military Examination Committee at Bombay on Nov. 2:—Hindoostani, Higher Standard—Second Lieut. C. B. L. Clery, attached 25th B. I.; Lieuts. E. Tennant and E. N. Davis, attached 3rd Bombay Inf.; Lieut. A. A. Cooke, 1st Inf., H. C.; Lieut. G. M. Hudain, 5th Inf., H. C.; Major Garstin, Middlesex Regt.; and Major C. S. S. Whitehill, 2nd K. O. Yorkshire L. I. Hindoostani, Lower Standard—Lieuts. C. J. Windham and A. Hay, 21st Bombay Inf.; Second Lieuts. L. H. Baldwin, 2nd York L. I., and S. A. Cooke, 2nd C. I. Horse; Lieut. J. Talbot, 1st Bombay Lancers, and F. W. Watling, R.E. Persian Lower Standard—Lieut. H. F. Jacob, 14th Bombay Inf. Persian, High Proficiency—Capt. F. Hemphill, K. O. S. Borderers. Marathi, Higher Standard—Surg. J. G. Höljel, I.M.S., 5th Bombay L. I. Arabic, Higher Standard—Lieut. G. H. Arbutnot, 3rd Madras Light Cav.

Col. Toker, deputy secretary in the Military Department, comes home at once on three months' leave.

Col. G. N. Channer, C.B., V.C., Staff Corps, will, on return from leave, be posted to Umballa for general duty.

The undermentioned have leave of absence:—Col. A. Chaplin, assistant judge advocate-general, Mean Meer, and Lieut. C. Davis, 1st Bengal Cavalry, to England for twelve months, on private affairs; and Capt. D. Carey, East Lancashire Regt., for twelve months, on medical certificate.

On Lieut.-Col. Miley's return to duty on Dec. 1, Col. G. W. Sawyer proceeds on short furlough to England, rejoining at Poona on May 1 as officiating controller of Military Accounts, Bombay Presidency.

The services of Lieut.-Col. J. B. Lawrence, cantonment magistrate, Belgaum, have been replaced at disposal of Government in the Military Department.

Lieut.-Col. Hildebrand, deputy director of fortifications, has been granted six weeks' extension of office. Major Broadben succeeds him in the middle of December.

Major Sir C. H. Leslie, Bart., 2nd batt. 4th Goorkhas, will, on the return of Col. King-Harman, officiate as commandant of the 1st battalion during the absence on leave of Major Mercer.

Major F. G. Alexander, 10th Bombay Light Inf., has been granted one year's leave in India.

Major B. J. C. Doran, Royal Irish Regt., has been appointed deputy assistant adjutant-general for musketry, vice Capt. Sir R. Colleton, Bart., who vacated on Nov. 3, from which date the following transfers will take place in the Musketry Staff:—Major Doran to 1st Circle, Capt. Campbell from the 1st to the 2nd Circle, Major Browne from the 2nd to the 3rd Circle, Capt. Dobbie from the 6th to the 8th Circle, and Capt. Eardley-Wilmot from the 8th to the 6th Circle.

Major C. E. Parker-Jervis, 2nd batt. Durham Light Inf., having been promoted to a half-pay lieutenant-colonelcy, is accordingly permitted to proceed to England, travelling at the public expense.

Capt. F. W. G. Wadson, 7th Bombay Lancers, has been appointed brigade-major to the Inspector-General of Cavalry.

Capt. R. J. Prior, Military Accounts Department, has been transferred from Poona to Calcutta. His place will be taken by Capt. Williams.

We (Times of India) hear that Capt. Carden, Army Pay Department, has been appointed Paymaster of the Deolali Depot, and that he will take up his duties in January next, on his return from England, where he is at present on leave. Capt. Sandes, A.P.D., officiates at Deolali until Capt. Carden's arrival. It has been decided that for the present the appointment of Paymaster, Deolali Depot, will be held by an officer of the Army Pay Department.

Lieut. H. C. Holman, of the 2nd Devonshire Regt., who was prominently brought to notice by Brig.-Gen. Wolseley and Major-Gen. Campbell Stewart for his excellent services with the Wuntho Expedition, has been appointed unpaid attaché to the Intelligence Branch at Mandalay.

The following officers have qualified as follows:—Obtained an "Officer's extra" certificate of musketry, Lieut. Hon. C. E. Walsh, 3rd batt. Rifle Brigade. Obtained an "Officer's" certificate of musketry, Lieut. A. A. G. Anderson, 3rd Dragoon Guards.

Deputy Surg.-Gen. Bradshaw, Rawul Pindi District, will, it is expected, succeed Surg.-Gen. Thomson as principal officer to her Majesty's forces in India.

Miss Dormer accompanies Sir James Dormer during his approaching tour in Burma. It is probable that the Commander-in-Chief on his return to Madras will stay there till the end of February, and then return to Ootacamund, by which time his new residence, "Woodside," will be ready for occupation. During his stay at Madras his Excellency and staff will remain under canvas, the camp being pitched in the usual place on the Fort glacis.

No. 9 Mountain battery, and Royal Welsh Fusiliers have moved from Nimal in the Black Mountain to Oghi, and will march thence for Rawul Pindi and Peshawur.

In connection with the mobilisation scheme, the Commissariat Department will, during the current financial year, complete all their reserves of clothing, equipment, food, and fodder at stations on the North-West Frontier and in the Punjab.

On the conclusion of the big manoeuvres, six native cavalry regiments will remain in Meerut over Christmas before starting back to their respective stations: in addition to which three British cavalry regiments will also stay, two of them stopping to take part in the District Camp of Exercise in January.

The privilege of making remittances to any part of India by transfer receipts to officers on field service will continue to be issued at par to the limit of their monthly pay and allowances, including staff allowances. Transfer receipts for sums less than 50 rs. will not be granted, in such cases when remittances by postal money-orders are available on field service.

Her Majesty's troopship Crocodile, under the command of Capt. J. R. Pattison, arrived at Bombay on Oct. 26 from Portsmouth, which port she left on Sept. 30, calling at Malta on Oct. 8, Port Said on the 13th, and Suez on the 15th inst. During the voyage, on the 15th inst., the child of Sergt.-Major Parton, 2nd West Yorkshire, died from natural causes. The Crocodile experienced fine weather throughout the voyage.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Oct. 28.

Official Tours.—Government Resolution.—The Calcutta Gazette contains a Resolution giving directions with regard to official tours. The Lieutenant-Governor attaches the greatest importance to personal supervision and communication between heads of departments and the chief executive officers in the administration and their subordinates, and close and minute inspection by them of all branches of offices and of work done by subordinate officers. Detailed instructions are given for members of the Board of Revenue, District Magistrates, and Collectors, subdivisional officers, heads of departments, Inspector-Generals of Police, Gaols and Registration, the Director of Land Records and Agriculture, the Conservator of Forests, the Excise Commissioner, the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, and the Sanitary Commissioner. Sir Charles Elliott hopes these instructions will be strictly observed in future by the officers concerned, and directs every Divisional Commissioner and every head of department to give in his administration report an account of the tours of inspection which he and the officers under him have made during the year, showing what places they have visited and what special matters have engaged their attention.

Commenting on the above the Pioneer says:—No surer means could well be devised of making a good officer into a bad one than the issue of such a set of rules as Sir Charles Elliott has just had published in the Calcutta Gazette. Under this new code it will be seen that every grade of official and each head of a department has now got his precise instructions for his own particular case as to how many days he is to be out on tour in the cold weather, how many during the rains; exactly what localities or institutions he must visit once a year or twice a year, or once in two years, as the case may be. No head of a department is to be in Darjeeling during the absence of the Lieutenant-Governor without special permission—just as undergraduates have to ask leave to “stay up” when term is over. The result of instructions conceived in a spirit of this kind can only be degrading to the morale of the whole service. It converts any reasonable latitude which men of long service and high position, such as commissioners and heads of departments may permit themselves, in their interpretation of the effective discharge of their duty, into positive disobedience of orders, and it tends to turn the secretariat into a detective office for the discovery of such breaches of the rules. In one respect, however, Sir Charles Elliott's instructions on the subject are a little less wooden than those which were promulgated for a neighbouring province, for they do recognise that there is a difference between district and district for purposes of camping; whereas in the other case a rigid standard of four months was laid down for every collector alike, until the shown absurdity of such a regulation caused it to be modified.

The Excise Department.—The Resolution on the administration of the Bengal excise department shows a decrease of 12,544 rs. in the gross revenue, and an increase of 97,911 rs. in the charges, giving a decrease of net revenue of 1,10,465 rs., which compares favourably, the Resolution remarks, with the decrease of 4,60,521 rs. in the previous year. The increased charges are mainly due to the extension of the distillery system, under which greater vigilance and activity are demanded from the inspecting and detective staff of the excise department. In Central Bengal, between the Ganges and the sea, all out-stills have been abolished, and only distilleries are allowed. In Behar, and to some extent in Hazaribagh, a dual system prevails, some outstills being retained under stringent restrictions as to the amount of liquor the lessees may manufacture. In Northern Bengal and Chota Nagpore, except the Hazaribagh and Chittagong divisions, there are no distilleries, and in Chittagong no attempt has been made yet to restrict the capacities of the stills and vats in order to limit the outturn of spirit. On April 1 last a great extension of the distillery system was effected by abolishing the out-stills in the Presidency, Bordwan, Dacca, and Orissa divisions. The immediate result was a decline in the revenue from country spirits of 1,78,870 rs. The Excise Commissioner considers that the loss of revenue is only partially due to the decreased consumption caused by the rise in the retail price, and that much of the decrease must be put down to illicit distillation.

New Imperial Library, Calcutta.—One of the most important features of the new Imperial Secretariat offices, which are just being completed in Calcutta, is the library block occupying the centre of the quadrangle at the back. The books, says Indian Engineering, are now being arranged in the new room, and we had an opportunity recently of studying its appearance and utility. Whether viewed in regard to light and air, comfort and convenience, or cheerfulness with quiet, there is no doubt that the new library stands out as a most valuable addition to the attractions of the city. The collection of books and records, combining as it will all that has hitherto lain hidden in the musty record-rooms of the Home Department, with the libraries belonging to the Revenue and Agricultural and P. W. Departments and the Board of Examiners, will be admirably accommodated in specially-designed book-cases. These form a fine feature in the room, and the credit for their design and construction lies, we are pleased to know, entirely with the P. W. D. The design of this block, as well as of the library fittings, is from the hand of Mr. W. B. Gwyther.

Progress in Assam.—The very substantial increase of 500,000 maunds, during the first quarter of the official year of 1891-92, in the total weight carried on the rivers of Assam is not to be despised, says the Englishman. Curiously enough the imports and exports divide the increase almost equally. Rice of course is the principal import in the Brahmaputra Valley, showing 19 per cent., with salt 16½ per cent., and gram and kerosene 12 and 11 per cent. respectively. Sugar and iron total only 6 and 4 per cent. With the exception of salt and iron all the other articles exhibit a more or less marked increase. The figures for rice have nearly doubled, while three times as much kerosene was imported during the quarter under report as during the corresponding quarter of the previous year. Sugar rose by nearly 70 per cent., and grain and pulse by about 30 per cent. The important exports from the valley show coal and coke 45 per cent., a slight decrease, rape and mustard 26 per cent., an increase of about 20 per cent. As usual, the entire quantity of tea and coal went out of the Province by steamer. The tea generally all goes to Calcutta, but during the quarter under report nearly a third of the total quantity exported is shown as having been sent to Eastern Bengal. This is apparently because it was landed at Goalundo, whence, no doubt, it found its way to Calcutta. The bulk of the coal, too, went to Calcutta, about one-seventh of the entire quantity going to the Dacca block. Rape and mustard were carried in nearly equal proportions by boat and steamer, half the entire quantity going to Calcutta, and the greater portion of the other half to Eastern or Northern Bengal. Paddy (rice in the husk) was all carried by country boats, and found its way chiefly to North Bengal and Dacca. From the Surma Valley the imports were coal and coke 18, gram and pulse 14, salt 12, sugar 11, kerosene and tobacco each 4, per cent. The figures for salt and tobacco exhibit a small increase, while kerosene and gram and pulse fell off slightly. The import of sugar, however, rose by one-third, and nearly four times as much coal and coke were imported into the valley during the quarter under report as during the corresponding quarter of the previous year, the entire quantity coming by steamer from the Calcutta and Dacca blocks. The remaining articles, too, came chiefly from these two blocks, country boats being the principal means of conveyance. The exports from the Surma Valley were: rice 50, stone and lime 39, and tea 2 per cent. There was an improvement in all these three articles of export, that in tea being most marked. “Rice in the husk,” as well as “stone and lime,” which were carried entirely by country boats, went, the former chiefly to Dacca, and the latter to Dacca and Calcutta. Tea, on the other hand, was carried entirely by steamers, and, like the tea from the Brahmaputra Valley, is shown as having gone equally to Eastern Bengal and Calcutta.

A Sibbsagar correspondent writes on Oct. 25:—The cold weather is now full on us, and the continuous drought is seriously affecting the outturn. If no rain falls soon the season will come to an end very soon, and a very short crop must be expected. The outlook is bad, and planters generally are anxious as to the final results.

The Secretary of State has sanctioned the estimate of 12,46,357 rs. for the construction of the Barsoe-Kissengunge branch of the Assam-Bihar section Eastern Bengal State Railway, a distance of 36 miles.

It is a pitiable sight, says Indian Engineering, to see one of the best—if not the best building in Calcutta have its appearance marred for want of the timely arrival of terra-cotta from England. This is a glaring instance of the shortcomings of the India Office Store Department, and it would be a good plan to arouse public opinion by putting up boards against the offending spots with a notice in these words—“Awaiting terra-cotta from India Office.”

Natives in Calcutta have been apparently suffering from a mania for theatrical amusement, and theatre after theatre has been established in that city without adequately meeting the demand for such amusement. The latest movement in this direction is one of an exceptionally respectable character, the editor of the Rai and Raiyat, said to be one of the best English scholars among Bengalis, being the chief promoter. It is to be a dramatic company on the joint-stock plan, the chief object being to raise the character and status of the Bengali stage of the day.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Oct. 29.

Rain-making Experiments.—A Madras correspondent writes on Oct. 29:—Further rain-making experiments were carried out by Mr. Wolfe-Murray, collector of Cuddapah, on the 25th. There being no wind to fly a kite, the dynamite was exploded by a fuse on a rock at an elevation of 2,400 feet above the sea and 200 above the plain. Ten packages of dynamite, of 10 lbs. weight each, were placed on the rock about 50 yards apart. One fuse failed to light. The concussions were felt hundreds of yards distant. About six hours after the explosions, with the sun still shining, came a magnificent shower of rain unaccompanied by wind and no thunder till the rain passed over. The shower lasted about half an hour, when the channels running into the water-tanks received a small supply. The day was rather cloudless than otherwise. The rain gauged about 1 inch over a portion of its area. It is estimated that thirty square miles of the heaviest rain fell not on the site of the explosion, but a mile or more away. Outside of the dynamite rain area there was only an ordinary drizzle. The cost of the explosions was within 200 rs.

A Botanical Survey.—The Government Botanist, Madras, has been directed by his Government to prepare and submit a programme for the botanical survey of the several districts and provinces assigned to him in the general scheme for a botanical survey of India, with an estimate of the cost of carrying out the survey. Mr. Lawson, the Madras official, will prepare his programme in consultation with Dr. King, of the Calcutta Botanical Gardens, and Dr. Trimen, Director of the Botanical Gardens in Ceylon.

CEYLON.

A Technical Institution is to be established in Ceylon very soon. Government has already voted a sum for the purpose, and the additional expenditure required for the exhibition galleries, it is hoped, will be subscribed locally. With this view a committee has been formed, and the work will soon be accomplished. A member of the Ceylon Legislative Council, who is now in England, is deputed to obtain the best working method for such an institution in Ceylon after inspecting the various establishments in England and consulting leading technologists. He is also to select a superintendent for the new establishments.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Oct. 31.

A Sad Case.—Mr. Richardson, third Presidency magistrate, Bombay, on Oct. 26, sentenced Mr. C. J. Rodrigues, a medical man, to four months' rigorous imprisonment with a fine of 500 rs., or, in default of payment to a further term of four months' imprisonment, for having stolen a quantity of jewellery, worth 1,514 rs., from the shop of Messrs. Morenas and Co. at Bombay. Mr. Russell, who appeared for the accused, in defence stated that the accused, in consequence of the illness of his wife, had taken to drink. His client was a medical man, and closely related to one of the most respected men in the city, who was a well-known doctor. He had been taking liquor, and under the influence of drink he took certain articles from the shop, to which he had been a customer for some time. According to the instructions counsel had received, the doctor was then not in a state to understand what he was about, and therefore the essential element of the alleged guilt and dishonest removal was wanting in constituting the charge of theft. Again, when the police proceeded to his place in relation to the missing articles, he at once placed before them all the articles which he had in his possession. He would add that, the fact having been brought to the notice of the prosecution, they were quite satisfied with the explanation, and through their solicitor, Mr. Hormusjee, who represented them, expressed a wish not to proceed any further against the doctor. On these grounds counsel submitted to the Court that it was not one of those cases in which the Bench could very well insist on a prosecution. The prosecution, however, having been placed in the hands of the police, it was proceeded with, with the result stated.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Times correspondent at Rangoon telegraphs as follows:—

Nov. 13.—Brigadier-General Wolseley, C.B., commanding the Mandalay Brigade, has been transferred to Belgium. During his five years' service in Burma General Wolseley did excellent work in pacifying the province. Last year he displayed remarkable skill and vigour in crushing the revolt of the Tsawbwa of Wuntho.

The revised official estimate of the paddy crop in Lower Burma shows an increase in the area under cultivation of 300,000 acres over that of last year.

Nov. 15.—The Chinese troops who recently crossed the Kampoung stream, and advanced as far as Myothit, have not yet returned to Chinese territory. Every effort will be made to induce them to recross the Kampoung stream without having recourse to force. Steps are being taken to prevent their obtaining supplies. If negotiations fail, they will be disarmed and sent across the frontier. These troops consist of irregulars badly armed, and they have only recently entered the Chinese Service, having been previously in the service of a free-lance on the border.

Another body of 450 regular Chinese troops holds a post on the frontier line at Manwyne, but that place is within Chinese territory. The troops and police who were sent from Bhamo to the Kampoung stream, in order to occupy Maimaing, have been ordered to stockade themselves.

The distress in the districts in Upper Burma has become distinctly worse during the past week owing to the rain holding off. In several districts, unless rain falls immediately, the paddy and jowari crops will completely fail. In the Yen and Lower Chindwin districts the distress is especially bad. The present condition of the distressed districts causes much anxiety to the local Government, as, if the new crops fail, the distress in Upper Burma must continue for several months, and will necessitate the relief works being maintained during the same period.

It is understood that Sir A. Mackenzie will again visit Upper Burma at an early date.

Up to the present the rainmaking experiments in Upper Burma have not been proceeded with. The engineers in the Public Works Department have declined to carry them out, fearing the danger and responsibility necessarily attendant on them. An application has been made for an officer of the Royal Engineers to proceed to Upper Burma to superintend some rainmaking experiments with dynamite. It is proposed to explode a large quantity of dynamite on the top of the Popa mountain, a lonely height in the middle of the most distressed districts.

The want of rain is also felt in various districts in Lower Burma. Notwithstanding the large increase of area under cultivation, the next crop is not likely to exceed the last one.

A RANGOON TELEGRAM dated Oct. 23 says:—The results of the tour of the Financial Commissioner and the Chief Engineer in the distressed districts have been published in a long memorandum by the former. Altogether the outlook is very hopeful. A large fall in prices must not, however, he thinks, be expected till the middle or end of December, when paddy will be harvested. By February, if all goes well, the price of food should drop considerably, and relief works should be no longer necessary.

THE MU VALLEY RAILWAY in Upper Burma is expected, says the Pioneer, to be opened for traffic as far as Kawlin, on the borders of Wuntho next spring. Work will also be pushed forward from Katha to Mogaung, this section being independently carried out. The link between the Sagain-Wuntho line and the Katha-Mogaung section will be last of all taken in hand, as difficult country has to be crossed. As only 50 lacs per annum are granted for railways in Upper Burma, it is calculated that the complete system from Sagain to Mogaung, with the branch to Katha, will not be completed before 1896, but each year sections will be opened as they are completed.

A FEW DAYS since, writes a correspondent on Oct. 23, a conference of officials was held at Government House. Sir A. Mackenzie considered the relief works were proceeding satisfactorily. In view of the probability of a rush to the relief works in November, several new roads have been sanctioned, and a new railway line to Myingyan was discussed. The Government of India prefers to adhere to the sanctioned project from Meiktila road, instead of from Samon. The former scheme had been abandoned by the Local Government because the country between Meiktila Town and Myingyan is very difficult. The Financial Commissioner and the Chief Engineer reported that probably a détour could be made, avoiding the hilly country, and also opening up the Central Myingyan district. Two railway engineers have been deputed to make a rapid survey, and if the suggested route is practicable, work will be commenced at once on the Meiktila road branch.

THE CHIEF COMMISSIONER of Burma will be rather surprised when he receives the English papers that have arrived by the last mail. He will find that, according to Reuter's agent at Rangoon, it was rumoured on Sept. 26 that the ex-Tsawbwa of Wuntho was "collecting large bands of followers in different parts of the district with the intention of attacking that locality." And further that "the people were alarmed" and "grave fears were entertained as to the possibility of holding the position by means of the existing garrison of Madras troops, and reinforcements had therefore been applied for." There was a beautiful vagueness, of course, in this alarming rumour; bands were assembling in a "district" to attack a "locality" and the "position" was in danger! On Sept. 28 the excitement was kept up by the despatch of the following extraordinary telegram:—"The excitement in Wuntho is increasing. It is anticipated that the place will be attacked on Wednesday by the Tsawbwa, and patrols are maintained nightly. The Burma Police, who have for some time past been without arms, have again been supplied with weapons. The populace have been warned to collect in certain places in case of alarm." This must have whetted the appetite of those who love sensational newspaper stories, but the imagination of the Rangoon correspondent was exhausted by this effort, and he left Wuntho severely alone thereafter. It was inconsiderate of the Tsawbwa not to have attacked the "locality," or to have rushed Wuntho town on the Wednesday; but as he is popularly supposed to have made his way to Chinese territory months ago, he could scarcely put in an appearance on the scene. Turning to our own telegrams for the last week in September, we find that a number of dacoities had been committed in Wuntho State, the police having difficulty in hunting down the bands at that season of the year. But our Rangoon correspondent added:—"Nothing serious is expected, and the statement that our garrisons are in danger is unfounded." That this was the true estimate of the state of affairs has since been proved, for, beyond petty dacoities, nothing has happened to disturb Wuntho.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

THE MUNICIPALITY OF LAHORE have been experimenting with Punjab coal from the Dandote colliery. The experiments have been tried with the smaller kind of coal on the waterworks engine, and have so far been found successful. The larger kind is now being used and found to be still better. The coal is supplied by the authorities of the North-Western Railway, to whom the colliery belongs, and who are trying to introduce it as a new fuel. The coal is said to be much better and cheaper than wood or charcoal.

A FAIR IDEA of the extent of the work which is in progress of perfecting North-West frontier road communications may be formed from the Administration Report of the Public Works Department for 1890-91, just issued. The two important roads which have now been completed run, respectively, from Khushalgarh to Dera Ismail Khan, via Kohat, Kurram, Bannu and Peyzu, and, lower down, from Dera Ghazi Khan to Loralai. The first section is two hundred miles in extent, and has cost just over 32 lacs of rupees. This, however, includes the expensive works of the Kurram and Gambilla bridges, which between them required an expenditure of over 9½ lacs. The Dera Ghazi Khan-Loralai section is 68 miles in length, and involved an expenditure of about 7½ lacs. In addition to these works, the operations in progress in the Gomal, under the supervision of Mr. Davis, Assistant Engineer, may also be noticed. These comprise construction of posts, roads and improving tracks, with a pile bridge over the Gomal river, the whole being estimated to cost over a lac and a half.

THE CENTRAL PROVINCES ADMINISTRATION have issued a resolution on rural sanitation, a subject to which the present Chief Commissioner, during whose term of office at the Home Secretariat the well-remembered Sanitation Resolution of 1888 was issued, is known to have given a good deal of attention. The lines upon which Mr. Macdonnell seems desirous of proceeding are directed to ascertaining what are the most crying sanitary evils in each village, what are the best and simplest means of applying a remedy, and what the cost will be. The resolution recognises that a merely platonic attitude on the part of Government is of no value, and accordingly it is intended to make grants-in-aid of village sanitary work from district and provincial funds, so as to stimulate and assist local effort. In the Central Provinces, as in the North-West, and more recently in Bombay, a Sanitary Board will be formed, and now that the Government are prepared thus practically to recognise their obligation in the matter of local sanitation, it is not too much to hope that the beginnings of a new and better state of things may soon be seen, the Bombay Gazette remarks. At any rate it is worth noting that Mr. Macdonnell's administration see the necessity of giving something more than good advice as their contribution towards the promulgation of the gospel of cleanliness.

HYDERABAD.

THE NIZAM'S GOVERNMENT has, says a Madras paper, expressed its inability to accede to a request made by Mr. T. H. Lowinsky, Agent and Manager of the Deccan Mining Company, to extend the present prospecting lease of that Company, which expires at the end of the current year.

THE NIZAM'S GOVERNMENT have decided to establish a Central Press in Hyderabad, where all Government official forms will, in future, be printed; also administrative and other reports, in English and Urdu. Mr. P. F. Gallagher, editor and proprietor of the Deccan Standard, has been offered the appointment of Superintendent of the Government Central Press and Stationery Department, the only important question remaining to be settled being the salary of the Superintendent. In the event of his accepting the appointment, Mr. Gallagher has decided to discontinue publishing the Deccan Standard, which is the only Anglo-Indian newspaper now published in the Nizam's dominions.

A CORRESPONDENT AT HYDERABAD writes on Oct. 27:—Speculation is rife as to whether his Highness will follow the example he cited in his manifest to the Prince of Wales, so far as to go to Calcutta to be examined before the High Court. Should he decide on doing so it will prove him to be far in advance of the other Native Princes of India. Mr. Inverarity returns here next week, having been retained by Sir Kurshed Jah in the case brought against him by Mr. Tom Palmer to recover three and a-half lacs of rupees.

Hunting, the correspondent adds, is now at an end, as most of the fine fox-hounds brought here from England by Nawab Vicar-ul-Oomra in June are dead. It is almost conclusively proved that English hounds will not live here, so sportsmen will be forced to content themselves with "bobbey" pack. The sport to be got with them is by no means to be despised.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

A SHANGHAI telegram to the Daily Chronicle states that the occupation of the Pamirs by Russian troops is treated in Shanghai with comparative unconcern, although at Peking it has caused irritation and apprehension.

The Times of India of Nov. 12 publishes a long and interesting account, from its special correspondent in Cashmere, of the movements of Captain Younghusband, who was despatched by the Indian Foreign Office on special duty to Chinese Turkestan. Captain Younghusband, who arrived at Srinagar from the Pamir region about a week ago, states that, hearing at Yarkand of the presence of a Russian expedition to the Chinese Pamirs, he sent Lieutenant Davison to the Alichur Pamir, and proceeded himself to the Little Pamir. At a village called Bozai Gumbaz he found the Russian expedition. It consisted of fifty Cossacks and fifty infantry soldiers, under the command of Captain Yanoff. Captain Younghusband was well received by the Russians; but Captain Yanoff informed him that, by the orders of the Governor-General of Turkestan, he would be arrested unless he undertook to leave the Little Pamir and also promised not to travel through certain passes which were described as newly-acquired Russian territory. Captain Younghusband chose the second alternative, and, having given the required assurances, was allowed to proceed to Tagdumlash Pamir region, which the Russians admit to be Chinese territory. Captain Younghusband discovered, however, that Captain Yanoff's expedition had trespassed on the territories of China, Afghanistan, and Chitral, the last-named State being under British protection. Meanwhile Lieutenant Davison reached Alichur, which is claimed by China. There the lieutenant met a body of Chinese troops under General Chang, and was treated with civility. Captain Yanoff's expedition arrived at Alichur shortly afterwards, and, claiming the country as Russian territory, compelled the Chinese to withdraw. Lieutenant Davison himself was arrested by the Russians and conveyed to Marghilan, where he met Mr. Charles Eliot, of the British Embassy at St. Petersburg. Lieutenant Davison was then released, and proceeded to rejoin Captain Younghusband at Tagdumlash, whence both officers returned to Cashmere. The Chinese general was very indignant at the violation of Chinese territory committed by the Russians, and declared that China would send a large force to occupy the Alichur country in the spring, and assert China's suzerainty in that region.

The Times Calcutta correspondent gives the following version:—Captain Grombchevsky had no part in the affair, being then on the Alai Pamir. Captain Younghusband, on his return journey, discovered that Captain Yanoff's expedition had trespassed on the territories belonging to China, Afghanistan, and Chitral. After leaving Bozai Gumbaz, the expedition descended into the Wakkhan Valley to Baikra, whence they crossed the Hindoo Koosh by the Korabhaut Pass, and then went a short distance down the Yakhun Valley, in Upper Chitral, from which point there is an easy road to Jellalabad and India. Captain Yanoff then recrossed the Hindoo Koosh by the Baroghil Pass, went through the Wakkhan Valley, and returned to the Alai Pamir. On the return march, while passing over the Alichur Pamir, they found Lieutenant Davison staying with General Chang and the Chinese troops, who had received him kindly. Captain Yanoff compelled the Chinese general to withdraw, and arrested Lieutenant Davison. Captain Yanoff, again alleging that he had received orders from Baron Wrevsky, conducted Lieutenant Davison to Marghilan, where he handed him over to Mr. Eliot, Attaché to the British Embassy at St. Petersburg, who happened to be there, and Mr. Eliot advised him to return to Kashgaria.

From this account, says the Times correspondent, it seems clear—first, that the exclusion of Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison was not effected by a mere exploring party, but by a regular military expedition, commanded by officers of high rank, acting under the orders of the Governor-General of Turkestan; secondly, that Captain Yanoff claims as a Russian certain territory undoubtedly belonging to Afghanistan and China; and thirdly, that he has penetrated into a State within the sphere of British influence and to a point whence a comparatively short and easy march would have brought him to the British frontier.

The St. James's Gazette made a curious mistake in commenting upon Captain Younghusband's letter from Bozai Gumbaz, dated Aug. 11, says the Pioneer. It stated that when that officer found the Russians on the Little Pamir "he at once communicated with Gilgit, with the result, as we have heard by telegram, that 200 of the 5th Goorkhas were pushed on to that place. This sign of activity was sufficient; for the Russian party is reported to have recrossed the Pamir and returned to the frontier." This is an absolutely wrong deduction to have drawn. What really occurred was that on news of the Russians being at Bozai Gumbaz, two small detachments, of only eight or ten men each, were sent out under Lieutenants J. M. Stewart and Molony to stop any stray parties from crossing the Hindoo Koosh. But the very day after Captain Younghusband met Colonel Yanoff the Russian exploring parties returned, and it was then that the British officer was ordered to leave the Little Pamir. He shortly afterwards reported that the Russians themselves had marched off northwards to rejoin the main body on the Alichur. It was not decided until after Lieut.-Colonel Durand's visit to Simla in September that the Gilgit Agency guard, furnished by the 5th Goorkhas, should be reinforced by 200 men. These only started from Abbottabad some seventeen days ago, and they are still a considerable distance from their destination. It is impossible to say why Colonel Yanoff retired, but he certainly could have heard nothing at the time of the Gilgit garrison being reinforced from Abbottabad, as that step was not decided upon until some weeks after he had left Bozai Gumbaz.

The interest, by the way, continues the Allahabad journal, which the Chinese Government have in this Pamir affair is a very direct one. They have, it is true, been careless about their outposts on the western borderland of the Kashgar Province, but this was probably because they never anticipated any action by Russia in that quarter. But all the same there was a Chinese General on the Alichur, thus showing that their authority extended to that portion of the Pamirs, though they had no military force at hand to stop any intruders. All European travellers who have been in those regions have spoken of meeting Chinese officials. Grombchevsky himself only got through to the Hindoo Koosh in 1889 by means of bribery; and it is quite plain that the Kashgar Governor considered that Chinese territory extended right up to the Afghan border in Wakhan. The Russians, in their movements in Central Asia, pay not the least regard to boundaries as claimed by native States—they have been kept from encroaching on Northern Afghanistan by the understanding arrived at with England as the result of the Boundary Commission; and, so far as can be judged, Colonel Yanoff brushed past the Chinese on the Alichur, and made his way to the Hindoo Koosh, leaving only a subaltern with a few men to watch the "General," who had protested against his advance. The Peking Government had a very good case against the Russians, and though they may move slowly in their diplomatic representations, they will have the cordial support of the English Foreign Office. . . .

It is a matter of certainty that unless Lord Salisbury takes up a firm attitude an attempt will be made next year to establish Russian authority over Shignan and other portions of Afghan territory in the Upper Oxus Valley. This will be a far more serious business than the impudent annexation of the Pamirs and the expulsion from those barren plateaux of Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davison.

A Reuter telegram from St. Petersburg, dated Nov. 14, reports as follows:—

"A Russian diplomatist, who is well versed in the affairs of Central Asia, states that no negotiations have yet been entered upon between the British and Russian Governments for the settlement of the Pamirs question, nor have any communications passed with China or Afghanistan on the subject. In his view it is improbable that any serious remonstrance will be addressed to Russia, because one of her expeditions has crossed into a country, the confines of which are vaguely defined, and which is populated only at certain times of the year by nomad tribes who lead their flocks thither. With regard to Captain Younghusband, it appeared that he had been arrested on territory which was undoubtedly Russian, and had been well treated by Captain Yanoff, so that there could be no cause for complaint on that score.

"The diplomatist went on to express the belief that, when the British Government had received detailed information respecting the Pamir territory, it would not carry the matter any further. The English newspapers, he remarked, took alarm at the proceedings of Captain Yanoff's expedition, because they regarded it as an indication of a further movement towards India, but their fears were baseless. A Russian military campaign against India was an impossible idea. The inaccessibility of the country, its immensity, its geographical configuration, and, finally, its climatic conditions, were obstacles which could not be surmounted.

"For the same reasons the reports as to the Russians contemplating making a road across the Pamir might be dismissed as unworthy of credence. In any case, it must be clear, even to the most pronounced alarmists, that at the present time Russia was too fully occupied with the embarrassments of her financial and agricultural situation to be tempted into any adventurous enterprises in remote regions. Prince Galitzin's expedition was notoriously of a purely scientific and private character, but there was reason for hope that the interview between Lord Lansdowne and the Prince would have a good effect, as the latter would be able to convince the Viceroy of India that Russia contemplated no aggression against Great Britain in the direction of the Pamirs.

Nothing has yet been decided with regard to the projected visit of the Ameer of Bokhara to Russia, but it is known that his Highness is very anxious to make the visit, and is only awaiting authority from the Imperial Government to undertake the journey. It is, however, considered likely that the situation brought about in Russia by the famine may decide the Government to ask the Ameer to postpone his visit for some time.

Sir Frank Lascelles, the newly-appointed British Minister, arrived at Teheran on Nov. 14, with Lieutenant-General T. E. Gordon and Mr. Cadogan. He was received outside the town by the Persian authorities and by Mr. Kennedy, the British Chargé d'Affaires, with the customary ceremonial, and drove to the Legation under an escort of cavalry and infantry. He was accompanied by the leading members of the British colony.

TRANS-FRONTIER OPERATIONS.

The possibility of operations this cold weather against the Hunza tribesmen, as we (Pioneer) have before hinted, has had to be taken into consideration in connection with the strengthening of the British Agent's escort at Gilgit. It is absolutely necessary to make a good mountain road, passable for mules, as far as Chalt, which commands the entrance to the narrow valley leading to Hunza, and the chief of that petty State is as likely as not to raise objections to this proceeding though the road will be entirely in Cashmere territory. Col. Durand, with 250 of the 5th Goorkhas, a mountain-battery, a machine-gun, and three regiments of Imperial Service troops, to which at least twelve British officers can now be attached, will have a handy force to bring Safdar Ali Khan to reason if he decides to show opposition. The total population of Hunza is not more 6,000 all told, so that the fighting strength of the tribesmen can scarcely be more than 1,500. Nagar, which lies to the south of Hunza, cannot produce nearly as many men. It may therefore be taken that if the two combine their total number of men-at-arms would not reach 2,000. They are wretchedly armed, their matchlocks being much inferior to the ghazail in use in Afghanistan and along the North-West border generally, and they have no organisation or discipline. They rely upon the natural strength of their country to protect them against intruders from the outside world. The road from Chalt to Hunza follows the course of the Kanjut or Hunza River, and in many places is exceedingly dangerous, though in the winter—when the stream is at its lowest, owing to the snow remaining frozen on the hills—it is passable for baggage animals. No large force could be used in operation against the tribesmen, 300 men at the outside being the limit. With this number, however, equipped with breechloaders and with a section of a mountain battery and a Gatling, there should not be the least difficulty in dispersing any armed gatherings that might attempt to block the way. Safdar Ali and his people have not yet come under the influence of Martinis and Sniders, and having had successes in the past against Kashmiri troops, they may be foolish enough to try conclusions with our own Goorkhas. If they do this, their punishment will be sharp and effective, and an end will be put once for all to their capacity to raid into the Gilgit Valley.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

The following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 (Reuter).—The Herald has received the following message from its correspondent at Shanghai:—The Viceroy of Nankin having ordered torture to be administered to a rebel, the latter denounced his accomplices, after which his head was cut off. The European Ministers at Peking have arranged a modus vivendi with the authorities. The Chinese now fraternise and are friendly all round. Banquets and fêtes are to be given and returned during the week of the races. The Residents in China are furious against the diplomatists for neglecting their duties.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 13 (Daily Chronicle).—The situation is still threatening, though the crisis has been postponed. The native feeling against the missions has not subsided, and a general feeling of disquietude consequently prevails. China's internal troubles have not abated. Hunan is simply seething. An open revolt would be no surprise to those here who are best qualified to judge of present indications. The very quietness prevailing at Hunan is regarded as ominous. No indemnity has yet been paid to those Europeans whose property was destroyed by the Tchang rioters. Russian intrigues at Peking have to some extent thwarted the policy of Great Britain. There can be no doubt that Li Hung Nhang has been the chief adviser of the Foreign Board at Peking throughout the negotiations, or rather communications, with the foreign Powers since the first anti-missionary outbreak, and that he has been playing the traditional Chinese game of setting one Power against another. His policy for the last few months has been to embroil Russia with England, or, failing that, to detach Russia from the European concert. His admirers claim that he has succeeded in the latter object. He has failed in the former, thanks mainly to his inability to induce Lord Salisbury to make any move which Russia could construe in a hostile sense. The inaction of the British Foreign Office has also had the effect of foiling certain schemes attributed here to Russia, which would have resulted in a Russo-Chinese entente in regard to the regions abutting on the Indian and Russian frontiers. There is no real disposition at Peking to give any satisfaction to Europe for past outrages. The malcontents know this perfectly well, and are greatly encouraged by the knowledge. Further troubles, therefore, appear to be inevitable.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 14 (Daily Chronicle).—Intelligence has just reached here of an alarming outbreak near Foochow on Tuesday last. It was more than a riot—it was a well-organised rising. The rebels had capable leaders, and were well armed with repeating rifles. They captured and sacked the town of Tehwei, which remained in their hands when the last message was despatched. The officials were powerless. The rebels were estimated at 15,000. The outbreak seems mainly to have been directed against the authorities, though cries against the foreigners were raised. The situation is regarded by Europeans with increased apprehension. The British Consul, in an interview with me yesterday, expressed his opinion that the recent period of quietude was only temporary, a view which events at Tehwei speedily confirmed. He further stated that the spring and summer months had always been the favourite time for outrages in China. Gunboats of light draught were absolutely necessary to protect the lives of European settlers away from the seaboard. In places like Shanghai the Europeans to a considerable extent could take care of themselves, and they enjoyed the additional advantage of the almost constant presence of foreign ships of war. But the case was very different in the interior, and at the river treaty ports. In some of those places massacres must inevitably follow further demonstrations unless special measures were forthwith applied.

It is semi-officially announced, adds this correspondent, that two men who were proved on Chinese evidence to have taken part in the anti-foreign riots at Ichang have been beheaded, and it is further stated that a number of other rioters found guilty of less serious offences on the same occasion have been "punished with the stick," that is to say bastinadoed. But assuming that this statement may be relied on, and that somebody has really been punished at Ichang, it does not necessarily follow that the real culprits have been brought to book. In fact, I am assured from an authoritative source that men who notoriously took leading parts in the riots are still at large, and protected against arrest or punishment by exalted officials. It is satisfactory to be able to announce, however, that the agents here of the Peking Treasury Department paid to-day the indemnities agreed upon in connection with the earlier excesses of the mob. Two thousand pounds sterling were paid in compensation to the sufferers at Wuchu, and 4,000*l.* to the widows and families of the Europeans who were killed by the rioters at Wusieh.

Nov. 15.—The Rev. Mr. Cockburn, a minister of the Scotch mission, who was one of the victims of the atrocities at Ichang, is about to return to Britain. In a conversation with me to-day he expressed the opinion that, unless a particularly favourable opportunity should present itself to the rioters, there is likely to be a lull for some little time, during which foreign residents may hope for a measure of peace. That this quietude is likely to last long, however, Mr. Cockburn does not believe, and in the spring, or perhaps earlier, the troubles will almost certainly be renewed. The Rev. Mr. Dart, an American missionary, with whom I have had a chat, expresses exactly the same opinion. The revolt at Foochow was directed against the ruling authorities, whose oppression of the poorest classes has become notorious.

A Reuter telegram from Yokohama (Nov. 15) says:—There is no foundation for the statement contained in a Shanghai telegram to a London morning paper, to the effect that the Japanese fleet would co-operate with that of China in case of need against the European Powers. The Japanese representative at Peking signed the demand which the foreign representatives at Peking addressed to the Tsung-li-Yamen regarding the protection of foreign subjects.

The following is the summary of the situation in the China Mail of Oct. 15:—The position of affairs in China has slightly improved, and there is an easier feeling. The high officials seem alive to the danger of tampering with rebellion and are doing the most they dare to do to repress the agitators. The Viceroy at Nanking has issued a vigorous proclamation full of good words about the missionaries and of denunciations of those who are fomenting trouble by spreading false rumours and by falsely accusing the missionaries of unmentionable atrocities. Chinese official documents, however, are seldom taken au grand sérieux, the people being so accustomed to do evil with high-sounding moral maxims on their lips. The Esé has left in tow of the Leander. She will likely go to Ichang. There have been rumours of trouble at Chungking, but by latest advices peace prevailed both there and at Ichang, and mission work is going quietly on as if riots had never been heard of. Mr. Mason, a customs official who made an attempt to smuggle arms into China and put himself forward as a possible leader of rebellion, has been brought before the British Police Court at Shanghai. The evidence shows that the whole affair was a Quixotic attempt on the part of a crazy man to obtain notoriety, and that it is devoid of all political significance.

THE Shanghai Mercury (second week in October) says:—"A gentleman, just arrived from Peking, says that a revolutionary movement has reached that place. The Legation people are arming. The German Legation was expecting rifles from Tientsin, and the English Legation served out ball cartridges the morning he left. The opinion in Peking is that there will be a rebellion, and that the present dynasty will be overthrown." As there is an attempt being made to create a scare, too much importance need not be attached to the above rumours.

The Hankow correspondent of the N. C. Herald wrote on Oct. 3:—The arrival of the native newspapers with the information that the Powers intended taking possession of Shanghai, in the event of satisfaction being unobtainable from the Central Government, caused a good deal of excitement among the natives. They are not at all scared at the menace, but show a would-like-to-see-them-try-it-on kind of spirit. Those who calculate that China is going to back down before a mere display of force are likely to find themselves considerably mistaken. No outbreak has taken place as yet, but it is now quite clear our neighbours in Wuchang were on the very verge of one that day our Consul went over and laid down the law to the Viceroy. It was not exactly international law which he expounded, but some that suited the occasion better, and the result was that His Excellency was moved to bestir himself to such purpose that, although the fat was almost in the fire, he was able, in the nick of time, to put the damper on. We have an uneasy suspicion that the hand which put it on is the hand which takes it off again, and which keeps these central provinces seething. Wuchang residents do not feel at all secure yet. It is not considered safe for ladies to return to the city, and the gentlemen have still to keep their arms handy.

Referring to a defence in the Japan Mail of Sir John Walsham, the N. C. Daily News says:—The Japan Mail allows that if the statements we made were trustworthy, Sir John Walsham would stand convicted of perfectoriness, &c. We assert without fear of contradiction that they were not only perfectly trustworthy as far as they went, but that we have never told all we knew, or all that is perfectly well known to the Foreign Office in London, whose difficulty is in finding a man to take the Legation at Peking, and which sent out Mr. Beauclerk to act as Chargé d'affaires in the hope that Sir John would go home this last spring. We approve Sir John Walsham's spasmodic energy now as much as we disapproved his years of neglect; and indeed he is to some extent responsible for the present situation. If he had remained in touch with what was going on in China; if he had come occasionally to Shanghai himself, or had encouraged the Consuls to write to him what was going on, he could have given the Tsungli Yamén warning in time of what was preparing. But the Minister who for years neglects to write any despatches to his Consuls, or to take any notice of their letters, is gradually left entirely in the dark. We know of Consuls who have not written a despatch to Peking for two years; they found it perfectly useless to ask for instructions or even to report what they were doing; they simply got through the work of their posts as well as they could, knowing that Sir John Walsham would probably not even open any despatches and reports they did send.

"CHEAP PASSAGES."

(To the Editor of THE HOMEWARD MAIL.)

SIR,—Your leading article in the HOMEWARD MAIL of Sept. 28 will be read with interest by that large class of Indian officials who secure their passages through Indian Agencies. Whether "Truth" has stated his case clearly or not does not affect the main question, which is, that the P. and O. Company's rates are unduly high. The analogy between the Covent Garden Market prices and the rates of this Company cannot really be considered applicable by agency firms who cater for both Australian and Indian passengers. In the case of the fruit prices a very healthy competition reduces them to a reasonable limit without undue profit to the market man from any particular class of purchaser; the absence of similar competition in steamers to Bombay, and the high subsidy paid to the P. and O. Company for mail service, enable it to keep up its rates for Indian passengers to a limit out of all proportion to those charged to Australian passengers, who often utilise the same vessels as far as Aden. 2. It cannot be supposed that the P. and O. and Orient lines are systematically losing on their Australian passengers, and it therefore follows that the former company must be reaping a very considerable harvest from the Indian passengers. Your analogy would imply that the profit is only a fair market one; we say in reply, "Let the Government introduce a bi-weekly mail service to Bombay with some other company, as now obtains on the Australian line, and then the competition may effect the change we desire. 3. For an average twenty-eight days' passage from Liverpool to Bombay, certain lines which are running find that they can convey passengers without loss for 25 $\frac{1}{2}$ per head and make them fairly comfortable. It is inconceivable that the P. and O. should require for their extra comfort more than double that sum for a single voyage, often occupying little more than half that period. Anglo-Indians are not an unusually grasping class, nor do they want either the Government or the Company to pay their passages; but Government are now practically confining them to one line by the mail contract and leave rules in force, and they only ask for a berth in mail steamers at rates corresponding to those obtaining on the Australian lines.

The present return ticket between Bombay and Brindisi is 900 rs., say 66 $\frac{1}{2}$ (if taken in London considerably more), and the passengers are on board seldom more than thirty-three days, generally less. Comparing this daily rate of 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ with that charged on the Australian service it is unduly high, while the rates on a single journey from London to Bombay average the exorbitantly high figure of nearly 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ a day. It is quite certain that if an Orient Line could be attracted to Bombay these rates could not be maintained, and it is in the power of Government to effect this reduction with increased speed and without the vexatious fortnightly change of steamers at Aden now enforced by the P. and O.

A reduction in rates would undoubtedly be met by a corresponding increase in passengers during those months when splendid mail steamers are now running empty. There is an increasing need for short leave home in these days of high pressure, and the Government will do well to effect through its mail contract a service of steamers by which its servants can better avail themselves of the much-needed change out of India. Moreover, it is probable that Indian agencies will better secure their own interests in furthering those of their clients, a yearly-increasing body, than in supporting the claims of steamer companies.—Yours faithfully, OWL.

[Our correspondent has quite mistaken the drift of our illustration from Covent Garden Market, as any one can see by glancing back to our leader, and his remarks upon it are therefore beside the question. If our correspondent were managing a railway or a steamship company he would soon find out that a good many other considerations than that of mere mileage go to settle the question of what freight or passage money should be charged to any particular destination. For instance, the fare to Brighton is cheaper than that to some intermediate stations much nearer London. It would certainly be absurd for the Government to subsidise a second mail service to Bombay for the purpose of lowering the passenger rates. We are not aware of any line that carries passengers to Bombay for 25 $\frac{1}{2}$, but if there are any that is a complete answer to "Owl." He has only to patronise those lines if they exist, and leave the high-charging lines to wealthy travellers. The second saloon fare by the P. and O. is 35 $\frac{1}{2}$, with good accommodation and the certainty of all needful personal and medical attendance. Our correspondent has entirely shifted the ground of the small controversy we had with Truth. Truth suggested in effect that the Government might make it a condition of granting the mail contract, that the P. and O. Company should carry Government servants more cheaply. We simply argued that if the Government obtained a reduction of fares for its servants it would have to pay for it in one way or the other. "Owl" now says that all the P. and O. rates are unduly high, thus raising a totally different issue. That is a question to be settled by a number of considerations such as the cost, efficiency, comfort, speed, regularity and safety of the service. The agencies really have nothing to do with the matter, except perhaps that the cheaper the passage-money the more berths they would book. They have no interest whatever, so far as we can see, in the maintenance of high rates.—ED. H. M.]

The Chloroform Commission.—In concluding an article on the Chloroform Commission, the Civil and Military Gazette says:—We would commend to our own Government the part which his Highness the Nizam has taken in making the work of the Commission not only possible, but available to all concerned, for we feel convinced that in a country like India, affording, as it does, large and unequal opportunities for the elucidation of problems which affect the well-being of humanity at large, and where private enterprise individually or collectively in matters of this kind is entirely absent, State initiation and State encouragement are more urgently needed than elsewhere. The example of the Nizam is worthy of imitation.

The Rupee.—No more potent immediate influence on the sterling value of the rupee exists, remarks the Daily News, than the amount of Council drafts on India. According to Messrs. Sage and Gwyther's circular, issued on Nov. 12, "the Indian Budget for 1890 91 provided for Indian Council Drafts to yield (at 1s. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.) 14,989,000 $\frac{1}{2}$. The total amount realised was 15,969,034 $\frac{1}{2}$, and the exchange 1s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. The Indian Budget for 1891 92 provides for India Council Drafts to yield (at 1s. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.) 16,000,000 $\frac{1}{2}$. The average amount to be drawn per week upon this basis is about 43 lacs at 1s. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. On Nov. 4 an advertisement was issued announcing that tenders will be received on Nov. 11 for 30 lacs of rupees." These bald facts tend to strengthen the value of the rupee; for it is ascertained: firstly, that the sales of drafts already exceed by 860,000 $\frac{1}{2}$ those sold in the corresponding thirty-two weeks of the financial year 1890; and secondly, the immediate offers are so small as to allow silver a chance of coming into demand as an alternative form of remittance to the East. Apart from facts of this kind, it appears that Russia is about to prohibit exports of wheat from that country—action which would raise the price of the Indian article and, in other ways, augment the demand for rupees. The value of this coin has been lately depressed by a fall in silver, which has proceeded from two causes: first, the cessation of Spanish demand, the Madrid exchange being so low as to increase the cost of the metal to the Government of Spain; secondly, the development of an anti-silver sentiment in America, as testified by the recent elections. Mr. McKinley owed his success to his antagonism to the agitation for Free Coinage of silver and his advocacy of an honest dollar; but it is not generally known that the Protectionist tariff which bears his name is in favour of the value of the metal. Authorities on the silver-mining industry in America maintain that the McKinley tariff has done more than anything this year to check the production of silver in the United States. That tariff, it seems, almost prohibits the import from Mexico of soft "fluxing" ores, without which the harder material in the mines of North America cannot be conveniently worked. Supposing the coinage demand from Spain to revive, there will remain little beyond the "sentiment" displayed in the American elections to repress the price of silver and of the rupee. There is hardly any immediate question of the repeal of the Silver Act, which compels the United States to convert 4,500,000 ounces of silver into legal tender currency every month. It is a foolish law enough, and one which would ultimately lead to great mischief, if the United States were not so rich and so ready to pay for vast and expensive experiments in economics.

EXAMINATION OF OFFICERS IN FOREIGN LANGUAGES.

THE following is a list of successful candidates at the recent examination of officers in foreign languages :—

French.—Second Lieutenant E. A. F. Redl, Royal Lancaster Regiment, qualified to be interpreter; Lieutenant-Colonel C. M. Smith, half-pay, Royal Artillery, Lieutenant A. H. Russell, Border Regiment, Second Lieutenant P. A. Charrier, Royal Munster Fusiliers, and Second Lieutenant P. C. J. Scott, Leicestershire Regiment, passed.

German.—Second Lieutenant A. S. Crum, Oxfordshire Light Infantry, and Second Lieutenant P. C. J. Scott, Leicestershire Regiment, passed.

Italian.—Captain V. Semini, Leicestershire Regiment, qualified to be interpreter; Captain W. A. A. Macbean, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, passed.

Russian.—Captain H. C. Filmore, Royal Highlanders, and Captain E. St. C. Pemberton, R.E., qualified to be interpreters; Captain H. J. Evans, Liverpool Regiment, Lieutenant C. P. L. Lynden-Bell, East Surrey Regiment, and Lieutenant J. E. Crowther, Royal Marine Light Infantry, passed.

Spanish.—Captain V. Semini, Leicestershire Regiment, qualified to be interpreter.

Turkish.—Brevet-Major F. R. Wingate, D.S.O., R.A., Captain S. Bird, Royal Fusiliers, and Captain P. Bulman, Shropshire Light Infantry, qualified to be interpreters.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS AND TROOPSHIPS.

THE Indian troopship Malabar arrived at Spithead on Nov. 14 from Bombay, and afterwards entered the harbour. She had on board 1,175 men, eighty-four women, and sixty-five children, including the P. batty., Royal Horse Artillery, for Dorchester, and the 79th batty., Field Artillery, for Colchester. One death occurred on the voyage, that of Private J. Meeley, Lincolnshire Regiment, from heart disease. The vessel was in the storm of Nov. 11, which, however, only helped her on her way, and she arrived at the home port thirty-six hours before she was expected.

Examination for Clerkships in the Government Secretariats.—It is notified that an examination for clerkships in the Secretariats of the Government of India and of the Bengal Government will be held at Calcutta, Allahabad, and Lahore in January next, the exact dates of which will be notified later. There are thirty-three vacancies in the Lower Division of the Government of India, seventeen of which will be given to Calcutta and sixteen to those who pass at Lahore and Allahabad. There will be no examination for the Upper Division. It is probable the number of vacancies in the Bengal Government will be three in the Upper and twenty-five in the Lower Division, which will be reserved for Calcutta candidates.

AGENCY AT PORT SAID.

Messrs. HENRY S. KING & CO. have opened an Office at PORT SAID, and their Representative will go on board all Steamers when they arrive, to furnish Passengers with any Information or Assistance they may require, and to receive their Instructions for transmission to the London Firm or Branches.

THE NEXT INDIAN COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

THE selection of a successor to SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS in the Chief Command of the Indian Forces is still in abeyance and it is plain that between the Home and Indian authorities there is a difference of opinion. From Simla it has been urged that it is now by usage the turn of the Viceregal Government to nominate to the post, and, moreover, that the military as well as the political situation of affairs in and around our great Asiatic empire demand the supervision of an officer thoroughly well versed in Indian military service and policy. The name of a distinguished general is mentioned as having the approval of the Viceregal authorities, on the ground of his recognised abilities and large experience. That the appointment of this officer would give rise to many heartburnings there is no doubt. He would supplant several men who, with more or less substantial reasons, consider that they have a prior right to the promotion. In view, however, of the outlook beyond the frontiers and the general condition of the Indian Army, the Government would be justified in passing over the ordinary claims that might be advanced in virtue of length of service and other considerations, if it could pitch upon a nominee of such supereminent military and administrative qualifications as marked him out to be the one man for the post. Moreover he should be a man who by force of character or by reason of his repute, should, like the present Commander-in-Chief, be able to impress his will on military policy and administration, and be free from the intriguing of the cliques which in India always establish themselves around the Viceregal Government and pull the strings of family or personal influence. To resist that a man must have an achieved reputation and a great prestige.

We confess that the Indian Army List, if it contains the names of several officers who would fill the post with distinction, does not appear to us to furnish one that would quite fulfil the conditions we have rather hinted at than distinctly formulated. We are not sure that we may not go farther and say that we are inclined to doubt the advisability of permitting the heads of the Indian bureaucracy to choose the Commander-in-Chief at all. The tenant of that post occupies a position second only to that of the VICEROY. He ought to be not only a man of adequate military capacity but of great political and social weight; and it would be no disadvantage if he were independent to a large extent of the relations that must always establish themselves between the certain and inevitable cliques which group themselves within the narrow circle of a bureaucratic organisation. More than that he ought to be, vis-à-vis the Home military authorities, a man of sufficient resolution and distinction to hold his own, on behalf of the Indian army, and the military policy of the Government, against the constant tendency from this side to restrict the legitimate rights of the one and the legitimate action of the other. Who is there in India at this moment who could affect to satisfy these requirements as SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS has done? The question answers itself, and the most eminent of Indian generals can feel no just resentment at being reminded that he must at the best be content to rank second to so distinguished a chief. There may be more than one among the brilliant staff of officers in India who might without overweening vanity lay claim to something like equal qualifications for the chief command to those of SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, but they have not his prestige. We therefore think that the solution of what is undoubtedly a problem of extreme gravity lies in the choice of a Home candidate, and there is one, who, as is well known, would prefer the Indian command to any position however brilliant that could be offered him in England. The DUKE OF CONNAUGHT has yet to acquire reputation as a commander in the field, but he is an able and industrious military officer; he has mastered thoroughly the details of military organisation; he has had Indian experience and proved his capacity to grasp the problems of Indian administration civil as well as military; he has great social tact and many popular qualities: his illustrious position assures the independence of his judgment, and would add weight to the influence of the Viceregal Government in dealing with the authorities in London. His social influence, due no less to his high character than his royal birth, would be of inestimable value in Anglo-Indian society. His appointment would have a useful political significance abroad and in India. In other words we venture to say that he is the man designated for the post as well by circumstances as by his inherent qualities.

SIR JOHN GORST's address to the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, is his last public official act in connection with India, unless at some future time he should rise to occupy the seat now filled by LORD CROSS. He made a sufficiently careful review of such Indian matters as were likely to interest a body of British merchants, and, had he been remaining at the India Office, some of his remarks might perhaps have been regarded as indications of policy. Such, for instance, was his declaration that "the policy of the Government of India had been and would continue to be to spend as much money as financial prudence would allow on the construction of railways for the State." It was perhaps an oversight of the speaker that he did not discriminate for the benefit of the Liverpool merchants between strategic and industrial or traffic railways, and candidly tell them that it was on the former that the larger part of the Government railway expenditure was incurred. His references to the reduction of the salt duty and, as he expressed it, the "enhancement of the taxable minimum for income tax" would have been felt in India to be not without significance, had the speaker continued to be Under Secretary of State. As it is they must we fear be only accepted as the "pious opinions" of a departing friend. One point is worth noting, namely, that SIR JOHN GORST, while acknowledging the anxiety of the Government to establish railway communication through Burma to Yunnan, admitted that the physical condition of the country presented serious obstacles. This is what MESSRS. COLQUHOUN and HALLETT have urged all along, and it seems a pity that the Government does not take measures to test the question whether the new alignment proposed by MR. HALLETT, as an alternative to the Maulmein-Ssechuen route, or some other alignment, is not feasible. As SIR JOHN GORST has said nothing favourable about the route suggested by some promoters of an undertaking for a Mandalay-Yunnan railway which has been much advertised of late, we may assume that it has not yet received any encouragement from the Secretary of State.

It is satisfactory that LIEUTENANT LOWRY has been acquitted by a Court-Martial at Rangoon of the serious charge of having cheated at cards. Following on another painful incident his conviction might have led hasty people to the conclusion that there was something rotten in the military service generally, since instances had so rapidly followed each other in England and in India. The idea would have been illogical, for the Army contains within its ranks no more, and it may be no less than the average of scamps in society, and one or two black sheep cannot make a flock. If we may judge from the summarised reports in the Times telegrams the evidence against the accused officer was of a formidable nature and he probably owes it to the candid testimony of MAJOR HOBDAV, who has been we should think put to serious inconvenience by being forced to break his furlough for the purpose of giving evidence, that the Court was able to see its way clearly to an acquittal. It was fortunate for LIEUTENANT LOWRY that an officer of character and experience was at his elbow at the time when the alleged irregularities occurred, and was able to absolve his junior by the expression of a definite opinion in his favour. LIEUTENANT LOWRY has had to pay somewhat dearly for the peculiarity of his mode of dealing, and instead of "holding the cards in a fan shape," as MR. CUFFE of the Public Works Department described it, would do well in future to deal in the ordinary manner, or better still to take the advice offered to him by COLONEL CAMPBELL and leave "poker" alone.

MANY Anglo-Indians, wherever they may reside, will learn, with something more than a mere passing regret, of the disappearance from the scene of the familiar figure of COLONEL W. F. B. LAURIE. He died on Nov. 10, after a long illness, following on a painful accident, at Tynwald, Grove Park, Chiswick, at the age of sixty-eight. His record in India extended to thirty years, during which he saw active service in Burma, was present at the taking of Pegu and in other actions. But he will chiefly be remembered as an industrious collector of interesting memoranda concerning Indian events and notabilities. He wrote an account of the "First and Second Burma Wars," and his "Distinguished Anglo-Indians" went through more than one edition. In India some of his old friends will recall his simple, generous and upright disposition, and his readiness always to help in providing instruction and entertainment for the soldiers, for whom he used to organise entertainments in which his fine voice, graphic powers of description, fund of anecdote, and the sketches he had made in his travels proved an unfailing attraction. He often contributed, among other journals, to these columns, and we can only speak of him with esteem.

About a twelvemonth ago we called attention to the remarkable discrepancy between the Indian census figures, as published by the India Office, and those printed by the Government in India. Although we were officially informed at the time that our criticisms were invalid, it was gratifying to note that they have not been without effect. In the "Statistical Abstract relating to British India from 1880 to 1890," lately published, a well-meant endeavour has been made to correct some of the mistakes we pointed out. The population of Madras, for example, according to the census of 1881, is now put at 30,827,218 instead of 30,868,504, as in last year's "Statistical Abstract;" the total population of British territory at 198,749,567, instead of 198,790,853; and the grand total for India, including the native States at 253,941,309. The officials at the India Office may be felicitated on their willingness to profit by public criticism, even when they do not acknowledge its value; but we are sorry to say that there are still some slight mistakes in the figures. The India Office totals for British territory, Native States, and India, are placed alongside the totals for the Census of 1891; but in no single case does the comparison hold good. We give below, in tabular form, the necessary corrections, together with the totals of the Census of February last:—

	1891	1881 According to India Office	1881 Correct
British territory.....	220,529,100	198,749,567	198,655,198
Fedatary territory ...	66,167,860	55,191,742	55,499,008
Grand total India...	286,696,960	253,941,309	254,154,206

It should be noted that in the above table the figures for 1891 are based on a later statement than that used for the "Statistical Abstract." In regard to the discrepancies in the figures for the previous census, the following corrigenda may be suggested. From the first total in the middle column subtract 7,251, troops and followers in the Khyber Pass, and 101,903, the population of Angul, a tributary State in Orissa; and add 14,785, wrongly included in the Dáng States of Bombay. To the second row of figures in the middle column add the population of Angul and the population of Manipore (221,070), and subtract from the result 922 persons in the Khyber, and the 14,785 persons included in the Dáng States but really belonging to the British district of Kandeish. These simple operations will yield the totals in the third column. The above explanation may be useful to the compilers of "Whitaker's Almanack," and other publications of the same kind.

The Record announces that Mr. James Monro, C.B., Sir Charles Warren's successor as Chief Commissioner of Police, left England on Nov. 12 in the Chusan for Calcutta. Mr. Monro, who is accompanied by his daughter, goes out to inaugurate independently, and at his own charges, a Mission in Bengal. He proposes to work as a simple Evangelist in the same part of India as that in which he formerly held high office. He has for some years been much interested in missionary work, and was, when in India, a member of the Church Missionary Society's Corresponding Committee at Calcutta. At a farewell meeting some of Mr. Monro's old colleagues in the police force presented the ex-Chief Commissioner and Miss Monro with Bibles.

Prince Damrong of Siam on Nov. 7 at Berlin paid a visit to the Chancellor, General von Caprivi, and Baron Marschall von Bieberstein, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and presented them with the Grand Cross of the White Elephant. The German Emperor received Prince Damrong on Nov. 9 in the presence of the Foreign Secretary, Baron Marschall. The audience was followed by a gala dinner of about sixty covers. Prince Damrong was unable to be present at the gala dinner given by the Siamese Envoy on Nov. 10 owing to indisposition, caused by cold and overfatigue, and has had to postpone his departure. The Prince has sent to the Children's Ward of St. Thomas's Hospital a large doll's house, very prettily furnished, in remembrance of a visit he paid to the hospital. We understand that it is the Prince's intention to travel through India on his return to Siam, and that he will be accompanied by Mr. Frederick W. Verney, of the Siamese Legation.

The Position of Civil Surgeons.—The following rules have been laid down by Government for defining the position of Civil Surgeons in relation to Municipal Hospitals and Dispensaries:—(1.) Civil Surgeons will supervise and control all establishments attached to Municipal Hospitals and Dispensaries. In all professional matters these establishments will be immediately subordinate to Civil Surgeons and receive orders direct from them. (2.) All orders from Chairmen of Municipal Councils to medical subordinates attached to their hospitals will be sent through, and in consultation with, Civil Surgeons, except in cases of unusual emergency. In such cases copies of the orders issued will at once be communicated for the information of Civil Surgeons. (3.) Medical subordinates attached to Municipal Hospitals and Dispensaries will not be allowed to correspond with Municipal authorities on official matters, except through, and with the consent of, Civil Surgeons. (4.) Civil Surgeons will advise Municipal Councils with respect to the appointment of all medical subordinates, compounders and trained nurses. (5.) Before passing any orders regarding the punishment of medical subordinates attached to Municipal Hospitals and Dispensaries, the Chairman shall consult the Civil Surgeon, and shall ordinarily comply with his recommendations. In case of disagreement, the matter will be immediately reported, through the Surgeon-General, for the orders of Government. (6.) Civil Surgeons will control all medical expenditure at hospitals, and also check and control indents for medical stores and instruments, with a view to restrain all tendency to wasteful and extravagant demands on the part of medical subordinates. (7.) Medical subordinates attached to Municipal Hospitals will have charge of the hospital books, stores, furniture, and other property, subject to the direct control and supervision of Civil Surgeons. (8.) The subject of dieting the sick will be considered a purely professional duty, subject to the full control of Civil Surgeons, and they will be responsible that the allotted expenditure under this head is not expended without a timely reference to Municipal Councils. (9.) Municipal Councillors will be entitled to visit their hospitals at all times, and to refer to the books and accounts relating to these institutions, with the exception of all records relating to professional matters, such as certificates, histories of cases, prescription books, post-mortem registers, &c.

The Malay Peninsula.—At the first meeting of the new session of the Royal Colonial Institute, on Nov. 10, Mr. W. E. Maxwell, a resident of Selangor, read a paper on "The Malay Peninsula, its Resources and Prospects," in the course of which he gave an interesting account of the efforts that are being made to open up the country. From time to time, the lecturer remarked, a good deal had been said in the colony about the annexation to the British Empire of these native States, but in his (the lecturer's) opinion, mischief might be done were the notion to gain ground that any political change of the kind was contemplated or desired by those who know much of the peninsula and of our position there. The interference of England in the government of these States was the result of the request of the Malays themselves, and it would be time to discuss the administration of the peninsula as part of the British Empire when the natives had themselves demanded the position and rights of British subjects. Any unsolicited action taken in the direction which a small section of the small British community in the Straits Settlements desired might, as Sir Frederick Weld said some years ago, lay us open to the charge of "a breach of faith."

COMMERCIAL.

WE (Times of India) regret to hear of the failure of Messrs. J. C. Bushby and Co., of Bombay, a firm much respected locally.

CALCUTTA, October 27.

The market generally continues very quiet, and the amount of business passing is small. Money remains in very full supply, and rates of discount are easier both in native and in European financial circles. In the bazaar good hundies up to sixty days' sight can be discounted at 2½ per cent., and at their usual weekly meeting the directors of the Bank of Bengal reduced the bank's official minimum rate of interest and discount to 3 per cent., which is, however, still too high when the position of the money market is considered. The statement of the affairs of the Bank of Bengal for the week ended Oct. 20 shows a further decrease of over ten lacs in the public demand for money. The treasury balance at the head office is increased by 22 lacs and decreased at the branches by nearly 2½ lacs, while the bank's investments were realised to the extent of over 8 lacs of rupees. The actual result of the various changes is an increase of nearly 39 lacs in the cash at the head office, the exact total being 5,08,86,758 rs., equal to the large proportion of 59.3 per cent. of the liabilities of the bank as compared with the proportion of 58.1 per cent. shown in the previous week's statement.

The exchange market has been steady throughout the week.

The share market remains in the same dull and lifeless position. For no description of stock or share is there any active demand, and the total amount of the daily recorded transactions is very small. Although the Durga Pujas are over, two more important native holidays are at hand, which tend to reduce business in native circles, and as a good many Europeans have not yet returned to Calcutta, the number of operators in the share market is consequently small.

In Miscellaneous Scrip there has not been much doing. The preference shares of the Indian General Steam Navigation Company have sold at 93, and the ordinary shares at 69; Bengal Telephone, 50; Titaghur Paper Mill, 155; Equitable Coal, 65; Naini Tal Brewery, 136; and the Great Eastern Hotel Co.'s shares at 87. The shares of the Tarkessur Railway Company are very firm, and transactions have taken place at 135.

A very large sale of tea was held during the week, as many as 22,400 packages being put up to auction, out of which only 660 were withdrawn, 21,114 packages being sold. Fine teas and all teas with quality sold well at occasionally higher rates, but thin and common kinds did not bring as good prices as at the previous sale.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 3 per cent.

BOMBAY, October 30.

On the eve of the Hindoo new year holidays business in all directions has been even quieter than before, with the exception of an active demand for wheat, which was felt on the earlier part of the week, but which only lasted one day, leading to no movement in prices. Cotton has hardly been wanted either by exporters or the local mills, and the market has latterly become dull, though without any change in prices. The new crop is now maturing under favourable climatic influences in most of the districts. Seeds have been taken to a moderate extent by shippers, and linseed has advanced in value. Exchange has again fluctuated slightly under the influence of silver, rates closing 1-32d. below last quotations. Government Paper has advanced ½ per cent. in Fours. Freight rates are firm for shipment to the end of the year at enhanced rates; and a good demand exists for April-June loading, but business is slow, owing to the firm attitude of holders of tonnage. The approaching Dewali has much interfered with business in imports; but prices of staple goods are generally unchanged.

MONEY.—The falling off in the Presidency Bank's cash balance of 5½ lacs disclosed by the statement of affairs issued on Oct. 26, bringing down the balance to 38½ acs, was 3½ lacs less than was shown by the previous return; but the figures for the week showed that, unlike the position in the two previous weeks, no important movement in the items which go to indicate the condition of the trade demand for money had taken place. Instead of the large diminution in private deposits which took place in the second and third weeks of October, there had been a decrease of under 2 lacs; and though bills discounted had increased to about the same extent as in the previous week, loans had diminished sensibly, the net increase in trade requirements being only a lac and a quarter, against 3½ lacs disclosed by the last return.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—The advent of the Dewali holidays has caused a considerable falling off in the demand for staple grey goods. Rates are well supported by holders; stocks are much as they were; and prices generally are steady at former level. The Dewali holidays have put a staple business in bleached, dyed, turkey-red, and printed goods as well as in local, which are dull. The total clearances of imported goods for the week sum up only some 1,200 bales; those of local goods about 700 bales.

YARNS.—A small business has been done in imported twist on the basis of previous rates, in a quiet market. Sales of local spinnings at Hong Kong for the fortnight were 6,200 bales and at Shanghai 2,000 bales. In all 8,200 bales, sales for the fortnight, Exchange at Hong Kong having ruled ½ lower. This unsatisfactory summary of the fortnight's business in China has put a stop to all transactions worth mentioning in Bombay, and has caused additional weakness in the market. Rates, in the absence of business, are nominal, and a drop of 1-16 a. per lb. is looked for shortly. There is considerable chance of a new year's business taking place at lower rates. The sales for the week are put down at 300 bales, and the market closes quiet.

METALS.—Following the London market, copper has been quiet at a decline of 4 annas per cwt., at which only a small business has transpired. Yellow metal is also 4 annas per cwt. lower, and has been taken to a moderate extent, the feeling in this market also being quiet. A moderate business has been passing in iron, and British bars are 8 annas dearer, the tone of the market being steady.

COAL is steady. Sales have been reported of Davison's West Hartley, for September-October and October-November shipment, at 14½ rs.; and for November-December shipment, from 14½ rs. to 14½ rs. per ton; and about 3,000 tons of Powell's Duffryn, on the Bunder, has been placed at 15 rs. per ton. There is a scarcity of Powell's for October-November and November-December shipment.

Exports.—Cotton has been neglected both by exporters and local spinners, the business in both directions having latterly aggregated only a few hundred bales per diem. The tone of the market, which was quiet, has latterly become dull, but prices generally are quoted as before. The purchases for export sum up under 2,000 bales, consisting chiefly of Oomra and Dholera descriptions; and exporters have made some contracts for Bengals of the new crop for November to January delivery. The mills have taken about 2,500 bales, mainly of Dholera and Oomra kinds. The market closes quiet with old stuff quoted the same as a week ago; but with contracts for the new crop 1 r. to 2 rs. per candy lower.

Wheat remained steady in tone with only a moderate business passing to the end of last, and at the beginning of the present week; but on Oct. 27 an active demand for export sprang up, and a large business was done on the basis of previous rates. Thereafter the market became firm and subsequently steady, but transactions were only upon a moderate scale, prices remaining unaltered for all descriptions.

Seeds also have been taken to only a moderate extent in a steady market at generally firmer prices; but Linseed was firm in the earlier part of the week with rates advancing daily.

PUBLICATIONS.

A. A. ANDERSON and A. WALL.

A ROMANCE OF N'SHABÉ. Being a Record of Startling Adventures in South Central Africa. By ANDREW A. ANDERSON and A. WALL. With Illustrations by IRVING MONTAGUE. Crown 8vo., 5s.

The Scotsman says:—"The story has a value far above the ordinary standard of such books. Mr. Anderson explored the interior of Africa for more than thirty years, and thus writes from a full and particular knowledge. His authority gives the work some attraction for readers older than those for whom it is specially designed."

A STORY OF SOUTH AFRICAN LIFE.

THE MILNERS; Or, The River Diggings. Cr. 8vo.

The Athenaeum says:—"It is difficult to speak too highly of 'The Milners.' It bears the impress of truth, and the numerous characters are evidently drawn from life. . . . An unvarnished and untempering picture of the land of dust and diamonds; of the grinding poverty which, there as here, exists side by side with luxury. . . . A most wholesome spirit pervades the book, which may be recommended as a story of adventure."

A New and Cheaper Edition in One Volume.

KARMA. By A. P. SINNETT, Author of "The Occult World," "Esoteric Buddhism," &c. Crown 8vo.

The Times says:—"As might be expected, Mr. Sinnett in these pages clothes his revelation in the guise of a very readable story. He writes lucidly; the dialogue sparkles, and he continually suggests interesting problems to which the theory of re-incarnation supplies a half answer."

Third Edition.

HILDA'S "WHERE IS IT?" OF RECIPES.

Containing many old Cape, Indian, and Malay Dishes and Preserves; also Directions for Polishing Furniture, Cleaning Silk, &c.; and a Collection of Home Remedies in Case of Sickness. By HILDA-GONDA J. DUCKITT. Interleaved with White Paper for adding Recipes, with Pencil attached. Crown 8vo., 4s. 6d.

The Sunday Times says:—"One of the most delightful volumes of recipes ever printed."

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.
 The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL" on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.
 The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.
 The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Nov. 4; Madras, Nov. 5; Bombay, Nov. 7.

At a State Banquet given at Gwalior on Nov. 18 the Maharaja, who is only sixteen years of age, proposed the toast of "The Queen," and, says a Reuter telegram, drank to the health of the Viceroy. Lord Lansdowne, in reply, delivered an important speech on the position of the State and the many reforms effected under the Council of the Regency. His Excellency said that two lines of railway—one from Goona to Bilah, and another from Ujjaini to Bhopal—were now under survey. Dacoity was being suppressed, and the finances showed a cash balance of 4,500,000 rs. The State of Gwalior had invested 5,500,000 rs. in railways and Government securities. In conclusion, Lord Lansdowne expressed the hope that the system of hoarding funds by the Native States had been abandoned in favour of investment in sound securities yielding a reasonable rate of interest.

The Pioneer says:—There appeared in the Times of Oct. 8 a telegram from India stating that "the Viceroy, Sir F. Roberts and General Brackenbury have all recommended Sir George White as the next Commander-in-Chief." We are in a position to state that no recommendation of this kind has been made, nor, with the etiquette which rules in such matters, is it likely that such a step would be taken a year before the vacancy will occur. Major-General White as a field officer won distinction with the 92nd Highlanders in Afghanistan, and his work in Upper Burma showed that he has great capacity for command. At present, however, he stands low down on the list of major-generals, and it must be remembered that the post of Commander-in-Chief in India carries with it the rank of full general. Sir George White is certain to be selected eventually for promotion to Lieutenant-general, but as he was specially promoted in 1887 it would be action very unusual on the part of the home authorities if they were to give him another step for some time to come. He has now thirty-eight years' service and, we need not say, is fully qualified as regards ability for a high command, but he is blocked in his career by the number of general officers senior to him on the list.

Sir Auckland Colvin, the same paper says, will probably pay a short visit to Calcutta early in December, there to see the Viceroy on various matters connected with the administration of these provinces. The Lieutenant-Governor will then return to Allahabad, where he will remain until about Christmas, proceeding to Lucknow after a shooting trip in the neighbourhood of Moradabad.

Major-General Sir John Hudson has been suffering from an attack of fever which has incapacitated him from duty. Colonel A. G. Handcock has assumed command of the Meerut District for the time being. Sir John was progressing favourably when the mail left, and there was no apprehension of danger.

The friends and admirers of Mrs. Cawley, who acted such an heroic part in the siege of Kohima in the Naga Hills in 1879, having resolved to do honour to her on the eve of her final departure from India, are about to present her with a testimonial in the form of a handsome piece of plate of Indian workmanship, together with a substantial purse of sovereigns. The piece of plate will bear the following inscription:—"Presented by Lady Elliott on behalf of the friends and admirers of Mrs. M. E. Cawley, in remembrance of the courage and devotion shown by her at Kohima in 1879."

It is stated that Sir Charles Elliott has drawn up an elaborate scheme for the reorganisation of the Bengal Government Secretariats. The chief points in it are a more equitable division of routine work among clerks, and a suggestion to abolish the graded system of promotion, and the substitution for it of one which will enable a consolidated salary to be drawn instead of annual increments.

The Land Indebtedness Commission will conclude its labours as a collective body by April, when the various provincial members and the secretary will return to their ordinary duties.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes on Nov. 18:—To-day's Government Gazette contains the resolution on the proposed cadastral survey of Behar. The Lieutenant-Governor expresses his opinion that the measure will be beneficial both to the zemindars and to the ryots. He considers it to be a necessary corollary of the permanent settlement, and to be the only way in which the Government can give full effect to the principles of the Bengal Tenancy Act regarding the rights of the different classes of ryots. Local feeling, however, is strongly opposed to the measure, and there is likely to be much discussion before it can be carried out.

Another serious grain riot, the same correspondent says, is reported as having occurred at Kurnool. The town is for the time completely in the hands of the rioters, who are believed to be recruited to some degree from the neighbouring Hyderabad territory. The Government has sent a company of sepoy from Bellary to the town. Rain is urgently wanted to save the standing crops throughout Kurnool.

The Madras Times, commenting on Lord Wenlock's promise at Salem to consider a petition concerning the observance of caste in gaols, says the less caste is observed the better; the punishment in such cases will be more deterrent.

The Secretary of State for India having recently commented on the damage to, and spoliation of, antiquarian remains in India, brought to notice in a report of the Archaeological Survey of Western India, the Government of India have again called the attention of Provincial Governments to the standing orders on the subject of the preservation of ancient monuments, and impressed on them the necessity of seeing that they are strictly carried out.

The Madras Mail characterises the reply of Mr. Caine's correspondent to the Pall Mall Gazette of Oct. 12 as a shuffling effusion, full of sophistry and useless prevarication, devoid of logic and ascertained facts. It observes that the correspondent is anonymous and irresponsible.

The survey of the section of the new line from Bareilly to Rampore has been completed, while that from Moradabad to Rampore will be finished by the end of November. In the meantime plans and estimates are being prepared for the former section, which will include two bridges.

The Nagarwals are reported to have been giving trouble at the Gilgit frontier, and the Governor of Cashmere has been sent to Bandapora to hurry up the transports.

The Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Nov. 18:—A statue of Sir Arthur Phayre, the first Chief Commissioner of Burma, was unveiled here to-day by Sir A. Mackenzie, in presence of a large attendance of all nationalities. An interesting speech was delivered by Mgr. Bigandet, Roman Catholic Bishop of Rangoon, who has served as priest in Burma for fifty-four years, and who was one of Sir Arthur Phayre's intimate friends. The statue is a fine work of art, and it is placed in the Horticultural Gardens, which were established by Sir A. Phayre.

A Reuter despatch from Mandalay, dated Nov. 20, says:—A band of dacoits yesterday attacked and dangerously wounded Mr. Barrie, an engineer on the Mu Valley Railway, close to Wuntho.

We (Rangoon Gazette) believe the Government of India strongly object to the proposed railway line from Myingyan along the river bank to a point opposite Pakokku, as being undue competition with private enterprise. It is pretty certain, then, that this project will be shelved, at least for some time to come. Public opinion will, we fancy, be with the Government of India in this. An excellent service already exists between Myingyan and Pakokku, and the funds this line would absorb can be much better expended in pushing on the construction of railways where they are really needed.

The paper to be read at Monday's meeting of the Royal Geographical Society will be of special interest at the present time. It will describe a journey across the Pamir from north to south by Mr. St. George Littledale, who with his wife spent many months in that region and in Central Asia. Mr. Littledale is a sportsman, but his observations are of much geographical and practical interest. A large collection of photographs taken by him, as well as many curios, will be on view after the meeting.

The Manchester Guardian of Nov. 20 prints the following from a correspondent at Constantinople, writing on Nov. 14:—The discussion which is going on in England with regard to the evacuation of Egypt is being watched with the greatest anxiety by the Christians all over Turkey. Persons in a position to be thoroughly well informed of what is passing in the interior of the Empire have assured me that the departure of the British troops from Egypt would be followed by such an outburst of Islamic fanaticism that the position of the Christian Rayah populations would become intolerable. They regard the British occupation of Egypt as a strong curb on the Mussulman populations and administration in Turkey and Syria.

Phya Non, the Siamese Envoy hitherto accredited to Copenhagen, Stockholm, and Vienna, has now been accredited to Berlin also, where he will reside.

The Peninsular and Oriental Company.—At the fifty-first annual meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, to be held on Dec. 10, the directors, after providing for the usual dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on the preferred stock, will recommend a dividend on the deferred stock of 6½ per cent. for the six months, making, with the interim dividend of 3½ per cent. paid in June, a total distribution on the deferred stock of 10 per cent. for the year.

LATEST "GAZETTE OF INDIA" NOTIFICATIONS.

The following officers have been granted leave for the periods stated:—Major E. Bruce, 19th Bengal Lancers, one year; Capt. Radcliffe, 14th Bengal Inf., six months; Lieut. Smithett, 15th Bengal Lancers, one year; Lieut. Walker, 4th Goorkhas, one year; Capt. Priestley, 44th Bengal Inf., one year.

Col. James Drummond is transferred to the Supernumerary List.

The cavalry of the Madras Army will be reorganised from Jan. 1 in three regiments of four squadrons each. The 4th Madras Light Cav. will be disbanded, and the three remaining regiments will be augmented from three to four squadrons each, with ten British officers.

The following promotions have been made:—Surg.-Majors to be Brigade Surgeons—Denis Keegan, vice Mathew Stephen; Colin Mackenzie, vice Cleghorn; Thomas French Mullen, vice Harvey. Surgeons to be Surgeon-Majors—George Dennys, John Macnamara, Joseph Sykes, and John Tuohy.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—Mr. B. P. Milsom officiates as manager, Eastern Bengal Railway, for Mr. Finney.

Mr. F. Morrison has been appointed Government examiner of accounts, East Indian Railway.

Lieut. Rushton, R.E., joins the Department, and is posted to Assam.

Mr. R. T. Denne, assistant engineer, has been replaced to Madras.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.—Mr. J. Hart, officiating as accountant-general, Bombay, has been granted three months' privilege leave.

LATEST BOMBAY ARMY ORDERS.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE Times of India, POONA, NOV. 6.)

The Commander-in-Chief has been pleased to make the following appointments:—Personal Staff.—Capt. Savile, 2nd Middlesex Regt., to be aide-de-camp provisionally to Major-Gen. H. S. Anderson, C.B., commanding Mhow District, with effect from Oct. 22.

12th Bombay Inf.—Lieut.-Col. W. J. Morse, second in command, 17th Bombay Inf., to be commandant.

Capt. Owen, 5th Bombay Cavalry, Sind Horse, is attached for duty to 3rd Queen's Own Bombay Light Cavalry.

With reference to para. 4 of rules regarding the appointment of acting paymasters under the provisions of clause 124 India Army Circulars, 1890, Lieut. Hicks, 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers, will be attached to the Military Accounts Department, from Nov. 5. Lieut. Hicks should report himself personally to the controller of Military Accounts for orders.

With reference to Army Order 324 of June 19 last, it is notified that the Presidential Assault-at-Arms will be held at Poona on Saturday, Nov. 21, Monday, Nov. 23, and Tuesday, Nov. 24, and not on the dates therein stated.

It is notified for information that the new rifle range at Dhanowrie shall be designated the Sisters Ranges.

The Government of India having sanctioned the attendance of three cavalry officers at the approaching cavalry camp at Aligarh, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has been pleased to select the undermentioned officers for that duty:—Lieut.-Col. J. F. Willoughby, 3rd Bombay Cavalry; Major G. Francis, 5th Bombay Cavalry; and Capt. J. S. Nicholson, 7th Hussars. They will travel at the public expense without chargers and tents, but taking their saddlery, and should arrive at Aligarh on the 5th proximo. On their return from the camp each officer will submit to the Adjutant-General, Poona, through the general officer commanding his district, a careful report on all matters of interest which may come under his notice during the manoeuvres.

Under instructions from Horse Guards, War Office, it is notified that Second Lieut. Young, supernumerary to the establishment, is posted to No. 3 Company, Southern Division, Royal Art.

The undermentioned officers have obtained leave of absence:—B.B. and C.I. Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps, 1st batt.—Capt. Turner, to England, for one year, private affairs. Poona Volunteer Rifle Corps—Lieut. A. Thomson, in and out of India, for one year, private affairs.

Sisal Hemp.—Arrangements have been made by the Government of India to procure a supply of the Sisal Hemp plant for introduction into India. This plant yields the famous Sisal Hemp of commerce, and it is believed that its introduction into India would be of importance. The Kew authorities sent out some plants some twelve months ago, both to Madras and Calcutta, but those intended for the latter place did not survive the voyage. On this occasion an attempt will be made to get this plant direct from its native home, viz., Yucatan, one of the States of the Mexican Republic.

GUP.

THE marriage was solemnised on Monday afternoon, Nov. 2, at All Saints' Church, of the elder daughter of one of the most popular collectors of Allahabad, Miss Porter, with Adjutant Commeline, 2nd Bengal Lancers, both social favourites. The gathering was very large, and quite filled the choir and chancel by the time the bride and her father arrived, the chief among the guests being the Lieutenant-Governor, the Chief Justice, the General Commanding, with all the ladies of their respective households. As the grand organ pealed the last notes of the wedding march the married couple repaired to the church-door, where a coach with three pairs of chestnuts and three officers of Royal Artillery for postillions was waiting to take them to Government House, where the company followed to spend the remainder of the afternoon, and to do the customary honours.

A propos of recent discussion about the Anglo-Indian at home, "PEN" tells the following anecdote in the Times of India:—I always remember the man who had been thirty years in India, and who suddenly determined he would go to England and look up his friends, and see the old place. He put his plans in execution, and, arriving in London, went to see his brother, the only relative he had left alive, after so many years' absence. He found this brother, [an elderly gentleman with a flourishing business in the City, and a bachelor establishment at the West End. He received a sufficiently friendly welcome, and had rooms in his brother's house, and the two lived together amicably enough for a month or six weeks, meeting at breakfast and dinner, and having a little talk at those meals. At the end of the six weeks, however, when the cover was taken off the dish at breakfast and the inevitable chops were discovered, the wanderer looked earnestly at his brother and said, "George, do you always have mutton chops for breakfast?" "Why, yes, I suppose I do," said the other, as if rather wondering at the question; "had 'em for the last thirty years." "Ah, well," said his brother, "then I think I shall go back to India." And accordingly he packed up his traps and returned to the East forthwith, convinced that there was a good deal of sameness in English life. One hesitates to say of any story that it is absolutely true, but this was told me by a man who certainly believed it, and whom I implicitly believed. And the human mind is so various that people really do much queerer things than they are commonly given credit for.

A Bengali writer has been unburthening himself on the subject of literary style, observes a contemporary. He himself furnishes an argument against the inflated periods affected by his countrymen. Taking up the parable that style is synthetic, he assures his readers that "even the derangement of the phrases from their so-called natural order is luminous for the mind, and it is by means of such designed reversal that the elements of a judgment may be most pertinently marshalled, or the stages of a complicated action most perspicuously bound into one." He waxes eloquent, too, on the subject of perfect sentences and passages. In the creation of these, it appears, "from the arrangement of according letters which is altogether arabesque and sensual, up to the architecture of the elegant and pregnant sentence, which is a vigorous act of the mere intellect, there is scarce a faculty in man but has been exercised. It is not then to be wondered at if perfect sentences are rare, or perfect passages rarer." It certainly is not.

An Allahabad telegram of Nov. 6 thus describes some sporting extraordinary at Meerut:—The race for the Meerut Gold Cup, valued at 5,000 rs., brought out five starters on Thursday. The distance was five furlongs, and the waler pony Effie, carrying 9 st. 5 lb., won by five lengths, in 1 min. 5½ sec., Sylvia (9 st. 13 lb.) being second. The All-Horse Steeplechase, at Meerut, was one of the most curious races ever witnessed in India. There were only three starters. Of these, Osprey and Dawson fell and bolted away, thus leaving the race apparently to Cumberland, but that horse refused to face the mud wall, and all the efforts of its owner, the Maharaja of Patiala, and a host of attendants could not make him jump. When this was seen, some long-sighted backer coolly mounted a spare horse belonging to the owner of Osprey and went in pursuit of Mr. Hadden's Dawson. The latter was caught and taken to his jockey, who remounted and managed to finish the race. Meanwhile Major Chisholme had captured Osprey, and was taking her round the course on his own account. Had Dawson again refused, this sporting attempt might have proved successful. Needless to say, there was no time taken in this extraordinary race.

A very interesting collection of Telugu sayings and proverbs bearing on agriculture has been compiled by the Agriculture Department, Madras. In this English dress the proverbs, of which the original text is given, necessarily lose much of their force, but as representing the accumulated wisdom of countless generations they are, even as translated, well worthy of attention. Some are contradictory, while others require annotation, as for instance—"Cultivation with one ox is like a pain in one leg," or "The effect of water in a field or a blow on one's body cannot be overlooked." Economists will cordially endorse the dictum that "a labourer who paid in kind at harvest is never out of debt," and the experience of the West agrees with that of the East that "A willing bullock is hardest worked." The weather wise will welcome a number of infallible signs. "If the fowl spread out his wings it is a sign of heavy rain;" "If a frog croaks in an open place there will be rain in three hours," while the same may be predicated from the sight of a cobweb in a paddy field.

A SENSITIVE PLANT.

(BEING A LEAF OUT OF THE NOTE-BOOK OF LORD CHIEF BARON GURNEY.)

When I was an adolescent of Corpus Christi College
Two chums of mine were Huffey, who was noted for his knowledge,
And Vereker, who wasn't: he was backward in his schooling;
But was famous for his waggishness and admirable fooling.
I wasn't good at books, but I was very fond of cricket,
Which my venerable tutor thought abominably wicked.
And I won the sculling championship—a cup in which I glory,
All of which is purely foreign to the motive of my story.

Young Huffey had a failing upon which this history hinges,
A kind of hyper-sensitiveness, causing moral twinges
When his individuality or dignified position
Were being treated with contempt, or merely scouted in derision.

As a boy, if any other boy, at play when school was ended,
Came and slapped him on the face he was exceedingly offended;
And later on in life, a thousand incidents he twisted
Into causes of offence where really no offence existed.

Now Vereker could draw, and so he joined the clan of mappers,
And enlisted in the Army as a cornet in the Sappers;
And Huffey, whose intelligence to science seemed to urge on,
Accompanied his chum as an Assistant Army Surgeon,
While I, altho' my ignorance of logic was appalling,
Donned wig and gown and made the law my uncongenial calling.

Twenty years we pulled together with no social rubs or breezes,
For Vereker corrected maps and Huffey healed diseases,
And I was always in the Court, exonerating sinners,
Except when singing catches at the jovial circuit dinners.
But at last there rose a cloud upon the doctor's mental vision,
A doubt about the soundness of his relative position.

Said he—"Here's Paddy Vereker, a venerable stager,
Who has struggled up the ladder from a Cornet to a Major,
And at last has reached the level of a Suffragan or Proctor
While I, his social equal, am a despicable doctor.
I certainly won't stand it.—I've a very pretty quarrel."
So he took it to Her M-j-sty at Windsor or Balmoral.

And Her M-j-sty, whose reign has been benignity diurnal,
Said "Certainly," and made him a "Brigade Lieutenant-Colonel."
But was he truly grateful for this bountiful requital?
No! He thought that all the Army now was jeering at his title.
So he bristled like a hedge-hog and grew snappy to his patients,
And very, very nasty to his friends and his relations.

First the curate sent a letter on a small parochial matter
Addressed to "Dr. Huffey," who was mad as any hatter,
And returned a furious answer to the parson at his diggings,
Directed (very rudely) to "The Revd. Brother Stiggins."
Then Vereker addressed him with a line of gratulation,
But, like the wag he was, he couldn't stick to regulation.

So he dubbed him "Surgeon-General," and "V.C." in addition,
Which Huffey thought an insult to a man in his position,
So he couched a short reply to him—a presage of disaster,
And wrote instead of "Major"—"Sub-Assistant Barrack Master."
Then I, who for the moment was a breach of promise wrapt in,
Inadvertently addressed him as "Lieutenant-Surgeon Captain."

Which complicated matters:—I've a democratic bias,
But still I am Chief Baron of the Court of Nisi Prius,
And I was a trifle vexed when he replied to "Mister Gurney,
A pettifogging lawyer, and a rascally Attorney."

Now neither of us meant at all to aggravate or tease him,
So we called and we apologised, and did our best to please him,
But, under the obsession of his lamentable failing,
He received our olive branches with vituperative railing,
And exchanged to the Marines, which we both thought was rather rum of him,
And sailed for Timbuctoo, and since, I don't know what's become of him.

LATAKIA (in the Pioneer).

The two State elephants which have figured in so many processions when Viceroys have had to appear with a certain amount of oriental pomp and circumstance have just died at Meerut from anthrax. Their value was roughly 1,000*l.* each, and some difficulty will probably be experienced in replacing such really fine and intelligent animals.

PERSONAL.

SIR RAYMOND WEST contemplates retirement next March, his place on the Council being taken either by Mr. Justice Birdwood or Mr. Naylor, the present Legal Remembrancer.

Mr. Justice Benton, Judge of the Punjab Chief Court, returned to Lahore from England after the expiry of his leave on Oct. 30, and resumed charge of his duties on the 31st, relieving Mr. Justice Beachcroft, who is permitted to resign the service.

Colonel Kenneth Mackenzie has been appointed to act as Commissioner of the Berars during Mr. Plowden's absence at Hyderabad, Mr. Obbard officiating as Judicial Commissioner.

His Excellency the Governor in Council, Bombay, is pleased to make the following appointment:—Major H. D. Olivier, R.E., on return from furlough, will be Executive Engineer, Ahmedabad.

Mr. W. Doderet, C.S., First Assistant Collector, Sholapore, has been allowed furlough for two years.

Mr. L. P. Walsh, C.I.E., on return to duty, will act as Second Assistant Political Resident, Aden.

Mr. Ogden, of the Public Works Department, has been appointed auditor of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway Company's accounts, vice Mr. Goodfellow on leave.

The services of Mr. W. T. Morison, Indian Civil Service, Bombay Presidency, a Deputy Commissioner in Burma, have been replaced at the disposal of the Government of Bombay, with effect from the date on which he may return from furlough.

Mr. H. Fraser, registrar of the North-West Provinces High Court, who returns from furlough during November, will be placed on special duty at Allahabad under the orders of the Government of India, allowing Mr. Gray, the officiating registrar, to remain undisturbed for the next three or four months.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. M. Hunter, on relief in the Rajasthani Court, Kattywar, will act as Political Agent, Mahi Kantha, while Mr. R. M. Kennedy, C.S., on relief by Lieutenant-Colonel J. M. Hunter, will act as Administrator, Rajpipla. Mr. A. D. Younghusband's services, on relief by Mr. Kennedy, will be replaced at the disposal of the Revenue Department.

Mr. T. Stoker, who will return from leave during November, succeeds to the vacant post of Commissioner of Excise in the North-West Provinces. He was, it is understood, offered the reversion of the Directorship of Public Instruction, on the departure of Mr. White on furlough next March; but he preferred liquor to learning.

The Lieutenant-Governor will probably find a successor to Mr. White in the ranks of the Provincial Educational Service. The selection of Mr. Boutflower, for instance, who on the top of a distinguished University degree has had twenty-one years' experience in the North-West Provinces, the Pioneer thinks, would be a very fitting one, as giving to the Department the one prize that they have to look forward to, and which they have latterly almost despaired of having awarded to them.

We (Indian Engineering) are sorry to hear that there is a likelihood of Mr. Joll not returning to India, but there is some satisfaction in knowing that a man of his ability and experience will have no difficulty in finding employment in England, where his superior talents are more likely to find an outlet and to be more thoroughly appreciated. A successor to Mr. Odling in the Sone Circle will have to be found, but of course Mr. Buckley, who is on furlough, will eventually get that appointment. We should not be surprised to find Mr. Horn selected to fill the appointment on Mr. Odling leaving to join the Secretariat.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Major-General W. E. MacLeod, late Bombay Army, died in London on Oct. 21, in his seventieth year. General MacLeod served with the 20th Bombay N.I. in the Mahee Kantor in 1839-40, with the field force in Sind and Afghanistan from 1840 to 1843, and as adjutant of the Light Battalion in the advance on Candahar in 1842. Served with the Persian Expeditionary Force in 1856-57, and was present at the landing at Hallilah Bay, the storming and capture of Bushire, bringing his regiment out of action; commanded his regiment at the surrender of Bushire, and with its headquarters in the forced march to Borasjoor; at the occupation of the enemy's entrenched camp, and at the night attack and battle of Khooshat (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp). Served as A.A.G. at headquarters, Abyssinian Expeditionary Force, under Lord Napier of Magdala, throughout that campaign; present at the battle of Arojee, and storming and capture of Magdala (mentioned in despatches, received brevet rank of colonel, medal). Retired, 1876.

The death of Lieutenant Alured Fitzwilliam Johnson, of the 13th Madras Infantry, now stationed at Bangalore, is announced. The late Lieutenant Johnson was admitted into St. Martha's Hospital, Bangalore, only a few days ago, says the Madras Times of Nov. 5, suffering from enteric fever, and in spite of the best medical aid and the most careful nursing, he succumbed to the disease on Saturday night. The deceased officer was only in his twenty-sixth year. He joined the army in August 1886, and was posted to the Somersetshire Light Infantry, and having joined the 2nd battalion, now stationed at Bellary and Fort St. George, he passed from it into the Staff Corps, being appointed to the 13th M.I. on May 12, 1890. He was only gazetted to the Staff Corps in January of the present year. He came of a military family, and one well-known in this Presidency. The remains of the deceased officer were interred in the Roman Catholic cemetery with full military honours, almost all the officers of the garrison attending.

Lieutenant B. M. Kempson, 8th Bengal Cavalry, was bitten by a krait, while marching with his regiment from Nowgong for the Aligarh Camp, and he succumbed three days afterwards.

Mr. James Maitland, Assistant, Port Commissioners Dockyard, Calcutta, died rather suddenly on Sunday, Oct. 25, from cholera. The deceased was in perfect health on Saturday and attended office. He fell ill on Sunday morning, and in the afternoon the symptoms assumed an aggravated form, and he died at half-past eleven at night. Mr. Maitland was a Naval Volunteer, and was buried at the Scotch burial ground with Naval honours, a detachment of his comrades furnishing the firing party.

The mail from China brings news of the death, at Hankow, of Bishop Boone, head of the American Protestant Episcopal Church in China, while on his annual visitation to the ports on the Yangtze river. He had been in bad health for some time, and is said to have caught cold while watching a great fire at Hankow on September 26. He was son of Bishop Boone, the first missionary Bishop of the American Church in China, and one of the earliest settlers in Shanghai. He was born in the native city of Shanghai in 1846, and, after being educated at home, he returned as a missionary to China in 1869, his field of labour being mainly Wuchang, opposite Hankow. In 1884 he was appointed Bishop in succession to Dr. Schereschewsky.

H. H. Appa Sahab, the Commander-in-Chief of Scindiah's army, who arrived in Bombay on September 19 last for the benefit of his health, died at his temporary residence at Warden Road, Mahaluxmee, on November 3.

THE NEXT INDIAN COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

THE papers both at home and in this country, says the Times of India, have lately been engaged in discussing the important question as to who shall be the next Commander-in-Chief for India, some bringing forward one name, some another, while the official Gazette informs the public that "no appointment has yet been made"—a fact which it is not difficult to understand, seeing that Sir Frederick Roberts, the present holder of the appointment, has had his tenure extended for two years—a term of office which does not expire until November 27, 1892. Still, that the Gazette should go out of its staid official course to notice such rumours and declare that "no appointment has yet been made" gives the discussion an interest it would not otherwise possess. The rumours are many, and in some instances startling. A military paper, for instance, announces that his Excellency the Viceroy, Sir Frederick Roberts, and General Brackenbury have all given it as their opinion that Major-General Sir George White, at present commanding the Quetta District, would be the best selection for the appointment. Sir George is, however, a young man, only a Major-General of 1887, when he was specially promoted for distinguished service, and is supernumerary to the fixed establishment. Excellent officer and distinguished soldier though he be, that is no reason why he should be specially pushed up over the heads of so many other deserving and distinguished officers, and given not one, but two more steps in rank at once—viz., Lieutenant-General and General. Promotion so extraordinary, and it may perhaps be added so invidious, would be no kindness to Sir George himself, and there should be plenty of time to consider his name in connection with this high post some five or six years hence.

Another name that has been brought into the discussion, and one far more likely to be the right one, is that of Lieutenant-General his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, and a better appointment at this particular juncture it would be difficult to conceive. At a time when efforts are being made to amalgamate the Presidential armies, and when one Staff Corps list contains the name of all officers whose promotion and advancement to the Staff and selection for appointments will more than ever be in the hands of the Commander-in-Chief in India, no one could be better qualified to fulfil this high position of trust than a son of her Imperial Majesty. On the one hand, he is above all party feeling and Presidential cliques; and, on the other, he has strong individual claims in his special training, having commanded a division in Bengal, as well as the Bombay Army. An Indian contemporary seems to doubt the wisdom of such an appointment, from the liability there is that his Royal Highness might have to take command in the field. And why should he not do so? What was there about his Royal Highness's illustrious relatives, who led conquering armies in 1870, which is not to be found in himself? Look at the special training he has undergone in the various branches of his profession, which has rendered him acquainted with the details of artillery, cavalry, and infantry, where other generals have only graduated in one branch. Specialists must naturally have a leaning to their particular arm. Such a glamour is thrown round a successful leader of men that the great elements leading to his successes are forgotten in the hero-worship of the man. But it is in times of peace that the solid foundations of success in war are laid, that the seasoned, well-disciplined troops are prepared, a careful selection of their commanders made, and the organisation and personnel of an army provided for. When this is done, and is well supervised by a carefully trained staff, we have the chief elements of success. Victory, we have often been told, goes to those who have the biggest battalions. Other things being considered, no doubt it does. But students of strategy will tell us that the smaller of two armies may, by skilful manœuvring, place the larger number of men at the critical point. To do this, it may be said, a great general is required. A bundle of sticks is, of course, stronger than any one stick taken singly, and if an army is well found, there is a large staff all working in well-defined lines and responsible for the various units, with one chief, who thus has the advantage of the brains of all.

His Royal Highness's appointment as Commander-in-Chief in India has only been so far alluded to as it may affect the Army. But with the two hundred and eighty million subjects of her Imperial Majesty with whom the Duke will be so constantly thrown in contact, the advent of his Royal Highness would assuredly be hailed with enthusiasm and pleasure. During the years he has already spent in India he succeeded in winning the esteem and respect of all classes, from the maharaja to the humble sepoy, and on one memorable occasion, after he had addressed a regiment in Hindustani, that simple expression of native trust and confidence was heard from the ranks—he is our Ma bap. We have shown how appropriate through seniority, abilities, special training, and general fitness, the appointment of his Royal Highness would be, should he be invited to accept it; and it is known, on the best authority, how the Duke looks back with pleasure to the time he has spent in India; in short, how he longs to be back again. In discussing the question it would be wise, too, to remember that Sir Frederick Roberts accepted his two years' extension of office with some reluctance, and at the special request of her Imperial Majesty the Queen-Empress, who, it is pretty generally believed, wishes to see the Duke of Connaught Commander-in-Chief in India as a stepping-stone to the highest position in the army in England. At the time her Majesty's motive in the gracious request she made to Sir Frederick Roberts seemed natural enough, and with a Conservative Government, at all events, her personal wishes would count for much. But, putting the Duke on one side for the moment, several other names of the first importance have also been freely discussed. It has, for instance, been asserted that Lieutenant-General Brackenbury has been specially sent out to be prepared to take over the command; but clever man and excellent writer as he may be, toujours perdrix is not desirable, and for seven years, when Sir Frederick Roberts leaves the country, will India have been commanded by an Artilleryman. Lieutenant-General Sir George Greaves has higher service claims than any of the others, and he is understood to possess a strong personal influence. Should his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, for one reason or other, remain at home, Sir George's claims can scarcely be ignored. We could, indeed, name many others, who should all be considered before Major-General White is thought of. The discussion, however interesting, is, to say the least of it, a trifle premature, and we may conclude with the last utterance of the English press on the subject—viz., that “no appointment will be made before the spring.”

THE VICEROY'S TOUR.

A TELEGRAM from Srinagar of Oct. 27 says:—Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne and a large party spent this afternoon at the Nishat Bagh, leaving here at one o'clock. The party included Colonel and Mrs. Prideaux and Mr. and Mrs. Thoburn, who have recently arrived from Murree. After lunch in the Nishat Bagh, which was reached by boats, there was a Llama dance to the music of a Llama band, the dancers wearing masks representing the heads of various animals, the whole effect being wild and picturesque. The day was bright and clear, enabling the visitors thoroughly to enjoy the lovely scenery for which this part of the valley is famous. Raja Amar Singh was at the garden to receive the party.

Another despatch, dated Oct. 30, adds:—Leaving Srinagar on Wednesday morning last, the Viceroy and party rode seven miles to the village of Khunmu. After breakfast here, the day's sport began by beating up a nulla for game. There were seven guns. The beat was admirably organised by Colonel Neville Chamberlain, who occupied a machan with the Viceroy, Lady Lansdowne occupying another with Captain Evans-Gordon. A fine stag and four hinds broke, besides seven bears and some pig. The Viceroy got a long shot at the stag, wounding it, while one of the bears fell to Lord William Beresford's rifle. Barasingha are plentiful, but it is still apparently too warm for them to come down from the heights. Ladies Evelyn and Beatrice Fitzmaurice were also out with the party, and the sport was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S TOUR.

THE Commander-in-Chief and Lady Roberts arrived at Abbottabad on Oct. 30, after a very pleasant march through the Gullies from Murree. The party left Murree on Monday, Oct. 26, and halted for the night at Changla Gali, his Excellency inspecting Camp Thobba and No. 1 Mountain Battery, R.A., at Khrya Gali en route. On Tuesday, after an inspection of the School of Musketry at Changla, the party moved on to Doonga Gali, and the following day to Kalabagh, where No. 3 Mountain Battery, R.A., is stationed. A seventeen-mile march took them to Abbottabad the next morning. Major-General Elles, commanding the Rawul Pindi District, and Second Lieutenant Roberts, King's Royal Rifles, accompanied his Excellency as far as Kalabagh, returning to Murree from that place yesterday. The Commander-in-Chief inspected the garrison in the afternoon. The turnout and appearance of the troops was all that could be desired. At the close of the parade his Excellency decorated Major Egerton, assistant adjutant-general of the Frontier Force, with the Distinguished Service Order, which had been awarded him for his services in the Miranzai operations in January last; and Havildar Dara Thapa of the 1st battalion 5th Goorkhas, received a medal for long and meritorious service.

In the evening Sir Frederick and Lady Roberts were present at a most enjoyable dance, given in their honour by the residents of Abbottabad. They leave early to-morrow morning by tonga for Hassan Abdool, reaching Pindi the same evening. While here they are the guests of Brigadier-General Sir William and Lady Lockhart. On Sunday Lady Roberts left Pindi for Simla, accompanied by Captain Waterfield, aide-de-camp, and at the same time his Excellency left for Kohat, Captain Hume, aide-de-camp, accompanying him.

On Monday his Excellency inspected the garrison in the afternoon, which in every way was up to Frontier Force form. He dined with Colonel Brownlow and officers of the Kohat Garrison mess. In the evening on Tuesday the party, accompanied by Brigadier-General Sir William Lockhart, Major Egerton, and the Hon. the Lieutenant-General Brackenbury, left by tonga and dogcart to visit the Samana position. They were very hospitably entertained at breakfast by Lieutenant-Colonel Turner, commanding the Samana, and officers of his Staff at Hangu. A start was made after breakfast for Samana, and Mastoon was reached at 12.30. While halting for change of horses his Excellency inspected the garrison under the command of Captain Rondall, 4th Goorkhas, and Gulestan was the next garrison inspected. The party left with Lieut.-Colonel Reid, commanding the post, and officers stationed there. The troops quartered at Balianun paraded under Major Massy, 19th Bengal Lancers. The return trip to Hangu and Kohat was accomplished by 8.30 P.M.; the total distance covered was about eighty-five miles, thirty-five of which were done on horseback. The excellent arrangements made and general hospitality everywhere helped this rapid progress. At six o'clock, Wednesday morning, General Brackenbury and Sir James Browne left Kohat for Bannu.

ANGLO-INDIAN M.P.'S.

PARLIAMENTARY honours become every year more and more an object of ambition to the retired Anglo-Indian, says the Times of India. There is already in the House of Commons quite a respectable group of Anglo-Indian members, and the lists of candidates for the forthcoming General Election show that there are numbers of others connected with India who would get to Westminster if they could. It, therefore, becomes of interest to inquire whether the honour is commensurate with the sacrifice of time and money involved; whether the average Anglo-Indian is likely to find a political career congenial to his tastes; whether, in short, he will find the game worth the candle. At the outset it must be admitted that the prospect which a Parliamentary career opens up is a very inviting one to the ambitious man. There is the pleasurable excitement of a contest with its hard-hitting and oftentimes rollicking fun, there is the social prestige and influence which membership of the House of Commons brings, there is the fascination of being an active participant in the great national drama which is annually played at St. Stephen's; and lastly, there is the promise which is given to the clever men of some day attaining to Ministerial honours and securing European fame. All these alluring advantages are not without their influence, and they entice many a hard-headed Anglo-Indian into the whirlpool of politics, who, if he had had an opportunity of putting the matter to a practical test beforehand, would have probably held aloof.

A member soon discovers that his position is not all cakes and ale. When the glamour of success has worn off, and his bills tumble in for his election expenses, together with a thousand and one claims, more or less impudent, upon his purse, he begins to feel that fame may be purchased at too high a price; but probably he puts aside his questionings, pays his bills, silences his unfortunate correspondents as best he may, and resolutely sets himself to enjoying his life in the House of Commons. Here, however, a further disillusionment awaits him. “The best Club in London,” he finds, is not what it once was. Democracy tempered with the Irish question has sadly degenerated it. You can still get a fair dinner there, but you can get a better one at a score of clubs and without the very mixed company you may have to meet in the legislative dining-rooms; for the chances are that in dining at the House you may find yourself cheek-by-jowl with some of the drinking-saloon keepers, tailors, pork vendors, or horny-handed sons of toil, whom a discriminating democracy have sent to Parliament to represent them. Not that these men are bad fellows in their way; indeed, the most offensive types in the House are not low born and uneducated, but men with a public school and university career who come of good parentage. But, all the same, it is not quite pleasant to have to constantly rub shoulders with Mr. McSweeney, who is the manager of a low music-hall in the purlieu of Manchester; Mr. O'Finnigan, who does the tailoring for the natives of Ballyhooley; or the people's 'Enery, who tells you in moments of confidence that he helped to square the stones of the building in which you are sitting. That kind of thing is hardly in accordance with the traditions of a high-class club, and an Anglo-Indian, used all his life to very different conditions, naturally feels that the House of Commons regarded as a club leaves much to be desired. But he might, perhaps, in time overcome any squeamishness he entertains in this respect if the lack of social standing of some of his associates was all he had to complain of. Unfortunately, however, there are other than mere negative disadvantages in life in “the best Club in London.” When political feeling runs high, as it has often done of late years, he may be open to downright insult from one or other of the offensive bullies whom a strange fate has sent to Parliament. He may be perfectly inoffensive in his private relations, but a chance word dropped in debate will bring upon him the delicate attentions of one or other of these delectable individuals. Not long since a young English country gentleman, who had given no other cause of offence than some ironical cheers at the high falutin of one of the glib “patriots” whom Ireland lays claim to, was subjected to the most offensive attentions of one of these individuals, and when he strongly resented the insults heaped upon him, he was met with a challenge to fight outside the precincts of the House. This, no doubt, was an extreme case, but it shows the spirit which exists in some quarters, and which absolutely precludes the possibility of association on an equal footing at Westminster. But the disadvantages of the House from a clubman's point of view do not end here. Amongst the recent innovations which have come into existence in Parliament is the throwing of the House of Commons establishment open to ladies. They pervade the place from beginning to end of a sitting. The only place exempt from their presence is the smoking-room, and at the present rate of progress that is not likely to remain long sacred to tyrant man. Ladies are no doubt very nice companions, but the term is comprehensive, and in its Parliamentary sense it includes that body of angular elderly damsels known to fame as the “shrieking sisterhood.” These fair ones seem to find the precincts of St. Stephen's specially attractive. They fill the Lobby and line the corridors, buttonholing sympathetic members, and are not unsuspicious to the pleasures of a well-cooked cutlet in the dining room, or afternoon tea and strawberries and cream on the Terrace. Their strident talk about woman's rights and wrongs destroys the serene repose of the place, and the distracted member who cares for none of their pet grievances is driven as often as not to find refuge in his own club in Pall Mall, at the risk of exciting the dire displeasure of the party Whips who are counting upon his presence in an impending division.

When the Anglo-Indian member comes to the real work of the House fresh disappointment awaits him. He starts his Parliamentary career with a mind well stored with knowledge on subjects of vital importance to the Empire, which he fondly hopes will ensure for him a prominent place in the councils of the nation; but he speedily discovers his mistake. The House cares for none of the things upon which he can expatiate with authority. A broken head in Coldbath Fields, Macaulay once said, produces more excitement in Parliament than a pitched battle in India. What was true at the time he spoke these words is truer even today. A paltry squabble in Ireland fills the House to suffocation; a debate of the gravest importance to India invariably empties the benches. Parliament knows nothing about Indian subjects, and it regards the man who discusses them as a bore of the first water. An Anglo-Indian, therefore, to succeed in Parliament must do so through the medium of the politics of the Caucasus and the platform. He must be able to talk learnedly on the intricacies of the Registration Laws and the principle of "one man one vote," he must investigate the latest Irish row and be able to expose the fallacies of Mr. Dillon or Mr. O'Brien when they declare that the Plan of Campaign is the way of salvation of the Irish people, and he must at all times be prepared to say whether John Brown, the postman, or David Jones, the doorkeeper at the War Office, was rightly or wrongly dismissed for inattention to duty. If a member does this, is useful on the platform in the recess, and keeps on good terms with the wirepullers of his party, there is some small hope for him, but not otherwise. Politics are played very low nowadays, and it is not the ablest men who win or the most deserving, but the glibest of tongue, and those who can most easily adapt themselves to the passing whim of the hour. The old Anglo-Indian, as a general rule, is not this stamp of man, and for this reason none of the existing members have made anything of a Parliamentary reputation. For the same reason it would be well if future aspirants for the legislature position thought twice before embarking upon a career which is so fraught with annoyance and disappointment.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

SOME soreness, says the Pioneer, seems to be felt among officers of the Indian Staff Corps regarding our remarks upon the ill-advised Circular issued in connection with the agitation to improve their rate of promotion. We are glad, therefore, to see a paper of the standing of the Times of India protesting equally against the manner in which Indian officers are striving to influence public opinion in their favour. Noticing a statement by a Staff Corps officer in a home paper that no one any longer attempts to argue that the officers of the Indian Service are not at a most serious disadvantage as regards promotion, pay, and chances of preferment, the Bombay paper remarks:—"This is all nonsense, and it is this sort of exaggeration that does so much damage to an otherwise good cause. Will any officer seriously allege that the British Army is better paid than the Indian? Would any one leave it if it were? Then as regards chances of preferment. If a youngster has got anything in him is there not still a finer career before him in India than in any other part of her Majesty's dominions, and with Sir Frederick Roberts at the head of military affairs in this country, can any one say that an Indian officer has no chance of preferment?" This is plain speaking, and it is to be hoped that the further remarks as to the certainty which the Indian Army offers, with its regular promotion, undoubtedly good pay and pension, no risk of compulsory retirement under age clauses or a Secretary of State's whim, will not be overlooked. The Times of India holds that the demand for more rapid promotion is a just one, though it does not say what the rate should be; but at the same time it warns Staff Corps officers that it is neither wise nor politic to ignore the undoubted advantages possessed by those who have thrown in their lot with the great Indian Army. So far as we can make out, excessive demands are being put forward and exaggerated statements made in order that some concessions, at any rate, may be obtained. These are dangerous tactics to adopt, and reflect no credit upon what is certainly one of the finest Services in the world.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S LANDING AT BOMBAY.

THE Pioneer says:—As surely as autumn comes round and the incoming steamers again begin to be crowded with passengers, we may make certain of the reappearance of the familiar complaints about the arrangements, or want of arrangements, that the P. and O. Company suffers to exist in connection with the arrival of its steamers at Bombay. A letter from a correspondent elsewhere shows that once more nothing whatever has been done to remedy this matter: and the usual confusion was experienced in an aggravated form last week by the passengers of the Rosetta. When in broad daylight the struggle for the single narrow gangway and its approaches between the crowds wanting to enter and the crowds wanting to get out, resembles nothing so much as a football scrimmage, or the struggle at the doors of a pit, it may be easily imagined what the scene was when the steamer was elaborately manoeuvred to arrive after sunset. And how did the Company's officers endeavour to remedy the inevitable turmoil? By not turning on the electric light, and leaving the people on the crowded decks to fight it out in the dark.

Referring to the same subject, Capital says:—From sad experience we are able to fully endorse the complaint which appears in the Pioneer regarding the absolute want of decent arrangements for landing passengers at Bombay. The scene of chaos and confusion on board the Peshawar when she arrived on Oct. 4 had the advantage of daylight, that on board the Rosetta occurred after sunset, and the company's officers considerably turned out the electric light. Surely it should be possible to make better arrangements for landing passengers. Bombay seems to be about the worst place, but there is room for considerable improvement at Brindisi.

THE FOREST DEPARTMENT.

THE Indian Government have sent home proposals for the encouragement of the study of forestry on the Continent by officers of the Indian Forest Department while on furlough.

Consequent on the reorganisation of the Indian Forest Department, rules have just been issued to regulate appointments and promotions in the Provincial Forest Service, which can now only be entered through the Dehra Dun School. Candidates for admission to the school must be between eighteen and twenty-five years of age; and the courses of training are to extend over twenty-one months, of which about one-half will be spent in camp. There will be two classes formed, one in English and one in Hindustani, and a simple entrance examination will have to be passed by all candidates. The cost of living at the Forest School is very low indeed: for European students it is calculated at 35 rs. per month, for natives at 22 rs. to 28 rs. The additional expense incurred in camping will be about 210 rs. and 130 rs. respectively; but the ordinary travelling expenses admissible to men already in the service of Government will cover these charges. The Provincial Service will consist of foresters who have obtained the Forest School certificate (lower standard), forest rangers, extra assistant conservators, and extra deputy conservators. Those students who pass with honours will have a very good career before them, as in the grade of extra deputy conservators the pay varies from 450 rs. to 600 rs. per month. The idea seems to be to give members of the lower grades such sound technical and scientific training as will fit them for promotion to higher posts. The Imperial Forest Service will be recruited solely by officers directly appointed by the Secretary of State. In 1892 there will be twelve appointments offered for competition at Coopers Hill College. The course of study there extends over three years, or nine terms, the last part of the time being spent in British or Continental forests. The fees charged amount in all to about 550^l. per student for the whole course. Successful candidates will be allowed before leaving the college to choose the provinces in which they desire to be first employed, according to the standing in which they pass out, but they will thereafter be liable to transfer at the pleasure of the Government of India. Those who acquit themselves creditably will begin on a salary of 350 rs. per month; those who fall short of the required standard, though they may have obtained the college diploma in forestry, will only receive 250 rs., the difference continuing until the first departmental examination is passed in India. It need scarcely be said, the Pioneer remarks, that no mention is made of these stipends as represented in sterling.

The newly created office of Deputy Director of the Department of Land Records and Agriculture, to which Mr. L. M. Wynch, C.S., has been appointed, carries with it a pay of 1,000 rs. per mensem, rising to 1,500 rs. by annual increments of 100 rs. The appointment is made provisionally for a period of five years, and on Sept. 1, 1895, the Board of Revenue is to submit a report on the results of the new appointment. The Deputy Director is to be mainly an itinerant officer, and for the present one of his chief duties will be the organisation of the training of karnams in surveying and in keeping the maps and demarcation up to date.

A CURIOUS CHARACTER.

A PRIVATE telegram has just been received in London from China, writes the London correspondent of the Glasgow Herald, reporting the death in the Hong Kong Hospital of Mr. George Butler, a man who has had a very remarkable career, and who was known in China and London to enjoy a wholly exceptional position in regard to the Chinese Government and to some of the highest officials in China. To begin with, he was of negro descent, and first appeared in the Chinese capital nearly thirty years ago as Secretary to the American Minister, Mr. Anson Burlingame, whose career was almost as curious as that of his Secretary, for, after being American Minister in China for some years, he became Chinese Minister to all the treaty Powers, and started in that capacity on a tour of the capitals of Europe with proposals for a wholly new policy towards China. Mr. Butler did not attend his chief in this mission; but after acquiring a close and peculiarly intricate knowledge of Chinese officialdom, he became connected with the great American house of Russell and Company. What he did to enable this firm to hold almost a monopoly of the business of the Chinese Government no one but the senior partners in it probably ever knew, but it is certain that his was the hand that established the line of steamers along the China coast known for many years as Russell's; it was he who conceived and carried through the stupendous transaction of selling this fleet as a going concern, with the wharves, warehouses, offices in every port, to a Chinese association, known as the China Merchants' Company (which still owns the steamers, and is the greatest trading association on the coast); and it was he who worked out the plan by which this company was founded under the patronage and with the support, which has of late been converted into predominating influence, of Li Hung Chang. He then left Russell's to steer the young Chinese company through its first years, did so successfully, and then threw up his post, because he had too keen a sense of business requirements and of his duties to the shareholders to tolerate the corrupt interference of the mandarins. Not long afterwards the authorities came to him in an hour of dire distress. The war between France and China was visibly approaching; the French fleet would sweep the Chinese merchants' steamers from the seas, and their trade would be ruined. Then Li Hung Chang bethought him once more of Butler, who was then in London, where his home has been for many years. I remember well meeting Butler one morning in the early summer of 1885 sauntering down Regent Street. He was faultlessly dressed, as he always was, even in dirty Pekin, and his patent leather boots shone as much as his face. He told me in quite a matter-of-fact way that he had got a telegram from Tientsin that morning, and was leaving for China the following evening, via the United States. As I heard long afterwards, he had even then formed his plans for saving the fleet and the company. In a fortnight after his arrival in Shanghai the whole fleet and all belonging to it was retransferred to Russell and Co., and sailed all through the war from port to port under the American flag, safe from Admiral Courbet and his cruisers. But he remained at the head of affairs until peace was made, when the fleet was restored to the Chinese, who did not carry out their part of the bargain as faithfully as Butler had done his. For several years past he had an indirect connection as financial agent with the Chinese, and at the time of his death he was on his way out to see whether something could not be done to replace the ravages to Chinese credit in Europe caused by the Tching Ki Tong scandal. He was taken ill in the Red Sea, where it was especially hot as he passed through, but was enabled to go on to Hong Kong, where he died on Sunday night. He was a man of extraordinary mental power, whose grasp of all the details of a vast and complicated transaction was amazing. Those who knew him best and who most accurately estimated his power and the rapidity of his mental processes thought him a genius. Certainly nothing short of genius or a miracle could have given a negro the influence he had with the rulers of China, for to a Chinaman the black man is a devil, and is abhorred accordingly.

THE HYDERABAD BRIBERY CASE.

A RESOLUTION has been issued by the Hyderabad Government, in the Home Department, on what is generally known as the Bribery case, connected with the Salar Jung family. The resolution begins as follows: "In the Deccan Times of June 2, an article appeared which contained the following passage: 'Intrigues seem to be rife in the Salar Jung palace, and money, we hear, is being extracted from the Begums under various pretexts. We learn from a very authentic source that the Begums have been relieved of the sum of between fifty and sixty thousand rupees, with the object of bribing a very high official in consideration of certain allowances or privileges which he has promised to obtain for them. . . . The following orders are now issued by command and with the sanction of his Highness:—(1) His Highness' Government fully concur in the conclusion arrived at by Colonel Ludlow, not only for the very cogent reasons set forth in considerable detail in his report, but also because other facts now before his Excellency lend support to the general tenor of that report, and furnish a decisive proof of the utter unreliability of the rumour so far as the connection with it of any Government officer is concerned. (2) Separate proceedings will be instituted against those persons who have originated or participated in this intrigue. (3) Zeenathal Nissa, Begum, will be informed, with reference to the offer of a reward of 2,000 rs., that his Highness feels great pleasure in knowing that the charge of offering bribes brought against her and Bari Sahibzada, by ill-disposed persons has not only not been proved, but has been found to be utterly false. As regards the reward, Colonel Ludlow has not mentioned any one as being particularly deserving, and this may be regarded as an additional reason why the report deserves implicit confidence, seeing that the investigations have not been conducted in the hope of securing such reward.'

The following punishment has been meted out to the chief offenders. A man named Mahomed Ali, in the employment of the Salar Jung family, has been placed on the reduction list, and will either be paid a gratuity or a pension according to the length of his service. Mrs. Borivilion, the nurse, is dismissed the service, and the Salar Jung Estates Committee have been asked, with the assistance of Dr. Lawrie, to secure another suitable nurse for the child. Mr. Syed Abu Turab, the uncle of the second dowager, Lady Salar Jung, is prohibited for a period of six months from either seeing or holding any communication with his niece, but outside the palace he is allowed to supervise the bringing up of the child. His Highness' Government will see how Mr. Abu Turab conducts himself in future. Captain Beauclerk, Member and Secretary of the Salar Jung Estates Committee, has been instructed to read over Colonel Ludlow's report and take such notice as he may deem fit of the conduct of the other persons mentioned therein.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT ENGINEERS.

WE, Pioneer, publish a letter which points out very forcibly the extremely serious character of the block which now exists at a certain stage on the list of the Public Works Department, and the consequences to the unfortunate engineers who had the misfortune to be drifted into this region of official doldrums. It is, of course, the old story of over-recruitment during a number of successive years—in this case the years 1874-80—that supplies the explanation of the state of things that is now disorganising the department. For, as we have learnt by the analogous cases of the Civil Service in these provinces and of the Madras Army, a great obstruction at any point to the ordinary flow of promotion does disorganise the whole working of the Service in which it has been allowed to occur. Not only do the men of the crowded years block each other's prospects, while those perhaps just above them are going ahead with unusual rapidity; but senior men are kept at juniors' work, the supply of new recruits is unduly stinted as it was before overdone, and the mischief thus tends to perpetuate itself, until heroic measures have been adopted for dealing with it. Just as in the Madras Army ten years ago, when regiments had four, five, and six field officers apiece, a lieutenant-colonel was lucky if he had a wing, there are now in the Public Works Department executive engineers of thirteen and fourteen years' service who are doing exactly the same work as they were doing within a year of their arrival in the country. In the days previous to this congestion men would get charge of their division generally in five or six years, and had a good chance of becoming engineers-in-chief of some big work in twelve years. At the present moment it would appear that there is a Cooper's Hill Engineer on the establishment in these Provinces who, with fifteen years' service, still holds a sub-division.

There are two reasons, moreover, special to the case, which may be supposed to sharpen the sting of blighted prospects. On the one hand there are the half-promises, perhaps we should call them expectations, held out to the Engineers, when they were entering Cooper's Hill, by the Secretary of State, and which they can hardly avoid contrasting now with the very different realities of their position; on the other hand, there is the sight of those of their contemporaries whose services have been transferred to the railway companies, and whose professional position is as enviable as their own is the reverse. Not only is the work, as a rule, much more interesting and responsible, but the companies are very much more liberal than the Government. As soon as a P. W. D. Engineer is transferred to them they raise his pay as much as they are allowed to do by Government, and improve it further by provisional allowances and high travelling allowance. Cases thus occasionally occur when two railways touch each other of a man temporarily lent to a company drawing actually higher pay than his neighbour in the department, with perhaps twice the length of service. Such inequalities in the same service cannot but give rise to soreness, which of course is greatly increased by the general feeling which runs through the branch that they have not been kept faith with by the Secretary of State. We are glad to know that the question is now engaging the earnest attention of the head of the department, Colonel Pemberton; but short of some strong remedies, such as favourable special pensions which would induce a number of the 3rd and 4th grade executive engineers to retire, it is not easy to see what step can prove effectual.

THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

A REVIEW of the Administration Report of the Indian Telegraph Department which appears in the Gazette of India shows that 19,68,580 rs. were added to the capital expenditure during the year, the total standing at the close at something over 502 lacs. The net additions to the system were 1,791 miles of line, 7,373 miles of wire, and 21 miles of cable. One hundred and sixty-eight new offices have been opened during the year, bringing the number up to 3,103. Including State-paid messages the receipts amounted to 68,28,855 rs. and the working expenses to 46,88,802 rs., showing a profit equal to 4.26 per cent. on the capital outlay. This figure represents a rather smaller rate of profit than that of the preceding year. The falling-off is owing to the decreased receipts from foreign telegrams. The actual number of foreign messages was some 42,000 more than in 1889-90, but the extended use of word codes reduced the average value considerably. The inland traffic, apart from work done for the State, has again forged ahead, the increase in the year being over 173,000 messages, or 8 per cent. The receipts from telegraphic money-order advices have steadily risen from 46,000 rs. in 1888 to 84,000 rs. in 1891. It is notable, says the Pioneer, that the complaints registered were only three per ten thousand messages, and the number of undelivered telegrams about three per thousand. It is remarked in the review that during the year some excellent work was done by the Department in laying field telegraph lines. The Sikkim line was maintained, as also that in the Chin country. A new line in the Assam section of the Chin-Lushai country was laid from Jhlnacherra to Fort Aijal, a distance of 59 miles, through a most difficult and unhealthy country. The other two sections of the line through Lushai, from Demagiri to Fort Tregear, and from Pokokko to Haka were strengthened. The working parties suffered severely from sickness. One hundred and eighty-two miles of extra wire had to be laid to connect Hussan and Abbottabad with the bases of operations at Derband and Oghi, and from those points onwards 103 miles of field wire were laid, and fifteen offices opened. The services of Mr. Bignell, Mr. Barker, Mr. Pinhey, Mr. Thomas, and other officers were warmly acknowledged by the general officers commanding the field forces of these various expeditions, and the Government of India also desires to "again record its appreciation of the thorough and able manner in which most useful assistance has been rendered by the Department under very exhausting conditions of climate and trying hardships, all of which these officers have shared in common with the troops employed."

Among events of general interest which will have their niche in the history of the Department, the year's record brings to notice the following:—The quinquennial International Telegraph Conference was held during June at Paris, the Government of India being represented by Colonel Mallock, late Director-General. No important changes directly affecting the Indian public were introduced. The charges per word between India and the Straits Settlements have been reduced, partly by reductions in the Indian terminal and transit rates, and partly by reductions in the Eastern Extension Company's rates. The transit rate claimable by India for messages passing between Europe and the Far East was largely reduced, a reduction which is already having its effect in a large increase of business. By the connection of the French lines in Tonquin with China, a new and cheap route for messages to the latter country via Siam has been opened out. The Department has been throughout the year administered to the complete satisfaction of the Government of India by Mr. W. R. Brooke, the Director-General.

The New MacIver Liner.—On Oct. 28 the maiden trip of the MacIver new liner Ruthenia was celebrated by a tiffin, when the Hon. Mr. L. R. W. Forrest, the Bombay Agent, referred to the Cheap Passage Association. He did not think they could wish anything cheaper than the MacIver line, and before any reduction could be made the whole character of the Indian passenger traffic must change, and this was impossible, on account of the climate in India and at home.

SIR DENNIS FITZPATRICK AT HYDERABAD.

THE Pioneer of Oct. 29 says:—After having filled the office of Resident at Hyderabad for nearly two and a half years, Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick goes home on Nov. 13, in order to return early next year as Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. Hyderabad has been the grave of many a reputation, and it is therefore of interest to inquire how Sir Dennis emerges from his wardenship of this political Castle Dangerous. Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick came to Hyderabad at a troubled time. The Parliamentary Commission had some months previously issued its report on the Deccan Mining Scandal, and the wrangling regarding how the spilt milk was to be paid for, and who was to bear the brunt, was transferred from England to India. The present Minister, Sir Asman Jah, had not been long in office, and was known to be guided in his counsels by Nawab Mustak Hossein. The principal official in the State under the previous Minister, Sir Salar Jung, the younger, had been Nawab Mehdi Ali. This officer had been delegated to England to attend the Commission of Inquiry, and with him had been associated the Chief Justice of Hyderabad, Nawab Mehdi Hassan. These two officials, had adopted different ideas regarding the manner in which the affair should be settled, and on the return of the latter early in 1889 there was an animated controversy. The Minister and his adviser, Mushtak Hossein, adopted the view of Mehdi Hassan, whereas the Resident, Mr. Howell, was in favour of Mehdi Ali's proposal. The dispute was finally transferred to Calcutta, and eventually settled by the adoption of the Government, i.e. the Minister's view. The controversy had, however, excited a good deal of angry feeling, and there can be no doubt that for some time Hyderabad was divided into two rival camps. In the middle of 1889 Mr. Howell retired, and was succeeded by Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick, whose first task it was to pour oil on the troubled waters.

In this the present Resident has certainly been eminently successful. As month followed month matters quieted down. The relations between the Hyderabad Government and the Resident became cordial and confidential, and between the latter and H.H. the Nizam there was a constant interchange of intimacy. Acting under the Resident's advice a lengthened inquiry was made into the Salar Jung scandal; certain malpractices were discovered, and the delinquents were punished. After much discussion and delay the Hyderabad Government finally resolved upon filing a suit against Abdul Huq for secret profits in the Deccan Mining Company. Sir Asman Jah's Government was gradually strengthened, and several important measures were passed, notably the scheme for the settlement of the Telingana districts, which is likely to form a revolution in the revenue administration of Hyderabad. Everything was working smoothly. No doubt there were many persons who were far from satisfied. There had been a radical change in the parties in power, and those out in the cold would have liked the Resident to interfere on their behalf. Accusations appeared in several of the papers, accusing the Government of harshness and vindictiveness. It was alleged that Hindoos were treated with injustice, that they were systematically excluded from any share in the Government, and that many of their jaghirs were confiscated without reason. Friends and adherents of the former Minister were, it was stated, persecuted, and prosecutions were instituted against some of them which had afterwards to be abandoned. Such persons were continually hoping that the Resident would interfere, and as time passed on and no sign was made, and as it became evident that the Resident's support was being given to the Government, they began to grumble. But there are two ways of looking at questions of this kind. The one is from the Resident's point of view, and the other from that of the public. There can be no doubt of the manner in which Sir Dennis regards this duty, for he has himself told us what his views are in the memorandum which he handed to the Commissioner who examined him in the case of the Imperial diamond. "The Resident," he says, "is not merely a representative of British interests. It is of the essence of the relation subsisting between the Imperial Government and the Native State that he should be constantly called upon confidentially to advise, though it is always open to him to decline, and he does frequently decline to do so." Further on in the same memorandum he compares the relations between a Resident and the State to which he is accredited with those existing between husband and wife. If this view of a Resident's duty is a correct one, we can understand how to him the satisfaction or dissatisfaction of the public is a matter of indifference as long as the machinery works smoothly and the relations between the Imperial Government and the Native State are cordial. In an Empire like India, with so many vassal and semi-independent States, there is nothing that the Imperial Government dislikes so much as being bothered about matters of detail. For the internal administration of the State the local Government must be responsible; all that the Resident requires is that the relations between the de facto Government of the native State and the Imperial Government should be such as to cause no hitch in the working of the Imperial machine. It is for this that he is held responsible, and it is by the manner in which he carries out this duty that his efficiency or otherwise is judged. Now, taken from this standpoint, there can be no doubt that Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick's rule at Hyderabad has been a success. It is probable that for the last thirty years matters between the Imperial Government and that of Hyderabad have never worked so smoothly as they have done during the last two and a-half years. In these relations there has been absolutely no hitch; there has been no friction as there was during the time of Sir Richard Meade, Mr. Cordery, and Mr. Howell; and with one notable exception of very recent date, which, however, in no way affects those relations, there have been no scandals. A sentence in the memorandum we have already alluded to explains these relations very clearly. "It has been my policy since I came here to avoid anything like over-interference in the affairs of Hyderabad, and the only criticism I have seen made upon me in this connection is that I have not interfered enough; but nevertheless I have found that I am constantly referred to confidentially on the more important affairs of the State or its ruler, and though I often abstain from giving an opinion, I am, on the other hand, often in private consultation with his Highness or his advisers on such affairs. I think I may say with some confidence that generally when I have advised, the result for the State and its ruler has been good, and I feel sure that his Highness and his advisers, with whom my relations have invariably been of the pleasantest and most confidential nature, would be the first to acknowledge this." From a Resident's point of view this represents a perfect state of affairs.

CONFIDENTIAL REPORTS IN THE ARMY.

THE Times of India says:—Few things are more curious among the minor phenomena of military life than the constant and unexpected manner in which the subject of confidential reports crops up, and the strong feeling which the topic never fails to evoke. Our contemporary the Army and Navy Gazette has lately been inveighing against these documents in very vigorous fashion, and comes to the conclusion that they are altogether mischievous and unworthy of the national character for straightforward honest dealing. Let us quote our contemporary's own strong words about the matter. His contention is as follows:—"The fate of every officer in the Army is determined by the records sent to the Adjutant-General's office by his superiors. Admitting that these reports are necessary to enable the Commander-in-Chief and his coadjutors to decide on the fitness of officers for the Queen's service, the charge of the national honour, and the lives of men, the elements of error, misjudgment, personal partiality, or prejudice, cannot be eliminated from confidential reports. Quis custodiet ipsos custodes? What can ensure true accuracy of judgment, insight, and freedom from subtle influences, of the reporters themselves? Nothing." Now, we have so often stated our views on this important topic that we need hardly repeat them now. What the Army and Navy Gazette says above is true enough as far as it goes, but it is only half the truth. Of course, human nature being what it is, nothing can ensure that the judgment one man forms of another will be the correct one, or that it will be free from prejudice. In the case of a colonel recording the judgment he has formed on one of his officers, he is bound in honour to state his opinion fairly, temperately, and what he considers to be justly. If the said opinion is favourable, the officer benefits by it, and his superiors are made aware of his fitness for any advancement that they may be able to bestow. But if the colonel is honestly convinced that one of his officers is not what he should be in character, or in professional acquirements, or is indolent and useless, he is bound to report on him accordingly, tempering his adverse judgment with mercy. If it is his prejudice against any officer that leads a colonel to send in an unfavourable report, it is of course very regrettable, but the officer thus reported on is not left without a remedy. The colonel has to furnish him with a copy of the unfavourable remarks, and he is at liberty to make any representation on them that he wishes. In addition, the colonel would have to satisfy the general that his strictures against any one of his officers were fully justified; and the general would have to personally assure himself, by questioning the incriminated officer, or making him do manoeuvres before him, that he was really the incompetent person he was represented to be. In fact, the regulations give all officers confidentially reported on every safeguard that they shall not be wronged by these documents. The question to our mind is: Are these regulations always acted up to? That is, when a colonel reports unfavourably of an officer, does he always give him a copy of the adverse judgment? Of course, if he says that Captain A. drinks, or that Captain B. is an imbecile, or that Lieutenant C. never by any chance does a stroke of work, he is bound to inform those officers of what he has said. But suppose he merely regrets that Captain A. is of convivial habits, or that Captain B. does his duty to the best of his ability, which unhappily is extremely limited, or that Lieutenant C. means well, but is constitutionally sluggish, would he think it necessary to give them a copy of his remarks? Yet would not this be damning those officers with faint praise? We will not suppose that the colonel means maliciously to injure the prospects of these officers by what he says. He may not weigh his words, or he may have a habit of expressing himself more forcibly than he is aware of, but all the same mischief may be done. And therefore it is that we hold so strongly that all confidential reports ought to be shown to officers reported on, good reports equally with bad ones. A correspondent writing in the last issue of our home military contemporary says:—"I was much interested in the article upon confidential reports in your issue of the 12th instant, and I crave permission—for good reasons—to offer the following suggestion, viz., that when an officer has been adversely reported upon, he should attach his signature to the report as a guarantee that he has been made aware of his commanding officer's action in the matter." Now, of course, the "good reasons" to which the writer alludes can only be that he has been badly reported on by his colonel, and not shown the report by that officer. Probably his colonel did not consider the report as of so compromising a nature that he was bound to show it to the person concerned; but if the rule were once introduced that each officer should be made acquainted with what his commandant said about him, this kind of misunderstanding would be impossible. We hold that confidential reports are quite necessary. We firmly believe they are in the main fair and just, and it goes without saying that the colonels of the Army are a most upright (and honourable) body of men, who err quite as much on the score of over-leniency as of undue severity. But at the same time there is an uneasy feeling in the service that confidential reports are often the means of doing secret harm, and therefore we say once more that every officer in the service should see what it is his commandant really says of him at the annual inspection of his regiment. Sir Frederick Roberts has introduced so many wise reforms into the Indian Army during his tenure of the great office he holds with so much advantage to the State that we should hail with delight a movement on his part to bring about this much-needed change. And the change we have urged is one that would retain the confidential nature of these reports, while destroying the possibility of their doing secret injury to individuals.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Brig.-Gen. Kenney-Herbert.—The Fort St. George Gazette announces the retirement from the army of Brig.-Gen. Arthur Robert Kenney-Herbert, of the Madras Cavalry, whilom Military Secretary to the Government of Madras. General Kenney-Herbert received his first commission on Sept. 20, 1859, and arrived in India with the K.D.G.'s. He very shortly afterwards joined the Madras Cavalry, and commenced his connection with this Presidency, which, says the Madras Times, will lose one of its chief ornaments when he bids it farewell. On March 14, 1861, he obtained his lieutenantancy, and in December 1865 he became captain. He blossomed into brevet-major eleven years all but two days after that date, on Dec. 22, 1876, and three years afterwards reached his full majority. In March 1883 he bore the title of lieutenant-colonel; and four years later his friends hailed him brigadier-general. From April 1876 to 1881 he was Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General of Madras. In 1881 he acted for six months as Military Secretary to Government, and again in 1883 for nine months. For the past five years he has held this appointment. Such have been, in brief, the military services of this gallant officer. But these have only formed a small part of a career in this Presidency well-known, admired, and wondered at. In General Kenney-Herbert we have a writer of charming vers de société, of piquant stories, and of those light fragments of fiction which run so easily as you read but not so as you write; we have a character-actor of exceptional strength, and a painter who possesses talents far beyond those of the usual amateur. As Wyvern he is of the company of Brillat-Savarin. In the cricket-field, the services of the old Rugby captain will be missed. He was an excellent tactician, and keen to the last. When Ceylon comes, the Madras Eleven will not seem complete without the well-known form umpiring in a dressing-gown. When he departs, India loses a man of vast popularity, of infinite variety, and of a versatility of genius which has, perhaps, warred against itself, for though General Kenney-Herbert has attained the highest position open to him, unless, perhaps, a district command, his reputation as one of India's ablest military administrators would have shone out even more conspicuously had he not been so good "all round." We believe that he will stay among us for some little time longer, but, when he takes his farewell, he will leave behind him widespread regrets, and we hope that the memory of the many happy hours which he has created for his fellow-exiles in Madras will be kept green for us by hearing of fresh laurels gathered in wider fields, either as a diplomat—for which he is so eminently fitted—or in the social and literary circles of the modern Babylon.

- 33rd Punjab Inf., from Jhelum to Rawul Pindi, leave Oct. 28, arrive Nov. 3.
- 34th Pioneers, from Fort Sandeman to Meean Meer, leave Dec. 11 (march through Gomal Pass, arriving Dera Ismail Khan Dec. 23. Halt Dec. 24, 25, 26, and 27. Leave Dera Ismail Khan by route march to Bhakkar, arriving Bhakkar Dec. 28 and railing thence to Lala Musa.) Arrive Jan. 8.
- 27th Dogras, from Sialkot to Nowshera (instead of to Peshawar), leave Nov. 10, arrive Dec. 3.

With reference to the reliefs which were published previously, it is notified for information from Indian Army Headquarters, that the march of the 55th Field batty, Royal Art., from Kirkee to Deesa, on Nov. 13, is postponed till further orders.

The Proposed Eurasian Regiments.—Mr. Rowlandson, the president of the Madras Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association, writing in the Association's organ, explains the Association's position regarding the movement for enlisting Eurasians as soldiers, which is to obtain the names and qualifications of willing youths, and, when it has enough, to seek to arrange with Government the best terms it can get. An unsuitable applicant will not be recommended. "It is," says Mr. Rowlandson, "my belief, which is so far borne out by the would-be soldiers who have sent in their names, that the small weak youths of the community will have too much good sense to offer themselves for service as regulars. If soldiering is made as fair and good a contract as it easily can and ought to be made, it will at once attract enough Eurasians and Anglo-Indians to form at least two corps d'élite of young men of far better physique and morale than the average bag of the recruiting sergeant. But it must be made clear that Government does wish us to produce our best goods, and is prepared to appreciate them at their true value. We can give, man for man, a regiment that can in a single twelve months be made as good as, if not better than, any line regiment. Our best men will be more like the material which went to make up the Northern armies in the great American Civil War. Strong in constitution and muscular development, they will hold their own in any campaign; carefully educated from infancy, they will be intellectually superior to the rank and file of any existing arm of the British Service; and, come of decent people, they will be far better behaved than the rude and licentious soldiery of the best traditions of the Army in England. This is strong language, but I feel sure every Englishman who has given the matter honest attention will agree in the truth of what I have advanced." What inducements, asks an Indian contemporary, will secure the services of these picked men? Mr. Rowlandson says they should be put somewhat in the place wherein John Company placed his Madras Fusiliers, neither raw Tommy Atkins nor Asiatic Eurasians, no freshly gathered scum of the London slums nor coat and trousers Eurasians being allowed to join, and the greatest care must be taken in selecting officers at the outset. The right stamp of man would probably be found in one of the scientific corps; men with special aptitude for forming Eurasian regiments into corps d'élite should be carefully sought, and appointed only if they take to the work con amore. Respecting geographical limits, Mr. Rowlandson sees no sufficient reason for confining these to the boundaries of India, but he would not extend them beyond Asia and Africa. Regarding the term of service he should like to see at least a twelve-year term, but with the understanding that men at the end of that time would have a preferential claim on suitable Government employment. Regarding pay and allowances, Government can afford, if it secures the best of the available material, to pay a Eurasian soldier not only as much as, but even a little more than, it pays the British soldier, as the saving in employing indigenous material would be enormous. But Mr. Rowlandson would not stand out for such terms, the value of the Eurasian as a soldier having yet to be fully demonstrated. Eurasian soldiers may well accept something less.

Funeral Honours to Civil Functionaries.—The Government of India have lately had under consideration the question of the funeral honours to be accorded to high civil functionaries in India. The rules on this subject at present in force are contained in Section III., paragraph 27, Queen's Regulations, Part II., which has been made applicable to India, by paragraph 45, Army Regulations, India, Vol. II., and in which it is laid down that "civil functionaries are to have at their funerals the same number of guns fired as minute guns, while the procession is going to the burial ground, as they were entitled to be saluted with when living. Civil functionaries not entitled to salutes of cannon when living, are to have no guns fired at their funerals." These rules do not appear to the Government of India to fully suit the cases of all civil functionaries in India, especially those of political officers on the frontier. The following alterations have therefore been made in Army Regulations, India, Volume II., to govern the observance of funeral honours for certain civil officers in future:—"When the funeral of any of the civil functionaries enumerated in paragraph 55 takes place in a military cantonment or camp, the troops in garrison will line the road to the cemetery. Officers not on duty will attend in full dress, and during the procession minute guns will be fired on the scale to which the deceased was entitled as a salute while living; a firing party will also be detailed if the deceased was a military officer on full pay."

Good quarters are at last to be provided for officers of British infantry at Cherat. The cost will be about 91,000 rs.

Cholera still lingers in Mhow and Nagpore. Another death has occurred in the 7th Bombay Infantry, but there were no fresh cases when the mail left.

The Government of India have approved of the scheme for the water supply for the Dum Dum cantonment. Sixty thousand gallons a day will be provided, which will give about ten gallons per head of population.

On Oct. 1, 1891, the fighting strength of the Bombay Army consisted of 698 British officers and 12,144 British and 26,280 native soldiers. The native army was 1,086 below the established strength. The 24th Beloochistan Regt., now being raised at Loralai under Col. Nicolson, had reached 379 natives of all ranks.

Three selected cavalry officers from Bombay and Madras Presidencies are to attend the cavalry camp of exercise at Aligarh. It has been decided that Quetta will be substituted for Calcutta as the station for employment of lady nurses of the Indian Nursing Service. Four nurses will be posted to Quetta.

The restocking with food-supplies of the forts in Lushailand, beyond Demagiri, has commenced. There are about 800 police and followers to be provided for, and the opinion, the Pioneer says, locally is that, unless the carrying service is considerably strengthened and experienced military transport men are employed, there will be failure to complete the work in time. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has, we understand, already applied to the Government of India for assistance to be rendered in the shape of men and animals from the Commissariat-Transport Department. These can ill be spared, considering the demands for the cold weather expeditions in Upper Burma, but General Badcock will doubtless do his best to help the Local Government in its difficulty.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, with that paternal solicitude for the welfare of his men by which all general officers are supposed to be actuated, has, the Bombay Gazette says, caused to be circulated two tables of simple rules for the preservation of health during the hot weather in the plains. One is for the use of single soldiers; the other for married soldiers and their families. They are not an army medical edition of "Don't," and though the cynical, who laughed when Madras proposed to employ chiropodists, may characterise these rules as a grandmotherly guide to health, and ask why there are no thrilling testimonials to their efficacy, after the manner of St. Jacobs Oil or Mother Seigel's Syrup, it will not in the least detract from their value. It is suggested that the rules should be read to soldiers on landing, and also be hung up in each barrack-room and regimental institute. The wonder is that a beneficent Government has not provided for their distribution, under official endorsement, to every European who lands on the Apollo Bunder, at Keamari, Calcutta, or Madras.

On Oct. 28, says the Pioneer, the Commander-in-Chief inspected No. 3 Mountain Battery, Royal Art., at Kalabagh, in the Murree Hills. Addressing the men on parade, he said how gratified he had been to hear of the excellent work they had done during the recent operations with the Miranzai Field Force, and he most warmly praised them for the rapid and brilliant move that they made from Rawul Pindi to Kohat, which, he assured them, was a proof of the thorough state of efficiency in which the battery was maintained. It will be remembered that late on the afternoon of April 6 last this battery unexpectedly received orders to hasten to Kohat to assist in the subduing of the tribes on the Samana Range. Preparations were at once made; the battery was entrained at Rawul Pindi on the morning of the 7th, reached Kushalghur the same evening, and, after a few hours' halt, pushed on, covering the thirty-three miles to Kohat before noon on the 8th, not a man having fallen out, nor a mule having been disabled.

Major-General H. Anderson, C.B., commanding the Mhow district, has selected Capt. G. W. W. Savile, 2nd batt. Middlesex Regt., as his aide-de-camp. This has effect from Nov. 22.

Col. J. Hibbert, Assistant Commissary-General, has applied for one year's leave to Europe on private affairs.

Col. James Houlbrooke Drummond, Indian Staff Corps, is transferred to the Unemployed Supernumerary List.

Lieut.-Col. A. L. McNair, Staff Corps, commandant, 7th Bombay Lancers, has been allowed leave for one year.

Lieut.-Col. Richard Wace, R.A., has been promoted to be lieutenant-colonel from half-pay.

Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col. H. P. Leach, D.S.O., Royal Engineers, has been appointed military secretary, vice Major F. T. N. Spratt, resigned, to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief.

Major Babington, 16th Lancers, met with a bad accident at Lucknow recently. He was thrown from a waler whilst tent-pegging, and so badly injured that he will not be able to go in command of the regiment to the Aligarh camp-of-exercise.

Major G. H. W. O'Sullivan, R.E., has been appointed Commandant of the Bombay Sappers and Miners, vice Major and Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel H. P. Leach, D.S.O.

Major R. Gardiner, Royal Engineers, has resigned his appointment of honorary major, 1st Batt., B. B. and C. I. Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps.

Major F. G. Alexander, 10th Bombay Light Infantry, has been granted one year's leave in India.

Major H. Hay, 1st Bombay Lancers, assumed the command of the Deesa Station on Oct. 31, consequent on the departure of the Brigadier-General Commanding, on inspection duty.

A Poona telegram of Nov. 4 says:—Deputy Surg.-Gen. Turnbull, who has been at home on furlough, is due back at Kurrachee tomorrow, when he will resume charge of the office of Deputy Surgeon-General, Sind District, from Brig.-Surg. Hughes, who thereupon returns to his substantive appointment of Civil Surgeon, Poona. Dr. Hughes will probably resume the Civil Surgeoncy of Poona from Dr. McConaghy, who has been acting for him, about the 15th inst., when it is understood Dr. McConaghy will proceed home on six months' leave.

Surg.-Major W. McConaghy, M.D., I.M.S., Civil Surgeon, Dharwar, has been allowed furlough to Europe for six months.

Surg.-Major P. M. Ellis, Medical Staff, is appointed to the medical charge of Station Hospital, Kamptee, as a temporary measure.

Capt. R. Errington, 1st Bombay Light Inf., who was recently attached to the 8th Bombay Light Inf., took over the charge of the left wing of the latter regiment from Lieut. E. Saulez on Oct. 28.

Capt. R. J. Prior, Military Accounts Dept., has been transferred from Poona to Calcutta. His place will be taken by Capt. Williams.

The undermentioned officer is seconded in his regiment for five years, with effect from Sept. 1, 1891:—21st Bombay Inf. (Marine Batt.)—Lieut. F. G. Beville, wing officer (officiating 3rd class assistant, Political Dept.

Lieut. H. C. Holman, of the 2nd Devonshire Regt., who was prominently brought to notice by Brig.-Gen. Wolseley and Major-General Campbell Stewart for his excellent services with the Wuntho Expedition, has been appointed Unpaid Attaché to the Intelligence Branch at Mandalay.

Lieut. and Adj. F. A. Hoghton, 1st Bombay Inf., has been appointed officiating wing commander, in addition to his own duties as adjutant, vice Capt. R. Errington, who has joined the 8th Bombay Inf. at Ahmednugger for duty.

Lieut. H. L. Gordon, 2nd Bombay Lancers, having been relieved of his temporary appointment as A.D.C. to Major-General Anderson, C.B., commanding Mhow District, has rejoined his regiment and been appointed to officiate as 4th Squadron Commander.

The following candidates were successful at the Civil and Military examination held at Bombay on Nov. 2:—Hindustani, Higher Standard—Lieuts. E. Tennant and E. N. Davies, 3rd Bombay Inf.; Major A. Garstin, 2nd Middlesex Regt.; Major C. S. S. Whitehill, 2nd King's Own Yorkshire L.I. Hindustani, Lower Standard—Lieuts. C. J. Windham and A. Hay, 21st Bombay Inf.; Lieut. J. Talbot, 1st Bombay Lancers; Lieut. J. W. Watling, R.E.; Lance-Corporal Kirkpatrick, 2nd Gloucester Regt.

The Queen has been pleased, by Royal Warrant dated Sept. 26, 1891, to approve of the alteration of the designations of the departmental rank of the officers of the Veterinary Department now serving as follows:—Principal veterinary surgeon, ranking as colonel, to be director-general, with the rank of veterinary-colonel; inspecting veterinary-surgeons, ranking as lieutenant-colonels, to be veterinary lieutenant-colonels; veterinary-surgeons, first class, ranking as majors, to be veterinary-majors; veterinary-surgeons, first class, ranking as captains, to be veterinary-captains; veterinary-surgeons, ranking as lieutenants, to be veterinary-lieutenants.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Nov. 4.

The Provincial Conference.—The Bengal Provincial Conference assembled, on Oct. 29, at Calcutta, at the British Indian Association Rooms. The Rev. A. Paton Begg, principal of the London Missionary Society's College at Bhowanipore, was voted to the chair, on the motion of the Rev. Kalichurn Banerjee, who said they could not find a more genuine sympathiser and devoted friend of the natives in Bengal. The chairman described the object of the Conference as a noble and worthy one, it being the promotion of a good understanding and good feeling between the Government and the governed. The cause before them would be best served in proportion as they exercised patience and forbearance in dealing with intricate problems. Their judgments should be tempered with prudence and their enthusiasm guided by intelligence. Resolutions were carried (1) praying the Government to curtail the powers of control, especially in relation to the Budget and allotment of educational grants, at present invested in the executive officers of Government, and asking that power of revision be vested in the Lieutenant-Governor instead of the Commissioners; also asking that the experiment of allowing selected district boards to elect their own chairman be tried; (2) protesting against the proposal to exempt all Volunteers from income tax, as not only opposed to the principle of volunteering, but open to the further objection of having the appearance of class legislation; (3) declaring that, having regard to the facilities of communication with Assam, Acts XIII. of 1859 and I. of 1882 may with advantage be repealed, and the supply of labour to tea-gardens in Assam may be regulated by the natural law of supply and demand; (4) that the administration of Civil Justice urgently requires amelioration in respect of court-fees and process-fees levied on litigants, the number of judicial officers, the qualifications for Civil Court amins, the pay and prospects of the subordinate ministerial agency, and the encouragement of resort to arbitration.

The Kidderpore Docks.—Another stage in the development of the works at the Kidderpore Docks was on Oct. 23 reached, when the British India Co.'s steamer, the Lindula, was taken into the new graving dock to be cleaned and painted. The Lindula is a vessel of 2,199 tons register, and is 350 feet long; but there was ample room for a much larger vessel, as the working space in the dock is 550 feet long. This, says the Englishman, is the first vessel that has been taken into the Port Commissioners' Dry Dock, and it is satisfactory that a beginning has been made towards putting the works to a practical use. The arrangements for pumping the docks are very satisfactory and complete. In the angle between the Government and Port Commissioners' Docks there are two of Gwynne's centrifugal pumps, which can raise 38,000 gallons of water a minute. The pumps were tried for the first time last week in the presence of a number of distinguished experts from Calcutta, who expressed themselves thoroughly satisfied with the results. We understand that the Indian Marine Steamer Guide will be taken into the Government dry dock to-day to be overhauled. The presence of these two steamers in the docks will give to the locality a commercial aspect which has for a long time been sadly wanting.

Negotiations are pending for the sale of the Great Eastern Hotel, Calcutta, to a London syndicate, with a view to building a superior hotel on the same site.

A new weekly paper has been started in Calcutta for the benefit of the Mahomedan community. It is called the Islam, and is devoted mainly to the interests of the Moslems.

Last year only 963 persons died from cholera in Calcutta, the smallest number of deaths from that disease for the last ten years. Deaths from phthisis have, however, greatly increased in Calcutta. In 1880 there were only 444 deaths, but last year the disease carried off 743. It will be seen that the number has almost doubled.

A Chittagong correspondent telegraphs that there is much need of rain in that remote district of Bengal. The rice harvest on the plains is poor, while the crop in the upper lands is fast withering. Tea lands are also very much parched. The temperature is as high as 91 deg., and the prospect before planters is that the plucking season will be a short one. Owing to the fire at Naraingunge, which destroyed jute worth 30,000*l.*, the commercial outlook at Chittagong this season is not a bright one.

A case of suttee was recently disposed of at the Bankipore Criminal Sessions. A Brahmin lady of a village in Behar on the death of her husband expressed her intention to immolate herself. Several people endeavoured to dissuade her, and urged that the law was against her, and would not allow her to carry out her purpose; but when the funeral pyre was lighted she threw herself into the flames. The police promptly rescued her, but the burns she received were so serious that she died from the effects the next morning. Fourteen persons were charged with abetment of the offence, but all were acquitted.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Nov. 5.

Lady Wenlock and Lady Dufferin's Fund.—Lady Wenlock, says the Pioneer, has set to work in a most practical way to raise funds for the Madras Branch of the National Association for providing medical aid for the women of India. As President of the Branch, she has announced her intention of holding a fancy bazaar at Madras early in January, and all good friends of the Association are invited to give assistance or suggestions. Experience has shown that such bazaars, if on a sufficiently large scale, always prove financially successful, and the Madras one should be no exception to the rule. The Southern Presidency has acquitted itself well hitherto in the matter of support to Lady Dufferin's Fund, but more money is needed in order to extend the sphere of operations. Twenty-five scholarships for the purpose of educating lady-doctors have been founded, and it is believed that the Maharaja of Travancore and other native princes will shortly endow more scholarships.

Appeal on Behalf of Mrs. Pogson.—An appeal is being made on behalf of Mrs. Pogson, wife of the late Government Astronomer of Madras. It is proposed that the money subscribed be expended in erecting a brass table to Mr. Pogson's memory in the Cathedral and for the education of Mrs. Pogson's son of six, most of the money being devoted to the latter object. If the sum of about 6,000 rs. could be obtained, it would be possible for Mrs. Pogson to give her boy a really sound education. The appeal was widely circulated, but only 2,500 rs. has been received. The appeal is now published in the papers, with a view to a wider publicity being given and the case having more effect throughout India.

The Case of Lieutenant King, who is charged with having caused the death of a native toll collector at Ootacamund, was taken up on Oct. 28 by the magistrate of the Nilgiris. The Judge Advocate-General, Colonel Hughes Hallett, watched the case under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief. Mr. Eardley Norton defended the accused. The court was crowded. On Oct. 30 Lieutenant King stated that he did not strike the toll-gate keeper with a stick or hunting crop on the head. "I hit somebody at the toll-gate with my fist; I cannot say if it was the deceased. My intention in hitting him was to defend myself from a blow with a stick which fell on the pillow, narrowly missing my head. This was followed immediately by the appearance of two men, both armed with sticks, who evidently came to renew the assault with better effect. This caused me to jump out of the cart and hit the first man. I then closed with the second and wrested the stick from him. As the second man was running away I made a blow at his left leg with the stick. I am not certain if I hit him. I did so intending to frighten him. I cannot identify either; both ran away. I cannot say if the deceased staggered or fell from the first blow. The bandy was moving when I jumped out." The case was resumed on Nov. 2, when Mr. Norton, having sketched the case for the defence, asked the magistrate whether, even in the event of all the points being cleared, he would commit Lieutenant King to the sessions. The magistrate said unless the defence could prove by witnesses that the assault did not take place he would. Mr. Norton said this was obviously impossible, and he would take committal. The case was concluded on Nov. 4. Mr. Norton addressed the Court at considerable length. He said that if this had been a case of a native against a native it would have been settled at Ooty. The magistrate summed up. He said he was unable to adjudicate upon the case himself owing to the absence of contradictory evidence as to the fact of the deceased receiving a blow from a stick, and commented on the palpably false evidence of the chief witness for the prosecution, and finally committed Lieutenant King for trial at the Madras Sessions on charges of culpable homicide not amounting to murder and grievous hurt.

Rain-making in India.—A further rain-making experiment has been made in Cuddapah by Mr. Wolfe-Murray, the collector, with very successful results. Neither kite nor balloon being at the time feasible, the dynamite was exploded over flat rocks on a ridge about a mile and a-half from Madonopalle, the elevation being 2,400 feet above the sea and 200 feet above the surrounding plain. Ten packages of dynamite, of ten pounds each, were placed forty to sixty yards apart, with fuses timed to explode at one minute intervals. Excepting one, all the fuses went off effectually, with the result that within six hours, with the sun still shining, down the rain fell in a magnificent shower such as has hardly been seen this year. It was unaccompanied by wind, and there was no thunder till after the rain had passed over. The shower lasted half an hour, but before it was nearly over everything was dripping wet. Channels were running and tanks received a small supply. The antecedent and subsequent weather conditions, and also the nature of the rain, prove this was dynamite rain. Outside the area over which it fell there was only the ordinary daily drizzle. The cost of the experiment was within 200 rs. Mr. Lodge, the district forest officer, photographed all the most striking incidents. The area covered by the rain produced is estimated at thirty square miles, over portions of which the quantity of rain is believed to have amounted to fully one inch. Mr. Wolfe-Murray was assisted by Mr. Auld, the dynamite contractor, and Mr. McCudden, Executive Engineer of the Villapuram-Gantakul State Railway.

Serious Grain Riot.—A serious grain riot occurred at Kurnool on Nov. 5 owing to the great enhancement in the price of cholum. Thousands of people broke open grain shops, and men and women looted, it is alleged, about 50,000 measures of cholum and rice. Over a hundred police appeared on the scene, but were powerless; but finally the mob were induced to disperse, and the merchants to lower the price of grain. No serious personal injuries occurred. Lord Wenlock proposed to visit Ganjam on his way to Calcutta, reports from that district being unfavourable. He would probably leave Madras on Nov. 14, and will stay a week in the district. Lady Wenlock proceeds direct to Calcutta on the 27th.

During the week ending Oct. 30 the death-rate in Madras was 79.6 per 1,000 per annum, as against 37.1, the mean of the ten previous years. During the week ending Oct. 16 the death-rate was 82.5.

The Madras Government, under instructions from the Government of India, having sanctioned eight lacs of rupees for making improvements in the Kalingarayen channel work at Erode, Mr. G. E. Mason, executive engineer, has been placed in charge of that work.

Another sensational case is coming off shortly at Ootacamund. A complaint has been lodged against a member of the Singapore Civil Service, lately resident on the Hills. A warrant had been issued for his presence at Ooty. The complaint is under section 509, Indian Penal Code.

The Asian is "very glad to see that the Madras Polo Players have decided on holding a Polo Tournament towards the end of January for a challenge cup, value 500 rs., presented by the Madras Gymkhana Club. In every direction Madras sportsmen have wakened up considerably during the past year or two, and we trust that the sporting spirit shown by the Gymkhana will meet with a worthy response."

The strengthening of the Madras Board of Revenue's Secretariat establishment has been practically decided upon. The office of Examiner of Forest Accounts is to be abolished, and the financial part of the work handed over to the Accountant-General. Such secretariat work as the examiner now does will be performed by a newly appointed secretary, who will also relieve the secretary to the Land Commissioners of a deal of other work.

At the High Court Sessions at Madras on Oct. 28 the Chief Justice sentenced William Biddle, a driver in the Royal Artillery, to two years' rigorous imprisonment for counterfeiting the Queen's coin, and being in possession of implements for coining. In this case also some of the witnesses were absent, and his lordship commented on this fact, remarking that there was apparently something wrong in a system which allowed witnesses to give evidence whenever they chose.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Nov. 7.

The Governor at Kurrachee.—His Excellency the Governor of Bombay arrived at Kurrachee on Wednesday morning, Nov. 4, and met with a cordial reception. Lord Harris spent a very busy day on Thursday, Nov. 5, in visiting the harbour and defences. Starting with a large party from the native jetty, they steamed up the harbour, Mr. Morris, engineer, pointing out the proposed extensions. The Port Trustees entertained his Excellency at luncheon on board the Manora, after which he visited the different ports and witnessed the explosion of two submarine mines, returning to Kurrachee in the evening by rail, the city station being brilliantly illuminated. Large crowds assembled on the roads and at the station, loudly cheering as the Governor passed. His Excellency dined with the Commissioner, and went to the Dublin Fusiliers Ball afterwards. Next morning the Governor rode out to the rest camp, over which he was shown by Major Fitzherbert.

The Progress of Kurrachee.—Replying to his health at the annual dinner of the Kurrachee Chamber of Commerce, Mr. James, Commissioner in Sind, spoke as follows:—"Signs of prosperity in Kurrachee are everywhere apparent. During the past twenty years the population has increased from 56,000 to 104,000, of Sind itself from 2,000,000 to nearly 3,000,000. The land revenue has grown from 33 to 77 lacs. The imports which used to be 1½ crores, are now 6½ crores. The exports have grown from 3½ crores to 12½ crores. Piece goods have risen from ¾ to 2½ crores, metals from 6 lacs to 31 lacs, and sugar, which I mention as one of the few luxuries of the native population, and the consumption of which is an index to their prosperity, from 10 to 59 lacs. The exports of wheat have grown from 6½ lacs to 3 crores, and this year I believe they will be greater even than that. And you have obtained what I am sure is only the commencement of your future direct line to Delhi."

Departure of the Hon. Mr. J. G. Moore.—The correspondent of the Times of India telegraphs from Poona (Nov. 1):—"The departure to Bombay this afternoon, by the 1.45 P.M. passenger train, of the Hon. Mr. J. G. and Mrs. Moore was the occasion of a great demonstration at the railway station, the platform being crowded by a large number of people of all classes, including several ladies. Among those present were the Hon. Mr. Naylor, the Hon. Mr. Nulkar, Lieutenant-General Pottinger, Surgeon-General Webb, Miss Beatson, Brigadier-General and Mrs. Hogg, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., Mr. and Mrs. Reid, Mr. Loch, Mr. Chatfield, Colonel Merriman, Colonel Curties, Colonel Hughes, Colonel Spring, Colonel Goldsmith, Colonel Rawlins, Mr. Drew, Mr. Cappel, Mr. Brown, Mr. LeMesurier, Major and Mrs. Macpherson, Major Dobbs, Mr. Shuttleworth, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Wroughton, Mr. and Mrs. Fry, Miss Merewether, Mr. Dunster-ville, Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Cooke, Dr. Hay, Mr. Plunkett, Mr. Kelkar, Mr. Pallonjee Nusserwanjee, Mr. Deshmukh, Dr. and Mrs. Street, Mr. and Mrs. Howard and Miss Howard, Mr. Hensley, Mr. Duff, Mr. Nowrojee Pudumjee, &c. &c. Mr. and Mrs. Moore were laden with numerous beautiful garlands and bouquets, and were accompanied by their son, Lieutenant Moore, of the Lancashire Fusiliers. As the train steamed out of the station three very hearty cheers were given for our departing Commissioner, Central Division, and his wife. At the Kirkee Railway Station also several native gentlemen assembled to bid Mr. and Mrs. Moore farewell, and garlanded them."

Libelling a Hindoo God.—A meeting of the Maharashtra Hindoos was held in the Thakordwar Temple, Bombay, to consider what steps should be taken to protest against certain libellous handbills distributed among the natives by missionaries. The chair was taken by Mr. Dhondu Shamrao Garud, who in explaining the object of the meeting, said that handbills containing a gross libel of their great Hindoo god Krishna had been circulated by the Bible Tract Society. A great slur was cast on their god Krishna, and it was high time to take steps to nip in the bud such misrepresentation which greatly wounded the religious feelings of the Hindoos. He was quite astounded on reading the contents of the handbills. He advised them to memorialise Government praying that the missionaries should be stopped from interfering in their religious matters and defaming their gods. Mr. Narayan Rowjeebhoy said he was deeply grieved at the conduct of the missionaries who had circulated the handbills. It was a gross outrage on the god Krishna, whom they held in the highest esteem and reverence. They should take steps to prevent the libellers from desecrating their god in such a way. Since the Queen's Proclamation of 1858 protected their religious freedom, no one had a right to interfere with their religion. He was deeply sorry that the handbills were published in spite of, and in defiance of, the Queen's Proclamation of 1858. They should respectfully ask the Government to prevent the missionaries from attacking their religion or their gods any longer. After several gentlemen had expressed their opinion in favour of organising a strong protest against the conduct of the missionaries, it was unanimously resolved to ask the mahajans to convene a monster meeting to take steps in this matter, and to memorialise the Government, praying for redress. The proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

HYDERABAD.

A SECUNDERABAD telegram of Nov. 2 says :—Yesterday morning Sir Asman Jah inspected the new theatre at Secunderabad. He was conducted over the building, both in front and behind the curtain, by Captain Beauclerk, one of the trustees, and expressed himself very pleased with all the arrangements. The Committee of the United Service Club, to whom the theatre belongs, have invited his Highness the Nizam to open the theatre on November 10, and his Highness has graciously expressed his intention of doing so in person. The Nizam will be supported by the Resident, Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick. The ceremony will be a very interesting one, and being the opening of a very useful institution, and probably the last occasion when Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick will appear in public as Resident of Hyderabad, a full house has already been secured for the occasion. The opening piece is the well-known comedy "Dandy Dick," which Major Leach, R.H.A., is putting on the stage, with the help of a distinguished company of lady and gentleman amateurs. The theatre has cost 37,000 rupees, fully fitted and furnished. To meet this sum of money, the Club have had the generous assistance of the Nawab Laikud Dowlah, Bahadur, who has given 15,000 rupees, and lent 22,000 rupees towards the building fund, at a low rate of interest, to be paid off in ten years. The Club has secured the site of the old racquet court, which is quite in the centre of the station and very convenient for the theatre-going public. The theatre will seat three hundred people, and has a stage, modelled on that of the Criterion Theatre in London, which is the best in India. The architect is Major Clarke, R.E., himself a well-known amateur and manager.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

News reaches a frontier paper of an outrage on a European at Loralai, Beloochistan. Mr. Gyford, civilian mechanic of the Quetta Arsenal, who was on duty at Loralai, was walking in the bazaar on the evening of Oct. 29, when he was attacked and cut down by a Ghazi. The man has been apprehended, and Mr. Gyford is reported to be doing well.

In the accident near Nagpore on Nov. 5, of which pretty full details have come by telegraph, the General Traffic Manager of the G.I.P. Railway reports that the drivers of both engines, one European and a native fireman, a guard, and five British soldiers were killed, and thirty-one British soldiers and four natives injured. The damage done to the rolling stock is estimated at 1 lac and 30,000 rs. Both the engines and two tenders were completely destroyed. The carriages were piled one on top of the other, the Commander-in-Chief's saloon standing on end down the bank. Much property was destroyed. It took nine hours to extricate the wounded soldiers, the Commander-in-Chief personally assisting.

THE WARBURTON CASE at Lahore has at last come to an end. Sardar Dyal Sing, proprietor of the native paper which maligned Mr. Warburton, has agreed to make a substantial pecuniary compensation, and the ex-editor, a Bengali, has furnished a written apology expressing his regret for having made the imputations complained of. Under these circumstances the cases in the law courts have been withdrawn.

AT THE general meeting of the members of the United Service Club, Simla, on Oct. 31, it was resolved to expend 50,000 rs. in reconstructing the only block of the old buildings which has hitherto been left untouched. The "forward" policy adopted two years ago in carrying out great improvement or rather in building an entirely new clubhouse and roomy residential quarters, has proved so completely successful that further and final outlay is more than justified.

THE FINAL report on the indigo crop of 1891 of the North-West Provinces states that the total area, recorded by Patwaris under indigo is 201,000 acres against 254,000 last year, and the area returned by the Canal Department as receiving irrigation is 185,000 against 228,000 in the preceding year. The zemindars estimate the crop area at 17 per cent. less than last year. The plants suffered from locusts and drought in June and July, and from excessive rain in August. The condition of the crop is reckoned as follows (100 representing full average):—Gangetic Doab, 45 per cent.; Benares and Gorakpore Divisions, 55 per cent.; and Rohilkhand and Oude, 50 per cent. The outturn of dye is expected to be 5 per cent. less than last year.

THE RAMPORE GAOL OUTBREAK.

The Pioneer says:—Intimation has reached us of a recent disturbance which took place in the Rampore gaol. If it had not been promptly dealt with, it might have led to further trouble. It appears that some little time ago an order was issued under which the prisoners were to be clad in gaol clothing, instead of being allowed to wear their ordinary clothes. They seem to have made this the pretext for mutinous conduct, which came to a head on Sunday, Oct. 25. On that day Major Vincent, the Vice-President of the Council, had occasion to visit the gaol on a matter connected with the disposal of criminal lunatics. On his arrival he was informed that three particular prisoners had been giving trouble, and had a complaint to make about the new order. The men were sent for, but only two appeared. They were asked where the third man was, but instead of answering they suddenly rushed away into the gaol factory. Major Vincent had two orderlies with him, and these were sent to recall the men. The orderlies had no sooner entered the factory than they were set upon by thirty of the prisoners armed with bamboo poles and carpet knives. They were knocked down and severely wounded before they had a chance of defending themselves. Major Vincent went to their rescue and was himself attacked. He managed, however, to get the two men away, and with the assistance of the guard outside closed the gates of the gaol, thus preventing the escape of the prisoners. He then procured the assistance of some of the State troops, but before these arrived the whole place was in a turmoil. The prisoners had broken off their fetters and some of them had armed themselves with the swords and revolvers of the orderlies. They were called upon to surrender and retire quietly to their quarters, but they obstinately refused to do so. They were eventually fired upon, and they then fled to their barracks, leaving one of their number dead on the ground. The troops then occupied the gaol, and an investigation was held by all the members of the Council. It was clearly established that the rising had been deliberately planned and with murderous intent. This being the case five of the ringleaders were put upon their trial, condemned to death, and forthwith executed. This outbreak, as we have said, was deliberately planned, and there is not the slightest doubt that the object in view was to compass the death of Major Vincent. The clothing question was the flimsiest pretext for the rising; the fact that the prisoners attacked the two orderlies, well armed though they were, and then turned their attention to the British officer the moment he appeared is a proof that it was not merely a gaol mutiny of the ordinary type. The orderlies were not warders and were in no way connected with the prison; they could not, therefore, have rendered themselves obnoxious to the convicts. They were recognised as the only escort which Major Vincent had with him, and the intention unquestionably was to kill them outright. As it was, they were very severely wounded, and nothing but the courageous conduct of their officer saved their lives. The punishment afterwards inflicted upon the leaders of the outbreak was of the kind which was absolutely necessary if a stop was to be put to murderous attempts of this kind. It has not been thought necessary to do more than strengthen Major Vincent's hands indirectly, by quietly placing within call a number of troops sufficient to overawe the malcontents in Rampore. Four hundred men of the Hampshire Regiment and a similar number of the 11th Native Infantry have marched from Bareilly to a point in British territory within three miles of the town of Rampore. The route taken is by the Bareilly-Moradabad road which runs for twenty miles right through the southern portion of the State, so that the people will see for themselves what is being done to maintain order. The troops will remain in camp, within our own border, during the cold weather, a precautionary measure which is more than justified by what has just occurred. Major Vincent meanwhile remains in Rampore, where his presence will serve to reassure all those who desire to see an end put to the intrigues which began with the assassination of Azim-ud-din and are now being continued in the hope of terrorising the whole State.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

ACCORDING to a communication published in the official Gazette of the province of Akmolinsk, and reprinted in a St. Petersburg newspaper, His Majesty the Czar, in accordance with a request made last year by the Khan of Khiva, has nominated Asfendiar Turia (Isfundiya Turia, according to English transliteration), the Khan's fourth son, as Heir-Apparent. On Sept. 9 (new style) Prince Isfundiya, with an escort of 100 men, arrived at Taskend with a letter from his father to Baron Vrevsky, the Governor-General. In this letter his Highness the Khan expressed his gratitude to the Czar for acceding to his request. Two days afterwards the Heir-Apparent was received in durbar by the Governor-General, and on Sept. 13 he was entertained at dinner by Baron Vrevsky. The Khivan Prince is described as a young man of twenty. He was much interested in the Russian troops, and expressed a desire to learn to read and write in Russian. The last Khan of Khiva who bore the name of Isfendiya died about the middle of the seventeenth century. He was the brother of Abul Ghazi Khan, a celebrated historian.

Prince Galitsin or Golytzine, whose name has occurred frequently in the telegrams in connection with the Pamir question, holds no political appointment under the Russian Government. He is a wealthy Russian noble, who is a keen sportsman and traveller. Last spring he started for a tour in Central Asia, armed with a passport from Sir Robert Morier, which enabled him to enter Cashmere. After spending some time in Marghilan, on the Russian frontier, he crossed the Pamir before the passes were stopped by snow, and descended on Cashmere. It was purely an accidental occurrence that he was on the Pamir at the same time as the Russian exploring expedition which warned off Captain Younghusband. The Prince travels with only one personal servant, an Italian.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times claims to have discovered, remarks the Pioneer, that General Kuropatkin has been "most active" during the past summer, particularly in the matter of constructing military and strategical roads leading towards Herat, and in founding a new military outpost on the Kushk. In India we have known for some time past that the Governor-General of the Trans-Caspian Province has been busy forming a new cantonment at Sheikh Junid in the Upper Kushk Valley, as the most convenient point d'appui against Herat. Sheikh Junid is ten miles to the north of the boundary pillar nearest to Herat, the line of demarcation trending southward so as to take in a triangular patch of country, about which a good deal was heard at the time of the Boundary Commission. From the apex of this triangle to Herat is, in a bee line, just fifty-five miles. Making liberal allowances for the winding of the road, it may be taken that Sheikh Junid itself is eighty miles only from the northern fortress which our officers put in a state of defence. The name which the Times' correspondent states has been given to the new outpost is "Klooch," which means "Key," a significant enough term in its way. That Sheikh Junid and Klooch are one and the same place is made apparent by his description of the spot where the new roads meet. In the Kushk Valley, he says, the road starts from Tash Kepri and runs through Kala-i-Maur and Chaman-i-Bed for ninety-seven versts, where it forms a junction with another road which has been constructed from Pul-i-Khatun on the Hari Rud through Kangruali, Ak Robat and Islim Chashma, a distance of 154 versts. It is at the junction that Kloooh stands, and the map shows that from the distances given it must be in the immediate neighbourhood of the ziarat of Sheikh Junid.

The correspondent, however, makes one mistake in speaking of "the frontier line on the Kushk at Tash Kepri:" he must mean the old boundary, for Russian territory now stretches far to the south of Tash Kepri. Again he states that one section of the Pul-i-Khatun road, that between Ak Robat and Islim, appears to overstep the frontier and to run for some little distance on Afghan territory. This would undoubtedly be the case if the existing Turkoman track between those two villages has been followed by General Kuropatkin, but the latter could skirt the boundary pillars to the north without losing anything in the way of distance and the country is so flat that he would encounter no difficulty in making this part of the road. It would, perhaps, be just as well if the local Afghan officials were to see if the Ameer's territory has been intruded upon, and to report forthwith to the British Consular Agency at Mashad. It would seem to be such an objectless intrusion that we doubt if an officer of Kuropatkin's astuteness would have made it. When it comes to a move forward, he will not, of course, pay the least respect to the boundary pillars; but in that case Russia will have committed herself to the risk of war with England and Afghanistan. If we mistake not, Sheikh Junid or Kloooh will some day become a name as familiar to English ears as Penjeh was in 1885.

It appears that some forgers of Indian Government currency notes have taken refuge in Cabul, where they are plying their trade with great success. During the past few months a number of forged notes of small value have been sent into British territory from Afghanistan to people who have dealings in Cabul, some of them having been detected at Lahore. A few weeks ago a five-rupee note was found in the possession of a native student at Lahore, who stated that he had received it from his father, who was in Cabul. The matter has, the Lahore paper believes, been represented to the Local Government. It is hoped that his highness the Ameer will take steps to discover the miscreants. As the punishment for forgery in Cabul is probably of a very exemplary kind, we should not object if he were allowed to deal with them after detection.

It is rumoured that there has been a disturbance at the Gilgit frontier, and that the Nagarwals are giving trouble, writes the frontier paper. The Governor of Cashmere has been sent to Bandapora to hurry up the transport of provisions, &c., to Gilgit. If the Nagarwals have chosen the present moment to get, as the Cashmeri puts it, the "itch in their heads," they could not have done better. With a strong and mobile garrison now at Gilgit, an opportunity for placing Hunza and Nagar affairs on a sound and permanent footing will be welcome, in view of recent occurrences on the "roof of the world," and Gromtchevsky's buccaneering expedition towards Kafiristan and Chitral. By agreement with the ruler of the latter State, we might also permanently dispose of the future of the Yasin and Mastuj districts, and establish closer relations with the Shah of Chitral and extend our influence to Kafiristan. Finally, we think that the time is ripe for—presuming that no rapid development of complications arising from the Pamirs incident engrosses attention—recognising the status of Umra Khan of Jhandol as ruler of Bajaur, of Mian Gul, as ruler of Swat, and demanding from each, for a "consideration" if necessary, the safe conduct of British subjects in their respective territories. Then it could only need the removal of all restrictions upon the explorations of officers across the frontier to enable us to keep in touch of all events occurring in the debatable land along the Upper Oxus, and make the range of our knowledge and influence coterminous, as it ought to be, with the sphere of our interests.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE Daily Chronicle's special correspondent at Shanghai telegraphed on Nov. 17:—The situation as explained to me in almost identical terms by the representatives of the European Powers here is as follows:—The foreign Ministers at Peking have forwarded to the Chinese Foreign Board, through the usual channel and in the customary manner, an Identical Note, which, though temperately worded, may be described as an ultimatum. In it the Peking Government is reminded that the persons and property of Europeans have been placed in jeopardy, and that actual outrages have been committed. Reparation is demanded for the past and guarantees for the future. Pending the reply of the Foreign Board to this communication, the Powers are arranging at home what measures shall be taken for the protection of their subjects in China should the Chinese Government be unable or unwilling to enforce its authority and maintain peace and order. Up to the present no explicit reply to the ultimatum has been received. China has simply offered certain money indemnities, some of which have been actually paid by special arrangement, and bare assurances of her desire for peace and of her ability to maintain it at the treaty ports and elsewhere. The Powers are now watching carefully the course of events. So far there has been no intention on their part to make a naval demonstration against China. The foreign warships now in these waters have been used and distributed entirely for defensive purposes, and it is hoped that they will not be required for any other work. Every port accessible to ships of war is at this moment protected and watched by at least one armed vessel. The above constitutes the official explanation of the situation. The unofficial version is very different, and not nearly so reassuring.

All is quiet in the North at the present moment, says the China Mail of Oct. 21, and the authorities are displaying considerable zeal in hunting down members of the Kolo-hui secret society. The Nankin Viceroy is said to have advised the Imperial Government not to open Hunan. Native boats are closely watched in the Yangtze for smuggled arms.

The Viceroy Li is reported to have remarked to a recent visitor that he was very much alarmed by the attitude of the people in Hunan, where the mob have recently killed a prefect, and the Government had very great difficulty in dealing with the province. Asked as to the political situation, the Viceroy said that the relations between China and foreign Powers were not so strained as the North-China Daily News represented them to be. To another visitor the Viceroy dilated on the great disappointment the Government felt at the attitude of Germany. China had been most friendly to that Power and its Minister, no German life or property had been injured in the recent riots, and yet Mr. von Brandt has most ungratefully joined England, France, and the United States in making unpleasant demands.

The Legislative Council reassembled in the second week of October. The Governor read a message in which he reviewed the position of the Colony. The revenue for the current year was likely to exceed the estimated sum. The balance over ordinary expenditure would probably be 250,000 dols. The expenditure on public works would likely come to 500,000 dols., thus showing a deficit of 250,000 dols., which, however, was covered by the balance in hand at the beginning of the year. An annual expenditure of 500,000 dols. for the next five years on public works was contemplated. His Excellency thought the amount might be made up by land premia and the additional revenue from remunerative works, but said a loan might be necessary. He announced the commencement of a new gaol and the introduction of several legislative measures, including a bill to improve the emigration laws. The recent gambling ordinances had, he said, greatly checked gambling in the Colony. With regard to the gambling that goes on in the neighbouring Chinese towns, he had been in communication with the Chinese authorities, who promised assistance. His Excellency said the interest in the Volunteer movement had flagged and steps would be taken to increase the interest and form a corps to work the Maxim guns now delivered. Bills dealing with prepared and raw opium were introduced and their consideration in committee has advanced. Mr. Whitehead had proposed that the Colony should abolish the opium farm and put a duty on raw opium imported for local consumption.

Yungching Bay, with Port Lazareff and the Korean Treaty port of Wönsan, has been quite attractive of late, apparently, to the foreign naval squadron, says the Shanghai Mercury; the French flagship and the Villars were staying there, before they came back to China, and also the English Admiral, who, it is to be hoped, may soon put in an appearance once more in Chinese waters, under present circumstances. Yungching Bay in Korea, with Port Lazareff, is near enough to the Russian possessions to be easily converted into a second Vladivostock, with this difference, that it is not closed by ice in winter. Hence the tender attention of naval commanders to this interesting and important strategical position.

The Cotton Crop.—The second general memorandum on the cotton crop of 1891 runs:—"The second reports on the cotton crops of the year confirm the estimates already published of a serious deficiency in the area sown, owing to the unusually late arrival of the monsoon rains, which were not generally established till the end of July, by which time the season for sowing the early crop was almost over. Further injury has since been caused in the Central and Northern Provinces by excessive rain in August and September, in the southern Presidencies by scanty and untimely falls, and in the west by locusts. The area in the important cotton-producing province of Bombay, where from 5 to 5½ million acres are ordinarily cultivated, with the cotton area sown to date, does not, so far as present information goes, much exceed four million acres, of which 1,179,000 acres are under the early, and 2,888,000 under the late varieties. There has, however, been no material decrease in Berar, the deficiency first reported having apparently been made up by later sowings. The area in this province, which stands next in importance to Bombay as a producer of the staple, reported about 2,250,000 acres. In the Central Provinces, the area devoted to cotton ranges from half a million to 700,000 acres. Sowings were retarded by the late arrival of the rains, and the plants have been much damaged by excessive moisture and floods during August and September, when they require to be weeded. The crop is not likely to be more than 60 per cent. of an average one. Similar causes have affected the area in the North-Western Provinces and Oude, where it is estimated at 35 per cent. less than the normal (about 1,700,000 acres). In the Punjab the further sowings anticipated have not taken place, and the area remains at 600,000 acres, or some 30 per cent. below that of the previous year. In Madras the sowings of both early and late crops are under 400,000 acres, or little more than half the normal area. Taking the six reporting provinces together, the total area is approximately 9,000,000 acres, against an average of 12,000,000. The condition of the early crop in Bombay is, generally speaking, fair, but in parts of Khandeish the crop has suffered from an excess of rain, which has also damaged the late crop in Guzerat. In the Karnatic the late crop is very backward for want of sufficient moisture, and only 27 per cent. of the average area has been sown. In Sind the crop has suffered from locusts and unfavourable inundations by the Indus. In Berar the condition is, on the whole, satisfactory, but the Madras crop, though somewhat improved by the recent rain, is likely to be very poor. In the Central Provinces and the North-Western Provinces the outturn will fall from 60 to 40 per cent. below the average, while another poor harvest is expected in the Punjab, where locusts have seriously injured the plants."

Proposed Memorial to Lieutenant W. R. P. Hamilton, V.C.—The Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, Prince Victor of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, the Duke of Wellington, the Earls of Zetland, Wemyss and March, Mayo, Airlie and Dundonald, Viscount Cranbrook, and Lord Beresford are at the head of the first list of patrons of a movement to perpetuate the memory of Lieutenant Walter R. Pollock Hamilton, V.C., and those who fell with him at Cabul in 1879. The committee, the chief workers on which are the Duke of Abercorn, the Marquess of Waterford, the Marquess of Ormonde, the Earl of Listowel, Viscount Wolsley, and Lord Wantage, are now appealing for funds to erect a suitable national memorial of Lieutenant Hamilton's brilliant career and the valour displayed by his comrades. Many will remember the striking group by Mr. C. B. Birch, A.R.A., exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1880, now lent to the museum of Science and Art, Dublin, representing the gallant young officer, with his sword in the right hand and his revolver in the left, striding over the body of a prostrate Afghan. This is considered by the committee to be such a fine work of art, a remarkable likeness and excellent rendering of the tragic murder of the English Embassy at Cabul, that it has been decided to commission the sculptor to carry out the work in bronze and have it erected in Dublin, the cost being estimated at 2,000 guineas. The honorary secretaries for the United Kingdom are Captain Gordon Carter, 1st Life Guards, Hyde Park Barracks, S.W., and Surgeon Webb, M.D., Bengal Army, 2 Proby Square, Blackrock, county Dublin; the secretaries for India being Major F. D. Battye and Captain M. C. Cooke Collis, Corps of Queen's Own Guides.

The Shipment of Unstamped Cotton Piece-goods for China.—The following correspondence, referring to the practice of exporting unstamped cotton piece-goods to China, has been issued by the Secretary of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce:—

Manchester Chamber of Commerce, Nov. 4, 1891.

MY LORD,—The Shanghai Chamber of Commerce has recently addressed a letter to this Chamber inviting it to assist in putting a stop to the custom, which has existed for some time past, but which has of late greatly increased, of importing unstamped English piece-goods for the purpose of locally marking them with well-known chops, and of thereby passing them for what they are not. This Chamber propose, through the press and otherwise, to give as much publicity to the subject as possible, so that those who have been lending themselves innocently to the practice of fraud by accepting orders for and shipping unstamped piece-goods to China may be made aware of what is going on, and refuse to be made parties to such proceedings in future. I am desired by my colleagues, the directors of this Chamber, respectfully to ask the assistance of her Majesty's Government in the matter, and to submit that if your lordship would be so good as to issue instructions to her Majesty's representative in China to make urgent representations to the Chinese authorities respecting the injury that will inevitably be done to legitimate trade if the practices I have indicated continue, the authorities might be induced systematically to put in force stringent measures for bringing offenders to punishment.—I have, &c.

(Signed) HENRY LEE, President,
 The Most Noble the Marquess of Salisbury, K.G., Foreign Office, London.

Foreign Office, Nov. 12.

SIR,—I am directed by the Marquess of Salisbury to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 4th inst. calling attention to the practice of importing unstamped English piece-goods into China and marking them with well-known chops, whereby they are passed off for what they are not. I am to inform you in reply that her Majesty's Minister in China and her Majesty's Consuls at the treaty ports will be requested to bring the matter to the notice of the Chinese authorities.—I am, &c.,

(Signed) T. H. SANDERSON.

The Secretary, Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

Cocaine.—It will perhaps be remembered, says the Englishman, that last year a suggestion was made by the authorities at home that an attempt should be made to manufacture hydrochlorate of cocaine at the cinchona factories in this country, on the score that the locally produced drug would be less expensive than the imported article. Experiments were sanctioned for Bengal, but in Madras the authorities determined not to undertake any as the demand for the drug was very small. We now learn from a recent report that Erythroxylon coca, the plant which yields the drug, has been cultivated for many years in several parts of the Madras Presidency. It grows like a weed, and the yield of cocaine from the leaves is said to be fully equal to that obtained from the American shrub. Should there be therefore at any time a larger demand for this alkaloid, it is said that in Southern India, at any rate, there would be no difficulty in obtaining a very large amount of the leaves. The Government botanist, who reports on the matter, is, however, doubtful whether, with the prices now ruling in the market, it would pay the planter to cultivate the plant in any large quantities.

The Census.—Mr. Baines, Census Commissioner, has, the Pioneer understands, divided his returns into two sections: one the comparatively simple (I. to XV. in the published samples), the other dealing with caste and occupation (XVI., XVII., and XVIII.). The former were prescribed for early compilation: the latter by the end of the year. All the simple returns, except those from Bengal, have practically been compiled. The Lower Provinces are behindhand by reason of bad establishments in districts and of holiday-making in connection with the Pujahs, which stopped all work for nearly a month. Bombay, the Punjab, the Central Provinces, Rajpootana, Ajmere, Mysore, Cashmere, Travancore, Cochin, are all either complete or only want a few returns. Madras and Assam are promised by Nov. 1. Burma and the North-West Provinces are a little behindhand; and so are Hyderabad and the Berars. In the Census returns the various languages of India are being dealt with on a system prescribed by Mr. Baines, aided by Mr. C. J. Lyall, Home Secretary, as regards all Aryan and Thibet-Burman tongues. The location of the dialects is a very hard task, but the Census Commissioner hopes to have most of the subject ship-shape by next month. In all probability he will publish a series of tables by the middle of December, if not earlier, which will give all the returned entries of language. This, in a measure, however, depends upon the returns from Bengal and Behar.

LONDON: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1891.

THE POWERS AT PEKIN.

It is to be expected that among the questions as to which there will be a diplomatic concurrence under the Franco-Russian entente will be included that of their policy in the Far East. There the respective interests of the two nations find no natural antagonism. Russia covets no territories to possess or control which France offers any pretensions, while on her side France occupies a land remote from the sphere of Muscovite ambition, and yet so situated as to give her certain facilities for using her influence to the detriment of Great Britain and China. It did not need PRINCE HENRI D'ORLÉANS or M. BONVALOT to suggest that, in China, French and Russian diplomacy should work together; and it would not have been surprising to learn that the two Powers were intriguing to make the most of the embarrassing conditions arising from the late outbreaks. If they have not dissociated themselves from the other Powers in the diplomatic action which has been necessitated by the riots, it must be attributed to the fact that for the moment they did not see their way to getting any immediate advantage out of such action. French subjects and French missions have suffered as much, if not more, than those of Great Britain or Germany, and the time is hardly propitious for endeavouring to discriminate in the minds of the Chinese between one set of "foreign devils" and another. We may therefore readily believe the "prominent official attached to the Russian Embassy in London"—(the most "prominent," by the way, is the magnificent person who occupies the lodge at the entrance)—who is said to have been interviewed by a Dalziel reporter, when he repudiates reports that any intrigues at Pekin on Russia's part had thwarted the policy which Great Britain has instructed its Minister in China to follow." In fact he ridicules the reports which have been telegraphed by the enterprising correspondent of the Daily Chronicle and which we reproduced in last week's Homeward Mail. We may accept these declarations—if they were ever made—for what they are worth. We can however give them some credit because there appear to be no reasons why Russia should just now act otherwise. But that the amiable co-operation of the Powers at Pekin will last very long is too much to be hoped for, and we shall not be surprised by the development of combined French and Russian intrigues against us in that quarter. We trust that before long Great Britain will have an efficient representative in China to watch them.

THE statement made in the morning papers of Nov. 13 that MR. STUART WORTLEY was to succeed SIR JOHN GORST at the India Office turned out to be unfounded. The HON. G. N. CURZON has been gazetted to the post and has entered on its duties. Without invidious reflections on any other competitor it may be said that the appointment of MR. CURZON has been received with universal assent as a peculiarly appropriate one. Talented, cultured, eloquent, industrious, spirited, an observant and studious traveller, and a politician who, though young, has made a mark, the Under-Secretary of State happens also to possess the qualification of knowing a great deal about some of the most serious questions in relation to our Indian Empire which will in the near future engage the attention of the Government. He has devoted himself to the study of Central Asian politics, and takes to the India Office something more than a bright intelligence and a capacity for work. LORD SALISBURY is to be congratulated on the rare good-luck of having made two successively excellent appointments to this important post. The ill-natured remarks of the Daily News are rather amusing. We can well conceive the party envy which inspires the journalist who has to reflect that MR. CURZON's last Gladstonian predecessor was SIR JOHN KAY SHUTTLEWORTH.

THE lately published Blue Book on the Orakzai and Black Mountain Expeditions does not contain a complete account of our dealings with tribes on the Miranzai and Hazara frontier. The story in each case stops short with the determination to inflict punishment on the offenders. For an account of the fighting one must turn to the despatches of the generals in command. The Blue Book, however, makes public for the first time at least one important document. In a letter dated March 12, 1891, the SECRETARY OF STATE expresses dissatisfaction with the result of the expedition against the Black Mountain tribes in October 1890. "I cannot but regret," LORD CROSS writes, "that if it was considered necessary in October to make any demonstration at all along the frontier, the force employed was not made sufficient to suppress all opposition." This refers to the march of a small column of 1,200 bayonets, and a mountain battery under BRIGADIER-GENERAL SIR JOHN MCQUEEN, K.C.B. SIR JOHN MCQUEEN's orders were given in the following telegram from the Quartermaster-General, dated Oct. 10, 1890:—"Should the tribes oppose the promenade this autumn you should not push forward, but . . . reserve their punishment for an expedition in the spring." The tribes did oppose the promenade, and the general returned, according to instructions. In censuring the authorities responsible for this miscarriage, LORD CROSS appears to have acted on very sound advice; and it may be hoped that in future such military promenades will be avoided. The Punjab Government gives a curious explanation of the attitude taken up by the tribesmen. Among the causes assigned by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab for the opposition to SIR JOHN MCQUEEN's march, was "the premature announcement of the march in the Pioneer," which, it seems, "aroused the temper and suspicion of the clans." Our Allahabad contemporary may be congratulated on the efficiency of its Intelligence Department, but the Punjab Secretariat must be leaky somewhere.

THE writer on military affairs in the Globe remarks:—

One does not wish to speak in any but sympathetic terms of the legitimate aspirations of the Indian Staff Corps, but no friend of discipline can fail to regret the manner in which the grievances of that body are being brought to the front. The last of the unsigned and undated circulars issued on its behalf begins as follows:—"We understand that H.E., the Commander-in-Chief in India, has recently caused to be issued a circular memorandum to the effect that the measures by which the officers of the Indian Staff Corps are now seeking to obtain fairer rates of promotion are 'opposed to military tradition.' That is an expression that sounds rather well, and means nothing. The present occasion is not one for sentimental catch-phrases." The majority of officers, and indeed of intelligent men generally, will agree with Sir Frederick Roberts, and will further be of opinion that the case of the discontented officers will not be improved by the use of such extremely unbecoming and disrespectful language towards their Commander-in-Chief. The Staff Corps has been run after because of its liberal terms, and this is the result. It has been frequently observed that if, owing to some temporary cause, any branch of the Service obtains a passing advantage, there is immediately an outcry on the part of others for equality, instead of patiently enduring these fluctuations. The fact is that the whole edifice of the Staff Corps will soon have to be swept away, and the system of Indian Army promotion to be reconstructed, and then the memorialists will have their opportunity.

If we cannot agree with all these observations, it is as well that we should reproduce them for the information of our Staff Corps readers, and add that in our opinion the terms of the circular alluded to were in the interests of the Staff Corps movement unfortunate—to say the least. The wisest thing for these gentlemen to do is to leave such action as the Commander-in-Chief may think it right to take, to the criticism of independent journals, and from first to last to abstain from any language which may have the semblance of disrespect to their distinguished head. If it be perfectly true that military officers have the right to appeal to Parliament, it does not follow that it is expedient to do so, and in the present case those who have the interests of the service best at heart have distinctly advised them not to resort to that appeal. We have however recently said enough on this point, and have only further to remark that this paragraph in the Globe should warn the leaders of the movement how easily the favourable tone of the English journals in regard to the Staff Corps claims might be reversed by inconsiderate or ill-judged advocacy of a case which requires to be handled with delicacy and tact.

THE Times of India by this mail contains the following remarkable announcement:—

It is reported from home that the question of promotion in the Indian Staff Corps is to seriously engage the attention of the House on or about Nov. 15 next. Questions will then be asked by Mr. E. T. Gourley, M.P. for Sunderland, &c.

No doubt this was sent to our Bombay contemporary by some Staff Corps officer of more zeal than knowledge, and inserted by an oversight, as it is not credible that the intelligent editors of one of the best of Anglo-Indian journals can have been ignorant of the fact that Parliament would not meet in November.

THE Pioneer says:—

The project for a railway from Mandalay to the Kunlon Ferry on the Upper Salween does not seem to have advanced beyond the tentative stage in England. A number of the Chambers of Commerce are said to have pronounced in favour of it, as, indeed, was only to be expected, but none of them seem to have come to any definite conclusion as to ways and means. At a meeting at Liverpool on Oct. 1 it was reported that Mr. J. O. Hay had laid further information regarding the scheme before the East India and China trade section of the Chamber, and it was resolved to send all the papers to the local members of Parliament. These are to be requested to use their influence with Government in order to bring about the construction of the line. The promoters would do well to obtain exact surveys and estimates as to cost before trying to bring Parliamentary pressure to bear upon the Government of India. At the present time fifty lacs is the annual allotment for railways in Upper Burma, and this sum is being spent on internal lines, the necessity for ensuring rapid communication with Mogaung, and for opening up the country generally between the Irrawaddy and the Chindwin, having been strongly insisted upon both by the civil and military authorities. It would undoubtedly be most desirable to have a railway built through the Shan States, in order to tap Yunnan and the adjacent provinces of Western China; but as this is a purely commercial project, it should be taken up by private capitalists at home. The Government in this country will not have funds available for such a railway for many years to come.

It would be well if the Chambers of Commerce which are being pressed to throw in their influence on behalf of a particular project, would take note of the above remarks.

THE NEW UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

THE QUEEN has been pleased to approve the appointment of the HON. GEORGE NATHANIEL CURZON, M.P., to be Under-Secretary of State for India, in the room of the RIGHT HON. SIR JOHN GORST, Q.C., M.P.

The new Under-Secretary is the eldest son of Lord Scarsdale, rector of Kedleston, Derby, and is in his thirty-third year. He was educated at Eton and Balliol College, Oxford. At Eton he was captain of the Oppidans, and was reputed to be by far the best speaker in the School Debating Society. He went to Oxford with a considerable reputation, which he sustained by taking a First in Classical Moderations and winning the Stanhope Historical Prize. He was elected to a Fellowship of All Souls. In 1885 Mr. Curzon was assistant private secretary to the Marquess of Salisbury. In that year he contested Southern Derbyshire unsuccessfully, but at the ensuing election, in 1886, was returned for his present constituency, the Southport Division of Lancashire. The hon. gentleman has made some effective speeches in the House, and is well known as a traveller in Western and Central Asia, his most recent journey being a second visit to Persia, in reference to which country he is regarded as an authority. He published in 1889, in a volume bearing the title "Russia in Central Asia," his experiences of travel along the new Transcaspian Railway, and his views on the Anglo-Russian Question in regard to that part of the world.

The Times says:—It will be generally agreed that no better choice could have been made for the vacant post. Mr. Curzon's career at Oxford showed that he possessed high natural abilities, and what is perhaps more rare in the eldest son of a peer, the steady industry which is required to turn the gifts of nature to account. Since he quitted the University, Mr. Curzon has applied himself to a serious and independent study of political questions. He has travelled in Central Asia and in Persia, and in the accounts which he has published of his visits to parts of the world seldom trodden by Englishmen, he has proved that he knows how to observe, and how to interest others in the results of his observations. The circumstance that Mr. Curzon is personally acquainted with regions the inhabitants of which have occasionally played a great part in the affairs of India in the past, and may again be destined to affect her history in the future, qualifies him in a special manner for the post to which he has been named, while his indefatigable industry is a guarantee that the business of his department will not suffer in his hands. Mr. Curzon obtained some insight into political affairs before he entered Parliament, having served as one of Lord Salisbury's private secretaries in 1885. His defeat for the Southern Division of his native county of Derbyshire at the general election in that year was followed by his return for the Southport Division of South-West Lancashire in 1886. In the House of Commons Mr. Curzon has shown himself possessed of one endowment which is not always without danger to youthful officials in subordinate posts. He has repeatedly displayed no common gift of eloquent and incisive speech, and the gift may well prove dangerous to a functionary whose principal business it often is to baffle over-curious inquiries into the secrets of his chief. The risk is not diminished where the subordinate happens not to be afflicted with any undue distrust of his own powers, and it is not generally believed that morbid self-diffidence can be fairly ascribed to the new Under-Secretary. The official virtues of docility and discretion are, however, speedily acquired by young men of sense, and the latest recruit to the administrative ranks will doubtless soon learn to resist the allurements of oratory, and to cultivate the arts of colourless exposition and oracular reply. Mr. Curzon's health, unfortunately, has not always hitherto made it prudent for him to undergo the rigours of an English spring. It is to be hoped that his acceptance of an office which involves constant attendance at Westminster throughout the session may be taken as a sign that he is now strong enough to live and to work in England in the worst months of the year. Mr. Curzon has earned his promotion. We trust that his present post may prove the first step in a prosperous official career.

The Daily News is less complimentary. It writes:—Mr. George Curzon has got his chance at last. That extremely ambitious and self-confident person has been nominated by his friends for many offices during the last four or five years. At last his claims have been recognised by the Prime Minister, and he succeeds Sir John Gorst as Under-Secretary of State for India. Under-Secretaries whose chiefs are in the Lords occupy, according to the best character in Lord Beaconsfield's "Endymion," one of the most enviable situations under heaven. Waldershare was so much impressed with this fact that he filled a picture gallery with portraits of Under-Secretaries whose chiefs had been in the Lords. It is to be hoped that he still lives and will be able to include Mr. Curzon in his collection of curios. Whether Mr. Curzon has travelled in Central Asia and written a book about India, or travelled in India and written a book about Central Asia, is what we are at this moment unable to recollect. But that he is a great author we have no doubt whatever. He is also a great speaker, and took upon himself last session to rebuke in very lofty and scathing language the youthful rashness of Sir John Gorst. His special object on that occasion was, if we remember rightly, to defend the practice of making arrests in durbar which was then denounced by Sir Richard Temple, and has since been authoritatively condemned by the Secretary of State. But doubtless Lord Cross, to say nothing of the Indian Council, will soon be put in his proper place by the statesmanlike sagacity of Mr. Curzon. Seldom has a Government the chance of enlisting such brilliant talents as Mr. Curzon possesses, or seems to possess. Still more rarely does it avail itself of the privilege.

The St. James's Gazette says:—Sir John Gorst's successor in the Under-Secretaryship for India is generally acknowledged to be the most brilliant and "rising" of the younger members of the House of Commons. Mr. Curzon is only thirty-two; but for more than three years he has been persistently "named" for vacant minor offices in the Administration. His promotion to office, indeed, was sooner or later inevitable; and we are glad that it has come sooner rather than later, so that to his many gifts and accomplishments may be added that sense of responsibility which the active work of administration gives. Mr. Curzon is the right man to send to the India Office at a time when the Central Asian question seems to be growing acute; for on that question he is an expert, and knows more about it, from personal observation and inquiry on the spot, than all but a small number of Anglo-Indian officers. And Mr. Curzon is not by any means—as some of the Radicals affect to think—merely a specimen of the fluent, superficially brilliant, young aristocrat. Not at all. There is not in the House a middle-aged Radical from the manufacturing towns who has a shrewder eye for details or can do his work with a more persevering and unflinching industry.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, November 3.

THE Directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting held on Oct. 29 again reduced the rate of interest $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., making the official minimum $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

The figures of the Bank's statement for the week ending Oct. 27 are given below:—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 7,13,252	Decrease
Do. at Branches.....	17,69,253	Decrease
Other Deposits.....	41,82,322	Increase
Post Bills	3,43,905	Decrease

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	Rs. 8,73,318	Increase
Loans.....	65,894	Increase
Accounts of Credits.....	7,81,902	Increase
Mercantile Bills	10,69,814	Decrease
Cash at Head Office.....	2,04,981	Increase
Do. at Branches	6,84,343	Increase

The analysis of the above figures shows a decrease of over 40½ lacs in the ordinary trade demand, made up as follows:—By an increase over 41½ lacs in other Deposits, coupled with a decrease of over 10½ lacs in Mercantile Bills, minus a decrease of about 3½ lacs in "Post Bills," together with an increase of over 7½ lacs in "Accounts of Credits" and over $\frac{1}{2}$ a lac in "Loans." The Treasury Balance stands decreased by over 7 lacs at Head office and over 17½ lacs at the Branches. The Bank's investments were added to, to the extent of nearly 8-3/4 lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase of over 2 lacs in the Cash at Head Office and over 6-3/4 lacs at the Branches, making the exact total 5,17,76,078, equal to 59·4 per cent. of the liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 59·3 per cent. in the previous week.

STERLING EXCHANGE.—The market has been fairly steady, but inactivity still continues, and alike in buying and selling the transactions reported are not considerable. The absence of inquiry for Bank Drafts has been partly attributable to the occurrence of the Dewali Poojah festival, while the continued stagnation in most branches of the export trade has prevented any large supply of private paper. Ready bank wire has been obtainable from 1-4-27/32 to 1-4½, closing rather easier at 1-4-13/16, while credits have been generally not saleable below 1-5½, except to-day (Nov. 3) when a moderate amount of paper was placed on the basis of 1-5-3/16 and 1-5-7/32 for six months' sight D/A and D/P.

TEA.—At the auctions on Oct. 29, 12,800 packages were offered and 12,500 sold. There was again a good inquiry for all kinds, and with the exception of Common Souchongs, which were slightly weaker, prices were fully maintained.

JUTE.—The market for baled jute is in a very peculiar position. Owing to the scarcity of good quality, balers are obliged to maintain their rates at a parity of about 1 rupee above home values, so that business can only in very exceptional cases be put through. Many of the good balers will not sell, being fairly full, and refuse to engage themselves forward, even at higher prices. In the face of all this, the home markets show no desire to secure supplies. They have been rather taken aback by the heavy exports in October, and they are besides able to get some cheap lots, the quality of which will doubtless correspond with the price. As near as possible good 1st natives are 34 rs., and C. D. M. & Co. quality 33 rs.; inferior 1st natives 32 rs. to 32-8 ordinary, S. C. C., at 30 to 30-8 rs.

GUNNIES.—The upward tendency in the market continues. New Zealand shippers have again been buying for early delivery. For the U. K., sales are reported of sugars and salt bags for November and December. Burma came out as buyers and took a few lacs of C's for the season.

HESSIANS.—Some further business is reported in cloth for New York, and the Bazar have now come out as buyers. Frisco inquiries have not yet resulted in business.

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—There is another unsatisfactory week to record in the Share Market. Business has been practically at a standstill, and the transactions reported are few and unimportant.

BANK OF BENGA.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans

BOMBAY, November 6.

Business has been suspended for the Dewali festival during a portion of the week under review. The course of exchange, since the banks reopened, has attracted more attention than anything else in commercial circles, the downward movement in silver in New York and London, induced by ideas regarding the future position of the metal in connection with American legislation having caused a heavier drop in rates of exchange here than has occurred for some time past, quotations showing a decline of 3-16d. to 7-32d. compared with those ruling a week ago. With the exception of some contracts for the new crop (which is maturing in seasonable weather), next to nothing has been done in cotton by exporters, and very little for local use. Wheat and seeds have been taken to moderate extent by shippers on days when the markets have been open; but prices have not moved, except in the case of rapeseed, for which they are somewhat lower. Government paper has fluctuated in value, but Fours are now 1-16d. per cent. higher. Freight rates are firm, and advancing. The Hindoo New Year's Day was a disappointment as to business in imports; and the market has since remained, generally, in the previous position.

MONEY.—A large withdrawal of over 46 lacs from Private Deposits during the week covered by the Presidency Bank's statement, issued on Nov. 3, was hardly more than one is accustomed to on the eve of holidays, during which the Banks are closed; though, in the present case, the Government Paper Monthly Settlement, which fell last week, must be credited with a share of the decrease in this item. But though the reduction of the Bank's cash balance by some 52½ lacs, bringing it down to 328½ lacs, was mainly due to the cause referred to, a material increase in Bills Discounted was more than counterbalanced by some 9 lacs, by a diminution in Loans, so that the net increase in trade requirements was hardly more than 37 lacs, a considerable addition to Government Securities and some decrease in Public Deposits helping to reduce the balance. Business has continued very quiet meantime, and the Bank's minimum rate has been allowed to remain at 2 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—The native new year's day was a dull day for business in staple Grey Goods compared with its predecessors, wholesale buyers having been slow, and their purchases not up to half the extent of an average Dewali business. Retail inquiry, on the other hand, was satisfactory at current rates, and the state of demand since has been the same. A fairly good business has transpired in bleached, dyed, Turkey red, and printed goods at fully current rates. The new year's day's business in local cloth was also dull, and prices were barely maintained at their previous level. The off-take for the week of imported goods is estimated at 8,000 packages; that of local goods at 4,000 bales.

YARN.—Only a small business in imported twist has been done, and the tone of the market has been quiet at previous rates.

METALS.—Copper has not responded to the drop on the other side, but only a small business has been done on the basis of previous rates, and as a steady market. Yellow metal has also been steady at former quotations, and with only a small business passing. Iron has been taken to a moderate extent, and prices are unchanged for all descriptions.

COAL is firm with an upward tendency in rates. Sales have transpired of Davison's West Hartley, for October-November shipments at 14-10 rs. per ton; and of Powell's Duffryn, for December-January, and January-February shipment, at 15½ rs. per ton. The stock of coal on the Bunder is now estimated at 72,000 tons.

Exports.—COTTON.—This market was closed at the beginning of the week for the Dewali, and since then the feeling has been dull, with very little enquiry for old Cotton from the Mills, and none to speak of from shippers; but prices have remained without material change. The purchases of old stuff for local consumption have not aggregated more than some 3,500 bales, consisting mainly of Oomra descriptions, with a little Dharwar and Bengal; but spinners have contracted for a line of Julgaum of the new crop for March delivery. 150 bales of Oomra descriptions is about all that has been taken out of stock by exporters; but several contracts have been reported for their account in New Bengals and Julgaum, for January delivery, and in Broach, for March. The market closed dull with prices unaltered for old Cotton, but 3 rupees to 4 rupees per candy for new.

WHEAT.—On the days when this market has been open there has been but a moderate inquiry from exporters, and the feeling, which had previously been firm, became only steady; but prices have remained unaltered for all descriptions.

SEEDS also have been steady in tone, with only a moderate business passing, and on the basis of previous rates.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ONLY GENUINE.

ORIGINAL AND

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 18th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880. To J. D. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep without HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSUBSTANTIAL IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark of Collis Browne, 1s. 1½d., 2s., and 4s. 6d. SOL MANUFACTURER. J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, St. Russell-st., W.C.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Nov. 11; Madras, Nov. 12; Bombay, Nov. 14.

A Bhopal telegram of Nov. 21 says:—The Viceregal party has arrived here. The city is illuminated to-night on a magnificent scale. Lord Lansdowne was entertained at a banquet by the Begum, who herself was present, wearing the bhurka or veil. Speaking in Urdu, her Highness proposed the toast of "The Queen and the health of the Viceroy" in an admirable speech, excellently delivered. She said that she placed the whole of the resources of the State and her own life at the disposal of the Queen. The Viceroy, in reply, announced that the Begum had offered to merge her troops into an imperial service corps.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes on Nov. 22:—During the past week the Viceroy has visited Gwalior and Bhopal. Neither visit was marked by any incident of much importance. Speaking at a banquet at Gwalior, his Excellency expressed his satisfaction with the prosperity of the State, the flourishing condition of finances, and the promise shown by the Maharaja, a youth of fifteen.

A Reuter despatch from Indore, dated Nov. 24, says:—Lord Lansdowne, who has arrived here from Bhopal, was entertained at a banquet this evening by the Maharaja Holkar. His Highness, speaking in English, proposed the toast of the Empress of India and the health of the Viceroy. Lord Lansdowne, in reply, dwelt upon the progress of education and the increase in the number of hospitals in the State of Indore. The Viceroy and his suite afterwards witnessed a splendid display of fireworks. The Viceroy, speaking at the Canadian Mission College, Indore, referred to the five happy years he spent in the Dominion, and said that there was no country in which popular education and the best means of providing it were better understood than Canada.

The Times correspondent at Calcutta writes yesterday:—Lord Lansdowne arrived in Calcutta yesterday. All the members of the Supreme Government have now assembled in this capital, and the work of the winter session of the Council is about to begin.

The Viceroy's private secretary wired to the agent of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway that the Secretary of State, at her Majesty's desire, had asked for a list of the killed and injured, and particulars of the Nagpore accident. His Excellency wishes her Majesty's sympathy to be made known.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Nov. 25:—Lord Wenlock has inspected the distressed parts of Ganjam with the district collector. His lordship, speaking at Chattrapore, said that though the failure of the crops was serious in certain of the southern portions of the district, yet he was glad to find that the distress was not general.

In a later despatch (Nov. 29) the correspondent adds:—Lord Wenlock passed through Calcutta en route to Darjeeling on Nov. 27. He will return here on Dec. 2, when he will have an opportunity of personally conferring with the Viceroy regarding the distressed districts in Madras. His Excellency on his way here marched through the district of Ganjam, from the extreme south to the north, and saw the worst tracts in that district. The general result of his tour goes to show that the rice crop has failed in about 430 villages in the extreme south, but stocks for two months exist there, and the East Coast Railway is giving some labour to the people, who are not yet in need of State-provided labour. Throughout the remainder of the district about half the average crop is expected, and no trouble is anticipated. It may be noted that the centre of anxiety has now been shifted from the districts immediately round Madras to the ceded districts.

The Commander-in-Chief of Bombay goes on a tour of inspection in Kattywar and various stations of the Bombay district in December. While in Kattywar his Excellency will inspect the new Imperial Corps which is now being worked up there by Captain Forbes.

On Nov. 12 Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick, Resident of Hyderabad, accompanied by the two Misses Fitzpatrick, arrived at the Victoria Terminus, Bombay, by the Raichore mail train, and left by the mail steamer for England.

Mr. Neill, Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces, a telegram says, has been appointed president of the Land Indebtedness Commission Office, the post having been declined by Sir C. Crosthwaite.

The Syndicate of Allahabad University have resolved to confer the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws on Mr. Justice Straight on his retirement next March.

The Pioneer says:—Captain Younghusband will probably take leave to England a month hence. Both he and Lieutenant Davison, we understand, speak in high terms of the civility and politeness shown to them by the Russian officers, apart from the disagreeable duty which they were charged with in their official capacity. Colonel Yanoff, the commander of the party, especially seems to have been most civil throughout their stay in those parts. The two British officers were also treated with much attention by the Chinese and Khirghiz inhabitants. All the Russians had

Col. A. G. Durand, British Agent at Gilgit, has received definite orders to bring the robber tribes of Hunza and Nagar under control. These tribes are the pirates of Central Asia, whose chief occupation is plundering caravans on the Yarkhand and Kashgar. Any prisoners they take on these expeditions are sold into slavery. Colonel Durand has established an outpost at Chalt, about thirty miles beyond Gilgit on the Hunza River, and intends making a road to Aliabad, the capital of the Hunza chief, at once. That he will meet with armed opposition in doing so is not improbable.

Captain MacDonald and Lieutenants Twining and Austin were to leave Bombay on Nov. 10 by the Rubattino steamer for Mombassa, with a party of fifty Pathans trained to survey work, for employment on the survey of a proposed line to the Victoria Nyanza.

Captain Swaine, R.E., also leaves Bombay to make a preliminary survey of the route proposed for the Mombassa-Uganda Railway.

The Maharajah Holkar has signified his intention of contributing two regiments of cavalry towards the Imperial Service troops.

Prince Galitsin, the late arrival from Ladakh, is, it appears, above everything a savant in archæology—an unusual taste in a member of the Russian nobility, the Pioneer remarks. He is particularly interested in Buddhist studies, which he hopes to prosecute in these climes. After remaining a few days in Srinagar he goes to Rawul Pindi and then down country, visiting the chief places of interest and reaching Calcutta early in December. From Calcutta he proposes to visit Burma and then Ceylon. Prince Galitsin has spent some time in England and speaks English fairly.

A Reuter telegram from Bombay states that Captain T. S. Boileau, of the 44th Goorkhas, the officer on whom the command of the troops at Manipore devolved after the death of Colonel Skene, and Captain G. H. Butcher, senior officer of the 42nd Goorkhas, who was second in command to Captain Boileau, have been removed from the Army on account of their conduct on the occasion of the disaster at Manipore. The two officers have been granted compassionate allowances.

Referring to the fact that the Civil Service of the N.-W. Provinces will be losing two of the last small remnant of the Haileybury element, Mr. J. F. Lumsden and Mr. A. J. Lawrence, men who, very dissimilar in most respects, resemble each other at least in this, that the retirement rule finds them each in the prime of life, and more fitted in point of health and vigour to go on working in India than many a younger man, the Pioneer says:—One can hardly look at instances like these—and Mr. F. M. Halliday, who is just retiring in Bengal is another case to the point—without asking whether they can be mere coincidences, or whether the Haileybury system did not in reality tend to send out men whose energies were far more capable of standing by them to the later and more important portions of their official careers than is the case with their successors, the survivors of the crammer and Burlington House.

The Bombay Catholic Examiner says that two Jesuit Fathers have already "renounced" the dignity of Archbishop of Bombay, and it doubts if there is in India, or out of it, a single member of their order who, under present circumstances, would touch the Bombay mitre with a forty-foot pole, unless in compliance with the express wishes of his ecclesiastical superiors.

It was stated some time ago that a conference of telegraph officials had met at Umballa for the purpose of considering whether a further reduction in the present charges on telegrams in India could not be made. No such conference, we (Pioneer) are informed, was ever held. A reduction in rates is, of course, one of the possibilities of the near future, but Umballa would scarcely be chosen as the place in which to settle so important a question.

At the same time, continues our contemporary, it was asserted that the telegraph line from Srinagar to Gilgit was to be taken in hand as soon as the weather makes it possible to do so, that material was being collected at Srinagar, and that work would be begun at both ends simultaneously in order to allow of the wire being laid in one season. The line to Gilgit will, of course, be laid in due course, but the Telegraph Department must know what stores are required before they can begin placing them at Srinagar. Mr. Olpherts who is making the survey across the Passes will scarcely be in a position to furnish a report until next spring, and it will certainly require more than one working season to lay a wire which shall be secure against snowstorms, avalanches and the many other hostile factors which have to be taken into consideration in such a difficult country.

Returns of the trade of British India with foreign countries show a marked decrease in imports, together with a yet more noteworthy increase in exports during the first six months of the current year, as compared with the same period of 1890. In round numbers the import trade fell from 33 1-3 to 31 2-3 crores, while exports rose from 46½ to nearly 52 crores. In imports the most noticeable falling off occurred in yarns and textile fabrics—nearly 1½ crores, while the increase in exports was mainly due to "articles of food and drink," viz., wheat—6 crores.

The increase in the gross receipts of Indian Railways, compared with those of last year, has now topped 2 crores for Guaranteed and State lines alone. The total increase on all railways, including those in Native States, for the seven months ending Oct. 24 is a little over 2 crores and 12 lacs of rupees.

In connection with the mobilisation of troops on the North-West frontier in case of war, the Government of India have sanctioned a scheme for forming special camping grounds at Quetta and Sibi.

The Mandalay Herald says:—Disquieting news has reached us from the frontier. The ex-Sawbwa of Wuntho appears to be massing large numbers of Kacheen-Chinese, Chinese, and Chins. Our report says that these number some 5,000 men, and that the Chinese Governor on our frontier is lending his moral support to this runaway Sawbwa.

LAST Thursday Mr. H. S. KING, C.I.E., M.P., gave a dinner at the Conservative Club to a number of gentlemen, who were invited to meet SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE, K.C.S.I. There were present, the RIGHT HON. C. T. RITCHIE, M.P., the RIGHT HON. SIR JOHN GORST, M.P., LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR G. T. CHESNEY, K.C.B., C.S.I., C.I.E., SIR STEWART BAYLEY, K.C.S.I., SIR THOMAS SUTHERLAND, K.C.M.G., M.P., SIR R. MEADE, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., SIR STUART HOGG, LIEUTENANT-GENERAL H. H. LYSTER, C.B., V.C., COLONEL E. T. THACKERAY, C.B., V.C., COLONEL D. G. S. MCLEOD, COLONEL J. C. BERKELEY, C.S.I., and MESSRS. A. P. HOWELL, C. PONTIFEX, and EDWARD JENKINS.

The fifty-first annual general meeting of the proprietors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company will be held at the Company's offices, 122 Leadenhall Street, on Thursday, Dec. 10, at one o'clock P.M. The board has provisionally appointed Viscount Wolmer, M.P., to fill the vacancy in the Direction caused by the resignation of the Right Hon. Sir James Fergusson, Bart., M.P., now her Majesty's Postmaster-General, and this gentleman will offer himself for election on the day of meeting, in conformity with the terms of the Deed of Settlement. Also, for the election of two directors, in the room of Major-General Sir Owen Tudor Burne, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., and Montagu Cleugh Wilkinson, Esq., two of the present directors, who go out of office by rotation on the day of meeting.

Sir Frederick Roberts, says the World, has recently decided that the measures by which the officers of the Indian Staff Corps are seeking to obtain a quicker rate of promotion are opposed to military tradition. Whatever the memorialists may think on the subject, all disinterested persons will give their approval to Sir Frederick Roberts's action. It is not an edifying thing to see officers petitioning for better terms. At the same time, if the grievances are legitimate ones they ought to be redressed, as the interests of the Service suffer when there is cause of discontent without steps being taken to remove it. In this instance the Indian officers have several real grievances.

His Excellency Sieh Ta-Jen, the Chinese Minister, has left London with a numerous suite, for Paris, where he will remain for the winter, Sir Halliday Macartney, the permanent secretary, remains in London.

Mr. Justice Birdwood, of the Bombay High Court, left London on Nov. 26 for India.

The new Japanese Minister to Spain was, on Nov. 27, received by the Queen Regent.

Colonel Sir Charles Euan-Smith, the new British Minister to Morocco, arrived at Gibraltar on Nov. 29, on board the steamer Ethiopia. He will remain there till Wednesday, when her Majesty's ironclad Thunderer will convey him to Tangier.

Mr. T. Risely Griffiths, Administrator of the Seychelles, arrived at Marseilles yesterday on board the Messageries Maritimes steamer Polynisien, on his way to England. Mr. J. Henniker Heaton, M.P., was also a passenger by the same vessel.

A marriage has been arranged, and will shortly take place, between Captain Cecil Martindale, Bengal Staff Corps, Punjab Commission, second son of Colonel B. H. Martindale, R.E., C.B., and Constance Mary, youngest daughter of Mr. Frederick Charlesworth, of East Hill, Bickley.

We are requested to state that the Peninsular and Oriental Company have decided to close their connection with Venice, and on and after Jan. 15 next they will establish a special weekly service between Italy and Egypt, the steamers running in alternate weeks between Brindisi and Alexandria, and Naples and Alexandria, and vice versa.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times :—

Nov. 22.—The latest advices from Madras show that the situation, although not nearly as gloomy as pictured by Mr. Caine's informants, is still one to cause anxiety. A telegram dated yesterday says that the condition of the Bellary district is most critical. The authorities report that the rains this year have been a total failure. The dry crops have all failed, and the cotton crop has been lost. The physical condition of the people is still good, but the labouring classes have begun to leave their homes, and the cattle are starving in large numbers. The supply of grain in the district is believed to be large, and, should the distress increase, there should be no difficulty about supplies.

The second grain riot at Kurnool appears to have been more serious than the former one. The looting of shops went on for six hours. It is stated that the merchants lost grain worth 40,000 rs. The reports from Central and Western Bengal point to short crops and high prices, and although actual scarcity is hardly probable, still there may be some distress.

The landowners of Behar still continue their active opposition to the proposed cadastral survey of the four Trans-Gangetic districts in that province. Several representations have been made to the Lieutenant-Governor, and it is understood that an association is about to be formed in Calcutta with the sole object of attempting to prevent the carrying out of the scheme.

Yesterday's Gazette contains a long minute by the Government of India reviewing the working of the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act and giving instructions to the Commission. The origin of the Commission is stated to be due to the fact that the members of the Bombay Council were unable to agree as to the conclusions to be drawn from the inquiry into the working of the Act, which was undertaken last year. Mr. Moore considered the Act to be of the greatest benefit to the agriculturists and advocated its retention, and its extension to other districts. Sir Raymond West condemned its machinery altogether, and argued that it had not only done no good, but had put the ryots in a worse position than they were before. Lord Harris was inclined to support the Act with important modifications, and suggested its extension, when modified, to other districts. The members of the Commission are directed to report whether the Act should be retained, with or without modifications, and whether the principles of the Act which have stood the test of experience are capable of extension to other provinces where the ryots are loaded with debt. If they consider that the Act only affords temporary relief, then they are to state what other measures, if any, they would recommend. It is to be hoped that, when the report is made, there will be more unanimity in the Viceroy's Council than prevails in the Bombay Government on the subject.

All doubt as to the fate of the missing pilot vessel Coleroon has now been removed. Yesterday the port officer of Calcutta received a telegram from the commander of the Government steamer Guide, which was sent out to search for the vessel, saying that he had found a quantity of wreckage which showed clearly that the Coleroon had foundered in the cyclone. Unhappily there is no room for the hope that any one from the vessel was saved. The persons known to be on board were Pilots Broadhead, Reddie, Adley, and Puttock, Medical Officer Mullins, and 41 natives.

A detachment of the 5th Goorkhas, under Captain Barrett, with a Gatling gun and escort under Lieutenant Badcock, which was sent to reinforce the Gilgit garrison, has arrived safely at Astor. They suffered severely from cold in crossing the Burgil Pass. There were several cases of frostbite, and Captain Barrett appears to have had a narrow escape of being crippled, but he is now recovering. Most of the other sufferers are doing well.

Nov. 24.—Further experiments in rain-making have been carried on at Bezwada, on the East Coast Railway, but they proved a total failure. Twenty bags, each containing 10 lbs. of roburite, were exploded on a range of hills 600 feet above the plain, but without producing the desired effect.

Nov. 25.—During the riot at Kurnool last week the police fired buckshot at the rioters and wounded several. The latter, however, routed the police, who fled, leaving the mob in possession of the town for several hours. Towards the afternoon Mr. Weld, the district judge, who appears to have been the only European official in the station, succeeded in rallying the police and dispersing the mob. All is now reported to be quiet.

The rain-making experiment at Bellary, like that at Bezwada, has proved a failure, but on both occasions a high wind was blowing, and it is believed from the evidence obtained that a steady ascent of smoke is essential to success.

Last week's reports from most of the Bengal districts show some improvement in the prospects.

Nov. 29.—The calendar of the criminal sessions of the Calcutta High Court, which begin to-morrow, contains three cases of more than local interest—namely, the Bangabasi seditious libel, the Imperial diamond case, and a bribery case. The proceedings in the first-named case will, of course, be purely formal, and the Government, having accepted the submission of the defendants, will merely enter a nolle prosequi. The diamond case will doubtless be bitterly fought out and will last some days. In the third case, a pleader of the Judge's Court at Dacca is charged with attempting to bribe a jurymen. The trial of this case was removed to the High Court by special order, and the strange fact has recently been discovered that the entire record of the proceedings in the committal of the prisoner by the Magistrate's Court has disappeared mysteriously in the course of its transmission between Dacca and Calcutta.

"FROM GOVERNMENT, MADRAS, NOV. 27.—The Governor wires, as the result of personal inspection at Ganjam, as follows :—'Except in Tekkali Zemindari and thirty villages of Chicacole, where almost total failure, an eight anna crop (i.e., half the usual amount) is expected on the average throughout the district. No necessity for famine relief works anywhere for, say, two months, then some work wanted in the south.'"

"FROM VICEROY, NOV. 28.—Conditions not so good as last report. Madras and Bombay Deccan in urgent need of more rain. There has been rain in Upper Burma, but no sign of improvement in parts. Prospects continue gloomy in Rajputana."

LATEST "GAZETTE OF INDIA" NOTIFICATIONS.

Sandilands, S. V. Gordon, and H. H. Cole, one year each, and G. W. Sawyer, five months; Major G. B. Austin, one year; Major F. C. Maisey, eleven months; Capt. H. H. R. Heath and E. W. Codrington, one year each; Lieut. C. R. Ross, six months; Lieuts. H. C. Ricketts and F. T. Stewart, one year each; Major A. G. Yaldwyn, Lieuts. R. V. Davidson, E. V. Martin, and T. G. Blois Johnson, one year each, and Lieut. D. R. Adye, three months.

Col. G. H. Palmer and Major E. I. G. Lewis have been permitted to retire from the service.

In consequence of the return of Mr. G. H. Keene to the Paper Currency Office, Mr. A. Newmarch is attached to the office of the Comptroller of Indian Treasuries.

LATEST BOMBAY ARMY ORDERS.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE Times of India, POONA, NOV. 13.)

THE Commander-in-Chief is pleased to make the following appointments :—

22ND BOMBAY INFANTRY.—Surg. Prall, Indian Medical Service, officiating in medical charge, 1st Lancers, to officiate in medical charge, vice Surg.-Major Damania, Indian Medical Service, proceeding on furlough.

Surg. Irvine, Indian Medical Service, just arrived from England, has been posted to the Bomb ay District for general duty.

With reference to G.O.C.C. No. 573 of the 10th instant, Brig.-Gen. J. Gatacre, C.B., has been posted to the Nagpore District.

Surg. Herbert, Indian Medical Service, was on general duty temporarily at Bombay, from Aug. 28 to Sept. 11 following.

The following General Orders by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India are republished for information :—

Adjutant-General's Office, Simla, November 2, 1891.

With the sanction of Government, the Commander-in-Chief in India is pleased to make the following appointments :—

Capt. F. W. G. Wadson, 7th Bombay Lancers, to be brigade-major to the Inspector-General of Cavalry in India.

With effect from Oct. 1, the undermentioned officers have leave of absence :—

CONNAUGHT RANGERS.—Lieut. Moore, officiating wing officer, on probation, 19th Punjab Inf., for six months, to remain Rawul Pindi, to study the native languages.

ROYAL LANCASTER REGIMENT (2ND BATTALION).—Second Lieut. North, to England, for six months, on medical certificate.

B. B. and C. I. RAILWAY VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS (1ST BATTALION).—Major Luard, to remain in England, in extension, from Nov. 25 to Jan. 11, on private affairs.

Second Lieut. G. Moberly, Middlesex Regt., a probationer for the Indian Staff Corps, has passed both the lower and higher standards in Hindustani.

With reference to paragraph 64 (B) of the Indian Reserve Regulations, the Commander-in-Chief directs that if from any cause the training of discharged short-service men re-enlisted for the Reserve exceeds four months, an immediate and full report of the circumstances shall be made to the Adjutant-General.

With reference to Army Order No. 324 of June 19 last, it is notified that competitors in Events 39 and 40 at the forthcoming Presidential Assault-at-Arms should be dressed in field service marching order, as laid down in Bombay S.A.O. No. 15 (1) of 1891.

The undermentioned officer has been granted leave of absence by his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief:—

7TH HUSSARS—Capt. Going, to remain in England in extension from Oct. 7 to Oct. 20, on private affairs.

Capt. Vidal, 13th Bombay Inf., has been appointed assistant to the honorary secretary Bombay Presidency Rifle Association, whose office moves into camp at The Sisters on Nov. 17.

The 2nd Bombay Lancers will march from Mhow to Poona via Sindwha and Dhulia, and not by route as originally ordered, as there is cholera in some of the villages on that line. The regiment will arrive in Poona on Dec. 23 instead of Dec. 24.

It is notified for information that it has now been ruled by the Government of India that non-commissioned officers of all British corps, including batteries of Royal Artillery and companies of Royal Engineers, employed on extra regimental duty, will, after three months' absence, be borne as supernumerary on the rolls of their corps, on the understanding that when they are no longer required for such extra regimental duty, they will be returned to their corps, and must be absorbed into first vacancy in their own regiment, battalion, brigade, or company. This ruling is to come into effect from April 1 next.

G U P.

THE correspondent of the Pioneer gives the following amusing account of the State Banquet to the Viceroy in Cashmere:—Sixty-five of us assembled at 7.30 and sat shivering in a draughty room, as gay a company as ever I met at a funeral. However, as soon as their Excellencies arrived we were all paired off very carefully, and taken into a long hall, where a dais was erected at one end for the mighty ones, and the rest of us sat in rows, English on one side and natives on the other. Then at the lower end some nautch girls appeared; they were about a quarter of a mile from the dais, but I daresay they were near enough. Their performance was quite as interesting as usual, and in a few minutes they were most unceremoniously bundled out again and we all streamed in to dinner. That meal was conducted in the usual style with a few little eccentricities thrown in. The table was covered with magnificent copper ware, the champagne was excellent, and tongues wagged merrily after the first glass. When it was over, the Resident, on the part of the Maharaja, proposed the Queen's health, and after that was drunk he again rose and made a short but excellent speech, in which he kept mainly to the safe topics of roads and bridges, and then proposed the Viceroy's health. Lord Lansdowne rose to reply, and, as I am not a shorthand writer, can only give the gist of his speech. He spoke clearly and pleasantly and much to the point. First he told of the impressions the lovely country had made on him, and next praised the arrangements that had been made for his comfort on the road. Then he alluded to the reforms the Council had lately undertaken, and paid them some handsome compliments; some of the English officials also came in for "honourable mention," and he finished with a very emphatic assurance to His Highness that nobody wished to interfere with him in any way. This being ended, we all went into a verandah and witnessed some rather indifferent fireworks, which were rendered effective by the reflections in the river, and, when their Excellencies had departed, we got away as quickly as the shrieking, yelling, cursing boatmen would let us.

A Poona correspondent writes from Poona on Nov. 12:—The officers of the 1st battalion Worcestershire Regiment afforded their numerous friends a very pleasant afternoon's sport to-day, when they held a Gymkhana meeting near the old Wanowrie Lines, on the open ground where the Poona Horse Show is usually held. The advantage of holding the meeting here, instead of on the usual Wanowrie Gymkhana Course, was that the spectators had the benefit of the shade of the trees alongside the roadway. The arrangements, which were carried out under the direction of a committee, consisting of Major Clarke, Major Rainsford, Captain Randolph, Lieutenant Hannington, and Captain Lenox Conyngham, with the last-named as honorary secretary, left nothing to be desired. There was a large attendance of spectators, numerous ladies gracing the occasion with their presence, several of them being dressed in particularly smart-looking frocks. An excellent card was presented, and the entries were large. The first event on the programme was Tent-pegging by Sections, for which eight couples came forward. Messrs. Ford and Biddulph, of the Royal Horse Artillery, were the only ones who carried both pegs in the first run, but they failed altogether in the second run. Captain Le Gallais, aide-de-camp, and Surgeon-Major G. H. Bull took one peg between them in the first run, and carried both at the second attempt. This was sufficient to earn for them the first prize. The other competitors were Messrs. Lyons and Whyte, Mr. Woolmer and Captain Brunker, Messrs. Stevens and Kelly, Royal Artillery, Captain Hobday and Mr. Bidgood, Royal Artillery, Messrs. Wogan, Browne and Belland, Captain Owen and Mr. Benn. The next race was the Ball-and-Bucket Race. The competitors were given three balls each, which they were required to deposit while going at a gallop in three buckets placed at equal distances. Lieutenant Bell, Worcester Regiment, won this competition easily, completely outstripping all the other opponents. He put all three balls into the bucket at the first attempt, and in the second run he put in two balls, the other unfortunately dropping from his saddle before he reached the first bucket. There were sixteen competitors. Six ponies faced the starter for the Polo Scurry, about 300 yards, which was run in heats without dismounting. Captain Le Gallais on Thistle won both heats easily, Mr. Whyte's Grasshopper, ridden by Mr. Woolmer, being next. The others which ran were Captain Peacocke's Gritz, Mr. Nunn's Motee, Dr. Burness's Jimmy Jumps, and Mr. Greer's Rosetta. The fourth event was termed the Ball Room Stakes, in which the competitors had to be nominated by ladies. They raced a short distance to where the ladies stood in line, dismounted, and had white dress ties tied by the ladies who had nominated them. They then remounted and returned to the starting point. Mrs. Ulick Bourke was particularly smart in despatching Mr. Bidgood; Mr. Woolmer, nominated by Mrs. Humfrey, was second; and Captain Brunker, nominated by Miss Cunningham, third. The other competitors were Mr. Waddington, nominated by Mrs. Willoughby; Mr. Ford, by Mrs. Bidgood; Dr. Bull, by Miss Beatson; Mr. Nunn, by Miss Howard; Mr. Liddell, by Mrs. Duperier; Mr. Greer, by Mrs. Owen; Mr. Benn, by Miss Pottinger; and Major Rainsford, by Mrs. Wilkie. The last event on the card was a Screen Race, the competitors on horseback being required to ride through a large paper screen and to finish on the other side. There were fourteen competitors. The horses refused to go through the screen despite of all attempts, and finally, in the scramble, the screen was knocked down and torn before any could go through. It was then decided to have a new race, the competitors having to ride round a given point and back. This was won easily by Mr. Bidgood. At the conclusion of this race Mrs. Wilkie presented the prizes to the successful competitors. The band of the regiment was in attendance.

Mr. R. Sneyd Hutchinson, who is now commanding at Fort Tregear, Lushai Hills, sends us (Englishman) an account of a visitation of bees on the fort when the men were at drill. Mr. Hutchinson and his men have to be congratulated on the presence of mind they showed. The consequences might have been most serious. "I write," says Mr. Hutchinson, "to inform you of what I take to be a completely novel experience in the life of a frontier officer, and at the same time fraught with danger. While on parade this morning (Oct. 26) with a company of my garrison we were suddenly surrounded by an immense swarm of bees. Passing swarms are of constant occurrence in these parts, and expecting them to fly by I took no notice of them. I was just preparing my men for skirmishing drill when I noticed that the swarm was wheeling round and round directly above us, and several were already descending on us. I was, I confess, alarmed, and ordered the men not to move at any cost. Hundreds now settled on us and the ground around, though the main portion continued flying round and round overhead. Personally, I should say there were about fifty on me. I did not dare move, the men fearing a general descent upon us, and I don't think I ever spent such an uncomfortable two or three minutes. Suddenly the swarm seems to make up their mind as to their final destination, and made for a large charred stump of a tree about fifteen yards off, the actual parade ground, and heaped themselves on to it in a huge black mass. I now withdrew my men as quietly as possible away from the parade ground and back into the Fort, and heartily glad I was to get there, as I feared that any noise might disturb the swarm and provoke a general assault, which would have completely routed us. As it was, we did not escape without casualties; twenty-three men were stung as soon as we moved by bees that had previously settled on them. I was congratulating myself on escaping untouched, and was just taking the sting of a bee out of the ear of one of my men when a sharp prick in the elbow betrayed the presence of a bee up my sleeve. He perished instantly, but the place where he trod even now reminds me unpleasantly of his visit. The men behaved admirably. I firmly believe, if we had broken in the first instance, we should have had the lot on us, and the result might well have been most serious. My two terriers, who had followed me down to the parade, fled away yelping at an early period of the affair, and, judging by their present bloated appearance, they must have had rather a warm time of it. I have never read of a similar occurrence, and think it may interest you. We are ready for Lushais, but bees are too much even for a policeman."

PERSONAL.

ACCORDING to a Bangalore paper, Colonel Martin has decided to remain one year longer with his Highness the Maharaja of Mysore. Colonel Campbell reverts to Chickmagalur, and Mr. Sparke goes back to Bangalore as Superintendent of the Central Gaol.

Mr. Comyn Carr, C.S., is likely to succeed Mr. Rees as Private Secretary to Lord Wenlock's return from Calcutta.

Mr. G. F. Mathieson has been appointed to act as Superintendent, Sind Revenue Survey, during the absence of Mr. H. K. Disney.

The services of Mr. A. D. Younghusband, C.S., and Mr. E. Gray, C.S., have been placed at the disposal of the Government of India in the Home Department, for employment in the Central Provinces.

Mr. A. Keyser, C.S., has been appointed to do duty as Collector and District Magistrate, Poona, and District Registrar, Poona, and to be Member and President of the Local Board established for the Poona District.

Mr. W. F. Sinclair, C.S., has been appointed Political Agent, Jawhar, vice Mr. J. M. Campbell, C.S., C.I.E., and will join his appointment on return from leave. Mr. H. R. Cooke, C.S., will succeed Mr. Sinclair as Political Agent, Cambay.

Just before leaving the district, Mr. Tremenheere, the late Acting Collector of Chingleput, placed on record his high appreciation of the work performed by Mr. A. Pinto, Deputy Collector, Mr. J. Armugam Pillai, Acting Tahsildar of Ponneri, and Mr. Mahomed Ali Sahib, Hazari Tahsildar of Chingleput, during the late distress. The Collector was particularly pleased with the work of Messrs. Pinto and Armugam Pillai, whose services have been brought to the notice of the Board of Revenue.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Capt. T. W. Blakiston, who died in New Mexico on Oct. 17, was at one time well known in England in connection with exploration in China. After passing through Woolwich, he obtained a commission in the Royal Artillery, and served through the Crimean war. Subsequently, he went with the expeditionary force to China, and on the conclusion of the war he made a daring attempt to cross from China to India. In the course of this journey he ascended the Yangtze beyond Chungking, which town he was the first Englishman to visit. But he was stopped. On his return he made a careful survey of the river. For many years his volume describing this journey contained all that was known of the river above Hankow. In 1862 he received the gold medal of the Royal Geographical Society. For two years he was employed by the Government on a magnetic survey of Hudson's Bay. On retiring from the Army shortly after he devoted himself to business pursuits, and took up his residence at Hakodate, the chief port of the island of Yezo in Northern Japan, where he lived for many years. Here he devoted his leisure to the study of ornithology, and his papers on the subject in various scientific periodicals at home and in the East are regarded as of special value in view of the geographical situation of Yezo. In 1883 he left Japan, and settled in the United States.

Many of our readers will hear with sincere regret of the death in London of Mrs. Hopkinson, the wife of General Henry Hopkinson, C.S.I., sometime Commissioner of Burma and Arracan, and afterwards Commissioner of Assam, and Agent to the Governor-General, North-East Frontier. Leaving Calcutta as a young bride in 1849, at a period when there were but few of her countrywomen in Burma, she soon by her sympathetic and agreeable bearing became the leading spirit among them. When the change to Assam came in 1861 the same kindly influence continued to evince itself, and despite the lapse of seventeen years, since her return with her husband to the home country, the effect of her life and example still remains, and is cherished in the memory of all who had the privilege to know her.

The death is announced of the Hon. Samuel Brown, surveyor-general of Hong Kong, on board the P. and O. steamer Ancona, in Kobe, in Japan, of cholera. Mr. Brown became a member of the Institute of Civil Engineers in 1869, and, after service at Swansea and Watchet, was placed in charge of the central section of the Turin-Savona Railway. Between 1870 and 1879 he was engaged on works connected with the improvement and maintenance of the harbour of Alexandria, and in 1880 was appointed Government engineer in Cyprus, whence, in 1889, he was promoted to be surveyor-general of Hong Kong, where he was also member of the Legislative Council and president of the Sanitary Board.

Mr. Serjeant Atkinson, the father of the Bombay Bar, died on Nov. 8 at Bombay at Brigg's Temperance Hotel, where for some months he had subsisted on the generosity of his learned brethren. He was called to the Bar in 1840, and acted as chief justice in Bombay in 1877.

Mr. George McWatters, Acting Commissioner of Land Revenue, Madras, died in that city on Nov. 11. He apparently was in the best health the previous night, but during dinner he was suddenly taken ill; the doctor was summoned, who pronounced the attack due to the bursting of the aneurism. During the night deceased grew no worse, but died at ten next morning. He had served twenty-eight years, and was universally popular and generally regarded as a man about whom it was impossible any one to speak an evil word. In him, says an Indian paper, Madras loses a conscientious and upright servant, who did his work faithfully and well.

A Reuter telegram from Teheran, dated Nov. 12, says:—"Intelligence has reached here that the Ameer of Kain, in the Province of Khorassan, died several years ago. He is succeeded by his eldest son."

THE VICEROY'S TOUR IN CASHMERE.

THE following telegrams, contained in the papers received by the present mail, give some further particulars of the progress of the Viceroy during his tour in Cashmere:—

VICEROY'S CAMP, SRINAGAR, Nov. 4.—The Viceroy and party have been at Achibal since Saturday morning last. The party broke up early this morning, returning to the boats at Khanabala via Islamabad, doing some shooting en route. After lunch the boats dropped down the river to Chursoo, where the night will be spent. The original intention to move the camp to Verinag on Monday was abandoned, as there seemed to be no particular object in going there.

Nov. 7.—This morning, after breakfast, the Viceroy inspected the detachments of the 11th Bengal Cavalry and 5th Goorkhas, which formed his escorts and guards en route to, and during his stay in, Srinagar. His Excellency desired the officers commanding the detachment, Captain Wright and Lieutenant Lucas, to inform the native officers, non-commissioned officers, and men how pleased he was with their admirable turn-out, and the excellent manner in which they had performed their duties since his Excellency entered Cashmere territory. The detachments have orders to march from Srinagar back to Pindi and Abbottabad immediately after the Viceroy's departure from Srinagar. The State Council were received by the Viceroy in the forenoon to-day, apparently with the object of learning from his own lips the settlement which has been arrived at regarding State affairs. The arrangement which his Excellency has brought about, by which the Maharaja becomes President of the Council, has given the greatest satisfaction on all sides. Great gratification is felt by the people. It is, of course, obvious that the settlement of the question is largely, if not entirely, due to his Excellency's determination to visit Cashmere to make the acquaintance of and discuss matters personally with his Highness, and to see for himself the actual condition of affairs. To-night the Takht-i-Suliman, standing about 1,000 feet above Srinagar, was brilliantly lighted, and rockets were discharged from the highest peaks.

BARAMULA, Nov. 9.—The Viceroy, the Marchioness of Lansdowne, Ladies Evelyn and Beatrice Fitzmaurice, and their Excellencies' Staff, left Srinagar yesterday at two P.M. His Highness the Maharaja of Cashmere Raja Sir Amar Singh, Raja Ram Singh, Colonel Prideaux, Colonel Neville Chamberlain, and the members of the Cashmere State Council, with a number of other officials, accompanied the Viceroy on the roof of his barge, and took leave of him at a point about four miles down the river. Prince Galitzin, Captains Evans Gordon and a number of other officials saw their Excellencies off at the Residency ghât. The afternoon was very fine, and the display of boats proceeding down the river was exceedingly picturesque, and in striking contrast with the gaunt, dilapidated mud tenements, showing little signs of life, which overhung the river on either side. Here and there balconies were hung with garlands of green and red capscums, a decoration characteristic of Cashmere. In the distance, above and around, stretching away into the soft deep blue sky were the mountains, covered with snow. The night was spent at Shadipore. No winds disturbed the placidity of the dreaded Wular Lake, which was crossed early this morning.

The tour in Cashmere may be said practically to end here, and from the point of view of pleasure, apart from that of business, it has been most successful and most enjoyable to all concerned. This result, no doubt, is mainly attributable to the excellent transport and other arrangements organised and carried out by the Cashmere officials. The military secretary to the Viceroy has had a most able and energetic assistant in Rai Daulat Ram Bahadur, superintendent of the Postal and Tonga Departments, who has accompanied the camp throughout. Admirable arrangements have been made for transport between Pindi and Barsala. The party arrived here shortly after one o'clock.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S TOUR.

A TELEGRAM from the correspondent of the Pioneer, dated Kohat, Nov. 4, says:—

The Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by Major-General Sir James Browne, Quartermaster-General, and Captain Hume, Aide-de-Camp, arrived at Kohat on Monday morning. In the afternoon he inspected the garrison, which was in every way up to Frontier Force form, and in the evening dined with Colonel Brownlow and the officers of the Kohat garrison mess. While at Kohat his Excellency was the guest of Colonel Brownlow, of the 1st Punjab Infantry.

Yesterday the party, accompanied by Brigadier-General Sir William Lockhart, and Major Egerton, who had arrived at Kohat on Sunday, and the Hon. Lieutenant-General Brackenbury, who came in via the Kohat Pass on Monday afternoon, left at half-past five to visit the Samana position, travelling by tonga and dog-cart. They reached Hangoo at none, and were most hospitably entertained at breakfast by Lieutenant-Colonel Turner, Commanding on the Samana, and the officers of his staff. Captain Deane, Deputy Commissioner of Kohat, also came with the party from Kohat. After breakfast a start was made for the Samana, and Mastoon was reached at 12.30. Here a short halt was made while the horses were changed, and his Excellency inspected the garrison under the command of Captain Rundall, of the 4th Goorkhas. Gulistan was the next halt, and after inspecting the garrison, the party left with Lieutenant-Colonel Reid, commanding the post, and the officers stationed there. From Gulistan the road lay down hill to Balamian, the troops quartered there parading under Major Massy, 19th Bengal Lancers. Here a second change of horses was provided, and the eleven miles to Hangoo were covered in a short time. After a cup of tea at Hangoo the return drive to Kohat was begun, and all had arrived there before 8.30. The total distance covered was about 85 miles, 35 of which were done on horseback. This could hardly have been done in the time but for the excellent arrangements made and the generous hospitality dispensed everywhere.

The smart workmanlike and healthy appearance of the troops was noticeable all along the line. Owing to the steepness of the road a cavalry escort, except to and from the foot of the hills, was impracticable, and picquets were therefore placed on the slopes and along the crest of the Samana throughout its length. His Excellency, with Generals Brackenbury and Sir James Browne, left Kohat for Bannu at six o'clock this morning.

Writing from Camp Murtaza, through Tank, Nov. 8, the same correspondent says:—

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the Hon. General Brackenbury, and Major-General Sir James Browne, left Kohat at 6 A.M. on Wednesday, the 4th, driving and riding eighty miles to Bannu, which place they reached about 5 P.M. Halting the following day, his Excellency inspected the garrison and dined at the mess in the evening. While at Bannu the party were most hospitably entertained by the officers of the garrison, his Excellency being the guest of Colonel and Mrs. Bruce. Captain Hume, who had been detained at Kohat, rejoined in the evening.

On Friday Peyzu was reached after a tonga drive of fifty-four miles, and the escort duty, which had hitherto been performed by the 1st Punjab Cavalry, was taken over by the 3rd Punjab Cavalry and 2nd Sikhs. At Peyzu arrangements had been made with true Piffer hospitality by the officers of the Dera Ismail Khan garrison for the entertainment of the visitors.

Starting at 7 P.M. yesterday, a ride of twenty-four miles brought the party to Tank. A few miles out his Excellency was met by Mr. Bruce, Commissioner of the Derajat; Mr. King, Deputy Commissioner of Dera Ismail Khan; Mr. Donald, Assistant Commissioner; Colonel Hastings, commanding at Dera Ismail Khan; Colonel Davidson, commanding the 3rd Punjab Cavalry, and other officers. Dr. Edwards, surgeon to his Excellency, and Lieutenant Barrow, 4th Bengal Cavalry, Personal Assistant to the Military Member of Council, here joined the party. In the afternoon the 3rd Punjab Cavalry and No. 7 Bengal Mountain Battery, who had marched from Dera Ismail Khan for the purpose, were inspected by his Excellency, who dined in the evening with the officers of the frontier force present at Tank.

The party rode in here this morning, under the guidance of Mr. Bruce, doing the 19 miles, and visiting the village of Gomal en route. The camp is close to the mouth of the Gomul Pass. Bath here and at Tank guards of picturesque Waziri levies, with long hair, handsome lungs, and variously armed, were drawn up to receive the Commander-in-Chief, and the head men were presented to his Excellency. Yesterday and to-day the road was covered with one continuous stream of Kerautis, a section of the Ghilzais, interspersed with a few Suliman Khels, bringing with them their entire families, including the old women and infants, their camels, horses, and flocks of sheep and goats. They issue from the Gomal in November, the women, children, and animals remaining during the winter in the Derajat, while the men go on down into India, selling horses and hawking goods mainly purchased by their agents in Peshawur and Lahore. Some travel as far East as the tea-gardens of Cachar. They return to the hills through the Gomal about March. The men are a fine-looking lot, of wild and independent appearance. Other tribes come down in regular waves, encamping on the same ground each year, and remaining entirely distinct one from the other.

To-morrow the camp moves twelve miles up the pass to Nilai Kach. This evening some of the party are out fishing in the Gomal, and to-morrow our sportsmen are promised a markhor drive close to the line of march. The weather is perfect, though a little hot in the middle of the day.

THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER.

PRESENTATION TO LIEUT.-COL. CLEMENTS.

A RECORD of noteworthy service in the field was fittingly acknowledged on Nov. 4 at Allahabad, in the presence of the troops in garrison. Lieutenant-Colonel R. A. P. Clements was presented with the insignia of the Distinguished Service Order. It was a charming morning, says the Pioneer, one of those crisp bright dawns of the early winter that almost reconcile one to the monotony of the longer Indian days. This notwithstanding, there was only a small gathering of spectators to witness what is in the fitness of things an uncommon occurrence; and even the military pageant was shorn of some of its accustomed effect by the absence of the 2nd Bengal Lancers, who, of course, are now on their way to the Cavalry Camp at Aligarh. Nevertheless, the troops in review order made a brave show, and when, later, their bayonets were fixed, there was, in the bright sunlight, that air of martial splendour about the parade that is always unapproachable in its effect. With the general, as his staff, were Colonel Disney, R.A., Major Browne, V.C., deputy assistant adjutant-general for musketry, and Captain K. S. Davison, deputy assistant adjutant-general; and after the line had been inspected the troops formed up into three sides of a square, in brigade order, with fixed bayonets. The officers and colours having taken review order, Colonel Clements was called to the front. Addressing the soldiers General Kinloch said:—

"I have been directed by the Commander-in-Chief to present to Lieutenant-Colonel Clements, of the South Wales Borderers, the insignia of the Distinguished Service Order. This Order, as you all know, has been instituted by Her Majesty the Queen-Empress to mark her sense of the services of officers who have done distinguished service in the field. Few, if any, regiments have suffered severer losses in Her Majesty's service than the South Wales Borderers, the old 24th. During Her Majesty's reign they have taken part in numerous campaigns, and the number of killed and wounded in great battles has been very heavy indeed. The loss has been especially heavy among officers. Besides the loss it has suffered, the regiment has produced many very distinguished officers. Colonel Clements has already received a mark of Her Majesty's favour in his brevet, and I am glad I now have been delegated to present him with this further mark of Her Majesty's approbation. I therefore now decorate him with the cross of the Distinguished Service Order. Colonel Clements, I have very great pleasure in pinning this on your breast."

Colonel Clements briefly thanked the General.

Two sepoy of the 2nd Queen's Own Bengal Light Infantry were then called to the front, and the General said he took advantage of the parade to present to Ram Galpandi and Ram Saran Tewari medals for long service and good conduct. The medals having been fixed upon the breasts of two fine specimens of the native troops, the officers and colours resumed their positions, and the troops marched past the General, who had gone to the saluting point. The artillery leading were followed by the Borderers, to the stirring strain of "The March of the Men of Harlech"; and the Native Infantry having brought up the rear, the parade was dismissed.

The Distinguished Service Order, as its name implies, is conferred for service in the field. The reasons for its conferment may be, and are, cumulative, and in that respect it differs from the older and even more prized distinction of the Victoria Cross. Colonel Clements first saw service in the South African War of 1877-78-79, with which the name of his regiment is so indelibly associated. But it is more particularly for his work in Burma that he has been honoured. Throughout the whole of the Burma campaign proper, as Brigade-Major, and later, in the hunting of dacoits, he did invaluable work, and when his fellow-officers were incapacitated by fever and ill-effects of the trying climate he was alert in raising mounted infantry and in doing other active work. Twice was he wounded: severely at Obu, and again, slightly, at Taindah. Besides winning the deserved confidence and great respect of his men, he was promoted a Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel, and given the medal and clasp. Now, late in the day, perhaps, but none the less properly, her Majesty has been pleased to award him a further mark of her appreciation of his distinguished service.

CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND'S EXPERIENCES.

WRITING from Astor, near Gilgit, on Oct. 27, the correspondent of the Times of India gives the following authentic account of Captain Younghusband's movements on the Cashmere Frontier:—

Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davidson passed down on their way to India on Oct. 25, and I am glad to be in a position to give a full, true, and particular account "of the incident," which occurred in the Pamirs, more especially as more or less garbled accounts have appeared from time to time in certain papers. In order to place the matter clearly before the public, it will be necessary to go a little way back.

Captain Younghusband was sent some months ago by the Indian Foreign Office on special duty into Chinese Turkestan. Early this summer while at Yarkand he received intelligence of the presence of a body of Russian troops on the Chinese Pamirs. He accordingly despatched Lieutenant Davidson, a young British officer, who was travelling in Turkestan at the time to the Alichur Pamir, a region situated to the north of the Great Pamir, and claimed as their territory by China, while he himself proceeded to the south-west corner of the Little Pamir in order to obtain more exact knowledge as to the movements and intentions of the Russians.

Captain Younghusband crossed the Pamirs and descended to the Wakkhan Valley under the northern slope of the Hindoo Koosh. The southernmost of the two rivers which unite at Kila Panja to form the Oxus flows down this valley, the upper part of which is claimed by China, and the lower part is in Wakkhan, a country under the sway of the Ameer of Afghanistan. The upper valley is apparently uninhabited, or at the most very sparsely so, for Captain Younghusband met only two men while passing through it.

On reaching Bozaigumbaz, a deserted village, containing only a few ancient tombs, he found the Russian expedition, for which he was seeking, encamped, consisting of about one hundred men, half of whom were Cossacks, the remainder being infantry, under the command of Colonel Yanoff (not Banoff as has been erroneously stated). Captain Gromchevsky, whose name has been frequently mentioned in connection with this affair, really took no part in it whatever, as he was on the Alai Pamir (Russian territory) at the time of the occurrence.

Captain Younghusband was very well received by the Russian officers, who also on his invitation visited him in his tent, exchanging courtesies, and the utmost cordiality prevailed till the night of the second day after his arrival at Bozaigumbaz, when two of the officers came to his tent after he was in bed, and, expressing their regret at the unpleasant task put upon them, they ordered him to rise, as they had received instructions from Baron Wrewsky, the Governor-General of Turkestan, to arrest him and conduct him to Marghilan, the first Russian cantonment beyond the Alai Pamir, unless he immediately entered into an undertaking in writing to leave the Little Pamir at once and not to travel by certain passes leading into so-called newly acquired Russian territory. Captain Younghusband chose the latter alternative, and signed a paper to this effect. He was then allowed to proceed to the Tagdumbash Pamir, a region which the Russians themselves admit forms a part of Chinese territory.

By careful and cautious inquiries Captain Younghusband was enabled to discover how far the explorations of this military expedition had been conducted, and it appears that not only had the territory of China been trespassed upon, but also those of Afghanistan and Chitral.

Colonel Yanoff and his party left Bozaigumbaz and descended the Wakkhan Valley till they came to the village of Baikra, from which place they turned up a side valley and crossed the Hindoo Koosh by the Korabbaut Pass.

They were now, therefore, on the southern slopes of the great watershed of India, and in a country under British protection—the valley of the Yakhun river, to which the Korabbaut Pass gives access, being in the Chitral State. The Yakhun river, as it is called in Upper Chitral, but known by other names in the various valleys it traverses, forms a natural and comparatively easy road into India. It flows through Chitral and Afghanistan into the Cabul River, and so joins the Indus at Attock.

The Russian expedition descended this valley for a short distance, passing through an almost uninhabited country, the first important village of Chitral being Mastuj, which is several miles beyond the furthest point reached by Colonel Yanoff.

The Russians thus recrossed the Hindoo Koosh by the Baroghil Pass, which brought them once more into the Wakkhan Valley at the village of Sarhad, which is about 40 miles below Bozaigumbaz. This village is in Afghan territory, but the nearest Afghan garrison is at Kila Panja, some four marches lower down the valley.

The inhabitants of Sarhad assembled outside their village on the approach of the Russian party, but being very insufficiently armed they could not offer any resistance to the invaders.

The Russians passed through the valley as quickly as possible, and reached Bozaigumbaz, and then, as the season was advancing and the passes would soon be closed, returned to their own territory in the Alai Pamir.

In the meantime Lieutenant Davidson had reached the Alichur Pamir, which, as I have said, is claimed by the Chinese. At the commencement of last spring the Celestial Government sent a General and a small force to this region to establish a frontier outpost and build a fort there. Lieutenant Davidson fell in with the Chinese troops, and was treated with great civility by their commander, General Chang. He had been staying with his Chinese friends only a few days when Colonel Yanoff and his Cossacks arrived on the scene on their way back from Bozai-gumbaz and Marghilan. Here, again, acting under orders they had received from the Governor-General, the Russians behaved in a most arbitrary manner. Claiming the country as Russian territory, they compelled the Chinese General to withdraw from it immediately, and having placed Lieutenant Davidson under arrest they took him with them to Marghilan.

Here he found Mr. Eliot, an Attaché to the British Embassy at St. Petersburg, who had recently been travelling with Baron Wrewsky, but had been kept completely in the dark regarding the Russian movements in the Pamirs and the arrest of Captain Younghusband.

The Russians, apparently embarrassed as to what they should do next with Lieutenant Davidson, handed him over to Mr. Eliot, who advised him to return to Kashgaria and rejoin Captain Younghusband. This he decided to do, and on reaching the Tagdumbush Pamir he met Captain Younghusband and also General Chang, who expressed himself in most indignant terms regarding the outrage perpetrated by the Russians on the representative of Chinese authority, declaring that his Government would send two Ambans and a large force to occupy the Alichur Pamirs, and so assert the suzerainty of the Emperor of China over that region in the early part of next spring.

Captain Younghusband and Lieutenant Davidson thus wended their way to Cashmere territory, reaching Gilgit on Oct. 14, where they remained till Colonel Durand's arrival, when they proceeded on their road to India.

It will be seen from the above narrative that this incident can hardly be treated with the levity exhibited by some "guides of public opinion." In the first place the action of the Russians in arresting Captain Younghusband, the authorised and accredited agent of the Indian Foreign Office in the Little Pamir, and thereby asserting their right to a tract of country hitherto acknowledged to be within the sphere of British influence, is not the act of some filibustering officer of the Russian-explorer type, whose actions can be conveniently disclaimed, if necessary, by the Czar; but it is the deliberate act of an officer in a very responsible position, the Governor-General at Turkestan.

Next it appears that the Russian Expedition crossed the Hindoo Koosh into Afghanistan, the ruler of which country is our ally, but also penetrated into Chitral, which country is subsidised, protected, and guaranteed by us, and with whom our relations are on a most friendly footing.

It cannot be supposed for an instant that the Russians are anxious to obtain possession of this slice of land from any supposed commercial advantages that might be derived therefrom, as the country, though affording excellent pasturage for cattle, in some parts is absolutely devoid of everything necessary to life, and therefore practically useless to anyone except the nomadic tribes of Khirgiz, who drive their herds from place to place to seek subsistence. Their real object, therefore, is obvious.

Should this incident be allowed to pass unnoticed by the Government, the north-west tribes will undoubtedly come to the conclusion that the supineness of the Paramount Power is induced by a sense of inferiority to their powerful neighbour, which will inevitably result in shaking their faith and weakening their allegiance to the British Raj.

RECEPTION OF ENGLISHMEN BY THE AMEER.

As an antidote to the persistent rumours of the veiled disloyalty of our ally the Ameer, we give below an account, received from the most trustworthy source, of the reception accorded during the past summer to the deputation sent to Cabul by the well-known contractors Messrs. Walsh, Lovett & Co., in compliance with his Highness's invitation. The Calcutta firm have been appointed the Ameer's mercantile agents in this country and Europe, and there is some reason to hope that through their endeavours the commercial relations between Afghanistan and India may be improved and extended. The deputation, consisting of Mr. C. W. Walsh, and Mr. F. A. Martin, brother of the chief proprietor of the Indian branch of the firm, reached Cabul on June 17. Every possible arrangement was made for their safety and comfort on their journey to and from Cabul, as well as during their stay in Afghanistan; and the utmost kindness and consideration were shown to them by the Ameer and his sons, and by all the officials with whom they came in contact. They were honoured by many long interviews with Abdur Rahman, and were much impressed by his business knowledge, shrewd discrimination, and by the immense capacity for work displayed by his Highness, who personally conducts all State affairs, and goes into every detail with systematic thoroughness. A daily darbar is held with regularity and decorum, and the people, from outward appearances, seemed law-abiding and contented.

The frequent excursions of Messrs. Walsh and Martin to the city and surrounding country during their two months' stay at Cabul seemed to excite no more than such ordinary curiosity as would be evinced in any Indian frontier bazaar. The Ameer frequently emphasised his desire that his people should be brought into closer commercial relationship with the people of India, and expressed his regret that former rulers of Afghanistan had been insensible to the advantages to be gained therefrom. He told the deputation that he feared the feelings of true friendship and great good-will which he entertained towards the English were only partially recognised, but he hoped that a better understanding would be brought about as trade between the two countries developed. Nothing could have been more warmly loyal than his Highness's public expressions of his friendly feelings toward the British Government, and the two Englishmen were convinced of the thorough genuineness of those expressions. The Ameer expressed himself well satisfied with the machinery supplied for his workshops, and with the admirable manner in which the European employes had set it up. His Highness was fully impressed with the civilising effect of industry; and he expected great things in the near future as the reward of his liberal initial outlay. It may here be mentioned that minting, cartridge-making, cannon-founding, and barrel-rifling machinery are in full swing; and there are also machines for making boots, weaving, saw-mills and flour-mills, affording altogether employment for some half-dozen Europeans and from 1,200 to 1,300 workmen, of whom about fifty are natives of India. Mr. Martin is now in England on business connected with his firm's contract with the Ameer; and we understand that he will there engage some more skilled workmen and experts to join the small party of adventurous Englishmen already serving Abdur Rahman at Cabul. —Pioneer.

TERRIBLE STORM IN THE BAY OF BENGAL. LOSS OF THE INDIAN MARINE STEAMER ENTERPRISE.

THE following further particulars of the storm in the Bay of Bengal—some account of which has already been received by telegraph—have been received by the present mail:—

CALCUTTA, NOV. 9.—During the last few days every vessel that has come up the river has reported terrible weather in the Bay, and to-day news has been received that the Indian Marine steamer Enterprise, with a crew of 77 men all told, foundered off Port Blair on Monday morning, Nov. 2, and only six men were saved. The Penal Settlement was visited by the cyclone, which came later on to the Sandheads on Sunday night. During the afternoon of Sunday, bad weather was noticed by the residents to be coming over the island, and as night came on it was evident that a great storm was bursting over the place. By midnight it had come upon them in its full force, and from that hour till 3 o'clock on Monday morning the cyclone was blowing its very hardest direct from the north. As far as can be ascertained the centre of the storm passed over the island between three and four, when there was a comparative lull of about forty minutes duration. Then the storm veered round to the south, coming back bursting over the island with renewed vigour, and lasting until 5 o'clock, when it gradually spent itself. The Enterprise, moored in the harbour, met the full force of the cyclone, and it seems had weathered the storm fairly well till about 2 A.M., when she suddenly broke from her moorings, and was dashed on to the S. P. Reef. All on board were lost, save four lascars, one fireman, and one native steward. The officers on board the ill-fated ship at the time were the Commander, Captain Macarthy; First Officer, Mr. Smith; Second Officer, Mr. Shortland; Third Officer, Mr. Andrew; Chief Engineer, Mr. Fennell; and Assistant Engineers, Messrs. Joseph and Gonsalves. Up to the 6th instant, only the bodies of the captain and the three engineers had been recovered. The S. P. Reef runs out from the Main Island into the harbour for about 300 yards, and is composed of jagged iron-stone rocks. On it the ship went to pieces, and now nothing can be seen but her stern and her boilers. The six survivors hung on till day broke, and then swam ashore. The survivors tried to land exactly opposite the Female Gaol, but were unable to attain their object owing to the heavy surf which was running, and there was every probability of their being drowned, seeing which a band of convict women of their own accord joined hands and formed a chain. They went into the water pluckily, stood the buffeting of the seas, and had the satisfaction of being able to safely land the six men. Tremendous damage was done all over the Settlement. No less than sixty convicts were killed, and two hundred injured by falling buildings. Government House was unroofed, as were also the bungalows of several of the officers. Two steam-launches and nearly all the boats and lighters in the place were destroyed, and the paddy crops utterly ruined.

With reference to the Indian Marine steamer Enterprise, which was lost in the terrible storm in the Bay of Bengal, we are now able to give some additional particulars which may prove of interest to our readers. The Enterprise, which was built by Messrs. Dudgeon & Co., of London, in the year 1873, was an iron screw steamer with a gross tonnage of 540 tons, and a nett tonnage of 394, her nominal h.p. being 150 and the indicated h.p. 750. Her crew numbered all told 79, including 6 officers, while there were also on board several private servants employed by the officers. Since she was first commissioned in 1873, she had been engaged on the Bengal side, and it was only six months ago that she was removed from Rangoon, where she had been on general duty, to Port Blair to relieve the Quangtung, which had been stationed on guardship duty off the Andamans. The Enterprise was a most substantially built and reliable vessel, and the fact of her having safely weathered several cyclones of intense severity shows that the storm in which she foundered must have been a terribly severe one. Her commander was Captain Vincent Macarthy, who had been in the Indian Marine service since September 1881; he was only in his thirty-fourth year, and this was his first command in the service, and he had only held it for the past eight or nine months, he having been formerly Chief Officer of the I.M.S. Clive, in which capacity he was doubtless known to many of the maritime community of this city. Mr. Lewis Harrison Smith, the Chief Officer, joined the service in April 1884 and secured his first-grade certificate four years later, he being only in his twenty-ninth year. Mr. Arthur Vincent Shortland, the 2nd Officer, had been attached to the service only since the 19th of May last year, and had not yet attained his majority. Mr. Henry Rowland Andrew, the 3rd Officer, had been connected with the service for a like period, he having joined it on the same day as Mr. Shortland, while he also was quite a young man, being barely two years older than the second officer. Mr. George Fennell, the Chief Engineer, was in his twenty-ninth year, and was the holder of a first-class certificate. The Assistant Engineer, Mr.

Joseph Valentine Gonsalves, was born in the year 1859, and had been an assistant engineer of the first class since October 1882, while the other Assistant Engineer, Mr. Alfred Minos Joseph, was his senior by three years, and had been in possession of a first-class certificate since February 1883. Mr. Asento Rozario, the gunner, joined the service in January 1884, Mr. Lewis Peter Lobo, the clerk, in September 1886, while Mr. A. B. Appaswamy, the apothecary, had also been in the service some time. Throughout Tuesday all the Indian Marine steamers at present in Bombay were flying their flags at half-mast, while the vessels of the Royal Navy now in harbour in token of their sympathy with their brethren of the Indian Marine had run up the same sad ensigns.

Intelligence was received in Bombay on Nov. 11 to the effect that Mr. Asento Rozario, the gunner of the Indian Marine steamer Enterprise, was not drowned, as previously reported, he having been away from the ship on leave when the vessel foundered in the cyclone. No additional particulars have been received to the effect that any other of the officers or crew of the ill-fated vessel have been saved, or that any of the bodies of the drowned have been recovered.

CHEAP PASSAGES FOR INDIAN OFFICERS.

THE Englishman says:—There is something very attractive at first sight about the proposal that has been more than once put forward, both in this country and at home, that in the contract for carrying the mails a condition should be inserted compelling the subsidised company to carry the civil and military officers of Government and their families at a reduced rate of passage-money. We are distinctly of opinion that it would be well, both in the interests of the Government and public service, and for the contentment of the officers concerned, if means were devised for lightening the burden of the cost of locomotion between India and England, and for making it more apparent to the public that this cost has in every case to be added to the cost of European living in India. We believe that something might be done in this direction without much difficulty. It is impossible to doubt that the efficiency of the public service is promoted by every increase in the facilities afforded to officers to take as much leave to Europe as is necessary for them, whether for mental or for physical recreation; and it is very certain that the cost of the passage, though it has been greatly reduced by the liberality and the enterprise of the various competing lines of steamers, is still sufficiently large to make the home visit an expensive, and, in many cases, an impossible luxury.

But, in the first place, it is clear that, if the condition we have named be attached to the mail contract, the cost of the concession must be added to the subsidy; for there is no reason why the company carrying the mails should bear this cost, nor would it consent to do so without remuneration. And when this is done, it will not be fair to the Post Office authorities to lump this extra payment with the payment made on account of the mails; and it would certainly come to this, that the payment would ultimately be made by the Government as the price of the specific service. That is to say, the transaction would ultimately come to this, that Government would undertake to pay to the company carrying the mails a certain sum for each civil or military officer carried in the mail packets, on condition that an equivalent amount were deducted from the charge made for this passage. A further difficulty, however, would arise. Such an arrangement as that which we have now sketched would of course confer on the particular company or companies subsidised a virtual monopoly of the passenger traffic, at least so far as Indian officials and officers of the Indian Army are concerned. Even if these companies were prepared to pay handsomely for the privilege by making a large reduction in their charges in return for only a small payment by Government, it would still be difficult to justify such an interference with the freedom of private enterprise; and it would render still more disagreeable the already invidious task of choosing certain companies for the privilege of carrying the mails, and leaving out others. Probably the best way out of these difficulties would be for the Government of India to notify that in future a certain portion—say 20 per cent.—the actual cost of an officer's passage home and out on duly authorised leave, would be defrayed from public funds. This concession, while it would be an immense boon to every branch of the service in India, would probably not be so expensive as might seem likely at first blush, for it would often encourage men who are ailing, or who are holding on to their work out here under great difficulties, to take the leave which is needed, not only for themselves, but also for the efficiency of the service. It has been proved over and over again that liberal leave rules are the truest economy of the Government of India. On the other hand, it is obvious that the flow of promotion would be greatly quickened by such facilities for visiting Europe being afforded to the senior men both in the Civil Service, in the various departments, and in the Indian Staff Corps. We commend these points to the consideration of the Financial Department of the Government of India.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The Indian Commander-in-Chiefship.—Reuter has fully confirmed our recent statement about Sir George White's chances for the post of Commander-in-Chief in India when Sir Frederick Roberts vacates a year hence, says the Pioneer. The further announcement that General White's name has been put forward for one of the Presidency commands may possibly have an element of truth in it, but as Bombay will not fall vacant until March 6, 1895, unless Sir George Greaves is translated to a higher appointment, and as General Dorman only arrived in Madras last spring, there is not much likelihood of the Quetta Division losing its popular commander for a long time to come.

The Cold Weather Operations in Upper Burma.—The commands of the various columns which will operate during the cold weather in Upper Burma have been allotted as follows:—Kanhaw Column—Capt. Stevens, 4th Madras Pioneers; Nwengal Column, from Fort White—Major Parry Okeden, Royal Rifles; Baungshe Column—Col. Chalmer, Royal Rifles; Tlanglang Column—Capt.

Browne, 39th Garhwalis; Tashon Column—Major Howlett, 2nd Burmah Inf.; Maingkwang (Hukong Valley) Column—Major Dalzell, Oxfordshire Light Inf.; Irrawaddy Column—Capt. Davies, Devon Regt.; North Eastern Column—Major Yule, Devon Regt.; Eastern Column—Capt. Preston, 3rd Burmah Inf.

The Case of Sergt. McNamara.—Sergt. McNamara, of the Ordnance Department, who, for causing the death of a native chuckler, was indicted before the Madras High Court Sessions, firstly for culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and secondly, for causing grievous hurt, having been acquitted by the jury on the first count, and having, owing to the jury disagreeing on the second count, been retried on the latter count, has been found guilty on this count by a fresh jury. The case, an Indian paper says, has excited considerable local interest at both trials. The defendant denied all knowledge of the deceased, and pleaded an alibi, which was supported by several other sergeants of the same department and by his wife. In the new trial, the prosecution was strengthened by an additional witness, Conductor Smith, also of the same department, who gave such conclusive evidence against McNamara that counsel for the defence decided to call no witnesses. On the jury returning their verdict, the chief justice presiding said it was his opinion that Mrs. McNamara had deliberately perjured herself at the first trial, and added:—"I also believe the friends of this man McNamara, the sergeants, I do not say all of them, deliberately endeavoured to deceive the Court and jury regarding the alibi." His lordship ordered the prisoner to be brought up on Nov. 21 for sentence.

Army Dress Regulations.—"Staff Corps" writes to the Pioneer:—

SIR,—Would you kindly do me the favour of giving the following a place in your columns:—

- Costume No. 1.—Full dress jacket, breeches, and long boots.
2. Full dress jacket, cloth overalls, and Wellingtons.
3. Cloth patrol, breeches, and long boots.
4. Cloth patrol, cloth overalls, and Wellingtons.
5. Serge patrol, breeches, and long boots.
6. Serge patrol, serge overalls, and Wellingtons.
7. Khaki drill patrol, khaki drill breeches, and long boots.
8. Khaki drill patrol, khaki drill overalls, and Wellingtons.
9. Khaki drill patrol, khaki drill overalls, and putties.
10. Khaki drill patrol, khaki drill overalls, and gaiters.
11. Khaki serge patrol, Bedford cords, and long boots.
12. Khaki serge patrol, khaki serge overalls, and Wellingtons.
13. Cloth mess jacket.
14. Summer mess jacket.
15. Field service kit, khaki drill or serge; but, if mounted, with the Elcho boot.

In addition to the above, four different head-dresses, a waterproof cloak and a cloth greatcoat, mess patent leather Wellingtons, ordinary black leather Wellingtons for dismounted duties, long riding-boots, Elcho field boots, lace shooting-boots, two different forms of sword equipment, and the usual scientific impedimenta, Christmas-tree ornaments, which the modern officer is supposed to hang about his person when he takes the field. Surely there is room for commonsense to step in and bring about a change!

The 26th Bombay Inf. is not likely to be converted until about the middle of next year.

The military station of Sambalpur has been declared a cantonment, and will in future be garrisoned by Bombay instead of Madras troops.

The office of the secretary to Government, Military Dept., at Poona, closed on Nov. 9, and reopened at Bombay on the 10th.

It has been decided that no medical officer is to be admitted to the Indian Medical Service for the Bombay Presidency at the examination to be held in August next, as there is no vacancy on the establishment.

All the appointments recently made for the Kurrachee Depot are merely experimental. A permanent staff will be appointed next year, after the new scheme now on trial has been approved.

The Serapis arrived at Bombay on Nov. 7 with sixty five officers, fourteen ladies and fifteen children. One soldier and one child died on the voyage. After leaving Queenstown the ship encountered a strong gale for four days.

Under the authority of the Secretary of State for India, it is notified that such of the Army Staff appointments, specified in India Army Circulars, clause 66 of 1891, as are usually held by officers of the British Service, are open to duly qualified officers, whether serving in or out of India.

It is directed that a deputy-assistant adjutant-general officiating as an assistant adjutant-general, in addition to his own duties, shall be allowed for the additional duties the available half staff pay of the temporary appointment.

The Government of India, in confirming the appointment of Serg.-Major Rowlands, late of the Bangalore garrison, as officer in charge of Military Pensioners, Secunderabad, has suggested the advisability of selecting in future officers of higher standing for such posts.

The detachment of the 5th Goorkhas, which is to act as a personal escort of the British Agent at Gilgit, reached Astor on Oct. 30. The weather experienced on the march was very severe, and there were a number of cases of frost-bite among the followers.

The work of recruiting for the new 24th Beloochistan Regiment proceeds slowly in spite of all that Colonel Nicholson, the Commandant, can do. According to the latest returns, including the transfers from other regiments, the new regiment is now only about 350 strong.

A notification appears in the Gazette of India announcing the reorganisation of the Madras Cavalry in three regiments of four squadrons each. The 4th Madras Light Cavalry will be disbanded on Jan. 1 next, while the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Madras Lancers will be augmented from three to four squadrons each.

When the Madras Cavalry is reorganised, the 2nd Madras Lancers, now at Kamptee, will be moved to Bangalore; but, before this is done, the Government of India suggested that a corps of Mounted Volunteers should be organised similar to the corps which formerly existed there. Kamptee will then have two more Madras regiments stationed there.

The Government of India has sanctioned the construction of a telegraph line connecting the District Staff Office, Poona, with the Staff Office at Kirkee, which the military authorities have long been asking for. The line will be put up by the Telegraph Department, who will supply the entire plant, for which they will charge the Military Department a monthly rental. All the operators for the new line will be military signallers.

The Government of India has extended to all British corps, with effect from April 1, 1892, the rule hitherto restricted to batteries of R.A., that non-commissioned officers employed on extra regimental duty are, after three months' absence, seconded in their corps, it being understood that, when no longer required for such extra regimental duty, a non-commissioned officer will be returned to his corps, and be absorbed into the first vacancy occurring therein.

A Madras paper learns that, after careful consideration, the Government of India has intimated their inability to sanction any increase to the office establishment of the Quartermaster-General of the Madras Army, Ootacamund. The proportion of clerks in the office of the Quartermaster-General, Ootacamund, is already greater than that of the Quartermaster-General in India, whether it be considered with reference to the number of troops or the number of commands or the number of stations in each Presidency.

The Sibesar, Darrang, Lakhimpore, and Nowgong Mounted Rifles have been amalgamated into one corps with the designation of the "Assam Valley Mounted Rifles." Major James Buckingham, C.I.E., Commandant of the Assam Valley Administrative Battalion, is Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding, with Capt. A. W. B. Kirwan, of the Lakhimpore, and Capt. D. McT. Lumsden, of the Darrang Mounted Rifles as Majors in the amalgamated corps. The headquarters will be at Jorhat.

It has been notified that the grant of donation of six months' pay and allowances to all ranks (including followers) of the detachments of the 43rd Goorkhas (Rifle) Regiment of Bengal Infantry and the 12th Regiment (2nd Burma Battalion) of Madras Infantry, which advanced towards Manipore under Major C. J. W. Grant, V.C., was intended to include all the pay, staff pay, field or local allowances, batta and emoluments of any kind which the officers and men and followers referred to were in receipt of from Government at the time.

A sergeant of the Buffs, named Waters, attempted to murder Colour-Sergeant Hoar of the same regiment in the sergeants' mess, Fort William, on Oct. 31. Hoar and three or four more sergeants were seated in the mess verandah, when Waters entered, seized Hoar by the head and cut his throat with a razor. The chair was pulled over, and owing to this fact and to Hoar being a big stout man the injuries inflicted are not likely to prove fatal. The motive is a mystery, Waters refusing to state why he made the attack. Apparently the two men were good friends. Hoar was in the military hospital when the mail left.

With a view to affording officers who have passed through a course of transport training a better practical experience, general officers commanding have been requested to detail a trained officer to accompany troops on the line of march, whenever such troops are moving equipped with Government transport. It is considered that a month would suffice for the purpose, and, should an officer's regiment not be moving, he should be attached to another regiment for the purpose, and, if practicable, during the relief season immediately succeeding the period of his qualifying on transport work. It is to be distinctly understood that no officer should be detailed unless he can be spared from his corps, and that he will only be placed in temporary charge of the transport of the corps moving in relief, and will not dispossess the Regimental Transport officer of his monthly allowance.

The question having arisen, whether the permission to subscribe for children only granted to officers of the Staff Corps and other branches of the service who had made provision for their wives when the Indian Military Service Family Pension Regulations came into force, may be held to apply to continuous Indian Service Royal Artillery and Royal Engineer officers who have been recently admitted, and who are married and have made similar provision, the Secretary of State for India sees no objection to allowing the officers referred to, who have made other provision for their wives, to subscribe for children only, but they will, of course, be treated in the same manner as widowers; that is, they must pay unmarried rates of subscription in addition to the donations and subscriptions laid down in the rules for children.

Details have been published of the composition of the new Company of Submarine Miners for India. It consists of seven officers and seventy-four non-commissioned officers, and is called H Company of Royal Engineers. Poona is made the headquarters, and the company is divided into four sections. At Bombay and Rangoon there will respectively be two lieutenants with twenty-one non-commissioned officers, and at Kurrachee and Calcutta one lieutenant with fifteen. The Inspector of Submarine Defences is commandant, and the six lieutenants are those at present employed on submarine mining duty at the four ports. The nucleus of the Company has been formed by transferring to it the British non-commissioned officers, Royal Engineers, who formerly constituted the submarine mining sections of the A Companies in the three corps of Sappers and Miners.

The regulations controlling the Reserve Volunteers in India have been modified. The Government, having had their attention drawn to the disproportion which exists in many districts between the number of enrolled Volunteers and the available adult European population, now deem it necessary to urge all who are unable or unwilling to become active Volunteers to join the Reserve. The capitation grant of 10 rs. will be granted only to Reservists who shall have attended seven parades or drills in the year, inclusive of those for musketry. Commandants will also have to certify that the men are acquainted with the proper method of keeping their arms, accoutrements and ammunition, and that these are in good order, before the allowance will be given.

Major Babington Peile has returned from England, and assumed the command of the 2nd Bombay Grenadiers.

Capt. H. G. Kenny, 2nd Bombay Lancers, has rejoined his regiment on return from furlough.

The appointment of Brig.-Gen. J. Gatacre, C.B., to the command of the Nagpore district, is gazetted in the Government Gazette.

Col. J. Hibbert, General List, Infantry, assistant commissary-general, 1st class, has been granted leave for one year.

Lieut. Barton, of the 4th Bombay Rifles, is about to be appointed to the Punjab Commission.

Capt. B. B. Russell, R.E., company commander, Sappers and Miners, is proceeding home on two years' furlough.

Lieut.-Col. W. J. Morse has been appointed officiating commandant of the 12th Bombay Infantry.

Capt. Aplin left Raipore on Nov. 3 to join the 17th Bombay Inf. at Aden to officiate as wing commander, vice Gordon, gone on sick leave to England.

Col. H. L. Nutt has been appointed political superintendent and commandant of the Local Corps, Savantwadi, and Col. W. A. Salmon to be first assistant to the political agent, Kattywar.

Major Sullivan, R.E., the newly-appointed commandant of the Bombay Sappers and Miners, was at Simla when the mail left, on special duty in connection with the frontier defences.

Lieut.-Col. S. V. Gordon, 23rd Pioneers, Major H. H. R. Heath, 11th Bengal Lancers, and Capt. H. S. Smith, Manchester Regt., have each been granted twelve months' leave to England, on private affairs.

Major G. R. Price, R.A., had assumed the command of the Neemuch Station, vice Lieut.-Col. W. H. D. Jones, 2nd Bombay Lancers, who was en route to Poona with his regiment.

Brig.-Gen. T. Graham, commanding the Myingyan District, having been selected for the command of a first-class district in Bengal, Col. Farmer will succeed him in the command of the Myingyan District.

Capt. W. C. Aslett, in temporary command of the 9th Bombay Infantry, will, on being relieved of the command by Major Proudfoot, rejoin the 1st Grenadiers. Major Proudfoot was expected to arrive on Nov. 8.

Capt. Cardew, of the Leicestershire Regiment, the newly-appointed Paymaster of Deolali, will not take up the duties of his appointment till about March of next year, till which time Capt. Lands will continue to discharge the duties.

Lieut.-Col. Prideaux, Assistant Judge Advocate-General, comes home shortly on ninety days' privilege leave. Major C. J. Blomfield, of the 2nd batt. Lancashire Fusiliers, acts for him during his absence.

Major-General East has been selected as the representative of the Madras Army, on promotion, to the board to be convened in India for the supplementary selection of officers for promotion to the rank of colonel and major-general.

In consequence of the return from sick leave of Lieut. A. E. S. Hartigan, squadron officer, Jacob's Horse, the following appointments are made:—Lieut. A. E. S. Hartigan, squadron officer, to officiate as 3rd squadron commander; Lieut. R. E. Roome, squadron officer, and officiating 3rd squadron commander, to officiate as 4th squadron commander.

Captain A. W. L. Bayly, D.S.O., Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, Mhow district, applied for a passage to England in the troopship Serapis, sailing on Nov. 18, for the purpose of joining the Staff College, Sandhurst.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Nov. 11.

The Provincial Conference of Bengal.—The Congress itself being in a moribund condition, the Bengal Provincial Conference, which is only one of its offshoots, appears also to be in its last struggles. The interest which these political assemblies excited at the outset has subsided, and if they still seem to have a spark of life in them, it is due not so much to any inherent vitality in them as to the manipulations of their promoters. There were in this city two meetings last week in connection with the Provincial Council or Conference. The number of so-called delegates who met together on the first day was not more than twenty-five, and most of these were from places in close proximity to Calcutta. On the second day there was an improvement in the attendance, though we are not in a position to say whether the gentlemen who took part in the deliberations on the latter occasion represented any one besides themselves. At the first meeting, the Rev. A. P. Begg, of the London Missionary Society, was pitchforked into the chair in the absence of a more eligible headpiece.—Reis and Rayet.

Police Torture.—At the High Court on Nov. 4 Justices Beverley and Ameer Ali delivered judgment in an appeal against the conviction of a Hindoo head constable of Toltoli outpost, Backergunge District, and sentence of ten years' imprisonment, for unlawfully confining and torturing a Mahomedan with the object of obtaining information as to stolen property. The medical report showed that the Mahomedan had received serious injuries. His complaint was thrice inquired into, in his absence, by the local authorities and dismissed, but he went to the High Court and secured an order for a fresh investigation in his presence, with the result that he secured a conviction. Mr. Justice Beverley in delivering judgment, remarked that the case afforded a striking instance of the difficulty an ordinary person had to obtain redress in certain cases, unless backed by some wealthy and powerful patron. The conviction and sentence were confirmed, the judge remarking that the appellant had acted in a particularly cruel, tyrannical, and disgusting manner, and exemplary punishment was necessary in such cases for the ends of justice and the protection of the community. Mr. Justice Amir Ali expressed surprise and regret that an injured person should have experienced so much difficulty in obtaining justice.

His Highness the Maharaja of Benares, considering the infancy of the Lodge "Fraternity and Perseverance" at Benares, has placed his building, known as the "Mint," at the disposal of the Masons, to hold their meetings in for one year. Mr. Wright, the commissioner, who is the master of the lodge, proposed a vote of thanks to the Maharaja, which was carried with acclamation.

Arrangements have been started in Calcutta to give Mr. Justice Wilson, retiring judge of the High Court, a public entertainment and a souvenir of his long and honourable connection with the local Bench and Bar.

A Cuttack correspondent reports that two irrigation officers, Mr. Butler, executive engineer, and a Mr. Barlow, assistant engineer, were set upon the other day and seriously beaten by a body of cultivators, headed by a notoriously quarrelsome petty landowner.

The new Imperial Central Library, Calcutta, which is under the charge of Professor Forrest, has been almost completed and arranged in the new Imperial Secretariat Buildings in Government Place. The Library occupies a large annexe which faces the principal entrance to the buildings.

On Friday night (Nov. 6) the Calcutta Volunteer officers gave a farewell dinner to the Rev. Mr. Atkinson, honorary chaplain, and on Sunday he preached his farewell sermon to a Volunteer congregation. There was a large muster of the adult and cadet battalions of the Rifles for the church parade.

A marble bust of Sir W. E. Baker, the first Public Works Secretary to the Government of India, has been placed in the Secretariat Buildings, Government Place.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Nov. 12.

Lady Wenlock, accompanied by Mrs. Firth, paid a visit to the mother of H.H. the Prince of Arcot at her residence, Rushk-i-Irum, Mount Road, on Nov. 7. Her Excellency was received at the carriage by the Prince's two younger brothers, Ghulam Mahomed Ghouse Khan Bahadur and Abdul Ali Khan Bahadur, and was conducted to the top of the staircase, where she was met by her Highness the Begum Sahiba and conducted to the drawing-room, where her Excellency took her seat on a rich sofa under a gold embroidered canopy with silver posts. After a quarter of an hour's conversation her Excellency took leave of her Highness, attar and pan being presented and a rich garland of flowers put round Lady Wenlock's neck by the Begum.

Anonymous Verses.—The case against Mr. Gibbs, of the Singapore Civil Service, was resumed at Ootacamund on Nov. 11. It appears that Mrs. Martin, the plaintiff, had received some anonymous verses, which were the cause of action. Mr. Gibbs admitted the handwriting of the verses produced to be his. He had kept the original, handing this copy to a friend, whose name he would not divulge. His friend had written asking him for an envelope addressed to Mrs. Martin. Mr. Gibbs sent it, never thinking what use might be made of the envelope. Nothing would induce him to divulge the name of his friend. He preferred to risk the consequences of his refusal. A charge was then framed under section 509 of the Penal Code. On Nov. 12 Mr. Gibbs appealed to the Court and said that he was actuated by strong private reasons when he refused to disclose the name of his friend. He would now ask permission to add to his former statement. The verses, he said, were written by Mrs. Rhodes Morgan, and he, Mr. Gibbs, had nothing whatever to do with their composition or with the posting of them. He was acquitted and discharged.

The Madras Budget Estimates for 1892-93 have just been issued. Among other noticeable features they provide for the salary of an additional Under-Secretary to Government in the Chief Secretariat at 1,200 rs. monthly. As a set-off against this additional expenditure credit is taken for a saving of 500 rs. monthly in the salary of the Military Secretary, who will draw 2,000 rs. instead of 2,500 rs. drawn by his predecessor. The Director of Public Instruction estimates the total charges for education in the Madras Presidency for next year at 17½ lacs of rupees, which the Government has reduced by 1 lac.

Eurasian Regiments.—Mr. Rowlandson, the president of the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association, shortly meets Lord Wenlock regarding the Eurasian Regiment movement. Meanwhile, writing in the association's organ, he says he hopes he will be free very soon to indicate what shape the Government's proposals in the matter may be expected to take. He adds:—"As the Madras Government is the only Local Government which has shown a desire to ascertain what can be made of the Eurasian as a soldier, it seems best for the community throughout India that the efforts of all associations should be concentrated upon an addition to the Madras Army of one Eurasian regiment. I have received a good many applications from other Presidencies, and from the whole Empire we shall no doubt get together a thousand men that any Government would be glad to get." He has accordingly written to the Presidents of the sister associations of Bengal, Bombay, and the North-West Provinces suggesting that all shall make common cause in this movement. His appeal to the chaplains and other clergy has been most kindly responded to, and supplies of forms of application have been going to all the principal mofussil towns and stations for some days past.

It is believed that the Lawrence Asylum Press, Madras, is to be taken over by Government and be worked as an adjunct to the Government Press. Private printing firms will not much longer have to compete against a State-aided institution.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Nov. 14.

Lord Harris.—The Governor of Bombay has been passing a very busy time in Sind. He received at Kurrachee an influential deputation from the Chamber of Commerce of Sind. His Excellency, in replying to the address which was presented to him, spoke at length on the subjects introduced, and expressed the great interest he took in Kurrachee and its future. Lord Harris afterwards received addresses from the Sind Sabha and the Mahomedan Association, and replied to each. He distributed prizes at the Frere Hall to the Grammar School pupils. There was a large dinner, with an evening party afterwards, at the Commissioner's. On the morning of Nov. 7 the Governor rode out to the Maurypur salt works, over which he was conducted by Mr. Coghlan. On Nov. 9 the Governor arrived at Hyderabad (Sind), and was met at the station by Mr. Woodburn, Collector. On landing on the Gidu Bandar the Mirs of Hyderabad and Mirpore were presented to His Excellency, who was received by Major Riddell, commanding a guard-of-honour of the 2nd Beloochis. The battery fired a salute. His Excellency visited the lunatic asylum and model farm, drove to the fort, and ascended the bastion. After inspecting the site for the new gaol, he drove back to the Collector's bungalow for breakfast. In the afternoon his Excellency received visits from the Mirs of Hyderabad and Mirpore. Several other native gentlemen were also presented to his Excellency. A municipal address was then read. After his Excellency's reply the proceedings terminated. The Governor then visited the Female Normal School, the Hyderabad Training College, the High School, the Women's Hospital, and dined with the Collector in the evening. On Nov. 10 his Excellency rode to Merani Monument, then across the Fuleli, and other canals, to Tandvallahyar, a distance of some eleven miles, and then back to Hyderabad. Next day, in company with his Staff, his Excellency rode to Arab-ji-Wahi (thirty-four miles), where he was to stay with Colonel Crawford until the end of the week.

The Nagpore Accident.—The result of the railway inquiry goes to show that the circumstances as reported are substantially correct. The Commander-in-Chief's train being late, was proceeding at a high rate of speed, and on approaching Kapri at 6.20 A.M., the tire of the right front wheel of the leading engine broke, owing to a covered flaw in the metal. This broke the rail and pushed the leading wheels off the rails. The tires of the leading engine were old and had been packed with iron washers, as is occasionally done in cases of replaced tires. From the evidence of the greaser of the leading engine, who escaped with a serious shaking, it appears the driver did not inspect his wheels at the last stopping-place, but this evidence is doubtful. The opinion is that the tires were old and worn and the metal flawed, but no criminal neglect can be imputed to the company or its servants, as the flaw was imperceptible from outside, and the wheels though old were serviceable.

Excommunication.—The subjoined is quoted from the Indian Daily News:—"Dr. Bhandarkar, the greatest Sanskrit scholar of Western India, a man of blameless life and high reputation, has been excommunicated by his caste, merely for permitting his widowed daughter to marry again. The friends of reform should rejoice. Men like Dr. Bhandarkar will not submit to ignorant caste dictation and senseless tyranny in such matters; and these exhibitions of stupid intolerance are much more likely to discredit and damage the caste system than they are to hinder the progress of social reforms demanded by the enlightened spirit of the age. It is a case of ignorance against intelligence, cruel oppression against humanity. Intelligence and humanity must win. And the greater the spirit of intolerance manifested by the losing side, the more readily will the sensible and educated elect for broad and liberal Hindooism."

Stopping a Play.—The Jam-e-Jamshed says that an Urdu play, entitled "Kalif Haroon Rashid," was announced at the Novelty Theatre, and about an hour before the commencement of the performance Mr. Brewin, superintendent of the police, went to the theatre and told the proprietor, Mr. Khataoo, that as some Mussulmans had expressed an objection to the play, it would be advisable to stop it. Mr. MacDermott also came in some time afterwards, and said the same thing to Mr. Khataoo. The proprietor replied that there was nothing objectionable that he could see in the play, that it had been performed many times in Bombay and in Hyderabad, which has a large Mussulman population; but that none had ever objected to it, and that he was now surprised to hear that it was calculated to injure any one's sensibilities. He, however, agreed to stop the performance, pending a reference to the Commissioner of Police. Mr. Khataoo went the following day to the Commissioner in company with his solicitor, Mr. P. M. Kanga, and handed over the play to him, in order that he might see if there was anything objectionable in it. It is stated that the Commissioner is going to consult some leading Mahomedans as to the character of the play.

The Manchester Guardian's statement that a Tata Parsee cotton merchant of Bombay contemplates starting a line of steamers to convey cotton to Japan at lower rates than are at present possible is authoritatively denied.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Rangoon correspondent of the Times:—

Nov. 22.—Our troops have occupied a post on the Nampoung stream, and the Chinese troops have withdrawn to the other side. The Deputy Commissioner at Bhamo met Chang, the Chinese commander of the body of troops which had crossed the stream, and held a friendly interview with him. Chang at first demurred to the orders that no Chinese armed men would be allowed on this side of the Nampoung stream, and proposed to refer the question to his superior officer. Subsequently, however, Chang returned to Manwaing, and all the Chinese troops then withdrew to the other side of the Nam-poung stream.

The prospect in the majority of the distressed districts in Upper Burma is about as bad as can be. Relief works on a large scale must be carried on for months, until the next rains. Owing to the rain holding off, the paddy crop has absolutely failed in several districts. It could not now be saved. The minor crops would, however, still be benefited by rain.

In Upper Burma rain-making experiments have been begun by Lieutenant Pilcher, R.E. His second experiment, on a hill about 1,500 feet high in the Yemethin district, with two heavy charges of gun cotton of 30 lb. and 40 lb. each, was followed by rain, although the sky had been cloudless before. Orders have been despatched by the Chief Commissioner to try heavy explosions of any substance available, gunpowder, dynamite, or gun cotton, throughout all the bad districts. There is moisture enough in the air in Upper Burma if it can be shaken out.

The Rangoon Times of yesterday announces that a heavy rain, apparently extending over a wide area, has been falling in Yemethin, which is one of the worst districts. In Lower Burma, where rain is much wanted in several districts, a steady and general rainfall has occurred.

The arrangements proposed by Sir A. Mackenzie for expeditions to the Chin country and among the Kachyen tribes on the Bhamo frontier have been definitely approved by the Government of India. The proposal of General Stewart, commanding the Burma division, to employ a larger force has been overruled. The force employed amongst the Chin tribes will comprise 500 British infantry, 1,800 native infantry, 300 pioneers, and six mountain guns. In addition a reserve of 300 men will be stationed at Yowdwin. New military posts will be established, and roads will be constructed between Burma and the various posts. The tribute payable by the Chin tribes will be considerably increased. The Bengal authorities complained that the tribute taken on the Burma side was too light to impress the tribes with any due sense of subordination, and that fact had hampered their arrangements on the Chittagong side.

The force employed amongst the Kachyens will consist of 275 British infantry, 80 mounted British infantry, 400 military police, 75 mounted police, 400 native infantry, and 6 mountain guns, with a strong reserve at Bhamo. The amber mines will be explored. The Kachyen tribes who have raided will be punished, and all the Kachyen chiefs will be compelled to pay regular tribute. Slavery, which is universal amongst the Kachyens, and is the usual way in which debts are paid, the debtor selling himself to the creditor for a term of years, will not be interfered with. The Kachyens will, however, be compelled to restore all Burman captives, otherwise this domestic institution will be left untouched for the present. Sir A. Mackenzie in his minute observes that an immediate crusade against slavery would certainly rouse all the Kachyen tribes into a fierce and active hostility. With the cessation of raids the chief source of the supply of slaves would be cut off; time and civilization would do the rest.

Even after these expeditions considerable tracts of country along the Upper Irrawaddy which are included in our territory will remain unexplored.

Nov. 29.—All is quiet on the Bhamo frontier. The Chinese official at Momein stated that his Government had not sent him any orders on the question of China's ceasing to send armed men across the Nam-poung stream. The British Ambassador at Peking has been asked to get this done.

General satisfaction is felt and expressed in Burma at Brigadier-General Wolseley having been appointed K.C.B. It is felt that this is a well-deserved recognition of his good and gallant service.

During the past week a general rainfall has occurred for two days throughout the central portion of the distressed districts in Upper Burma. The rain, which has now ceased, has saved a fraction of the crops of millet and peas. These crops were, however, very poor and on the verge of perishing. The rain was too late to save the paddy crop. The rainfall was so general, and it extended over such a wide area, that it is difficult to attribute it to the recent rainmaking experiments, although they doubtless intensified it in the localities where they took place. Lieutenant Pilcher has proceeded to Yen and Shwebo to repeat the rainmaking experiments in those districts, which are in a very bad condition.

The Rangoon Gazette announces that the irrigation scheme for Upper Burma which was recommended by the Chief Commissioner has not been approved by the Government of India, who have passed no orders on the application of Sir A. Mackenzie for an irrigation circle and grants in aid. Colonel Home, Inspector-General of Irrigation, is about to visit Burma and report on a scheme which, it is understood, the Viceroy will himself deal with during his stay in Calcutta.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

THE REPORT in the internal trade of the Punjab for the year 1890-91 is a bulky volume of statistics with a four-page note to introduce them, says the Civil and Military Gazette. The imports increased by 33 lacs, and the exports decreased by about 46 lacs as compared with the figures of the previous year, but the total trade is more than a million of rupees over the average of the last five years. The continued increase in the imports of refined sugar show that the material prosperity of the province is steadily increasing, for in the past year it amounted to ten lacs, following an increase of 10½ lacs in the previous year. The unsatisfactory feature of the note is that no explanation is given of some of the most important variations.

THE ANNUAL distribution of prizes to students of the Bareilly College was held on Nov. 3, Mr. C. J. Connell, District Magistrate, presiding, in the unavoidable absence of Mr. Kaye, Commissioner. Later on the opening ceremony of the new library and the chambers of the Bareilly Bar Association was held, Mr. T. R. Redfern, District and Sessions Judge, and President of the Association, presiding. A large gathering of members of the local bar and their guests and friends assembled, when addresses were given by Mr. Preonath Banerjee, Secretary, Mr. Baldeo Prasad, Joint Secretary, and the President, at the conclusion of whose speech three hearty cheers were given for Her Majesty the Queen-Empress. The evening's proceedings then terminated with native music and a nautch. The members of the local bar (says the Pioneer) are to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking.

HYDERABAD.

ON NOVEMBER 4 the Nawab Vicar-ul-Umrah entertained Sir Dennis and the Misses Fitzpatrick at a farewell breakfast at his beautiful palace, Fulaknumah. Covers were laid for a hundred guests in the splendid dining-room, the ceiling and walls of which are covered with frescoes, the work of an artist specially sent out from Italy. After breakfast the guests were shown over the palace, which contains a splendid suite of rooms. One of the prominent features of this magnificent pile of buildings is a grand marble staircase sent out from Italy and wooden ceilings from Paris.

MANIPORE.

THE correspondent of the Englishman writes from Manipore (Nov. 8) :—Lieutenant A. Howell, Assistant Commissioner of Manipore, has started to-day on a short tour round the hills and villages east of Manipore. He has with him an escort of 75 Rifles, made up of the 43rd Goorkhas and 25 Rifles of the Naga Hills Military Police, under Lieutenant S. Clay, of the 43rd Goorkhas, and will probably be away for about four weeks. The troops have taken with them a month's rations and 200 rounds of ammunition per man, it having recently been ordered by the General Officer Commanding the Assam District that whenever troops move out in aid of the civil administration they shall invariably take with them the full service allowance of ammunition. The object of the tour is partly punitive and partly fiscal. The houses in the villages to be visited and will be counted, and from some revenue will be collected, while in others judicial cases of more or less importance will be settled. The chief villages to be visited will be Kalhang, where a case of raid has to be investigated; Changai and Luchai, a mutual raid case, in which eight men were killed; Foi, which raided Chupprum, killing ten men, and Somra which threatens to avenge this raid. Then there are extensive salt works at Maredphung and Chelao, which have to be assessed for revenue, also at Jessad, a Kuki village, which has never yet paid revenue. This latter has to be assessed and collected, and the petty chief brought in. The revenue generally for these hill bustis has been fixed at three rupees per house, instead of so much silk, cotton, etc., as was the custom in the old times.

CASHMERE.

THE Pioneer says :—No surprise will be felt at the announcement from Srinagar that the Maharaja of Cashmere is to be given another chance of proving his ability to share in the direct administration of his State. We learn that the Viceroy during his recent visit had frequent interviews with His Highness and the members of the State Council, and discussed the question of reinstating His Highness with some of the powers which he voluntarily surrendered in March 1889. Lord Lansdowne has given to the Maharaja assurances that the Government of India have never ceased to regard him as the legitimate ruler of the State, and have always been anxious to do all in their power to maintain the dignity of his position. During the two and-a-half years in which the Council has been in existence it has initiated many important reforms, in the execution of which the Government of India have freely afforded it the assistance of skilled officers—Mr. Lawrence in connection with the revenue administration and land settlement, Colonel Neville Chamberlain in the organisation of the army, and Mr. Logan in the revision of the financial system. The Maharajah has intimated to the Viceroy his readiness to accept and continue the reforms already initiated by the Council, and has also voluntarily proposed to reduce the personal expenditure of himself, his family, and his dependents, which has hitherto been a heavy charge on the State. In view of this guarantee and of the personal examination which His Excellency has made into the various affairs of state, the Government of India now propose, as an experimental measure, to revise the existing system of administration in the sense above indicated. It is understood that the State Council will remain unchanged, and that in the event of a difference of opinion arising between the Maharaja and the Council it shall be open to either party to refer the matter to the British Resident, without previous consultation with whom no step of importance shall be taken. Under the new arrangement his Highness will become President of the State Council, and Raja Amar Singh Vice-President. As an acknowledgment of the care and discretion with which Rajo Amar Singh as President of Council has conducted the affairs of State during the last two and a half years her Majesty the Queen-Empress, on the recommendation of the Viceroy, has approved of the honour of Knight Commander of the Star of India being conferred upon him.

Secretaryship to the Government of India, P. W. D.—The probable retirement next June of Colonel J. G. Forbes, R.E., the present Secretary to the Government of India, gives room for speculation as to his probable successor, says Indian Engineering. Colonel Conway-Gordon is said to be lying in wait for the appointment, but we doubt this. Mr. O'Callaghan is a well-placed candidate with claims which it would be difficult to set aside, and his appointment would be hailed with satisfaction by the large body of civil Engineers in the Department. Colonel Cumming is looked upon as a strong man, in high favour, well fitted for such administrative work; while Colonel Otley, of the Punjab, is reckoned a dark horse that will suddenly appear in the foreground of the India Secretariat. The other men whose claims are various are Mr. Horace Bell, Colonel Harrison, of the N.-W. P., and Mr. Johnstone, of Bengal, who rank high in the matter of seniority.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

THE RUSSIAN PAMIR EXPEDITION.

THE Turkestanskiya Vedomosti of Nov. 4 (new style) contains an order of the day, issued in Tashkend on Oct. 12 by General Vrevski, the Governor-General, in which he thanks the detachment under Colonel Yanoff for the brilliant way in which it had fulfilled its instructions to traverse that part of the Pamirs belonging to Russia. The order runs as follows:—

In the summer of this year detachments of the 2nd, 4th, 15th, 18th, and 20th Rifle battalions of the 2nd Turkestan Regiment and the Orenburg Regiment of Cossacks were sent, under the command of Colonel Yanoff, to the Pamir Plateau. From the reports of the commander of the troops in the Ferghana territory, it appears that the rifle detachment and the Orenburg Cossacks covered in two months more than 1,800 versts, and traversed immense glaciers and mountain ranges high over the snow line. The infantry rifle detachment performed bravely the difficult march from Lake Tashchikul to Marghilan. The whole force returned in excellent health and condition. As I ascribe this result to the energy and experience of the commander, Colonel Yanoff, and his subalterns, I hereby express to them my cordial thanks. I specially thank the officer of the Orenburg Cossacks, Kargin, for his courageous carrying out of my commands. To the men belonging to the command of Colonel Yanoff I have presented—to the Uriadniki and non-commissioned officers six roubles each, and to the privates three roubles. To the men who reached Lake Tashchikul I have presented—to the non-commissioned officers five, to the others two roubles.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times telegraphs a summary of an article in the Novoe Vremya which gives further information about the expedition. The summary, to which we refer elsewhere, is as follows:—

The Novoe Vremya observes that the English make too much fuss about this Pamirs expedition. After the incorporation of the possessions of the Khan of Khokand with Russia, the Russian frontier will be pushed forward to the Hindoo Koosh, and a united territory thereby obtained. On account of the difficulty of communication in the wilds of the Pamirs, which rise, on an average, to 14,000 feet above the level of the sea, and keeping in view the sparseness of the population and the fact that Russia is convinced that no neighbour harbours the wish to seize her territory, the Russian Government do not intend to establish any fortified points. Notwithstanding the general inhospitable nature of the Pamirs country grass plains are found here and there, and these form points of attraction to the Kirghis. The Afghans and Chinese also take advantage of the uncertainty regarding the frontier and are advancing gradually on the Pamirs. On this account it will be from time to time necessary that Russia should give proof of her proprietorship.

For this reason a small detachment was fitted out last June under the command of Colonel Yanoff and an officer named Kuropatkin. On July 8 the detachment assembled at Bordbra, and the following day advanced on the Pamirs. The infantry advanced to the Alichur river, and from here reconnoitred the passes leading to the valley of the river Pamir and Lake Sorkul, a most difficult task. The leader of the Cossack detachment then advanced to the south east, while another section proceeded to the south-west, to Lake Gumbesbo, at the junction of the Washschir with the Wach Andarja river. On the way from Wakhan over the Hindoo Koosh, are the Barogil and Darkot passes, which are traversed only by a footpath. In the descriptions of the travellers Bonvalot and Grombtschevsky reference is made to a pass to the east of Darkot, but until now this pass had not been traversed by any European. Colonel Yanoff and his detachment successfully attempted it and crossed the Hindoo Koosh to the source of the Indus. A further advance was beyond the province of the expedition.

On the return journey the expedition came across Captain Younghusband. This officer, whom the Russians found to be personally most amiable, had managed to surround himself with a number of comforts. The elegance with which his tent was fitted up formed a strong contrast to the Spartan simplicity of the Russian column. When asked if he had a permit to travel on Russian territory he replied that he had not, and he was therefore forced to return to Kashgar. This contretemps, however, in no degree impaired the good relations existing between him and the Russians. Captain Younghusband pledged his word of honour to observe the instructions of Colonel Yanoff, and the two expeditions took leave of one another in the most friendly manner possible. From Bozai-i-Gumbaz Yanoff advanced to the north in order to reach Lake Sorkul. He attempted to ascend the Kuleirik, and, with incredible difficulty, the members of the expedition climbed the ice-covered rocks. On Aug. 6, however, the party reached a glacier, where further progress was impossible. At Some, on the Alichur river, the whole expedition again reassembled, and here met Lieutenant Davidson, of the English Army, who also had no passport for Russian territory. Here a Chinese mandarin was also met. It was proposed that he should withdraw his command outside Russian territory, and this he at once did. On the return journey the expedition suffered heavy losses in horses, and had three times to cross the Murghab in a boat made of sailcloth. On Aug. 30 (Sept. 12) the expedition arrived at Marghilan.

According to the Novoe Vremya, a more exhaustive account of the expedition will shortly be published.

The St. Petersburg Novosti contradicts the rumour that Captain Grombtschevsky had undertaken a fresh expedition to the Pamirs. On the contrary, Captain Grombtschevsky, it states, is lying ill in Ferghana.

Advices from Tashkend report that 1,300 families from the southern famine-stricken districts of Russia have arrived in the Syr Darya country, and that an equal number of people are on their way thither. A local committee has been formed, under the presidency of the Governor of Tashkend, to supply means of support to these unfortunate people.

According to a telegram from Teheran, dated Nov. 21, the Seyd of the Ali-alah-yah sect, who stirred up the people in Mazandaran, has been captured after a combat, in which some 200 of his followers and about a score of soldiers were killed. He is being brought to Teheran. The Ali-alah-yah sect, it may be noted, believe in the divinity of Ali. They are not numerous, and their tenets are held in abhorrence both by Shiabs and Sunnis.

The Morning Post publishes a long letter on the Pamirs from Dr. Leitner, who quotes the following extract from an article by Captain

Grombtschevsky which is about to appear in the Asiatic Quarterly Review:—

The Pamir is far from being a wilderness. It contains a permanent population, residing in it both summer and winter. The population is increasing to a marked extent. Slavery on the Pamir is flourishing, moreover, the principal contingents of slaves are obtained from Chitral, Yassin, and Kanjut, Khanates under the protectorate of England. On descending into Pamir we found ourselves between the cordons of the Chinese and Afghan armies. The population of Shignan, numbering 2,000 families, had fled to Pamir hoping to find a refuge in the Russian Provinces from the untold atrocities which the Afghans were committing in the conquered Provinces of Shignan. I term the whole of the table-land "Pamir," in view of the resemblance of the valleys to each other.

M. Joseph Martin, the French traveller and explorer, who recently started for Thibet and China, has been attacked by illness at Margelan, in the Khanate of Ferghana. When sufficiently recovered he will return to Russia.

For the first time our trans-frontier correspondents in Afghanistan have obtained news of the Pamirs incident, says the Civil and Military Gazette. It comes in the shape of information that General Katal Khan, Governor of Talikhan, in Afghan Turkistan, has reported to the Ameer that Russians had arrived "in the Pamir in the Yarkand region," and that Sura Beg Khan, leader of the Khirghiz and Alai tribes, apparently recognised as the Governor of the Pamir and Yarkand regions, over which Afghanistan has claimed suzerainty hitherto, had joined the Russians. The Governor of Talikhan therefore asked that his district, as well as Badakshan should be reinforced with troops. There are two trade routes from the Pamirs to Afghanistan, and these apparently converge in Talikhan. It is natural, therefore, that the first direct news should be conveyed to the Ameer from that place. Nothing is said by our correspondents as to the action taken by the Ameer; but they assert that since Shere Ali Khan's time the region in dispute has been an appendage to the province of Badakshan. Owing to the inclement climate no resident Governor or garrison was sent there; but as the cattle from Wakhan, Shignan and Talikhan went thither annually to graze, it was always considered, even before Shere Ali annexed it to the province of Badakshan, as a part of Afghanistan, although practically abandoned to the wandering Kirghiz and Alai tribes. The fact that the chief of these tribes has gone over to the Russians explains the Russian announcement that the population of the Pamirs had asked to be annexed by Russia, and, indeed, it gives a plausible basis for the Russian claims. On the other hand, it is very clear that the region has always been regarded as belonging to regions admittedly Afghan, as situated on the Afghan side of the trifid watershed line, which is the natural limit to the Russian, Chinese, and Afghan dominions.

The statement from Berlin that Russia intends to make a caravan road through the Pamirs to the Indian frontier next spring is no doubt founded on certain recommendations made by the Governor-General of Turkistan as to the improvement of the route across the Alai range: but that is all. Russia's claim to the Pamirs has yet to be established, but even if the St. Petersburg Government succeeded in establishing that claim, the opening of a caravan route across the Roof of the World is about as foolish a project as could be imagined, for it would end at the Hindu Kush with its terribly high passes. A road practicable for military transport animals would be all that General Wewsky could want, and at the outside he could only use this for five or six months in the year. The further statement that the "Chiefs of the Akzakals" on the Murghab will meet in the spring and probably join the Russians, needs explanation. By "Akzakals" is evidently meant the "Ak-saghals" or grey-beards, the elders of the tribes. The Murghab must not be confused with the river of the same name on which Merv is situated. It is the northern branch of the Oxus. Rising in the Pamirs as the Ak-Su, it flows through Roshan, which it separates from Shignan. The rumour that the chief Ak-saghals in the Murghab Valley will go over to Russia is but the echo of the statement made last month that the nomads of the Pamirs were anxious to become subjects of the Czar. We must expect statements of this kind to be made, pending the appointment of a delimitation commission, if such proves acceptable to the English and Russian Governments.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

SAN FRANCISCO, November 24 (Daniel).—Advices received from Shanghai by the mails just arrived say that martial law has been declared at Woo-Chang. Guards are picketed night and day at the mission houses. The city gates are closely watched, and every suspicious person is arrested. The stringent police rules require that a full report shall be made twice daily regarding the movements of residents. The police of the various districts are held strictly responsible for all persons under their jurisdiction, and the police have also been made liable to severe punishment for all crimes committed in their respective districts. The result is that nearly all the suspicious characters have fled the city. The lower classes are much excited, and the general feeling is that nearly all the mandarins are desirous of war. In Pekin a few days ago a mob went to the church of the American Board of Missions while the service was in progress, and threatened the missionaries, but nothing serious followed.

TIENSIN (via Shanghai), Nov. 21 (Daily Chronicle).—Official despatches have reached here with full details of the massacre of Christians at Takow. Previous advices gave but a faint idea of the atrocities practised. They are almost without parallel even in China. The members of the little Belgian Mission had no opportunity of escaping. The slaughter commenced with the native converts. Many were put to death with fiendish cruelty. Children of tender years were seized by the savages, hacked with knives, and then roasted in a huge fire. Worse still befel the nuns attached to the mission. They were subjected to the grossest indignities, and brutally outraged by the fiends, who afterwards brained them with massive clubs. The Belgian priests were cruelly tortured, but met their fate with Christian resignation. In one case heart and tongue were torn from the body and burned by the savages in their murderous frenzy. The most astounding statement is that after the miscreants had been satiated with outrage and slaughter they were feasted and fêted by a leading Chinese mandarin in the district. The foreign diplomatic body at Peking are simply furious. The whole European colony is boiling over with indignation.

The news from Mongolia is increasingly serious. The rebel forces are reported to be growing larger, and their forward march has continued so far uninterruptedly. The Imperial troops have not yet got into touch with the rebels. Further detachments of troops have been ordered forward. The rebels in their southward march have occupied towns without resistance, and requisitioned supplies from the inhabitants. It is reported that they have captured the large town of Leao-Yang.

TIENTSIN (via Shanghai), Nov. 23 (Daily Chronicle).—Intelligence has reached here of a murderous raid in the north, where bands of well-armed men have devastated a whole district. They pillaged, and afterwards burnt, the Belgian Mission stations at Takow and Sanchi. Over 100 of those professing the Christian faith were massacred. Official telegrams from the local Governors ascribe the raid to Mongolian robbers. Troops have been despatched to the scene of the outrages. The number of European victims is at present unknown.

The special correspondent of the Daily Chronicle telegraphs from Tientsin (Nov. 25) a report of an interview which he states was granted to him by Li Hung Chang. Li Hung Chang asked the correspondent numerous questions as to European feeling towards China, and as to the views held by the Western nations regarding the recent disturbances. The rise of the latter he unreservedly ascribed to the indiscreet zeal of the French Jesuit missionaries. The animus excited by what appeared to the natives as the meddling interference of these gentlemen had been taken advantage of by bands of discharged soldiery, who were ever anxious to stir up any trouble that might lead to fighting. "They want war," said his Excellency, "so that they may fill their pockets with plunder. But," he added with a determined smile, "they won't get it." Li Hung Chang said he had issued stringent and peremptory orders to the viceroys of all the provinces that they must prevent the recurrence of riots, and must do all in their power to protect foreign residents from annoyance, insult, and outrage. "I charge you to say to the English public on behalf of the Government which I represent," he continued, "that our feeling towards peaceable foreigners having legitimate occupations and interests in China is always one of friendliness, and they may rely upon it that the Chinese Government will maintain order. I have already telegraphed equivalent assurances to Lord Salisbury."

TIENTSIN, Nov. 25 (Daily Chronicle).—The outbreak in the North, of which I informed you in my telegram of the 23rd inst., and which was officially described as a raid of Mongolian robbers, proves to be an insurrectionary movement of serious dimensions. Despatches received here to-day state that in Mongolia, and in some of the northern districts nearer the capital, a revolutionary feeling is spreading rapidly, and the number of rebels is already alarmingly great. An insurgent force which, besides foot soldiers, comprises several squadrons of Mongolian cavalry, is reported to be advancing upon Peking, where great alarm prevails. The population of a large area, actuated partly by inclination and partly by fear of the rebel soldiery, has joined the movement. Several mandarins, too, have thrown in their lot with the insurgents. Imperial troops have been sent northward to meet the rebels. The entire Christian population of King Chou has been massacred. The victims were the converts of a Belgian Catholic mission, the priests of which have also been put to death.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 28 (Times).—The town of Chaoyang, in Shing-king, is reported to have been captured by rebels, who are marching on Peking.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 28 (Dalsiel).—It is reported that a large force of rebels, under the command of a Lama priest, have routed 4,000 Imperialist regular troops near Chin-Chin, in Manchuria. The loss on the Imperialist side was 700 killed. The remainder took to flight. The victorious rebels are now marching on Peking, distant about 380 miles.

PARIS, Nov. 29 (Reuter).—Advices received here from Shanghai confirm the report that the rebels in Manchuria have defeated 4,000 Imperial troops, and that they have taken the town of Chaoyang and massacred the Christians of Kinchow. The insurgents are now stated to be marching on Peking, and 6,000 men have been sent against them from Tientsin. Should the troops be defeated, Tientsin and Peking will be placed in a critical position.

St. PETERSBURG, Nov. 29 (Times).—A private telegram to the Novoe Vremya from Vladivostok states that a terrible and widespread revolt has broken out in the Chinese territory of Taku, at the mouth of the Peiho, not far from Isan Sin. Belgian missionaries have had their tongues and hearts cut out by the raving mob. Children have been burnt alive, and nuns have been dishonoured and murdered. The local mandarins gave a feast to the rioters. The position of Europeans is terrible.

A correspondent sends the Times for publication the following telegram, which has just been received from Tokio:—

"The Japanese ships of war are ordered to China for the purpose of protecting the Japanese residents at the open ports. Whilst, therefore, there is no question whatsoever of rendering assistance to China, the reported co-operation with the foreign Powers must be understood in the sense of rendering protection to their respective subjects."

A telegram to the Standard from Berlin says:—The proposed Joint Naval Demonstration in Chinese waters has been frustrated by Russia's refusal to take part in it. The Powers will, therefore, restrict themselves to protecting their respective subjects. Rumours are current that the Chinese Government feels itself powerless to resist the agitation, and may be driven to beg England, Germany, and the United States to lend it active assistance.

The North China Herald of Oct. 23, in a leader on the state of affairs remarks:—All foreign residents in China are deeply disappointed at the inaction that has followed the new-fledged zeal of our representatives. We none of us want a war or a rebellion, but we see and feel the danger of allowing the crisis to subside without any demonstration being made. There is a large fleet of foreign ships-of-war in Chinese and Japanese waters, and it has been widely announced in China and at home that a demonstration was to be made, and now it appears that one of those constantly recurring frontier incidents, the aggression of a Russian so-called scientific expedition on the Pamirs, has sufficed to divert the full torrent of the foaming wrath of the Powers, which should have already overwhelmed the flats of sunk hostility. It seems to us a very great mistake if the Powers allow themselves to be satisfied with a limited sum of money as compensation for this year's outrages, and an unlimited amount of promises. Everything is quiet just now in China, but only because at many of the ports what is virtually a state of siege is established. Our Governments make a grave mistake if they think they are dealing with a series of isolated acts; they are dealing with a condition, of which the isolated acts are only symptoms.

The Times correspondent telegraphed from Singapore on Nov. 23:—The Government of the Straits Settlements has offered a concession for eighty miles of railway running through Semgei, Ujong, Negri, Sembilan, and Pahang. The Government will give no financial help, but will make free grants of land in alternate blocks. The line would be an extension of the existing Semgei and Ujong Railway, which is owned by a London company. This company had the same offer made to them privately, but did not accept it. The opinion in mercantile circles here is that such a railway needs a State guarantee, but the smaller native states have no surplus, and the colony will not guarantee. The details of the proposed line will be announced in London by the Colonial Office.

The same correspondent writes from Singapore (Nov. 23):—The Siamese Korat Railway dispute between the English and Germans still continues. The German proprietor of an English newspaper is being prosecuted before the German Consul for alleged libellous articles in reference to the railway. His paper has ceased to exist, and a new paper, which is subject to English law, has been started.

The Exports of Wheat from India from April to September, the first six months of the official year, have amounted to 19,301,233 cwt., or, say, 965,000 tons, a figure which, the Pioneer remarks, is not much below the largest quantity exported in any previous twelve-month. If the exports were to proceed for the second half of the year at the same rate, we should have to record the unprecedented total of 2,000,000 tons, nearly double any previous annual exports. But this is quite unlikely. The trade has distinctly fallen off recently, the monthly exports having been—April, 1,730,042 cwt.; May, 3,904,263 cwt.; June, 5,141,316 cwt.; July, 3,501,600 cwt.; August, 2,643,898 cwt.; September, 2,432,887 cwt. For the remainder of the year the exports will probably not exceed an average of 2,000,000 cwt. monthly, or between 500,000 and 600,000 tons in the six months, making a total of about 1,500,000 tons for the whole year. With falling prices in England and a continuance of high prices in India, and rising freights, our exports naturally declined. It is probable that there will be further large exports of wheat in April, May, and June next year, after the new wheat is brought into the market; but until then the conditions point to quietness in the export trade. Meanwhile it is gratifying to know that the prospects of our next wheat harvest are, so far, reassuring, that food-stocks in the country are ample, and that the retail prices of food-grains are not increasing, but rather tend to fall.

Publication of the Written Law of India.—The Government of India have turned their attention to the task of completing the publication of the written law of the land. The last edition of "Lists of Enactments in Force in British India" was issued in 1884, but it contains no lists of rules or orders made under Bengal, Madras, or Bombay Regulations, local Acts of the Governor-General in Council, Acts of Local Councils or Regulations made under Statute 33, Victoria, cap. 3. Local Governments have done something to fill up this gap as regards their own provinces, the Pioneer says, so that there is now a fair record, in index form, of the greater part of the written law. But this is held to be but a preliminary step towards the accomplishment of the larger scheme of publishing the whole of that law in extenso. Some years ago the Supreme Government undertook to arrange the written law in a series of volumes according to its local application. Seventeen volumes were published between 1875 and 1881, and this series has been under revision in the Legislative Department since 1884, with the result that fifteen volumes of the revised edition have been issued, and nine more are in course of preparation. But it will be necessary to publish supplementary volumes containing so much of the written law as consists of rules and orders made under Statutes, Acts and Regulations. Inasmuch as these are scattered through official Gazettes, it is not always easy to refer to them, or to discover whether they have been withdrawn or modified. The advantage of having such as are still in force collected together will at once be admitted, to say nothing of the opportunity that will be given for cancelling such as are obsolete or have been made under Acts since repealed. As regards the supplementary volumes mentioned, the Legislative Department propose themselves to publish the rules and orders which are of general application, while the Local Governments have been asked to arrange for the publication of those which are of local application only. In the North-West Provinces Mr. Fraser, Registrar of the High Court, is to be put on special duty in connection with this work.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS AND TROOPSHIPS.

THE troopship Euphrates left Suez on Nov. 26, en route for Kurrachee.

The P. & O. Co.'s steamer Oriental, which arrived at Plymouth on Nov. 27, brought home from the East Indies the old crew of the Brisk, under Commander Winsloe.

Her Majesty's ship Serapis, for Portsmouth, arrived at Suez on Nov. 29. She is to leave Portsmouth again on Dec. 24 with the 1st Battalion of the Queen's Royal West Surrey for Malta, whence the vessel will convey the 1st Royal West Kent to India for stationing at Chakrata. The Cameron Highlanders will be sent from Edinburgh to Malta in February to relieve the 2nd Royal Scots, going on to India. The 2nd King's Rifles at Dublin are to go to Gibraltar early next month to relieve the 3rd Battalion, returning to England.

ACCIDENT TO THE CROCODILE.

A singular accident occurred at Portsmouth to the Crocodile, Indian troopship, yesterday. She arrived at Spithead in the early morning from Bombay, and about 10 o'clock left the anchorage for the dockyard. It was then tolerably clear, but when the harbour mouth was reached a dense fog descended and obscured objects on both sides of the harbour. Owing to this the pilot mistook the short line of railway connecting the dockyard with the main line for the trooping jetty and brought the Crocodile alongside, with the result that the way of the ship carried away a portion of the railway, which is supported upon iron piles. There were at the time a long train of spare railway carriages upon the line, three of which fell into the water with the broken structure and three others were placed in a critical position. The ship herself was uninjured. But before this was ascertained the officers, recognising the possibilities of so dangerous an experience, gave instant orders for the closing of the watertight doors and forwarded preparations for any emergency which might arise. This was the more advisable, seeing that some 1,400 souls were on board. However, beyond a couple of shocks, nothing was felt.

Capt. Pattison and other officers speak very highly of the coolness and resource of the pilot, who did everything he could, and avoided a far worse catastrophe. Had he not put the vessel's helm hard astarboard and reversed the engines when he did the trooper must have gone into the wooden dockyard jetty and encountered more resistance with fearful results. Large numbers of people visited the scene yesterday afternoon, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught took the earliest opportunity of going to the vessel, information of the accident having been officially conveyed to his Royal Highness as Commander-in-Chief of the Southern Military District. The railway connection with the trooping jetty having been broken, it will be necessary in the meantime to embark and disembark troops at the north railway jetty. The Crocodile had on board the 38th Field Batty., Capt. Campbell, or Shorncliffe; 61st Field Batty., Capt. Jeudwine, for Christchurch; 7th Field Batty., Major Jervis, for Athlone; and a number of military details, including 591 time-expired men. Gunner Whitcombe, 31st Field Batty.; Private Woodward, 1st Cheshire Regt.; and Private Curtis, 2nd Oxford Light Inf., died on the passage, and Sergt. Goggings, Connaught Rangers, was transferred to the station hospital at Malta.

No exact estimate has been arrived at as yet as to the amount of damage done, but is calculated at about 2,000*l.*, and it is not expected that the necessary repairs can be carried out under a twelvemonth.

Foreign and Colonial Newspaper and Book Postage.—The following letter has been issued by the secretary of the General Post Office:—"I beg leave to inform you that on and after Jan. 1, 1892, a reduced uniform postal tariff applicable to all foreign countries and colonies will be adopted for newspapers, books, printed papers, commercial papers, patterns, and samples posted in the United Kingdom for places abroad. The distinction between newspapers and printed papers sent abroad will disappear, and the rate of postage chargeable on correspondence of all the classes named above will be a halfpenny per two ounces, with the existing proviso that no packet of samples will be chargeable with a less postage than one penny and no packet of commercial papers with less than twopence halfpenny."

LORD LYTTON.

A FORMAL biography of the accomplished diplomatist, the statesman who ruled India during four eventful years, the poet of whom WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR said "none of the younger ones of the day breathes so high a spirit of poetry"—any attempt to form an estimate of the character and career of the late EARL OF LYTTON would here be out of place. Many, perhaps the majority of our readers, served under him in the East and helped, willingly or of necessity, to carry out his policy. The history of India from 1876 to 1880 is yet fresh in their memory; and there can be no need to rehearse the chief events of his reign. This may be left to our English contemporaries, some of whom, however, have gone curiously astray in their efforts to recall even the main facts of LORD LYTTON's life. The Paris correspondent of the Times, for instance, has made the extraordinary blunder of imagining that it was LORD LYTTON who was Governor-General when his Royal Highness the PRINCE OF WALES visited India. Another equally well informed writer quotes words supposed to have been used by LORD LYTTON when receiving the AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN in durbar. LORD LYTTON never set eyes on an Ameer of Afghanistan. What he said about "the earthen pipkin and the brass pot" was spoken during a private conference with a native agent of the Indian Government. But these are not the most glaring mistakes that are current just now in regard to the late LORD LYTTON's policy, and in this direction a retrospect may have some value.

The Times takes the opportunity to observe that "for the present, LORD LYTTON's Afghan policy is pretty generally condemned." This is a somewhat sweeping and startling assertion, and it would be interesting to know if the writer has anything but the vaguest idea of what LORD LYTTON's Afghan policy really was. To condemn it means to condemn more than one Viceroy. If LORD LYTTON is to be condemned, then we must condemn every Viceroy in India since the days of LORD LAWRENCE. In 1875, when LORD LYTTON arrived in India, there were two alternatives open to the Government. The Afghans, in the first place, might have been left severely alone. The result, of course, would have been the absorption of the country by Russia. This was the inevitable result to be looked for, had the policy initiated by JOHN LAWRENCE, and adopted by LORD NORTHBROOK, been persisted in. LORD LYTTON saw the danger.

"I conceive," he wrote, "that it would be simply suicidal to allow Russia to establish herself peaceably and securely at Cabul and extend her authority to our present borders and over the passes leading into India. She would gain fresh and almost inexhaustible sources of military strength in the wild warriors who inhabit the country round Cabul and Herat; and who in her ranks would rival the best native troops we have in India. She would add enormously to her prestige—a factor never to be lightly thought of in war, and of almost magic power in Eastern warfare. Her dream of a railway from the Caspian to Herat, and of a new and shorter line of communication with her Central Asian possessions, would soon become a reality: and all her present difficulties of distances would disappear. We cannot rely on her friendship; and the rich plains of India might prove a too-alluring bait to the occupiers of the barren and profitless mountains of Afghanistan. To attack Russia, securely established in such a position, would be a task that might prove beyond even our military resources; to await her in the plains below would be to court defeat."

Such were the principles which underlay LORD LYTTON's policy, and seeing that they have been accepted and acted on by every one of his successors, and are still the main-spring of our policy, it is absurd to say that they are generally condemned. To argue that by LORD LYTTON they were unwisely applied is quite another affair. It must be remembered, however, that he was not permitted to carry them to a logical conclusion. No sooner had he left the country than the fruits of his policy were deliberately thrown away. But a few months before he handed over his office to a successor, LORD LYTTON had given SHER ALI KHAN, the Wali of Candahar, the distinct assurance that he would be maintained by the British Government as ruler of the province. At the same time the Governor-General-in-Council had authorised SIR LEPEL, then MR. GRIFFIN, to inform ABDUL RAHMAN that no part of the province of Candahar would ever be restored to the ruler of Cabul. Again, a few days before he left Simla, LORD LYTTON put on record his firm conviction that to retain possession of Candahar was an imperative necessity. The warning was unheeded, and the abandonment of this most important position was one of his successor's first measures. Nevertheless the leading principles of LORD LYTTON's policy were not abandoned. It was still considered essential that great sacrifices should be made to secure the predominance of British influence in Afghanistan. The new AMEER was given arms and money, and, what he valued still more highly, an express guarantee against Russian aggression. The subsidy is still paid, and the guarantee holds good; simply because it has been clearly recognised, both by Liberal and Conservative Governments, that LORD LYTTON's policy was based on right, on uncontrovertible principles. Whether these principles have been more wisely applied by his successors than by himself is a question that only time can answer.

THE members of the Russian Embassy who were present when MR. ST. GEORGE LITLEDAL'S paper on the Pamirs was read before the Royal Geographical Society must have been greatly edified by GENERAL STRACHEY's observations. During the discussion GENERAL STRACHEY expressed his surprise that rational people should talk of the Pamirs as a country to be fought over, or even coveted. It was only another astonishing illustration, he said, of the folly of humanity. As an answer to the wild notion propounded in the Standard, that the British Government should send an army to turn the Russians off the Pamir, these remarks are sound enough; but were they quite called for at the meeting of a scientific society which carefully avoids political discussion? Indeed, it is hardly true that the Pamirs are of no value. They are of value to us on account of their value to Russia; and they are valuable to Russia as affording an entrance to Badakshan, to Chitral, and to Kanjut. Any slice of the Pamirs we can get will be valuable to us as a means of keeping a powerful neighbour at a distance.

A TRULY remarkable account of COLONEL YANOFF's expedition to the Pamirs is given in the Times of Wednesday. It professes to be based on an article in the St. Petersburg Novoe Vremya, but we can hardly believe that Russian journalists are responsible for all the geographical errors therein made. COLONEL YANOFF is said to have "crossed the Hindoo Koosh to the source of the Indus." The sources of the Indus are in Thibet, about 500 miles in a straight line from the Baroghil Pass. COLONEL YANOFF may have visited the sources of the Yassin river, which flows into the Indus, but he never reached the Indus itself, and never had the faintest hope of seeing the sources of the great river. The reader will find some difficulty in deciphering the other places mentioned in the Times telegram. "Sorkul" is Sari Kul, "the yellow lake," generally known as Wood's lake, or Lake Victoria. "Washschir," we presume, is the Washjird river; and "Wach Andarja" the Wakhan Daria, or river of Wakhan.

THE news telegraphed from Bombay that CAPTAIN T. S. BOILEAU of the 44th Goorkhas, and CAPTAIN BUTCHER of the 42nd Goorkhas, have been removed from the army "on account of their conduct on the occasion of the disaster at Manipore," has come as a painful surprise on their friends at home. Comment on this action of the Military authorities in India would be unfair before the terms of the notification in the Gazette have reached this country. It is natural to wonder that so long a time was allowed to elapse before this severe step was taken, as the whole history of the events out of which this serious disgrace arose has been before the authorities at Simla for eight or nine months. Another point is that there does not seem to have been a Court Martial, and unless the two officers have not thought fit to demand one, there will be some curiosity in military circles to know why it has not been held. It seems to us that, in every case in which an officer's name is removed from the Army List on the ground of misconduct in action, he ought to be entitled to an inquiry and judgment by a Court Martial. But, as we have said, it is necessary to await full information before pronouncing any opinion on these cases. One thing is certain, that the grounds of this action will be narrowly scanned in this country when the particulars do arrive.

THE block among the engineers in the Public Works Department may well engage the early attention of the Secretary of State, for it is causing a cruel injustice. The Pioneer has published an excellent letter on the subject which sets forth the grievance clearly, and in a leader, which we reproduced last week, has briefly but effectively shown how it operates. The over-recruitment in 1874-80 has produced a plethora of candidates for the higher posts, and hence we hear of a Cooper's Hill engineer, who instead of getting his division in five or six years and an engineership-in-chief in twelve, is still at the end of fifteen years' service holding a subdivision. If the Government made a blunder in over-recruiting, it is surely not the men who have been deluded by its optimistic calculations who ought to suffer for it. The Pioneer says:—"We are glad to know that the question is now engaging the earnest attention of the head of the department, COLONEL PEMBERTON; but, short of some strong remedies, such as favourable special pensions which would induce a number of the third and fourth grade executive engineers to retire, it is not easy to see what step can prove effectual." The Service must be completely disorganised by such a state of affairs, and the Home authorities would do well to urge upon the Indian Government to adopt some such remedy as that suggested by the Pioneer.

"BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE" AND THE PAMIR QUESTION.

THE writer of an article entitled "The Russians on the Pamirs," in the December number of Blackwood's Magazine, makes more than one curious mistake. "We believe," he says, "that a superstition exists in the Foreign Office that Russia is confined, by an agreement, to the north of Lake Victoria and the Panjah river." His own view of the situation is that since Russia never took "the slightest subsequent account of Lord Granville's boundary, or of its own assent thereto," the agreement of 1873 is unlikely to weigh heavily with her now; while in the next place he maintains that "the uncertainty regarding which head of the Oxus was to be understood (by that agreement) left Russia considerable latitude, which she is now abusing by endeavouring to make out a claim for the whole region." In other words the reader is to believe that the agreement of 1873 specified no particular branch of the Oxus as a boundary; and, secondly, that it has subsequently been ignored by one of the high contracting parties. Either assertion would be misleading; and it is incomprehensible that a writer who pretends to have made an exhaustive study of the subject should have committed himself to such remarkable errors. It may be noted, however, that a long quotation, purporting to be from Prince Gortchakoff's despatch of Dec. 7, 1872, is not really taken from that document (printed in the Blue Book of February 1873), but from a summary which may be found in the Blue Book of 1878. Can it be that the writer of Blackwood's article has not examined the Parliamentary papers issued before the latter date? With regard to the alleged ambiguity in the agreement of 1873, we may give the following acts. In a despatch dated October, 1872, Earl Granville stated that among the territories which her Majesty's Government considered as fully belonging to the Ameer of Cabul was—

"Badakshan, with its dependent district Wakhan, from the Sarikol (Wood's lake) on the east to the junction of the Kokcha with the Oxus (or Penjah), forming the northern boundary of this Afghan province throughout its entire extent." (Central Asia, 1 of 1873, page 1.)

In a despatch dated Jan. 19-31, 1873, Prince Gortchakoff agreed to this demarcation. Thus the river flowing out of Wood's lake, and conveniently styled Wood's Oxus, was specially referred to in the agreement of 1873 as the northern boundary of Afghan territory; yet the writer in Blackwood's tells us that "the loose definition of the boundary gives Russia an opportunity of raising a controversy as to which particular branch of the Oxus is to be regarded as the head waters in the terms of the treaty." As a matter of fact there was no treaty; but the compact, so far as it went, was not at all ambiguous in the way Blackwood's writer imagines—that is, in respect to various branches of the Oxus.

Nor has Russia shown any disposition to ignore the agreement of 1873. Thus, in 1875, Prince Gortchakoff wrote:—

"The Imperial Government, anxious not to defer further the settlement of the question, consented in their despatch of Jan. 19-31, 1873, to the incorporation of Badakshan and Wakhan in the Afghan territory and thereby gave their full and entire consent to the line of demarcation proposed in Earl Granville's despatch of Oct. 17, 1872."

Nor was the agreement ignored by Russia on more recent occasions. Thus we find in a memorandum by M. de Giers of March, 1884 (Blue Book No. 2 of 1885, page 21) an allusion to "the line of demarcation agreed on in 1872-73, and which, starting from Lake Sarikol, stretches to Khoja Saleh."

The truth is that Blackwood's writer misses the real difference between the English and Russian Governments. The English case is that the agreement of 1873 must be interpreted in accordance with common sense. The two nations agreed that Badakshan and Wakhan belonged to Afghanistan, and it was added that Wood's Oxus was the northern boundary of these districts. This addition has since proved incorrect. Wakhan and Badakshan extend beyond the river. The English Government, however, argues that the compact still holds good as regards Badakshan and Wakhan, and that the boundary line must be modified, or modifies itself accordingly. The Russians, on their side, would bind us to a strict and literal interpretation of the second part of the compact. They will only recognise that portion of Badakshan and Wakhan which lies on the left bank of Wood's Oxus as Afghan territory. At the same time, they are quite ready to reopen the whole question ab initio, and to argue that Badakshan and Wakhan ought not to belong to Afghanistan at all.

BANKERS AND ANOMALOUS BILLS OF LADING.

IT is not to be wondered at that the India and China Banks should have taken prompt steps to protect themselves against such an extraordinary risk in making advances on Bills of Lading as was disclosed by a letter from "BANKER" in the Economist. He stated that certain well-known Liverpool shipowners trading with the East had, for their own more efficient protection, inserted a remarkable clause in their Bills of Lading, giving them a first lien upon all goods shipped by their steamers, not only for freight and charges upon the goods actually represented by the bill of lading, but also for all charges and debts "due either from shippers or consignees to the shipowner or to the owners of any steamers of the — Line, or to their Liverpool agents." This clause "huddled up amongst the paragraphs in small print about the act of God, &c." passed unperceived by "BANKER" in making an advance in the regular way to a certain shipper. "The shipper absconded, leaving a heavy freight account behind him unsatisfied, and, on presenting the documents to the importers abroad, the latter politely informed the bank agent that they were unable to take them up, as the goods had been seized by the ship for debts owing by the absconding shipper!" The Economist condemned the clause in no stinted terms, while not disclaiming a shipowner's right to exercise over goods carried by him a lien for unpaid freight or charges, relating to the particular goods carried.

We have been requested by the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China to publish the following document:—

London, Nov. 24, 1891.

Our attention having been drawn to a Clause in some of the Eastern Bills of Lading which gives the Shipowner a lien and right of sale by public auction over the goods shipped thereunder, not only for freight and charges due thereon but also for unsatisfied freight and other amounts due to the Shipowner either from the Shipper or the Consignee, we hereby give notice that we shall decline to receive as security for an advance any Bill of Lading which gives the Shipowner a right of lien for more than the freight and charges on the goods shipped thereunder.

This is signed by the Managers respectively of the Agra Bank, Limited; the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China; the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China; the Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris; the Delhi and London Bank, Limited; the Deutsche Bank (Berlin), London Agency; the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation; the National Bank of India, Limited; and the New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited.

Female Medical Aid to the Women of India.—Before leaving England the Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava presided at a committee meeting of the United Kingdom branch of the National Association for Supplying Female Medical Aid to the Women of India, held at 46 Cadogan Square. The meeting confirmed the granting of the passage money and outfit to the first Indian medical lady who has ever left this country to take up a prominent position in India, Miss Jaganadham, recently appointed by the Government to be head of the Cama Hospital, Bombay. It was further determined that every effort should be made to extend the work of the society, and to obtain, if possible, one thousand guinea subscribers in this country. Mr. E. F. Webster, the present honorary secretary, of 32 Lennox Gardens, stated that he had procured an office for the society at 1 Queen Victoria Street, E.C., where the work could be carried on on a more extended scale.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

THE Pioneer says:—The subject of Staff Corps pay and promotion is being discussed in rather a fainthearted way in the Service journals at home. The grievancemongers, as in India, have overstated their case, and are pulled up short in consequence. On the question of pay and pension they certainly have blundered seriously. Thus a Royal Artillery officer, combating the idea that officers of the Staff Corps are underpaid, as compared with those in the British service, points out that there are majors in the former who have got command of regiments after twenty-one years' service. Their pay is 1,240 rs. per month, a commandant who is a lieutenant-colonel drawing 1,427 rs., whereas a lieutenant-colonel commanding a British regiment in India receives only 1,032 rs. Then as to pay when on leave in England : "A Staff Corps officer under two years' service gets 200l. a year, and over four years 250l., which is more than the major of British infantry gets when on duty at home, unless he is a major of two years' standing; under that standing he gets, after the regulation deductions from his pay, for mess and band funds, only 234l. a year. A captain of British infantry similarly receives 199l. a year on duty at home; a lieutenant under ten years' service, 112l.; over that time, 130l. a year; while a second-lieutenant gets 93l. a year." Again as to pension : "If a Staff Corps officer decide to leave, say at twenty-eight years' service, he gets 500l. a year pension; his British confère, with the same length of service, gets 300l. a year; the highest pension that can be called assured in the British army. If he decide to leave at twenty-four years, he gets 365l. a year pension; his British confère would receive only 260l., or, under certain conditions, 300l. a year." We commend these figures to the notice of those Staff Corps officers who are founding their claims to consideration on arguments as to low pay and pensions. They had better stick to actuarial calculations as to the rate of promotion in the British Service, though even here they may find themselves on treacherous ground.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, November 9.

THE directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting held on Nov. 5 made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unaltered at 2½ per cent.

The following changes have taken place in the Bank's figures for the week ending Nov. 3 :—

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 30,30,470	Decrease
Do. at Branches.....	4,22,333	Increase
Other Deposits	9,72,374	Increase
Post Bills	70,084	Increase
ASSETS.
Bank's Investments	Rs. 4,10,572	Decrease
Loans.....	71,502	Increase
Accounts of Credits.....	2,17,156	Increase
Mercantile Bills	1,92,565	Increase
Cash at Head Office.....	44,45,374	Decrease
Do. at Branches	28,79,880	Increase

The analysis of the above figures shows a decrease of about 5½ lacs in the public demand, made up as under :—By an increase of nearly ¾ lacs in "Other Deposits" and about three-fourths of a lac in "Post Bills" minus about three-fourths of a lac in "Loans," over 2 lacs in "Accounts of Credits," and nearly 2 lacs in "Mercantile Bills." The treasury balance at head office stands reduced by over 30½ lacs, while there is an increase of about 4½ lacs at the branches. The Bank's investments were realised to the extent of over 4 lacs. The final result of these changes is a decrease of nearly 44½ lacs in the cash at head office, while at the branches it stands augmented by over 28½ lacs, making the exact total 5,02,10,584 rs., equal to 58.6 per cent. of the liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 59.4 per cent. of last week.

STERLING EXCHANGE.—From the further fall in the price of bar silver wire has resulted a fresh decline in sterling rates, and the quotations recorded during the week are the lowest registered during the last two years. Ready bank wire was dealt in as low as 1-4-21/32, while credits were placed at 1-5-1/16. This drop in rates has not, however, stimulated business, for the export trade remains extraordinarily dull for the time of the year, while, on the other hand, there has never been any tendency on the part of importers to rush in and secure their requirements at the decline, and it is doubtless owing to this complete absence of anything like a panic that the market speedily steadied and advanced as soon as the downward movement in silver had been asserted.

JUTE.—The market for baled jute throughout the week has continued in a state of stagnation. Consumers appear to have secured enough for their requirements in the immediate future, as no orders have come to hand from the manufacturing centres for a considerable time. The prevailing inactivity has not, however, effected any reductions in values.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—The week has been somewhat more animated than the previous one, particularly towards the close. Gold shares, which have almost come to be synonymous with Sonapets, drooped a little at the opening, but on the news of favourable crushing of quartz from the Gilna reef becoming known, coupled with a rumour that negotiations were on foot, and likely to come to a successful termination, for the sale of the property to an English company for a large sum, numerous buyers came out, and there has been quite a little spurt, sales being reported as high as 1-10 r. The satisfactory report issued by the Budge Budge Jute Mills has had the effect of not only enhancing the value of their own shares to the tune of 5 rs., but has had a most beneficial effect on this description of stock generally. The payment of an ad interim dividend of 6½ per cent. by the Union Jute Company has also contributed in some measure towards this result. Barnagores, on the strength of an anticipated good dividend, have hardened in price, and Fort Glosters and Howrahs have been in special request at advancing rates. The market is firm, and looks healthy. In miscellaneous stocks India Generals continue in request, and are looking perhaps a trifle firmer than they did last week. In tea, with the exception of a transaction in Balassur, there has been nothing doing.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2½ per cent.

BOMBAY, November 13.

Stimulated by advices from the other side, an active demand for wheat from exporters has prevailed, at enhanced prices; but the improved inquiry has not extended to other staple exports, cotton having been quite neglected by shippers, and taken very sparingly by local consumers, in presence of recent news from the governing markets, while only a moderate business has been done from day to day in seeds. Exchange advanced in sympathy with silver, but afterwards receded under the same influence. Rates show, however, an advance of 1-32d. to 1-16d. compared with those which ruled a week ago. Government Paper is ½ per cent. higher in Fours. Freights have been firm, and a large business has latterly been done at somewhat higher rates, though there has been less demand. The position of imports shows no improvement, and a weaker tendency in rates for some staple goods is apparent, in view of the state of the Manchester market.

MONEY.—As might have been expected, there was not much movement in money during the holiday week covered by the Presidency Bank's Statement of Affairs, issued on Nov. 9; but such as there was had gone to increase the Bank's Cash Balance by some 7½ lacs, making it stand at close upon 336 lacs. A portion of the large amount of Private Deposits, withdrawn in the previous week on the eve of the Dewali, had found its way back to the coffers of the Bank; and the amount in Loans had diminished by nearly 3½ lacs; and though a sensible increase had taken place in Bills Discounted, the net falling off in the trade demand for money was represented by 12 lacs, a portion of this gain to the Balance, however, having been neutralised by decrease in Government Deposits. No change in rates was made at the Bank's board meeting yesterday afternoon, and the minimums therefore, remains at 2 per cent. per annum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—Notwithstanding the lower Exchange latterly, the weakness at Manchester has caused holders in Bombay to slightly reduce their last week's limits for heavy weights of grey shirtings. The wholesale demand for grey goods generally is not up to last year's average; but there has been a fair retail inquiry in the bazaar. Rates generally are the same as they ruled last week. A moderate demand has been felt for bleached, dyed Turkey red, and printed goods at previous prices. The market for local goods has been very quiet, with anxious sellers, but indifferent buyers; and rates are barely maintained. The clearances of imported goods during the week are estimated at 4,000 packages, and of local made 1,500 bales yarns. The market for imported twist has been quiet at a decline of ¼ a. per lb. in rates, only a small business having been reported. The sales of local spinnings at Hong Kong and Shanghai and in Japan for the fortnight have aggregated 8,000 bales, with exchange down to 22½ rs., with prices a shade lower. These advices have further discouraged China buyers, who have entirely withdrawn from the bazaar, and rates are 1-16 to ¼ a. per lb. lower, there being no buyers even at the reduction.

METALS.—Copper has declined 8 a. per cwt. in a quiet market, transactions having been upon a small scale. Yellow metal has also given way in value 4 a. per cwt., but little has been done in this metal also. Iron has been in moderate request, and an advance of 8 a. has taken place in round and square bars, other descriptions being unchanged, and the tone of the market steady.

COAL has been steady at about last quotations; but no further sales of any importance have transpired.

Exports.—COTTON.—As far as export business in this staple is concerned, the week has been a blank, no transactions whatever having been reported for shippers' account; while the mills have been buyers to a very limited extent; the advices by wire from Liverpool and America having been of a tenor inimical to fresh operations at existing prices, and the weather having continued generally favourable to the maturing of the East Indian crop.

WHEAT.—A large export business was done in this staple at the close of last week in a firm market, and at an advance of half an anna per cwt. in prices all round; and though there was less inquiry on re-opening on Nov. 9, the feeling was still firm, and a further rise of 1 a. per cwt. in rates was established. Thereafter, transactions continued on a large scale in a strong or firm market, though without further movement in prices until the 12th, when demand fell off in presence of weaker advices from the other side; but the feeling remained steady, with prices unchanged.

SEEDS have not been in much request by shippers during the week, and the volume of business has never been more than moderate.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.
The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.

II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.
The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.

III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.
The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Nov. 18; Madras, Nov. 19; Bombay, Nov. 21.

Although the present Mail was due at the Post Office at six o'clock this morning, our papers were not delivered until considerably past midday.

Lady Lansdowne will present new colours to The Buffs, now garrisoning Calcutta Fort, in February next.

Sir Mortimer Durand, the Foreign Secretary, on the conclusion of the Viceregal tour in Central India on Nov. 25, would proceed to the Punjab to inspect the Imperial Service Troops. Afterwards he will visit the Black Mountain Frontier and the Khyber, arriving at Calcutta about Christmas.

General Brackenbury, military member, who was touring with H.E. the Commander-in-Chief on the North-West Frontier, had a fall from his horse at Fort Sandeman on Nov. 17, breaking his left arm above the elbow. He will probably be detained at Fort Sandeman for some weeks.

Sir Philip Hutchins' proposed visit to Assam has raised high expectations both among the planters and the coolies, both having grievances which they believe Government is anxious to redress.

Without leaving the box, the jury sitting on Lieutenant King's case at Madras, on Nov. 17, unanimously acquitted him on all counts. There is a general expression of approval of the verdict.

Prince Galitsin will attend the Aligarh Cavalry Camp.

The Nawab of Bahawalpore, who has shown great interest in the Imperial Defence scheme, has allotted a grant of 60,000 rs. for the immediate completion of the transport of his war service troops.

A Calcutta telegram of Nov. 30 says:—At the opening of the criminal sessions of the High Court of Calcutta to-day the Bangabasi case was called on. Mr. Pugh, standing counsel to the Government, stated that the accused had made their submission and promised never to repeat the offence. They had also given a guarantee by joining the association lately formed by the leading members of the native Press. Therefore, as the Government did not wish to be vindictive, he was instructed to say on behalf of her Majesty that it was not intended to proceed with the prosecution. The defendants were then discharged.

Whatever may be the outcome of the present discussion on the suggestion recently made by Mr. Rowlandson, some good should, thinks a Madras paper, result from the manner in which the characteristics and qualifications of Eurasians are being considered all over India. In some quarters sympathy has been evoked, in others opposition. But everywhere the matter has been taken up, and the various opinions that have been expressed should all help to lead to improvement in the status and the prospects of the Eurasian.

The Secretary of State has sanctioned the Madras Government's proposal to appoint additional magistrates in that Presidency, who will devote their time exclusively to magisterial work, thereby relieving tahsildars of such work. The scheme will cost an additional outlay of two and a half lacs of rupees annually.

We wonder, says an Indian paper, what the advocates of representative government for India will say to the following extract from the latest report on education in the Central Provinces:—"The Inspector of Schools animadverts on the treatment of low castes in the schools of the district. They are treated like pariahs, obliged to lurk about the doors and windows of the school, not allowed to touch the mat or farsh, never allowed near a map, and their slates are thrown to them, as if they were dogs."

Not all India sleeps, says the Pioneer. It seems only the other day since Sir John Strachey, in his admirable work on "India," in speaking of the progress made by the telegraph, wrote enthusiastically that in 1886 there were 82,000 miles of wire, and that more than 2,000,000 messages were delivered. Yet from the latest departmental review we find that by the end of last year there had been laid down 113,000 miles of wire, and that the number of messages sent had risen to 3,500,000.

Lieutenant-Colonel Durand, according to last news received, had not yet begun the military road from Gilgit towards the Hunza country, but the preliminary preparations were being matured. The working parties will be protected by 300 or 400 sepoy.

There has been serious trouble in the Kuram Valley, where the Turi tribesmen have been assailed from two quarters. In the Upper Kuram they were attacked by Jajis and Mungals, but managed to repel them. In the Lower Kuram the notorious outlaw Chikai, with a contingent of Khostwals, made a raid and inflicted considerable damage, the Turis being unable to hold their own against him. It is believed, however, that Chikai has now only a small force with him, the Khost tribesmen having left with their loot.

Cherra Punji has kept up its reputation as the rainiest spot on her Majesty's dominions: 539.73 inches were recorded there for the official year 1890-91. Jowai runs next with 369.05 inches for the same period.

G U P.

ON Wednesday, Nov. 18, says a Bombay paper, St. Thomas' Cathedral was filled with a large and fashionable congregation, to witness the marriage of Mr. F. A. Prevost, son of Colonel Prevost, of 25 Moray Place, Edinburgh, to Miss Maud Mant, sister of Mr. R. N. Mant, who has acted for many years as organist of the Cathedral, and daughter of Mrs. Mant, of Mount Park Avenue, Ealing. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and ferns and Eucharist lilies. Punctually at noon the bride entered with her brother. She was attended by two bridesmaids—Miss Latham, daughter of the Hon. F. L. Latham, and Miss West, daughter of Sir Raymond West, K.C.I.E. The bride was dressed in rich white corded silk, trimmed with chiffon, with a small wreath of orange blossoms and a plain tulle veil fastened by a diamond and moonstone pin, and carried a large bouquet, the gift of the bridegroom. She also wore a diamond merry-thought brooch, the gift of the bridegroom's mother. The bridesmaids presented a charming contrast in Eau de Nil silk crêpe trimmed with white chiffon, and large picture hats with ostrich features, and gold thistle and cairngorm brooches with the words "dinna forget" in an original design, the gift of the bridegroom. The service was fully choral. On the arrival of the bride, the choir sang the hymn "How Welcome was the Call," during the singing of which the bridal party proceeded up the aisle to the chancel steps, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. F. N. Hill, senior chaplain of the Cathedral, the bride being given away by her brother. After the blessing the wedding party left to the strain of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," and with the guests repaired to the bungalow of the Rev. F. N. Hill, which he had kindly lent for the occasion. The bungalow was charmingly decorated, and here the presents, which were both numerous and costly, were displayed. The health of the happy couple was proposed by the Hon. Mr. Justice Farran, and was drunk with much enthusiasm. The bridegroom having replied in a few words, the bride changed her costume for a charming toilette of grey, with a large hat of the same colour, with many ostrich feathers, and the happy couple left amid the usual shower of rice and slippers for a tour in the north-west of India. Among the invited guests, most of whom were present, were Lord and Lady Harris, Lord Colin Campbell, Sir Raymond and the Misses West, the Hon. Mr. F. L. Latham, the Hon. Mr. Justice Farran, the Hon. Mr. L. R. W. and Mrs. Forrest, Messrs. E. T. Arundell, Horace Anderson, Allan Arthur, and E. F. Allum, and Surgeon-Major and Mrs. Arnott, General and Mrs. Budgen, and many others. A long list of the bride's presents appears in the Bombay paper.

A little social revolution has been quietly effected at Madras. We have, says the local Times, to congratulate our contemporary, the Madras Mail, on the success which has crowned its efforts to alter the antiquated system of calling which has prevailed hitherto in Madras. From the list of names appended it will be seen that Madras society en bloc has consented to the proposed alterations, and it is to be sincerely hoped that the signatories will carry out and insist on their friends adhering to the new social rules, and not permit us to drift back into the present inconvenient system. The proposals read:—(1) That ladies and gentlemen leaving Madras for a time and returning to it may send their cards by post to their former friends and acquaintances to inform them of their return with the letters P. A. R. (pour annoncer retour) in the corners precisely on the same principle as they send round their P. P. C. cards before leaving the place. The sending of the cards is to be accepted as a visit and to be so considered and returned by the friend's card being sent in return. (2) That first visits of gentlemen should continue to be paid in person between noon and 2 P.M., and those of ladies either between noon and 2 P.M., or during the usual hours of calling in the evening. (3) That gentlemen should be allowed to call in the afternoon between the hours of 4 and 6 P.M.

There was very nearly a case of premature cremation in Kulu a few days back, says the Lahore paper. A Hindoo had to all appearance died, but as it was getting late his relatives delayed burning the corpse until next morning. As the corpse was being carried to the river side to burn, it suddenly sat bolt upright on the bier, demanded its clothes, and wanted to know where it was being carried. The bearers, believing that a dhut with some evil purpose of its own had reanimated the body, dropped it, and fled panic-struck. In fact, the whole funeral procession resolved itself into an impromptu "dhut-take-the-hindmost" cross-country scurry that was not included in the original programme. The corpse at last succeeded in unwinding itself, and walked off home in search of its raiment; the mourners, who had looked on from a safe distance, at last began to think there might have been some mistake, and followed. Much to their horror, the ex-corpse refused to have anything more to do with them, and then and there renounced Hindooism and all its works, and declaring itself Mahomedan in future, walked off to make its formal profession of Islam.

A Calcutta traveller tells an amusing story of how he and two others got into the train at night at a station some ten hours' journey from Calcutta. There was another passenger apparently asleep, and closely wrapped from head to foot. The three gentlemen disported themselves with some freedom, and one of them related how he had discovered the wrapped-up figure to be a lady. Next morning he peeped over the edge of his upper berth, and observed a chignon and blue spectacles. He lay as still as a mouse till the train reached Howrah.

PERSONAL.

LADY EVELYN BEATRICE FITZMAURICE comes home by the first steamer in February from Bombay.

Colonel Weldon, C.I.E., Commissioner of Police, Madras, retires this month, and will probably be succeeded by Colonel Cox.

On Colonel D. Robertson rejoining his appointment as Political Agent, Baghelkund, and Superintendent, Rewa, Captain M. J. Meade, who has been officiating, goes as Political Agent to Bhopal.

The resignation of Mr. G. Waddington, C.S., is notified.

Mr. J. Davidson, C.S., has been appointed to act as Collector and District Magistrate of Kolaba.

Mr. C. B. Winchester, C.S., Acting Collector of Kolaba, has been allowed furlough for eleven months and twenty-one days.

Mr. Michie Smith has accepted the post of Government Astronomer, Madras, for one year. During this time he relinquishes his duties as Professor in the Christian College.

Mr. J. J. F. Lumsden, Junior Member of the Board of Revenue, has resigned his seat and the Civil Service. Mr. Lumsden, we (Pioneer) believe, intends to stay out the cold season in India.

Thieves entered Sir Charles Elliott's camp at Sonopore, and carried off a box containing notes for 2,300 rs. and two caskets, one presented to the Lieutenant-Governor at Dacca and the other at Gya. Some of Lady Elliott's best dresses and valuables were also stolen.

Dewan Bahadur S. Subramaniya Iyer, C.I.E., is temporarily elevated to the High Court Bench, Madras, in the room of Justice Muthusamy Iyer, who was compelled to take three months' leave in consequence of ill-health. He was a member of Sir Grant Duff's Legislative Council, and acted as Government Pleader.

Mr. E. Gibson, Collector of Tanjore, who returned from furlough to Europe on October 25 last, has been appointed to act as Fourth Member of the Board of Revenue and Commissioner of Land Revenue, during the absence of the Honourable Mr. H. W. Bliss, C.I.E., at Calcutta. Mr. Gibson is fortunate, says a Madras contemporary, in obtaining the vacant seat at the Board, as he is junior to Messrs. Hapnell and Sturrock, who have on previous occasions acted as members. Mr. Gibson was one of the ablest Secretaries of the Board of Revenue, and did yeoman's service prior to the reorganisation of that office.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

The death is announced of General Sir George W. G. Green, at the age of sixty-six. He was the son of the late Rev. G. W. G. Green, of Court Henry, Carmarthenshire, and married, in 1859, Ellen, daughter of Mr. W. Carter, of Troy, Jamaica. Educated at Bridgnorth School, he entered the Indian Army in 1841 and served in the Bengal Presidency, became captain in 1853, lieutenant-colonel (Bengal Staff Corps) in June 1867, lieutenant-general (brevet) in the Army, October 1877. General Green served in Sind, also in the Punjab campaign, and the battle of Goojerat. He commanded the Punjab Infantry throughout the Indian Mutiny, including the Siege of Delhi, where he was wounded, and the relief of Lucknow. He was several times commended in despatches and thanked by Government. General Green was made a C.B. in 1858 and K.C.B. in 1877.

Captain Somerset, Commander of the s.s. Blosse Lynch, Tigris and Euphrates Steam Navigation Company, died suddenly on board his ship at Bussorah, on Oct. 26, at the early age of 36 years. He was well and hearty at breakfast time. Shortly after he complained, and went on deck to finish his breakfast. From the deck he went to his bath-room, and died in about five minutes after. His death has caused a blank in the small community of Europeans at Bussorah and Bagdad, as he was the most popular commander on the river, and highly esteemed by all. His brother mariners and friends trading up the Gulf will greatly miss the late gallant commander of the s.s. Blosse Lynch. The Blosse will now be commanded by Mr. H. E. Hanslow, late chief officer of the Company's s.s. Khalifah.

The Rev. A. C. Lochee, M.A., Chaplain of Kirkee, died at the Byculla Club on Nov. 15 from fever. The deceased gentleman had arrived from Kirkee about two weeks previously, and remained until the time of his death under the watchful treatment of Dr. Waters. Mr. Lochee's period of service commenced from November, 1879, since which he officiated successively in the chaplaincies of Poona, Kirkee, and Aden. He also acted as Garrison Chaplain, Domestic Chaplain to the Bishop, and as Chaplain of Byculla, and subsequently of Dharwar and Neemuch. Having been promoted to the Senior Chaplaincy Grade, the appointment he held at the time of his death was that of Chaplain of Kirkee. The remains of the deceased gentleman were taken into Christ Church, Byculla, on Sunday, the Rev. W. E. Scott, Acting Archdeacon, officiating at the service. The first part of the Burial Service, supplemented by two hymns, was read there. The majority of the clergy were unable to be present at the Sewree Cemetery, having to be in-time for their Sunday evening service, the Rev. J. W. Biscoe being the only one present there. Amongst those present in the church, however, were:—The Rev. J. A. Sellar, the Rev. F. N. Hill, the Rev. Chas. Gilder, and the Rev. H. Lateward. The Hon. Mr. Justice Farzan, Surgeon-Major G. Waters, Messrs. J. W. Orr, E. B. Raikes, G. H. Farran, F. Edgelow, R. Walton, L. J. Robertson, &c., were also present.

SPEECH BY THE VICEROY.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs the following summary of a speech delivered by the Viceroy at the St. Andrew's dinner at Calcutta on Nov. 30.

After alluding briefly to his own connection with Scotland, and paying a graceful tribute to two great Scotchmen, Sir Alexander Mackenzie and Sir John Macdonald, who so long guided affairs in Canada, his lordship turned to India.

He said that during his recent tour he had had the opportunity of visiting four important native States, Cashmere, Gwalior, Indore, and Bhopal, and he gladly bore testimony to the cordial spirit in which he had been received and to the loyalty which he believed to prevail in all of them. He dwelt on these facts because he regarded it as a matter of the first importance that the States which were in subordinate alliance with her Majesty should be governed in such manner that there need be no scruple on the part of the paramount Power in preserving for them the measure of independence which they now enjoyed. Not only would it be an act of injustice to deprive them of that, but it would be a distinct misfortune for the empire if those interesting remnants of indigenous rule were entirely effaced. Those States might not be governed exactly in accordance with English ideas, but it was a question whether their people would not prefer to remain under their own rulers. The territory under the Indian Government was already so large that he would regard with unfeigned regret any events which might force it to assume the responsibility of any part of those large areas now governed by Indian chiefs. It was instructive both for Natives and Europeans that the two forms of government should be in force side by side, and he doubted whether any form of decentralisation would be more useful than that which left the domestic affairs of a large portion of the country to the management of its own people.

Passing next to British India, Lord Lansdowne said that the country had passed through great sudden vicissitudes. No one could tell to-day what the morrow might bring forth. However fair the prospects might seem, India never ceased to be threatened by the three gaunt spectres of war, famine, and insolvency. At the present moment the harvest prospects were very gloomy in portions of Rajpootana, Madras, the eastern parts of Bombay, and in Hyderabad; while in some of the Bengal districts everything depended on the climatic conditions of the next few weeks. But they might console themselves with the reflection that they had never been better equipped to meet the danger than they were now. It might be interesting also to know that the number of persons now receiving State help was under 60,000—a number which was considerably exceeded in the single district of Ganjam in 1889.

As to war, he hoped he might confidently say that there was little prospect of strife within the borders. Little frontier wars were sometimes inevitable. There had been three this year, none of which could have been avoided without a serious blow being struck at the credit and good name of the Government. When disagreeable work of that kind had to be done it should be done thoroughly, and he thought that it had been well done in these three wars. As to aggression from without, it depended on events in other parts of the world over which the Indian Government had no control. He would only say that India had never been stronger against attack than she was at the present time.

The danger of insolvency, again, depended less upon themselves than upon the vagaries of Washington and Westminster. The triumph of the gold party in the one place or of the anti-opium party in the other might at any moment render it difficult to maintain a financial equilibrium in India; but even with the rupee at 16½, thanks to the elasticity of the revenue, they need not despair of making both ends meet without additional taxation.

As to the opium revenue, the danger lay in the extraordinary misapprehension prevailing with regard to the attitude of the Government of India. If that revenue were abolished to-morrow, he believed that the consumption of the drug would remain unabated. The Indian Government had lately addressed a despatch to the Secretary of State, which he hoped would convince their critics that they had no intention of pushing the sale of opium for revenue purposes, and would answer the other objections urged against that tax.

The Viceroy, alluding to some remarks of the chairman on the subject of the income-tax, then said that doubtless there were many strong arguments against direct taxation for India, but there were other taxes equally objectionable, and he could only say that, when the happy moment came for remitting taxation, all that had been said against the income-tax would be carefully considered.

His Excellency concluded by contradicting the rumours that his health was failing, and he assured his audience that he had never felt better.

THE VICEROY'S TOUR.

AT AMRITSAR.

THEIR Excellencies the Viceroy and Marchioness of Lansdowne, Ladies Evelyn and Beatrice Fitzmaurice, Sir Mortimer Durand, Colonel Ardagh, Lord William Beresford, Dr. Fenn, and the other members of His Excellency's Staff arrived at Amritsar on Nov. 14. At 11 A.M. the Viceroy received a formal visit from the Raja of Jhind, a delicate looking boy of twelve, who came attended by the members of the Council of Regency and other officials of the State. The 60th Rifles formed a guard of honour at the camp, the usual ceremonies being observed during the reception.

Shortly after two o'clock the Viceroy returned the Rajah of Jhind's visit. His Excellency was accompanied by his Staff, Sir Mortimer Durand, Colonel Hutchinson, Commissioner of the Division, Mr. Fanshawe, Secretary to the Punjab Government, and other officials. The escort was drawn from the 16th Bengal Cavalry, and as in the morning the carriages were horsed by the Royal Artillery. The roads en route were decorated with flags and arches. At the conclusion of the interview the Viceroy returned to camp, whence, having been joined by Sir James and Lady Lyall and other ladies of the party, a start was made for the Golden Temple. The streets of the city through which the carriages passed were densely thronged with eager spectators in holiday dress. The windows of the principal shops were hung with carpets and shawls of various coloured cloths, and the distribution of these, with the liberal distribution of bunting and flags, made a very striking and picturesque scene. At several points along the route arches were erected, more or less elaborately designed and ornamented, while at conspicuous places in large and unmistakable characters were such inscriptions as "Welcome to the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne," "Welcome to Sir James and Lady Lyall," "God bless the Ladies Fitzmaurice," "The Mahomedans greet your Excellency," and many others of similar kind. Arrived at the temple, the visitors were received by the principal officials, and having, in accordance with custom, put off their boots and donned the roomy though inelegant coverings provided as substitutes, they proceeded through the inner courts to the sacred Golden Temple, where they remained some time listening to a somewhat melodious recital by a band of musicians of passages from the Garunth, and beholding the sacred book of the Sikhs, reverently uncovered by the venerable Chief Priest, who subsequently chanted passages from it, and afterwards courteously produced from the folds of his snow-white garments a written translation for his Excellency. In the adjacent temple building the visitors inspected some of the arms of the different guards, and witnessed the curious and interesting ceremony of initiating or baptising two natives into Sikhism. Thence his Excellency, his Honour and party passed out of the sacred precincts followed by the prayers and good wishes of the gurus, and bedecked with the garlands of flowers and the rose leaves which had been showered upon them by their friendly hands.

Before leaving the Temple the Viceroy presented the usual donation of 500rs.

Through the crowded streets, full of moving life and resplendent with colour the party proceeded to the Town Hall, where awaited his Excellency the members of the Municipal Committee of the city and the District Board of Amritsar. The spacious hall with its galleries was fully occupied and very becomingly decorated. Here an address of welcome from the municipality was read to the Viceroy, the general tenor of which will be apparent from his Excellency's reply, which was as follows:—

SPEECH BY THE VICEROY.

GENTLEMEN,—I thank you for the words of welcome which you have addressed to me on the occasion of my first visit to this famous city. I have a right to regard your words, spoken by you in the name of the citizens of Amritsar, as expressing the feelings and convictions of the whole Sikh community, of which Amritsar, is as you have reminded me, the cradle and the centre. Permit me to assure you that the Government of India greatly values your goodwill, and places implicit confidence in the fidelity of the Sikhs. If there were times in the history of this country when the Sikhs knew how to earn our respect as courageous adversaries, they earn it to day by the honourable discharge of their duties as citizens of the British Empire, and by providing the armies of the Crown with some of its finest and most valiant soldiers—soldiers who, not in India alone, but in many other parts of the Empire, have shown by their conduct that they still possess the warlike qualities for which their fathers were conspicuous. I rejoice to know that at the present time the people of Amritsar are availing themselves of the security which they enjoy under the British Government in order to improve the education of their co-religionists, and that the city possesses a good Municipal High School with university classes, besides the educational establishments which have been founded amongst you by the missionaries. It is also especially gratifying to me to hear that the Mahomedan Anjuman, as well as the Hindu Sabha, are both founding special schools of their own. With regard to the Khalsa College, I daresay you will remember that when the project of its establishment was first mentioned to me I readily promised to give it my support, provided that its promoters could arrive at a unanimous decision. I am glad to hear that it is proposed that the site of the College shall be in the near neighbourhood of this city, and I feel no doubt that you will be able to afford to students who attend the College the advantages of a sound education, consistent with the religious and moral precepts of the Sikh religion. You are also able to refer me to other useful projects of first-rate importance, I mean that for providing the city with a supply of pure water, and for the establishment of a Jubilee Hospital, of which Lady Lyall will, a few days hence, lay the foundation-stone. I cannot resist expressing the pleasure which it gives me to be able to visit Amritsar before the conclusion of the term of office of my friend Sir James Lyall, and in his company it is delightful to me to find myself encamped in the beautiful garden, to which you have referred in your address, as his guest. I feel sure that his departure, which is anticipated with the greatest regret by the Government of India, will be not less regretted by the Sikh community, who have found in him a trusty and sympathetic friend.

AT GWALIOR.

The Viceroy arrived at Gwalior on Nov. 17. The ceremonial of the reception was carried out in detail according to the programme. As the distance from the railway station to the Guest House is only a few hundred yards, there was no opportunity for great display, but every yard of the road was lined with troops, and a guard of honour, with band, was in attendance on the platform and at the Viceregal residence. The Imperial Service Cavalry were smart-looking and well turned out. Altogether between two and three thousand troops were present.

PREPARATIONS AT BHOPAL.

A telegram from Bhopal to the Times of India, dated Nov. 20, says:—The preparations for the Viceroy's visit evince the strongest desire on the part of her Highness the Begum to receive her Majesty's representative with every mark of honour. The railway station is lavishly decorated, and the road to the Residency, distant about a mile, is lined throughout and both sides with rows of bulties suspended on cords. At a point where the road rises to the level of an embankment overlooking the Lesser Lake, two triumphal arches have been erected bearing designs in admirable taste. The Lal Kotah has been exquisitely furnished for the reception of the Viceregal party, the electric light and telephone being among the conveniences. Adjoining the house there is a large Durbar Shamiana, with beautiful gold-embroidered carpets. Sir Mortimer Durand and the Viceroy's staff are accommodated in tents, which are also furnished in luxuriant style. The Guests' Camp is at the Residency, half a mile from the Lal Kotah, and there already a large gathering has assembled. Lord and Lady Harris were at one time expected, but will not be present. Among the guests are Colonel Plowden, Deputy Commissioner, Jubbulpore, and Mrs. Plowden; Mr. Saunders, Deputy Commissioner, Hoshangabad; Mr. and Mrs. Phipson, of Bombay; the Rev. Mr. Moore and Mrs. Moore, of Saugor; Miss Wishart, of Cawnpore; Mr. Dangerfield, Agent, Indian Midland Railway; Mr. Wrench, Chief Engineer; Mr. Bashford, Auditor; Mr. Wright, Traffic Manager; Mrs. Wright; Miss Martin; Mr. Brock, Locomotive Superintendent; Mr. Keene, District Engineer; Lieutenant Lovett, 61st Regiment, Colaba; Mr. Kavanagh, of the Railway Police; Mr. Duff, of the Central Provinces Police; Colonel Peart and Lieutenants Waller and Pollard, Bhopal Battalion; Miss Peart; Colonel, Mrs., and Miss Ransford, of Sehore; Dr. and Mrs. Dane; Mr. Sherman, Engineer-in-Chief, of Ujjain, Bhopal Railway Survey; Lieutenant and Mrs. Peart; Mr., Mrs., and Miss Mears, of Sehore; Mr. and Mrs. Cook, of Bhopal; Miss Niebel, the Lady Doctor of Bhopal; Captain Meade, Political Agent, Rewah; Colonel Melliss, Inspector-General, Imperial Service Corps; and Captain Robertson, Central India Horse, on escort duty. The responsible task of making the arrangements has devolved upon Colonel Robertson, the Resident, and Mrs. Robertson, who have acquitted themselves to perfection in spite of the many and unusual difficulties. This is the first visit of a Viceroy to Bhopal, and preparations to celebrate it are such as to make it long memorable in the history of the State. The Begum insists upon going to the railway station to receive his Excellency, and will appear at the State banquet in person and read an address of welcome. Her Highness will wear the Bhura as she did on the occasion of her visit to Lord Dufferin in Calcutta. Bhopal is a pretty place, encircled by low undulating hills, and the view of the city from the Lal Kotah, with glimpses of the lake and the towers of the Jumma Musjid, is highly picturesque.

THE ARMY, NAVY, AND CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY OF INDIA.

THE Pioneer of Nov. 19 says:—The affairs of the "Army, Navy, and Civil Service Co-operative Society of India" are again before the public this week, owing to a reopening of the fire once before directed upon the concern in the columns of Truth. To this Mr. A. Cotterell Tupp, a working director, has replied in a letter. Upon the appearance of the first attack in Truth a reply appeared on behalf of the society intimating that the answer would be forthcoming with the balance-sheet when the accounts, immediately expected, should arrive from Bombay. That was in the first week of September; the present Truth is dated Oct. 29, and the accounts in question are still wanting. The explanation furnished by Mr. Tupp is that when they came home from the Bombay auditors they were in a state so incomplete that it was necessary to send them back to India for further information. This may be an explanation, but it is not an answer. The society has been at work, roughly speaking, for a year, and if it is not able to furnish after that time an account of its position to its shareholders, it is twaddle to complain of want of courtesy in the Press for not withholding criticism till the report and balance-sheet appear. If the Press was to act on these lines it would in many cases have to wait for ever: its work on such occasions is to wring statements from reluctant managements. For the rest Mr. Tupp convicts Truth of one inaccuracy in saying that the Bombay premises cost the society 3,000 rs. a month, the rent, it appears, being only 1,500 rs.; and in regard to the 100l. a year which he himself receives for looking after the home business, he reminds the public that his official salary in India was 3,000l. a year, so that he may stand, like Clive, astounded at his own moderation.

And, to do Mr. Tupp justice, no one who has the pleasure of his acquaintance would accuse him for a moment of being illiberal or grasping, and in getting him to do so much of its work for a nominal stipend the society has been certainly fortunate. Its arrangements with some others whose names have appeared in connection with the undertaking wear a different complexion. Mr. Singleton Hooper, for instance, the Bombay manager, who left almost as soon as the business started, according to the prospectus was entitled to 5,000l. for promotion. It would have been more satisfactory if Mr. Tupp had shown some justification of an arrangement by which 10 per cent. of the paid-up capital has been parted with to a gentleman whose connection with the concern ceased so speedily. Shareholders too might have liked to know why the general manager, Mr. G. T. Newton, has also left within the short period of a year. Nor does Mr. Tupp contradict the statement of Truth that one of the promoters of the company is Mr. M. P. Shorrocks, whose connection with other ventures of the same nature—not successful ones—has been repeatedly alluded to in the financial papers. It would be much better to controvert allegations of this nature than to indulge in irrelevant generalities about the service which the promoters are doing the public. There is not a shopkeeper in the land who could not on the same reasoning claim to be a philanthropist. Nor, again, does Mr. Tupp traverse the accuracy of the statement that the business result up to end of June was a gross loss of 55,830 rs. Then, as regards the commission paid to the agents, Messrs. James Finlay and Co., Truth states that another well-known Indian house, Messrs. Jeremiah Lyon and Co., offered to do the society's business on a 1½ per cent. commission. The onus, therefore, lay on Mr. Tupp of explaining why the directors closed with their present agents at 3½, and whether a clear loss of 2 per cent. is an arrangement which speaks well for the management. However, it is well known, and Mr. Tupp does not attempt to touch the point, that the original arrangement was to pay the agents a minimum commission of 5,000*l.* a year, and it was ostensibly only due to Press criticism that that ruinous condition was eliminated. We are quite willing to believe all that correspondents have said of the excellence of the establishment at Bombay, but it is clear that the best-served shop cannot answer under unsound arrangements at headquarters. Enough has been said to show that the system under which the society's trading has called for frank criticism, and if the shareholders eventually find themselves in possession of a valuable property and the public of a convenient institution, they will have to thank those papers which have taken the risk of discharging an unpleasant duty.

In reference to the above, it may be noted that the annual general meeting of the society was held yesterday at the Westminster Town Hall, under the presidency of Major-General Sir William G. Davies. In moving the adoption of the report, the chairman stated that the deficit shown in the accounts must at first sight appear disappointing, and not as auguring well for the future success of their operations in Bombay. If, however, due weight were given to what he was about to say, there was no reason to despair. Against the profit of six months' trading it should be particularly noted was set the expenditure of fourteen months, which included heavy preliminary and other outlay, much of which would not occur again. The experience of other undertakings of the same kind in England had shown that it took two years at least to make a business and three years to work at a profit. From Dec. 15 last—the date on which their stores were opened to the public in Bombay—to June 30 last their average monthly takings amounted to 29,000 rs.; since then, after a temporary lull during July and August, the receipts had been increasing at a very rapid rate, and for the last three months had exceeded 40,000 rs. a month. During the coming cold season they would certainly be largely in excess of this sum. As they had been informed in the report of the directors, arrangements had been made for greatly reducing the expenditure, and from calculations they had made they were satisfied that if the receipts increased to 70,000 rs. a month they would be more than paying their way. They had established business connections with a large number of regimental and other messes, and with clubs and hotels scattered over a great part of India. By the liberal proposals of Messrs. James Finlay and Co., the society's funds would be increased by 1,600*l.*, and, with the radical changes proposed to be made in the manner of conducting their business, the cost of management would be largely reduced. Mr. L'Amy (a shareholder) seconded the motion. Mr. Shorroch addressed the meeting at some length, criticising the management in various particulars, and maintaining that the society had lost 11,000*l.* odd. He asked the shareholders not to pass the accounts, but to appoint a committee of shareholders to investigate its affairs—not for the purpose of the destruction of the society, but for the purpose of giving the shareholders light. Mr. A. Cotterell-Tupp (a director) replied in detail to Mr. Shorroch's criticisms, and complained of that gentleman's demands arising out of the formation of the company, he being the agent, the speaker asserted, of the promoter. It was absolutely incorrect to say that they had made a loss of 11,000*l.* With the exception of goods to the value of 887*l.*,—of which nearly 400*l.* was for an advertisement—all the stock had been sent out to India on the advice of their manager. The site they had obtained for their stores in Bombay—on the Apollo Bunder, in immediate proximity to the Royal Yacht Club, the public offices, the three principal hotels, and the mercantile houses—was regarded by all who were impartial as admirably adapted for their purposes. The Apollo Bunder was the great meeting-place in Bombay in the evening. The rent was only 1,350*l.*, which was considered very reasonable. Mr. Shorroch had said that their trade in July and August showed a loss of 5,800 rs.; as a matter of fact, their takings for those months were 50,000 rs., while the expenses were 10,000 rs. The directors had taken no fees from the end of June. They had made ample allowance, they believed, for every possible depreciation of stock, and they had further allowed for loss by exchange. Mr. Hooper said he would second the proposal of Mr. Shorroch. Mr. Helby considered that they ought to have had further particulars in the accounts, and he thought that their stock—35,000*l.*—was a very large sum on their capital of 42,000*l.* Other shareholders having addressed the meeting, Mr. Helby proposed an amendment to the effect that the report and balance-sheet should only be adopted subject to no further call being made without the sanction of a meeting of the shareholders. Colonel Locock seconded the amendment. The chairman stated that there would be no call. He then put the amendment, and declared it carried.

Messrs. Swift and Farrow, of Bombay, write as follows to the Bombay Gazette :—

As the Army and Navy Co-operative Society's regularly-appointed auditors we merely audited the accounts to June 30 prepared and presented to us by the Bombay branch, which we forwarded, together with our report, on Sept. 4. No London telegram reached us on Sept. 29, but on Oct. 1 the following message was conveyed to us by the local branch :—"Request auditors to forward by this mail certified trading account, giving local and London purchases and sales. Give details of stock, deposit order, exchange and adjusting accounts." Details of the latter items were thereupon prepared at the office of the society and forwarded after audit by us, the original balance-sheet being in no wise altered or inaccurate, which, being drawn up in accordance with the agreements of the Indian Companies Act, seems to show inexperience of Indian matters on the part of the society's accountant and secretary in London.

LORD CROSS AT HANLEY.

VISCOUNT CROSS addressed a large meeting of Unionists in the Victoria Hall, Hanley, on Dec. 4. In the course of his speech Lord Cross made the following references to Eastern affairs :—

In his experience bye-elections had often been very misleading, and he advised the Liberals not to count their chickens before they were hatched. (Cheers.) In looking forward to a general election, he appealed to them as citizens of a great Empire, with interests not only in Europe, but in Asia, Africa, and America, to weigh well their decision when they went to the poll. If anything happened to affect our prestige or our commerce the working classes would be the first to feel the pinch. Speaking on the foreign policy of the Government, Lord Cross said that the greatest interest of this country was peace. Through six successive years Lord Salisbury had maintained peace, overcoming all difficulties by his firmness and wisdom. (Cheers.) Foreign Governments knew that we sought no aggrandisement, and nothing but justice; that we meant what we said, and that we had the power to carry out our intentions. There never was a time in modern years when the name of England was so looked up to abroad as it was at the present moment. If they wished all this changed, let them turn out the Government. Did they wish again to insult Austria and then to have to apologise? (Cheers.) Did they wish again to have a recurrence of Majuba Hill? Did they wish again to sacrifice another general like General Gordon? (A voice, "No," and cheers.) Then they had better stay as they were. (Cheers.) In the colonies the policy of the Government might be described in two words—"peace" and "friendship." In India the keynote of their policy was justice, and they had convinced the people of India that they sought no aggrandisement, but that they wished to maintain the closest alliance and friendship with all the native States. (Cheers.) It had been said that they wished to annex State after State. Nothing was further from the policy of the vast department over which he had the honour to preside. He had had the happiness of working with two colleagues such as few men had had to work with—Lord Dufferin and Lord Lansdowne—and if any words which he spoke should ever reach the ears of the people of India, they would be that neither they nor he had ever had or had now any wish to annex anything. They had shown that in the case of Manipore. They had shown it in Cashmere. All that they desired was to see the native States governed according to the rules of prudence and for the benefit and progress of their people. (Cheers.) He should like to say a similar word to the neighbours of India in Afghanistan, Siam, and Persia. He wished the Ameer to know from his own mouth that which he must know from the despatches which had reached him. The British Government had only one feeling towards him—that he should rule his subjects properly, and that he should remain our friend. We desired that Afghanistan should remain an independent kingdom, and that it should be closely allied to us in friendship and by treaty. He should like to say the same to the inhabitants of Siam. Siam was a country which lay to a great extent between the British possessions and the French possessions. He wanted the Siamese to know that we had no wish whatever to annex any part of their territory. With respect to Persia, our simple object was that Persia should also be maintained as an independent kingdom. They knew that pressure was brought to bear upon her from the North by one of their neighbours there; but Great Britain wished that that pressure should not be too pronounced, and that Persia should practically remain as she now was. With regard to the northern frontier of India he had no wish to extend it, but we desired that it should be such a frontier as no enemy could pass. There was one matter about which he was exceedingly anxious—this was the extension of the railway system in India; and it was with great pleasure he could tell them that during the time he had been at the India Office he had been able to sanction something like 4,000 miles of additional railway. He hoped that in the future they would be able to go on at the same pace.

AN ANGLO-INDIAN VIEW OF LORD LYTTON.

AN Anglo-Indian correspondent, who knew the late Lord Lytton well during his Viceroyalty, writes to me (says the correspondent of the Glasgow Herald) from the Riviera :—Poor Aberigh Mackey, in his caustic sketches of Anglo-Indian officialdom, hit off the Indian view of Lord Lytton's administration when he described Government House as being in an atmosphere of cigarettes and patchouli. He never was popular in India; his original appointment was received with a burst of disfavour. This is very frequently the case, for the average Anglo-Indian, whether official or layman, thinks it would take an angel from heaven to govern India tolerably; ordinary mortals only make more or less feeble attempts to do so, which are prevented from being wholly ineffectual by the Anglo-Indians around the Viceregal throne. But the dissatisfaction in Lord Lytton's case was peculiarly loud and deep. He was known in India as the son of his father, the great novelist and brilliant man of the world; all about the first Lord Lytton was known in India, for he had only died a few years previously, and the papers and magazines were full of him; he was also vaguely known as "Owen Meredith," and as British Minister in Madrid. But these were not regarded as suitable credentials for Calcutta. Lord Mayo had filled high office at home and had been in the Cabinet before going out; so had Lord Northbrook; both were men of solid, substantial reputations as administrators, who gave up something to go out to Calcutta; but Lord Lytton only shifted from Madrid to Calcutta; it was meteoric promotion for a comparatively junior diplomat, who quite recently was only Secretary of Embassy in Paris, and whose character and capacity no one in India knew anything about. High officials in India regarded the appointment as something of a personal insult, and could only explain it by reference to the dazzling eccentricities of the Prime Minister of the day. Then when Lord Lytton actually got into harness in Calcutta it began to be whispered abroad that he was a niminy-piminy sort of man, one who would allow the most important affairs of State to wait while he was scenting his locks or arranging his garments to the proper degree of studied negligence. He had a knack of leaving men waiting who were more important in their own estimation (and perhaps in fact) than any British Minister in Madrid; but his main offence was his French style. He was effusive, full of gestures, fond of somewhat far-fetched and fulsome compliments that made one feel uncomfortable; it was believed that he had no religion, no earnestness, no energy—that he was, in fact, a true Parisian, as the Parisian is conceived to be by the strictest sect of our British Pharisees.

To understand what this meant in India in 1876 it must be remembered what the tone of high Indian official society was then. It was strenuous, serious, religious, and was marked also by a very high sense of the duties which men had to perform in India. Indian society, and especially official society, bore in 1876, and indeed bears still, a deep impression of that school of Indian administrators of which Lord Lawrence was the head. Almost every great post in India was then held by a man trained under the Lawrences, and who looked to them as men looked to the ancient oracles. It was only seven years since Lord Lawrence went down the steps of Government House, Calcutta, on his last voyage home. He was still prominently before the public at home on the London School Board, and what not, and was in constant contact with Indian official life. At first Southgate and then Thanet or Queen's Gate, where the veteran lived, was the Mecca for the homeward-bound Anglo-India, who wrote out to his friends all about Jan Larens Sahib, what he said, how he looked, what he thought of Indian things, and his friends sent it to the papers as being of interest to every one in India. Now, Lord Lawrence, in all that makes a man and an official, was at the opposite pole to Lord Lytton. The hero of the Punjab and of the fall of Delhi was superficially a "dour" man; he was a North of Ireland Scot, with all the defects, if with all the superlative merits, of race and birthplace; stern, tenacious, rugged in speech and in exterior, with an exalted sense of duty, an undying interest in the smallest problems of Indian administration, and an unflinching ardour for work. He was a man of strong religious feelings, a Presbyterian and a Liberal. He had trained up under him in the Punjab a school of officials, who in 1876 were scattered all over India, and were in the Indian Council at home, and who, like himself, were above all things serious, earnest, strenuous men. Of that great school only the Strachseys and Sir Richard Temple survive. Lawrence, like Dalhousie and his successor Mayo, worked his fourteen hours a day with his coat off and his sleeves turned up; he went about in his shabby black frock coat, and threw off all ceremony when he could. It was irksome to him, and he showed it. He would receive a deputation of Calcutta merchants in slippers, and then apologise awkwardly for his forgetfulness by observing that he was very busy. They all knew that, and forgave the neglect, for they knew he was toiling like a galley-slave, and they remembered the immortal services he had rendered to his country. The conqueror of Delhi had no need to apologise to Anglo-Indians for trifling negligences.

How different all this from Lord Lytton! He passed his life in European capitals, was a cosmopolitan by temperament and training, and was French in his manners. The old school of administrators did not believe in him, and he regarded them with a good-humoured contempt. When he sent home his military secretary, the unfortunate Sir George Colley, to discuss North-Western frontier matters with the Council of India, he sent with him a private note, in which he remarked that his (Colley's) views were of more value than those of all the Lawrences alive. It was enough to paralysed the Indian Council, and did, in fact, move many of the members to wrath unspeakable. Lord Lytton never worked with his coat off at innumerable despatch-boxes, he was not an early riser, and he loved chat and gossip. He would work desperately (chiefly late at night) on any subject in which he was interested, but he did not love it. He was just as courageous and tenacious in his own way as even Lord Lawrence; but while he held his grip he laughed and chatted, when Lord Lawrence would have looked like grim death itself. You had to know Lord Lawrence well in order to like him, and then you worshipped him; you liked Lord Lytton from the first, and could very rarely get any further, however much you saw of him. He never had a fair chance in India; his ways were not Indian ways; they may have been better, but they were different; he was unlike his predecessors, unlike those who should have been his main assistants; and he fell because of a policy towards Afghanistan which was not his.

CANDID SPEAKING ABOUT THE INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

THE Bombay Gazette says:—The Indian Congress meets next month at Nagpore, and now and again there come intimations of the selection of delegates for that interesting assembly. The arrangements, nevertheless, are being made with unwonted quietness, and, unless appearances are deceptive, there is rather less than the usual enthusiasm about the gathering. Mr. Hume, however, has come out from England, and his organising power has in the past saved the Congress from threatening collapse, so that it is possible that the Nagpore meeting may be as important in numbers and in rhetorical energy as those that have gone before it. We certainly shall not endeavour to depreciate in advance a meeting which in any case must be interesting, though it is curious to note that a contemporary which has hitherto had nothing but good to say of the Congress has this week discounted its political significance in a very remarkable way. The Mahratta, one of the most interesting of the native papers on this side of India, has just told us that "many of the delegates hardly understand two words of the Congress proceedings, and many more there are in the huge assemblage that are as innocent of the subjects for discussion as are the strong pillars that support the canopy. The few leading men of each province, whose names generally can be found on the subjects committee, are really the Congress." Now this must be a surprise to those who have been told by Mr. H. S. Cotton in his "New India" that the English language and English education have supplied a bond of national unity broad enough to cover all diversities of race and creed. So, too, when they read in Mr. Caine's "Young India" of meetings in the Madras Presidency, at which he addressed a couple of thousand people at a time, all thoroughly understanding English, they will ask whether the Poona journalist, or that most excellent of special correspondents, is the better judge of the English-speaking capabilities of the young men who attend Congresses and go to hear Mr. Caine speak. It has been represented to us by a sympathetic observer of the ways of Young India that Mr. Caine is more than likely to have been mistaken in his estimate. The literary education in English which most of Mr. Caine's auditors have received does not of itself qualify them for listening with understanding to public speeches. To many of these young men even Mr. Caine's addresses, delivered though they are in plain, straightforward English, cannot be quite clear, and it is a question how many of the educated natives who attend the Congress are better equipped for it than the average Englishman, who reads French, and thinks he knows all about it, is for the hearing of a French play. However, we should not have thought it necessary to raise doubts upon the point if so excellent an authority as the Poona journalist had not set us the example. But a much more interesting question than this is raised by the Mahratta in the same article. We are told that there is a complete divorce of sympathy among the leaders, and that Mr. Hume has lost the confidence of many of them. Mr. Hume, it will be remembered, paid the Congress leaders the compliment of saying that four-fifths of them were in favour of social reform—a compliment which, considering that the Consent Bill was at that time under discussion, many of them thought it necessary peremptorily to repudiate. The result is, according to the Poona paper, a house divided against itself, and Mr. Hume, who could not get a hearing for his ideas about India at the Newcastle Federation, is somewhat unkindly reminded that, though he may not have liked the despotism of the Federation, "he himself will be as great a despot in the Congress camp as any satrap was in days of old." We are further told that at the Nagpore Congress a test question concerning Sir Andrew Scoble's Act will be submitted, and that the future of the Congress will be decided by the answer to this question. The Congress, in fact, is to be asked to express its regret that Lord Lansdowne's Government did not show sufficient regard to public opinion upon this Bill. We take it that the announcement is premature, because until the subjects committee has drawn up the programme for the Congress no one can say what questions will be discussed. If, however, the Consent Act is brought under discussion, Mr. Hume may be trusted not to recede from the position that he took up a year ago in regard to it, especially if he is as confident now as he was then that four-fifths of the Congress party are as enlightened in their views about that and other social questions as he is himself. One thing the Congress should remember. There is much talk about a session of that body in London during the year after next, and it would be worth while for the leaders to consider what reception the English public would be prepared to give them if they went to England with a denunciation upon their records of the most righteous piece of legislation that has ever been given to India. Mr. Hume, vindicating his position as a friend of Indian social reform, before an English Radical audience, against an Indian Congress in London, demonstrating that Harimatism is a thing to be encouraged, would be a spectacle that would arrest attention, even if a general election were on. The Congress certainly would not profit by it.

THE ROAD TO GILGIT.

THE correspondent of the Times of India writes from Astor, near Gilgit, on Oct. 27:—

Colonel A. G. Durand, British Agent at Gilgit, who had gone down to Simla to confer with the Government of India regarding matters in the province under his jurisdiction, left Bandipore on his return journey on Oct. 6, accompanied by Captain Colin Mackenzie, A.-D.-C. to the Commander-in-Chief in India, Captain Aylmer, R.E., and Mr. Lennard, and with great difficulty, in the face of a blinding snowstorm, they forced their way over the Pass; all suffered severely from the intense cold and were glad to shelter for the night, crowded together for warmth in a dirty little room in a villager's hut at Das-krim, destitute of every comfort, except such as they had been able to bring along with them, as their baggage animals did not get in till nearly midnight.

The party arrived at Astor on the 16th, and after arranging a few details regarding transport, &c., proceeded to Gilgit. Captain Aylmer, however, remained at Boonji to make arrangements for strengthening the country bridge at Ramghat, which is very dangerous on account of its long span, causing it to oscillate most violently, and also to superintend the construction of a flying bridge across the Indus, just below its junction with the Gilgit river, and above the site selected for the new iron suspension bridge, which is to be erected by Messrs. Spedding and Company, from specifications and material coming out from Messrs. Bullivant and Company, the eminent bridge-builders in England.

The bringing up of the wire-rope for the flying bridge, which by the way was supplied by Messrs. Burn and Co., of Calcutta, was a work of considerable difficulty on account of its great length and weight. It was carried over the Rajdangan Pass and as far as Gurais on a specially constructed cart, which had to be abandoned there, as it could not be got over the shaly native bridge, and the rope having been made up into coils and slung on poles was brought on safely to its destination by coolies. In the meantime a number of carpenters had been hard at work building a large flat-bottomed boat to be worked across the river by means of stout cables attached to the wire-rope, and getting to the other side will now, it is to be hoped, not be so dangerous a business as it has been hitherto. (Seventeen persons were drowned by the breaking of a rope last year.)

One important result of Colonel Durand's visit to India was the decision arrived at, that in the view of possible complications on the frontier it was desirable to extend the road beyond Gilgit, and to put it in a fit state for the easy passage of troops, guns, &c.

Mr. Spedding promptly tendered his own services and those of his staff and a large body of workmen from the Gilgit Road works to the Resident in Cashmere for the construction of the road, and his offer was gladly accepted. Having made the necessary arrangements Mr. Spedding left Srinagar on his way to Gilgit to start the work, which is to be carried as far as Chalt, on the borders of the Hunza and Nagar States. He arrived at Astor on Oct. 19, when he selected his men and immediately proceeded to the scene of action.

It is quite on the cards that these people may resent this action of the Government as interfering with their independence, but the presence at Gilgit of the force of Goorkhas and guns, now on their way up from Abbottabad, will be sufficient guarantee that nothing will be allowed to stop this very necessary work.

China also may very possibly make a sign that the near neighbourhood of the "Barbarian" is not desired by her, but in the interests of our Indian Empire such protests must be disregarded.

P.S.—I re-open my letter to say that the advance guard, consisting of eighty men of the force of Goorkhas lent to the Cashmere State by the Government of India, reached Astor on Oct. 27, under command of Captain Kemble, of the 5th Goorkhas, and Lieutenant Baird, 24th P. I. They had experienced rather a hard time on the Passes, but looked very fit and contented.

The two 7-pounder guns under Lieutenant Gorton, R.A., are expected in every hour, and they again are being closely followed by the rear guard under Captain A. A. Barrett, 5th Goorkhas (late Adjutant, Calcutta Volunteer Rifles), and Lieutenant Barrigan, of the same regiment, and the medical officer, Dr. Luard.

Captain Barrett is in command of the whole force. A Gatling gun borrowed from the Seaforth Highlanders is also on its way up under the orders of Lieutenant Badcock.

Captain Bradshaw, 35th Sikhs, and Lieutenant Duncan, 23rd Pioneers, passed up to Gilgit a few days previously, to make arrangements for the accommodation of the troops.

THE INDIAN STATIONERY DEPARTMENT.

THE Bombay Gazette says:—The desire of Government to foster local trades and industries is indicated by the resolution just issued in review of the working of the Stationery Department for the year now ended. Paper, envelopes, ink, and copying machines of local manufacture are shown to be in use, and experiments in all kinds of office necessities of Indian manufactures are being made with a view to increased economy. The Superintendent of the Department, however, began the year with stock of the value of a lac and a half, and closes with little short of two lacs and a half—a noticeable fact when it is considered that stern economists urge the desirability of keeping down stocks. Stores of Indian manufacture, to the value of about three lacs have been during the year substituted for articles of European manufacture, and a total saving of almost a lac of rupees has thus been effected. A still greater substitution might have been recorded, but for the inability of Indian manufacturers to supply certain qualities of paper which were demanded. The Reay Mills were unable to supply them owing to the lowness of the contract rates, and other mills applied to quoted very much in excess of the English rates, so the Secretary of State was indented upon. It is satisfactory to read, however, that the paper-making industry in this country is fast developing, and it is expected that the Indian mills will shortly be able to compete successfully with England. Blue-black ink, of local manufacture, has been found to serve well, and country-made envelopes, though not so good as English, have answered fairly well. Country-made blotting paper has, however, formed a subject of complaints, and the Superintendent of Stationery has been obliged to recommend the purchase of a superior variety at a slightly increased cost. This fact is recorded somewhat apologetically as though the Superintendent regarded it as the one dark blot on the fair pages of his report. Blotting paper which will not enable a prying subordinate, with the aid of a mirror, to decipher the purport of a letter his chief has dried thereon, should of course be condemned. The life of a subordinate would hardly be worth living if it were not for the compensating glimpses he obtains of his superior's secrets through the medium of his blotting paper. Few, however, will complain at the increased expenditure on this score. Had it not been sanctioned a general retrograde movement might have been made and sand-boxes developed into a considerable item. It further appears from the report that matters as weighty as those which divided the Big-endians and the Little-endians in Liliput have been occupying the minds of the Government of India and the Government of Bombay.

The opinion of the latter was invited on certain points with a view to the reduction of expenditure on quills, and they were informed "that this Government approves of the proposal to continue the supply of swan-quills to certain high officials, and that in view of the small saving which the substitution of nibs for goose-quills would involve, and the inconvenience it might cause to officers and establishments accustomed to the use of quills, this Government were not prepared to recommend the substitution proposed." And so in this battle of the quills the local Government for the moment remains victorious. In addition to the prospect of obtaining a C.S.I. or a C.I.E., there is, for the young civilian, another goal to aspire to—the right to use a swan-quill pen, which, we presume, is to have the relative rank of the Field-Marshal's bâton. It is right then that quills be not made common. The Government of India will not accept defeat, and now goes so far as to suggest the use of steel pens. Steel pens are even a step lower than goose-quill nibs, and it remains to be seen whether Government officials of all ranks will not combine to stave off this indignity. Another item of the resolution which calls for remark is that regarding the proposed abolition of the cyclostyle and the substitution of country-made copying-presses. It is doubtful whether the matriculated student is not the cheapest possible copying machine, but two presses of local manufacture have been ordered, and the Commissioner of Police and the Commissioner in Sind, as being, it is assumed, the most long-suffering and most deeply interested in scientific research, have been selected to try these machines and report upon them. During the year the amalgamation of the stationery offices of Bombay and Madras has been contemplated, as was the case with the clothing establishments of the two presidencies; but Madras is determined that she will not lose her individuality without a struggle, and this proposal has been abandoned.

BANKING IN PERSIA.

A MEETING of the Institute of Bankers was held on Dec. 2 in the theatre of the London Institution, when a paper on "Banking in Persia," by Mr. J. Rabino, F.S.S., was read by Mr. Luke Hansard. The paper referred to the geography, industries, history, and currency of Persia. A bank importing capital into Persia was exposed to three dangers—the depreciation of the capital by a fall in silver, the narrowness of the Persian markets, and the fact that capital was always imported at a loss. The movement of funds was an operation of considerable difficulty. The distance between the two most important trade centres was considerably less than that between London and Edinburgh, and yet the post, which was bi-weekly, took five days for the journey, and even then any sum over 1,000*l.* had to be sent by caravan, which required sixteen to twenty-four days. There was a great disorder in the value of the currency, but a palliative was found in the introduction of bank notes, which were more especially valuable, as it would require eighty-three men, forty-one donkeys, thirty-one mules, or twenty-eight camels, to bring to a bank a sum of 25,000*l.*, while an expert money changer would require sixteen days to scrutinise and count this amount. That a bank could render inestimable services to a country devoid of such an organisation, and that the future of such a bank would be commensurate with such services, was a simple truism, but it would be vain to imagine that a year or two would change the prejudices and the habits of thought of an Oriental people with a civilisation wholly different from ours, would bring it up to our standard of education, and cause it to accept, without hesitation or demur, our cheques and bank-notes, our system of doing business—which were not even understood—our habits of punctuality and exactitude, and our whole financial mechanism, which, in fact, was the result not of years, but of ages of experience. The paper concluded with an exposition of the latent wealth of the country, which was said to be very great, as regarded both agricultural and mineral products.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The Commander-in-Chief's Tour.—The Commander-in-Chief General Brackenbury, Sir George White, and party left Gul Kach on Nov. 14, riding twenty-one miles to Mir Ali Kheyl. They camped on the Zhoob river, a mile and a half from the post, which is held by detachments from Dera Ismail Khan of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry and 2nd Sikhs, under the command of Lieut. Forster of the latter regiment. The Commander-in-Chief inspected the post shortly after his arrival on the 15th, and then marched to Brunj, twenty-two miles, and on Nov. 16 to Fort Sandeman, fourteen miles further. Here he was met by Capt. MacIvor, who had come on the previous day, Lieut.-Col. Wilson, 34th Pioneers, commanding the garrison, and Capt. Hogge, Station Staff Officer. The Commander-in-Chief was staying with Capt. and Mrs. MacIvor, the remainder of the party being in tents. On Nov. 17 after breakfast the Chief would inspect the garrison, consisting of a wing of the 12th Bengal Cavalry, a detachment of No. 5 Bombay Mountain Battery, and the 34th Pioneers, and would leave for Badenzai, sixteen miles distant, after lunch.

Sir F. Roberts's Successor.—The following note as to Sir Frederick Roberts's successor comes from a high military authority, and, says the Times of India, will be read with interest:—"My idea is that the Royal Family at home are very anxious for the Duke of Connaught to come out as Commander-in-Chief in India; that the Queen personally wishes it, but is nervous of letting him come; that the choice (further) lies between Sir Evelyn Wood and Sir George Greaves; that the former has the most public interest, as he has served so long at home; that the latter has not the public interest, but is known by all military authorities to be far the better man of the two. Sir George has a better head, more general service and Indian experience, is physically a better and harder man, and would make a superior Commander-in-Chief. This is undoubtedly to my mind. I do not think a royal duke out here as Commander-in-Chief in India could possibly be a success. Militarily, he would require to be a first-class man, and we have not got one at present; socially, he would, whatever was done to prevent it, eclipse the Viceroy at all functions, and this would be a fatal bar to the appointment. Natives are natives, and you will never get over this. If the Viceroy suffered this, he would cease to be a Viceroy in the eyes of the people, and if he held his position, there would be friction and awkward corners. Personally, I am firmly convinced that Sir G. Greaves is the best practical soldier we have got, and I hope to see him Commander-in-Chief in India before long."

Housing of Native Infantry.—It has been decided to adopt tentatively the proposals as regards an improved type of lines for the Native Infantry, suggested by Lieut.-Col. G. F. Young, Assistant Quartermaster-General, and as an experiment entirely new lines are to be constructed at Jullandar by the 27th Punjab Infantry, at Meean Meer by the 34th Pioneers, and at Delhi by the 36th Sikhs. The experiment consists in determining whether a really sound set of lines can be built within any reasonable sum which it is practically possible to provide, and on the result it very much depends whether the Government will be able to adopt the suggestion, or will be compelled to abandon all endeavours to improve the housing of the Native Infantry.

The Imperial Service Troops.—In anticipation of the employment of the Imperial Service troops on active service in the field, the following orders have been issued by the Government of India with reference to their equipment and maintenance:—I. In the event of the mobilisation of Imperial Service troops for active service, expenditure under the following headings will be defrayed by Government: (a) Extra allowances in the field (while on active service, in accordance with the rules regarding such allowances laid down for observance in the native army for the time being in force). (b) Transport by rail or sea. (c) Food and forage. (d) Ammunition. (e) Maintenance of special equipment subsequent to mobilisation and during the period of active service. II. The States to which the mobilised troops belong will meet the other charges, which include those on account of—(a) The ordinary pay of troops. (b) Transport by road. (c) All the articles of special equipment required on mobilisation for Native Cavalry and Infantry by the Field Service Equipment Tables. (III.) Native States are expected to send their troops into the field fully equipped with all requisites for active service, and those requisites must be provided prior to, and in anticipation of, active service. If it is found that the troops of any Native State are not fully equipped as above, they will be provided with equipment by the British Government, and the first cost will be recovered from the State concerned. (IV.) While in the field officers commanding Imperial Service troops will draw advances from field paymasters or treasure chest officers to meet their cash requirements in accordance with the rules laid down in the Field Service Departmental Codes, Military Accounts. Such advances will be recovered by the Military Accounts Department from the Native States concerned.

In future the classes for garrison instruction in India will consist of ten officers per class, and they will be held three times a year—namely, Jan. 23, May 27, and Aug. 9.

Cholera had broken out in the 15th Bengal Lancers on the line of march to Lahore. Eight cases had already proved fatal, while they were halted near Nowshera. It was also prevailing in a bad type in Peshawur city.

The Inspector-General of Cavalry had left Meerut for Aligarh. The first troops to arrive at the camp of exercise would be the 3rd and 6th Bengal Cav., who were due on Nov. 21.

No steps are to be taken in the conversion of the 26th Bombay Inf., until it is seen how the work of reconstituting the 24th Bombay Inf. into a Beloochistan regiment progresses. It is thought desirable that the organisation of the regiment should be carried out on the class company system, and that not more than four, or, at most, five, companies should be composed of Pathans.

It has been decided that the allotments for Volunteer camps of exercise shall, in future years, be made by the respective Commanders-in-Chief of each Presidency, instead of by the Commander-in-Chief in India, as heretofore, as they are held to be best able to judge what corps under their command will derive most benefit from such camps. Of the annual provision of 15,000 rs. for these camps, 8,000 rs. will be allotted to Bengal, 4,000 rs. to Madras and 3,000 rs. to Bombay.

The continuance of subsistence allowance to the wives and families of non-commissioned officers when they are left in India, during their absence on furlough in England, either on medical certificate or on private affairs, has been sanctioned. In the event of the non-commissioned officer's wife and family accompanying him on furlough, subsistence allowance to them will only be allowed up to, and for, the date prior to that of anticipated embarkation.

The question of forming an artillery and British cavalry camp on the Chattr plain in the Hazara district is now, the Civil and Military Gazette understands, awaiting the orders of Government. The plain would appear to be a perfect paradise for game at present, and it will be a pity if the military occupation leads to the loss of this character. A little judicious preservation and self-restraint could be easily exercised to prevent such a result, and will be heartily appreciated by all sportsmen.

The Military Department finally closed at Simla on Nov. 7, and is now in full swing at Calcutta. General Collen had left Simla on a short tour. He would inspect the Imperial Service troops at Patiala, and thence proceed to visit the three remount depôts at Kurnal, Saharanpore, and Hapore, and the horse-breeding establishment at the latter place. He would also visit Roorkee and the siege operations at Pur; thence go to Allahabad to inspect the Ordnance and Commissariat establishments, arriving at Calcutta towards the end of November.

The Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the following monthly allowances to medical officers in the fields, for the collateral medical charge of the staff and departments of certain military units, under the revised arrangements for mobilisations by divisions:—Division of all arms, Division of Infantry, Division of Cavalry, Brigade of Cavalry, 100 rs. per mensem. Corps of artillery, Brigade of all arms on the lines of communications, 50 rs. per mensem.

Government have been pleased to decide that the special allowance of 75 rs. per mensem, authorised by Article 250, Army Regulations, India, Vol. I., Part I., for all captains, subalterns and surgeons on military duty in the Naga Hills, shall be continued to such officers during absence on privilege leave.

The Indian Marine steamer Canning, Capt. H. S. Black, sailed on Nov. 17 for Kurrachee, with the following details, consisting of 8 officers, 4 warrant officers, 4 women, and 10 children, 117 men (Europeans), 11 women, and 24 children, 9 men (natives), 117 followers, 36 women, 33 children, and 129 horses. The following are the names of the officers:—Major Lyster, 53rd Field batty. R.A.; Lieut. Massie, 53rd Field batty. R.A.; Lieut. Greer, R.A.; Capt. Braid, R.A.; Lieut. Watling, R.E.; Surg.-Major General Webb; Lieut. MacMunn, 55th Field batty. R.A.; Capt. Shepherd, Royal Dublin Fusiliers.

The troopship Serapis arrived one day late at Bombay. Owing to this delay, perhaps, the drafts were pushed through Deolali very rapidly, says the Civil and Military Gazette, the like of it not having occurred, it is said, since the formation of the Depot. The special troop train arrived at Deolali in the early morning, when the men (some 700) were rapidly detrained, marched to the Standing Camp, and told off six to a tent. At 7 o'clock they were on the march to the Station Hospital, three-quarters of a mile away, for medical inspection. They breakfasted at 8 o'clock; paraded at the Quartermaster's stores at 9 for their rug, blanket, and suleetah; exchanged their serge clothing with the Connaught Rangers detachment, going home, for white or khakhi, or sold it; had dinner, and over 200 of them were again in the train by 4.30 P.M., and on the way for Calcutta. The remainder of the drafts for Bengal left the next day.

Surg.-Major M. L. Bartholomeusz, I.M.S., arrived in India from Australia on Nov. 16.

Major F. D. Raikes, C.I.E., arrived in Hurwa on Oct. 30, and resumed his duties as deputy commissioner of Rangoon.

Capt. A. L. Carroll, R.A., now on furlough in England, has resigned his appointment in the Ordnance Dept.

We, Times of India, understand that Capt. M. W. Weekes, No. 11 Company, Southern Division, Royal Art., Colaba, has applied to resign the service.

Lieut.-Col. C. A. de N. Lucas has been granted permission to return to duty on the Indian Establishment.

Major A. W. Proudfoot, commandant 9th Bombay Infantry, took over the command of the above regiment on Nov. 11 from Capt. Aslett, who rejoins the 1st Grenadiers.

Col. John Hibbert, Assistant Commissary-General, who has been granted one year's leave to Europe, was to embark from Bombay on Nov. 21.

Col. Bruce, Commissary-General, Madras, who will be retired next year, has applied to the Government for an extension of office for five years, quoting the precedent of Col. Gunning, late Commissary-General.

Surg.-Col. T. N. Hoysted, Administrative Medical Officer, Sirhind District, Bengal, succeeds Sir James Hanbury as Principal Medical Officer of the forces in the Madras Presidency.

Major-Gen. Graham, Commanding Myingyan, has been ordered to Bareilly to relieve Sir Robert Low, who is about to proceed on leave. Sir Robert Low will be promoted in the spring to the command of the Presidency district.

Capt. H. M. Prior, Military Accounts Department, Poona, does not go to Calcutta as originally arranged. He goes to Bombay shortly to take over the Presidency paymastership, when Capt. Young goes on leave.

Capt. T. Dewhirst, of the 2nd battalion South Wales Borderers, is permitted to proceed to England, his retirement from the service having been provisionally accepted by the Commander-in-Chief.

Col. Waterfield, 45th Sikhs, took over charge as colonel on the staff at Ferozepore on Nov. 13, relieving Col. Lance, who proceeds home on leave. The latter officer will return in April to assume command of the Punjab Frontier Force, on Sir William Lockhart being transferred to Lucknow.

The three candidates for the appointment of Station Staff Officer Poona, which will become vacant on Capt. Page's departure, are Capt. E. A. P. Hobday, R.A.; Capt. Harver Welfman, 13th Bombay Inf.; and Capt. Caulfield, 10th Bombay Light Inf.

Consequent on the return from furlough of Lieut.-Col. C. A. de N. Lucas the following appointments are made in the 6th Bombay Cav. (Jacob's Horse):—Capt. C. F. Grantham, 4th Squadron Commander and Officiating 2nd Squadron Commander, to officiate as 3rd Squadron Commander. Lieut. A. E. S. Hartigan, Squadron Officer and Officiating 3rd Squadron Commander, to officiate as 4th Squadron Commander.

Lieut. H. C. Holman, of the 2nd Devonshire Regt., who was prominently brought to notice by Brig.-General Wolseley and Major-General Campbell Stewart for his excellent services with the Wuntho Expedition, has been appointed unpaid attaché to the Intelligence Branch at Mandalay.

The following changes are about to take place in the Commissariat Department:—Capt. Wharry to be personal assistant to the Commissary-General, Western Circle; Major Montgomery will, on return from England, be posted as chief commissariat officer, Rawul Pindi command, relieving Col. Hunt, the present incumbent, who goes to Mian Mir in the same capacity, to relieve Colonel Parker, who retires from the service.

Sir George Greaver, Commander-in-Chief in Bombay, accompanied by his personal and headquarters staff, proceeds on a tour of inspection during December through the Bombay and Deesa districts. Leaving Poona on the 8th, he will arrive at Mount Abu on the 9th, Deesa on the 11th, Rajkote on the 13th (halting there two days), and Bhuj on the 16th. Leaving there on the 19th, he will return to headquarters, halting on the 21st and 22nd at Baroda, and reaching Poona on the 24th.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Nov. 18.

The Hyderabad Diamond Case.—In the High Court on Nov. 18, Mr. Garth, barrister, who appeared on behalf of Mr. Jacob in the Hyderabad Diamond Case, applied to Mr. Justice Wilson, who is to preside at the next High Court Sessions, for a summons to issue upon Albert Abid, the Nizam's chamberlain; and Sir Asman Jah, Minister of Hyderabad, calling upon the former to produce certain documents required by the defence in the case, and demanding the latter's personal attendance at the Sessions, to give evidence on behalf of the defence. His Lordship granted the first application, but refused the second, on the ground that Sir Asman Jah was beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, inasmuch as he was a subject of, and resident in, a foreign State.

The Subordinate Judicial Staff.—The Secretary of State has now sanctioned the proposals of the Government of Bengal, submitted in the autumn of last year to the Government of India, for the reinforcement of the subordinate judicial staff of the Lower Provinces. An addition of some fifty-two munsiffs will at once be made to the acting subordinate judicial staff, being distributed over the various districts according to their needs. The powers of the munsiffs will also be, in some cases increased. As moreover this addition was recommended from the consideration of the statistics of only a single year, while litigation may be expected to increase, and the amount of work varies from year to year, two subordinate judges and six ordinary munsiffs will be appointed as a supernumerary staff to meet emergencies as they arise. It is hoped that in this way the congestion of work, which had threatened to become intolerable, will be materially relieved.

Calcutta University.—The committee appointed by the Senate to inquire into the needs of the Calcutta University and suggest means of providing for them, has submitted its report. With a few dissentients the committee proposes that a building be constructed of sufficient size to accommodate the enormous number of candidates who annually present themselves for examination. The present Senate House will scarcely hold more than a third, and, in order to provide for the remainder, it is found necessary to obtain the use of some of the colleges and schools for two or more weeks in every year. This arrangement, it is pointed out, involves a cessation of work at the institutions in question during the period in which the examinations are being held, and the interruption, in the opinion of the committee, takes place "at a time of year most suitable for regular work." This, says a Calcutta paper, is obviously unfortunate, but it may be doubted whether the interests of education in Bengal will be most effectively served by spending a large sum in the construction of so extensive a building as is projected.

The Port of Calcutta.—A resolution is published in the Bengal Gazette on the report of the Commissioners of the Port of Calcutta for 1890-91. The gross debt of the Commissioners amounted at the close of the year to about one crore and nineteen lacs of rupees; the consolidated debt due to Government being reduced to about 41 1-3 lacs, a decrease of 1 1-3 lacs. During the twelve months a sum of nearly 1 1-3 lacs was invested by the Commissioners in their own debentures for the repayment of the debenture loans, making the total amount at credit of the sinking fund account 7,78,500 rs. As against the total debt of one crore and nineteen lacs, the assets were valued on March 31 last at two crores and twenty-three lacs. The income of the Jetties amounted to about 12½ lacs—from inland vessels wharves nearly five lacs, the largest receipt since 1881. In his resolution on the report, the Lieutenant-Governor complains of the delay which has occurred in its submission, in spite of the fact that the lateness of these returns was commented upon last year.

The Englishman learns with pleasure that on the retirement of the Venerable Archdeacon Michell early next month he will be succeeded by the Rev. Welborne MacCarthy, Senior Chaplain of St. Paul's Cathedral. We congratulate his Lordship the Bishop on this selection, which is certain to give absolute satisfaction. Padre MacCarthy's name is "a household word," not only in Calcutta, where he is so well known, and his genial character so much appreciated, but in the up-country stations, where he has from time to time held the position of pastor.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Nov. 19.

Lieutenant King Acquitted.—The case against Lieutenant King, after a long and patient hearing, has resulted in his acquittal, which, says the Times of India, was almost a foregone conclusion. The evidence made it abundantly clear that he was not in the possession of a stick until he wrested one from the hands of a man who was menacing him with it, and at whom he aimed with it a blow, and that man, moreover, was not the man who got hurt. His companion, who also threatened Mr. King, was struck by the latter with his fist and he disappeared. The prosecution sought to prove that Lieutenant King aimed a fatal blow at the tollman with a "short black polished stick," according to one witness, and with a "hunting chowk," according to another; but the attempt to prove this broke down altogether. The case for the prosecution was, in fact, such a mass of discrepancies that Mr. Eardley Norton characterised it as a conspiracy, which was apparently the feeling of the jury, too, for after a very brief consultation—so brief that it could hardly be called a consultation at all—they found Lieutenant King not guilty, and he was at once discharged.

The East Coast Railway.—The Governor, replying to an address at Vizagapatam on Nov. 16, trusted that the East Coast Railway would, under the able superintendence of Mr. Walker, soon be completed. Lord Cross and himself were equally anxious for its completion. Regarding the Vizagapatam harbour, he said it was premature to express an opinion, as the question had never been thoroughly examined. Mr. Thorowgood's investigations, followed by the opinions of harbour experts at home, should enable them to arrive at a decision. It was hoped the matter, which is urgent, would be settled during his time.

Mr. Rees on Mr. Kipling.—The chairman, Mr. Rees, speaking at the anniversary of the Literary Society, warned the students not to look on Mr. Kipling as a trustworthy exponent of the life of the English in India. Mr. Kipling outgauged whatever he touched, although in his touch is ever the all-redempting attribute of power. Referring to Sir Lepel Griffin's charge that higher education in India was utterly sterile, he instanced proof to the contrary in the improved personnel of the public service, observing that that delightful writer was not given to the understatement of his case. While freely admitting the excellence of Indian domestic life, he hoped the writer who recently refuted Mr. Grigg's, the Director of Public Instruction, charge of general deceit against the natives also overstated his case, when he said all English wives have talent and contempt for their husbands. The speaker acquitted educated natives of leading more deceitful lives than others, since all men have a public and private life.

Coal in Madras.—A company, called the Arconum Coal Company, Limited, is in course of formation in Madras, for the purpose of first searching for coal seams near Arconum by means of steam-boring machinery. The place where it is believed coal has been struck is near the gardens in the Conjeveram taluq, Chingleput. Father Dominic has been sinking artesian boring with the object of obtaining a permanent supply of water, and by last May got to the depth of nearly three hundred feet. Mr. Bruce Foote, at the Father's request, inspected the boring, and in his report, published in the Mail of Sept. 2, referred to the possibility of coal being found. The boring is now pierced on a bed of black clay, which is becoming steadily richer in bitumen, and under which, there are fair reasons of hoping, coal-seams may be met with. Mr. Bruce Foote, in a more detailed report, expressed his opinion that an extensive coal-field will probably be found in the neighbourhood of places near the gardens. The company has applied to Government for prospecting rights over a large tract, and the Government will do everything in its power to expedite the work in proving whether coal is to be had there or not.

A tragedy has been reported from Bezvada, where Francis Dene, son of the Rev. Mr. Dene, Principal of the Lawrence Asylum, Ootacamund, is reported to have committed suicide by shooting himself. The deceased had been ill for some time, and more than once it was feared that his mind had become unhinged, but lately it was thought he had completely recovered.

The Madras School of Arts appears to have made more satisfactory progress last year than it has for many years past. The number of pupils rose from 364 to 424, and the fact that as many as 260 students of the poorer classes availed themselves of the benefits of the School is a healthy symptom of the practical value of the instruction imparted. The results of the examinations, however, were far from satisfactory. The net cost of the School to Government amounted during the year to 28,178 rs.

The new High Court buildings, Madras, are now, so far as their external appearance goes, almost completed, and most of the scaffolding is down. The central tower, which is also to serve as a lighthouse, is, however, still only half completed. The grass plots, shrubberies and roads in front of the building have been put in hand, but the general effect of the frontage will be much marred by the railway line, which necessitates lateral approaches on only one side and gives a shut-in appearance to the whole.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Nov. 21.

H. E. the Governor of Bombay, on tour in Sind, arrived at Larkhana on Nov. 16, and after receiving and replying to a municipal address, proceeded on to Sukkur. There he inspected the schools, police lines, hospital, and other institutions, after which he was presented with a municipal address. His Excellency and Staff had some duck shooting on the Indus on the 17th, and on the 18th held a reception, leaving the same night by steamer for Panoakil. Lord Harris was to reach Quetta on Nov. 24, and will be met there by General Sir Frederick Roberts, General Braekenbury, and General Sir George White.

The High Court reopened on Monday, Nov. 16, after the October Vacation, the Chief Justice with Mr. Justice Parsons and Mr. Justice Telang disposing of work on the Appellate Side, while Mr. Justice Bayley and Mr. Justice Farran presided over the Courts on the Original Side.

At the High Court on Nov. 16, before the Hon. Mr. Justice Bayley, Mr. Rudolph Eyre Melsheimer, B.A., Oxon, was admitted as a member of the Bombay Bar, he having made the usual declaration.

REMARKABLE BALLOON ASCENT BY A NAVAL OFFICER.

A Bombay paper of Nov. 21 says:—The balloon ascent and parachute descent made by Lieutenant Mansfield, R.N.R., at Victoria Gardens on the 13th inst. was undoubtedly the finest performance ever witnessed in this country, and, for the matter of that, in any other. Lieutenant Mansfield boasts that his system of parachuting is peculiarly adapted to the exigencies of modern warfare, and certainly if it be possible, as he has demonstrated to the public of Bombay, to float at ease and at leisure for seventeen minutes at the altitude which he reached, and to be able to descend in the cool and safe manner which the aeronaut did on Friday afternoon, one of the most distinct advances in the matter of military ballooning has been conclusively proved. In order that there should be no hitch in the ascent—for Lieutenant Mansfield is most enthusiastic himself about his performances—he slept in a tent in proximity to the balloon throughout the night of the 12th inst., and watched with a jealous eye the whole of the arrangements which were made on the following morning; indeed, so zealous was he that he commenced to have the balloon inflated as early as 7 A.M., and so well were the arrangements carried out by Mr. Jones, the acting manager of the Bombay Gas Works, and his assistant, Mr. Pennington, that by about 11.30 the fine balloon "Wanderer" was perfectly ready for the ascent. A compact little body of stalwart Blue Jackets from the war-ship Marathon, at present lying in Bombay Harbour, were early on the ground, and undertook the charge of the various ropes and guy-lines which prevented the escape of Lieutenant Mansfield's pretty balloon into the regions of eternal space. A vast crowd had collected in the gardens, when, at about ten minutes to five, Lieutenant Mansfield, who was attired in the undress uniform of the Royal Naval Reserve, took his seat on the trapeze immediately beneath the balloon, and, having made a graceful bow to the assembled company, shouted to the tars, "Let go!" In the twinkling of an eye the men, with that discipline so characteristic of the British Navy, fell back, and the balloon swept with the gesture of an eagle towards cloudland. On leaving the Gardens the aerial ball with its 25,000 feet of gas and its plucky director started off in an easterly direction, but arriving at an upper stratum suddenly changed its course and commenced to drift rapidly back to the west. It seemed for a time to ordinary spectators that the conflicting currents had stayed the progress of the balloon, but this was not so, as it continued to make a rapid upward journey until it reached the extreme altitude of 11,400 feet according to the self-registering aneroid strapped to the lieutenant's arm. At this the balloon and the voyageur were all but indistinct, and fears were entertained that some accident had happened to the aeronaut, and that he was unable to make his promised descent. These fears, however, were at length dispelled, for after ascending for a period of seven minutes and thirty-four seconds the naked vision was just enabled to discern that a tiny white speck had detached itself from the balloon and was gracefully fluttering down towards mother earth. For what seemed to be a terrible length of time nothing could be seen of the aeronaut himself, and even the most powerful binoculars revealed only the outline of the parachute, and the balloon, which had capsized and was discharging its noxious gas into mid air, looked as if intent on a journey out to sea. Gradually the parachutist came into human ken, but so measuredly was the progression towards terra firma that it was a long while before more than a mere black speck suspended from the guy-lines of the parachute definitely appeared in sight. After some time the form of Lieutenant Mansfield became tolerably visible, swinging to and fro most vicariously under his parachute, but evidently knowing what he was about and working the valve lines of the apparatus so as to ensure a safe landing when he chose to make it. Such a complete "master of the air" has certainly never been seen before in this country, and whatever value his movements may have to military authorities, to the civil and lay population they proved the most astonishing and completely astounding ever witnessed. One universal shout arose as Lieutenant Mansfield disappeared behind the trees and houses, and finally landed in the Foras Road, Byculla, where he was instantly surrounded by an enormous crowd of natives, from which position he was rescued by Mr. F. S. Piper, who had been on the alert from the moment the descent commenced. Although the time occupied in descending exceeded a quarter of an hour, Lieutenant Mansfield seemed not in the least bit disturbed, but manipulated his parachute with the utmost coolness, and appeared to the spectators to drop just where he wished to.

BURMA.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs from Rangoon (Nov. 30) :—

Sir James Dormer has arrived at Bhamo.

Lieut. Boyd, R.A., died at Bhamo to-day of fever. He arrived on the previous day from the jade mines.

The field telegraph is being extended to a post on the Chinese frontier forty-eight miles from Bhamo.

Reuter adds on Dec. 4 :—

Sir A. Mackenzie, the Chief Commissioner, has decided to pay another visit to Upper Burma, and he will proceed to Aracan on the 7th instant.

A fresh outrage has been committed by dacoits in the Wuntho district, the village of Myelin, situated between Pinlebu and Wuntho, having been attacked and burnt by the marauders.

Gold has been discovered at Chopia, a village near Wuntho.

THE Pioneer correspondent writes from Fort White on Nov. 13 :—As regards the aspect of the Kanhows, it is likely that we shall be allowed to march quietly and unmolested through their country, but once beyond it, it is impossible to say what will happen. It is intended that the column shall push on to the borders of Manipore and map out all the country they pass through, especially discriminating between the various tribes they come across, and marking the boundaries of the territory of each chief, with a view to the easier exaction of tribute afterwards, and the imposition of punishment on any lawbreakers.

PROPOSALS made by the Chief Commissioner of Burma for the grant of local allowances to civil officers and their establishments serving in unhealthy and remote stations in the Province have been sent home for sanction.

COLD WEATHER OPERATIONS.—MINUTE OF SIR A. MACKENZIE.

An important minute by the Chief Commissioner on the cold weather operations is published. The arrangements sketched in it have received the sanction of the Government of India.

Sir Alexander Mackenzie deals at length with Chinland and Bhamo. As to the first he thinks Yawdwin and the Chinboks will not forget the punishment of last year, and may be expected to abstain for the present from raiding in the Pakokku District. Yawdwin will, however, be garrisoned by 300 men, and the subdivisional officer will spend the whole cold season travelling on the hills and receiving tribute from the Yindus, Chinboks, Chinbons, and Chinmes. Sir Alexander Mackenzie thinks that if the Tashon chiefs were once effectually dominated, there will be very little trouble afterwards. In Chinland it is not proposed to break their power, but they must be converted into tributaries; and to this end Falam, their headquarters, is to be made a permanent post.

Mr. Macnabb proposed that a column should march to Shibaung from Haka to meet another party from Akyab, but Sir Alexander Mackenzie decided to defer these. Three columns will be absolutely necessary, namely, the Baungashe, Tashon, and Tlangtang, full particulars of whose proposed operations have already been telegraphed you. The Baungashe column starts about Dec. 1. The primary operations will occupy about a month, when Mr. Macnabb returns to Haka to take part in the Tlangtang Expedition. From this he will return to Haka on Feb. 1, when the main Tashon Expedition sets out. The latter expedition will be a friendly one, if the Tashons, Nwengals, and Yahaos prove friendly; but otherwise it will be punitive. In all fourteen hundred men and six guns will take part in the Haka operations.

The Fort White operations will consist of the Kanhaw Expedition, which will meet, if practicable, a force from Manipore, a secondary expedition co-operating with the Haka men. There will be thirteen hundred men and four guns operating from Fort White.

"In the Bhamo district," says Sir Alexander Mackenzie, "there is a vast amount of work before us which must be taken up on a bold and comprehensive scale, if it is ever to be done at all. The whole of the tribes lying west of the Irrawaddy must be made to know that they are residents of a British district, and must obey the orders of the district officers. On the general question of policy along the Chinese frontier I am addressing the Government of India, but we have a long list of outrages and raids for which the guilty tribes who live more to the west of the Chinese border must be called to account. An expedition in force in these hills, within our undoubted boundary, will make matters easy for any subsequent Anglo-Chinese delimitation commission. A small tax will be put on each household; petty crime and civil disputes will be settled according to tribal custom. Each chief recognised by us will receive a sanaa or certificate. The Tsawbwas have appealed about the slavery, which is universal among the Kachins, and to enter on a crusade against it would mean rousing all the tribes into fierce and active hostility. We ought to be content with the release of those captured in the raids. Otherwise I would leave this domestic institution untouched."

In all, the ten columns operating in the Bhamo district will number 700 rifles, 80 mounted infantry, six guns, and about 600 police. In Katha and Wuntho the villages and jungles are to be thoroughly hunted for the ex-Tsawbwa and Boh Le.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

THE GOVERNMENT of the N.-W. Provinces has recommended the reorganisation of the police at a cost of nine lacs.

THE BISHOP of CALCUTTA consecrated the nave of All Saints' Church, Allahabad, on Nov. 17. The service was a very impressive one. Three lacs of rupees are still required to complete the church, which is intended to serve as the cathedral of the future Lucknow diocese.

THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL will probably not meet until the early spring. The business that will come before it will be bills dealing with village munsiffs' courts and village sanitation, if these are approved by the Government of India; a Drainage Bill; and an Act embodying such a change in the Local Municipal Law as will enable municipalities to inspect lodging-houses and regulate the number of their inmates.

A MHOW TELEGRAM of Nov. 14 says :—Mohendranath Chatterjee, pleader and editor of the Eastern Herald, Mhow, who was convicted of defamation in April last by the Sessions Judge of Mhow for publishing a letter regarding Captain Franks, of Indore, was released on the 15th, the sentence being remitted unconditionally by the Viceroy at the special recommendation of the Hon. R. J. Crosswaite, the Agent to the Governor-General at Indore, and Doctor Caldecott, officiating Superintendent, Central Jail, Indore. Even so late the release of Mohendranath has given some satisfaction at last to the Mhow public—respectable Hindoos, Mohammedans, and Parsees in particular. Although news of the release reached Mhow suddenly, some leading members of the Hindoo and Mohammedan community wanted to make a demonstration, but the idea was given up at the earnest request of Mohendranath, who is suffering from epilepsy since his imprisonment.

THE Miranzai Expedition.—It is notified from the War Office that the Queen has commanded that the India medal of 1854, with a clasp inscribed "Samana, 1891," shall be granted to all troops employed in the late Miranzai Expedition between April 5 of this year—the date of the advance from Kohati—and May 25, and who were employed in the military operations against the Urakzai tribes. A bronze medal of similar pattern will be given to all authorised Government followers of the troops.

THE Deccan Agriculturists Relief Act.—A Resolution, issued from the Indian Home Department, deals at length with the subject of the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act, and states that, having regard to the extreme importance of the questions involved, the Governor-General in Council has resolved to direct fresh enquiry to be made into the working of the measure by a Special Commission composed of the following officers :—Mr. J. W. Neill, Commissioner, Central Provinces, President; Mr. C. M. Rivaz, Commissioner, Punjab; Mr. H. F. Evans, Judge, N.-W. Provinces, with whom will be associated two members selected by the Government of Bombay. Mr. Leslie-Porter will be the Secretary to the Commission. It is not only with the object of deciding whether the Act shall be retained with or without modification where it is at present in force, nor even whether it should be extended to other districts in the Bombay Presidency that the Governor-General in Council seeks assistance of the Commission. It will be their task also to examine how far the principles which may have approved themselves by experience in the Deccan are capable of extension to other provinces where a similar problem presents itself, and are likely to afford adequate remedy for the evils which are there complained of. Should the Commission be of opinion that the measures embodied in the Deccan Act can only be of temporary effect and afford no lasting solution of this difficult problem of Indian administration, they should state what other measures, if any, they would recommend for the purpose.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

A ST. PETERSBURG telegram to the Times (Dec. 2) says:—M. Grombchevsky, the well-known Asiatic traveller, recently delivered before the members of the Academy of the General Staff a lecture on the origin and rise of the Pamir Question. According to the report of the Novosti, M. Grombchevsky declared that the Indian Government sent Captain Younghusband to annex this territory, to which its former possessors, the Chinese, had resigned their claim when requested by the English and Afghans to chastise the marauding natives. Captain Younghusband, it was intended, should occupy a fortified point, and subjugate the Kirghiz of the surrounding district. M. Grombchevsky concluded his lecture with the following résumé of the situation:—

"The partition of the Pamir plateau between Afghanistan and China affects Russia's interests. Negotiations, therefore, are at present going on, and so long as these negotiations are not brought to a definite close it will not be difficult for Russia to oppose the objectionable claims of the nations in question. As the rights of China are far from being clear, and her possession of the Pamir is in any case only nominal, and one which brings her no advantages, there is but little danger of serious diplomatic protest if Russia asserts her right to the territory. The circumstances, however, would be completely changed if the Chinese, in order to protect themselves from Afghan raids, should conclude a treaty with England. The Chinese are an ambitious people, and if backed up by England, would never admit that they had no claims on the Pamir. To begin a conflict with the teeming millions of the Chinese Empire is not to be thought of; but a frontier regulation once arranged with China, the expulsion of the English from the Pamir offers no difficulties of any kind."

On the previous day the Times published the following:—News from Turkestan states that the well-known traveller on the Pamirs, Colonel Grombchevsky, is lying hopelessly ill near Tashkend.

On Dec. 4 the correspondent adds the following:—I had long conversations with Captain Grombchevsky when he returned here from his journey in the Pamirs, and his abortive attempt to reach Cashmere last winter, and I am convinced that what the Russians have since done so successfully in sending troops to establish possession, and in taking prisoner a British officer and conveying him under arrest all the way to Marghilan without one word of protest or even astonishment from the British Government, was the direct and immediate outcome of Capt. Grombchevsky's report and information given in St. Petersburg last year. It is high time that the British Press gave up the habit of continuing to imagine that any geographical or other purely natural obstacles exist which in these days can effectually stop any nation from getting at the frontiers of its neighbours, and this is especially so in regard to Russia and the Indian or Afghan frontiers. I now give the rest of Captain Grombchevsky's story of what has occurred in the Pamir from the Novosti. The part of Captain Grombchevsky's recent lecture on the Pamir which related to the position of the English in that country runs, according to the report of the Novosti, as follows:—

"Two years before the Russian traveller's journey, an English officer, Colonel Lockhart, traversed Kanjut from north to south. The then Khan, the father of the present ruler, failed to keep the promises which he made to Colonel Lockhart. In spite of the fact that he had accepted a large sum of money and given hostages (among whom was his youngest son), he captured a number of the carriers of the expedition and sold eighteen of them as slaves. Colonel Lockhart, who was then at Wakhan, protested against this treatment, and wrote to the Khan saying that for the sake of the prestige of England he would pay any ransom he might demand. The Khan, however, replied that for his own prestige he would sell the captives to whomsoever he pleased. He also permitted the population to steal from the expedition, and to demand unheard-of prices for provisions. According to the reports of the natives, Colonel Lockhart barely came out of the country alive.

"In spite of this treatment nothing was done to the hostages; on the contrary, they received rich presents and were allowed to return to their homes. The subjects of the Khan, however, were discontented with him, because he had admitted the English (who were considered the natural enemies of the country) to Kanjut, and murdered him. His son Safved Ali Khan ascended the throne, and he was considered by the Chinese authorities in Kashgar as the murderer of his father. For these reasons Safved Ali Khan himself, in the summer of 1888, during Captain Grombchevsky's stay in Kanjut, organised a raid on a caravan coming from China and bound for Cashmere. The failure of this attempt was attributed by the robbers to the Kirghiz, and in revenge they took twenty-one prisoners and plundered them of 1,000 head of cattle. Their relatives offered a ransom of 2,500 roubles, but this their captors refused.

"At this point, however, the English Commissioner at Ladak intervened, and instructed the English Agent, an Afghan named Shah Mahomed Khan, to recommend the Kirghiz to again address themselves for justice to the Chinese authorities. If the latter should refuse they could then apply to the English Commissioner. These instructions they followed out. The Chinese authorities rejected their petition, upon which they appealed to the Commissioner at Ladak, who rewarded them most liberally for so doing. The Indian Government thereupon addressed a request to Pekin that China should take measures to repress the excesses in Kanjut, and restore order on the great caravan route between Kanjut and Cashmere, as the existing state of affairs was seriously injuring English commercial interests.

"In consequence of this action the Imperial Government at Pekin interrogated the local authorities in Kashgar, who replied that the natives of Kanjut were robber tribes who were only nominally subject to China. The attack on the caravan and on the Kirghiz, they alleged, had taken place at a great distance from the last Chinese post, and therefore beyond the frontier of Kashgar. Thereupon the Indian Government fitted out an expedition under Captain Younghusband to take possession of the territory which China had thus repudiated. Captain Younghusband received orders to take possession of the fortress of Shahi-Doula-Khodja, and to place the Kirghiz under British protection. Such are the further details of Captain Grombchevsky's lecture, from which it would appear that Russia was the first and the most successful in the 'scramble' for the Pamir."

We have watched (says the Pioneer) the progress of the concocted story about the Ameer's commercial mission to St. Petersburg as that of a bubble on its upward way, that gets more luminous the nearer it is to bursting. It is not easy to conceive a motive on the part of the Ameer which would induce him to be limited to his own workshops, where he gets all that he wants done for him under the supervision of British mechanics. On the other hand, nothing can be easier than for the Russians to magnify the visit of a few Afghan merchants from Bokhara into an embassy to the Czar, and nothing plainer than their motive for doing so. They trust, of course, to sow some distrust thereby between the British Government and its ally, the feeling of which may linger after the statement has been contradicted; and simple though the ruse is, as it appears successful with hysterical Anglo-Indian journalists, we may presume that it is not without its effect on native opinion upon either side of the frontier. At any rate, under different forms we may expect its frequent re-appearance.

It is always extremely difficult to estimate the value of statements which appear in the St. Petersburg and Moscow papers regarding Russian movements in Central Asia. The Press Censor seems to be influenced mainly by a desire to sanction the publication of news which will cause a flutter of excitement in India and at the same time annoy the English Foreign Office. Thus the Novoye Vremya was allowed to bluster about England's having to make good her claims to the Pamirs by force of arms, and we have now the Novosti stating that the Russian movements in these highlands are the logical reply to British intrigues and policy, a rider being added to the effect that the Russian Empire in Asia will be firmly maintained. What the intrigues are, or how our policy should have caused the filibustering expedition to the Hindu Kush, does not appear. Russian writers delight to deal in generalisations; they are then on safe ground and cannot be convicted of specific misstatements. There is an audacity about this theory of a "logical reply" which can scarcely fail to be appreciated in India. It is well known here that the intriguing in Central Asia of late years has been all on the side of Russia, and more particularly so since General Kuropatkin became Governor-General of Transcaspia. He has attempted to tamper with the Ameer's officials at Herat and elsewhere, though not successfully, and his agents have also been actively employed at Mashad. Again it must be remembered that Grombchevsky visited Hunza last year, and planted the seeds of future mischief within a few marches of Gilgit. These facts are of course studiously ignored by the anti-English journals in Russia, which persistently assert that England is the source of all trouble in Central Asia. Fortunately the device is so transparent that it can readily be detected. It would be more honest on the part of these writers if they were to follow the example set by Skobelev during his lifetime, and admit that the general line of policy on the borders of Afghanistan is part of the great plan to threaten India, and thus to ease off the pressure in South Eastern Europe.

From Cashmere a contemporary hears that the Government having asked Mr. H. Dauvergne for information about his recent journey over the Pamir, that gentleman at once despatched to Simla a diary he had kept on his travels. The diary cannot fail to be of service to the Government at the present time. Mr. Dauvergne has also given valuable information as to an alternative route from the Cashmere Valley to Gilgit, and Mr. Weightman, Executive Engineer, is likely to go immediately to Gilgit over the new route.

The "Hong Kong Regiment."—A Royal Warrant was issued on Dec. 2 to the Army, notifying that the Queen has approved the formation of a corps of Native Indian Infantry for service at Hong Kong, to be called "The Hong Kong Regiment." The corps will be officered by Europeans and natives, according to the rule in the Indian Native Army generally, but the numerical strength is not fixed in the Royal Warrant.

Thuggee and Dacoity in India.—It has been not infrequently asserted of late years that, with the improvement of communications and the spread of enlightenment in native States, the occupation of the Thagi and Dacoity Department is gone; but the record of last year, says a Bombay paper, certainly does not support any such assumption. We have already noticed, in connection with the review of the work of the Central India Agency, the extraordinary increase in the number of dacoities in that region; but the report of Colonel Henderson, the head of the Thagi and Dacoity Department, brings out the fact in a still more striking manner. Thus, while in 1889 there were in Central India only 189 cases, involving property valued at about a lac, last year they numbered 300, and the plunder is put at over two and a quarter lacs; in Rajputana 65 cases, involving over 21,000 rs., rose to 93 cases involving 47,000 rs.; and in Hyderabad, including Berar, 121 cases, involving 67,000 rs., rose to 206 cases involving 160,000 rs. No sufficient explanation for so startling an increase is given, and perhaps none is possible; but, as Colonel Henderson remarks, it is reasonable to infer that the necessity for the supervision of Government still exists, and, indeed, there is abundant evidence that the officers of the Dacoity Department gave material assistance to the police of the various native States in coping with the abnormal outbreaks of last year.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

A Vienna telegram to the Times (Dec. 2) says:—M. Ribot, the French Minister for Foreign Affairs, has sent a circular to the Great Powers recommending that joint diplomatic action should be taken to protect Europeans whose lives and property have been put in peril by the revolution in China. In principle, Count Kalnoky quite agrees with M. Ribot's object, but as the interests of Austria-Hungary in China are not so great as those of some other Powers he has decided to consult the Cabinets of London, Berlin, and Rome before pledging the Austro-Hungarian Government to any action. The Paris correspondent of the Standard, however, in a later telegram, says:—It has come to my knowledge that there exists a marked difference of opinion on the subject, and that some of the Powers are averse to taking any step calculated to weaken the prestige of the Chinese Government. An accord will not be easy to arrive at. I may also state that the very circumstantial details of certain abominable atrocities given in some despatches are received with much distrust in diplomatic quarters.

A telegram to the following effect has been received at the Foreign Office from the Acting British Consul at Newchwang:—

"There are rumours of risings 150 miles westward. No Europeans there, force sent. Suppression reported. Native authorities confident. Rev. Fulton, Presbyterian Mission, arrived from Kinchow, 100 miles west, reports 200 bandits looted village near Chihli frontier. Not abnormal in winter. People on friendly terms with Europeans and Christians throughout province. No apprehensions as far as is known."

The special correspondent of the Daily Chronicle telegraphed from Tientsin last Wednesday:—Li Hung Chang has informed me, through the British Consul, that he has no doubt that the rising in Mongolia is a marauding expedition, prompted only by the greed of plunder, and that there is no reason for regarding it as a rebellion against the reigning dynasty. All is quiet here and in the capital. The United States gunboat Palos arrived here to-day. The port is now closing for the winter. I hear from Shanghai that a large fleet is anchored at the mouth of the Yang-tse-Kiang.

A telegram to the following effect has been received at the Foreign Office from H.M. Minister at Peking:—An outbreak has taken place to the west of Jehol, beyond the Great Wall. It is led by the brigands, who are always present in the northern parts of the province of Pechili, and who are no doubt in this case assisted by the secret societies and possibly by Chinese Mahomedans from Mongolia. The rising is said to have attained certain proportions, two or three important towns are alleged to have been captured, and some hundreds of natives, among them a considerable number of Christian converts, are reported to have been murdered. There is, however, no reason for believing that the lives of any Europeans have yet been sacrificed. Six thousand picked soldiers, commanded by the chief officer of the province, have been sent by the Government to suppress the rising, and the Government are confident that this will be done. The soldiers should be now near the scene of the outbreak, and should be able to deal with it. Rumours of the most sensational kind are daily circulated, and will doubtless be transmitted to Europe by telegraph, without much regard to accuracy either as to the places or persons concerned. There should therefore be caution as to the amount of credit to be given to such reports. There is a British gunboat at Tientsin, and another has now ascended the Yang-tse River to Ichang. For the present, at all events, there are no reports from the Yang-tse region of a disquieting nature.

Moreover the Standard correspondent writes that on Dec. 3 he saw Tcheng-Tchang, First Secretary and Chargé d'Affaires at the Chinese Legation, who described as absolutely unfounded the reports circulated there of the instability of the Dynasty. Never, at any time, he said, had it been more firmly seated on the throne, and its stability would go on increasing as time progressed. On being questioned as to the rumours of an intervention of the Powers, he replied that nothing of the kind was contemplated, not even a diplomatic intervention. Advice had been given to China, but he was able to assure me that the most complete accord had been established between the Governments of Peking and England, France, Germany, and Italy. No diplomatic intervention was contemplated, as there existed no doubt as to the determination and ability of the Chinese Government to restore order. I next asked him (the correspondent continues) what he thought of the telegram from Shanghai in the Figaro about England proposing an alliance to China, in virtue of which England would help China with troops to put down the present rising, while China would undertake to check the Russian advance in Central Asia, and cut off the communications between Vladivostock and Siberia. Tcheng-Tchang took the trouble to demonstrate that this could not be true; first, because no such alliance was necessary to enable the Chinese Government to put down the present rising; secondly, the mutual interests of England and China were of such paramount importance that no alliance was needed to protect them—they were far greater than those between China and any other Power, even France. The total exports of China might be estimated at one milliard, and went chiefly to England, while the exports to France did not amount to ten millions. With mutual interests of such magnitude there was no necessity for a treaty such as that sketched by the Figaro.

A Reuter telegram from Peking (Dec. 3) states:—The Government has received an official report from Brigadier-General Nieh, commanding the troops in the Kinchow district, in which he announces that he engaged a large body of the rebels to the east of that town on Nov. 27 and 28, and that the enemy were eventually defeated, with the loss of 600 killed, including their leader. The general in command of the Imperial forces at Jehol also announces that he has had a successful engagement with the insurgents.

The following telegram from Singapore, dated Dec. 4, is published in the Times:—Telegrams from Tientsin received here state that the rebellion has been absurdly magnified. The whole rebel force is under 2,000, and the outbreak is only important on account of the timidity of the Government and the defenceless condition of Peking. A few hundred Manchur troops have been ordered from Peking, but their departure was delayed until money had been borrowed for the purchase of sheepskins. The Viceroy has sent a flag with a thousand drilled troops, and he is now denuding Taku for a fortnight's supplies for another thousand men, who will probably never have an opportunity of engaging the rebels, who are mounted robbers, hardy and agile, occupying a rough and sparsely-peopled country. The foreign Consuls at Tientsin have applied for naval protection, and the British ship Firebrand and a Japanese vessel are now there. The populace of Peking are becoming more hostile towards Europeans, who are stoned on passing the city walls. The British Minister has protested to the authorities. Many natives are leaving the capital and seeking safety in Tientsin. Successes of the Imperial troops are reported over both bodies of insurgents, east and north.

A Singapore telegram of Dec. 1 says:—Messrs. Murray and Campbell's tender for the Siamese Korat Railway was accepted yesterday. The famine in the Mekong Valley has increased.

The imports of the Straits Settlements for the third quarter of the year amount to 31½ million dollars—a decrease of 10 per cent. on the amount in the same period last year. The exports for the same quarter amount to 30 million dollars—an increase of 5 per cent.

Earnings of Guaranteed Railways.—Excluding the East Indian, East Bengal, Sind, Punjab and Delhi, and Oudh and Rohilkhand Railways, which have now become State lines, the gross earnings of all the guaranteed railways of India during the past year amounted to about 668 lacs as compared with 651 lacs in 1889 and 677 lacs in 1888. During the same period, working expenses amounted to 330, 340, and 336 lacs respectively. The net earnings for 1890 amount, therefore, to 338 lacs as compared with 310 in 1889, and 341 lacs in 1888. Deducting the interest on overdrawn capital, the moiety of the surplus due to shareholders, and contributions to the provident fund, the net receipts of the Government due to its connection with the guaranteed railways amount to about 180 lacs. At the contract rates at which interest was guaranteed, this net revenue would leave a margin of 32½ lacs, but, taken at the average rate of the year, the difference of nearly 51 lacs of rupees leaves a deficit of 18 lacs. This compares, however, very favourably with the 77 of 1889 and 58 of 1888. The Bombay, Baroda and Central India Line, and the Great Indian Peninsula show an actual surplus of 5½ and 3½ lacs respectively, taking the guaranteed interest at 1s. 6¼d., the average rate of the year.

Private Enterprise in India and England.—In an article on "private enterprise in India and England," the Pioneer has the following:—In the opinion of good judges the iron ores of India constitute an immense source of wealth, which only needs development. Under these circumstances any other Government in the world, were it the pushing democracy of America and the Colonies or the out-at-elbows monarchy of Spain, would immediately protect the growth of a promising nascent industry with a heavy duty against foreign imports. It is reserved for the Government of India to turn its hand against its own by taking the English and even the American article in preference, and doing all in its power to discourage and stifle the firms that alone can set the industry going. Moreover, while England alone of nations does not recognise protectionism, she gives in another way a striking illustration of her devotion to the principles of leaving industrial enterprise unfettered. The freedom that is given to firms like those of the Whitworths and Armstrongs to supply other nations with the most powerful engines of war, can only be justified, and perhaps it can be amply justified, on the ground that by becoming our customers they become to a certain extent our dependents, and would suffer more seriously in case of war than if they had been forced to rely upon their own resources and had acquired the means of making their own cannon and torpedoes. But when the converse case is presented and the interests of India are engaged, India, which is so patently liable to be cut off from Britain in the event of international warfare, is to be carefully nursed in its original dependency upon the mother country for all that it would most want in such an exigency, in order that the selfish interests of English manufacturing firms may be preserved by unjust favour. And, moreover, it does not lighten the sense of wrong that this policy is being forced upon the country just at the time when the dislocation of its currency, for which British prejudice and indifference are chiefly to thank, would, if it stood alone, make it urgently incumbent on the Government to develop country industries to the utmost, in order to be able to supply itself as much as possible from its own resources, and to avoid the ruinous loss on purchases in England. But the commercial influences in England, which have already taken alarm at the paltry concessions made in the June resolution, and of whose power this matter of the iron and steel trade is only a single instance, have found means to exert a leverage in Indian affairs which, if it was to be attained by the politicians, would speedily realise the famous prophecy of Mill, that a democracy in England could not fail to lose India.

OUR BOOK NOTICES.

A TREATISE ON MORAL CULTURE.*

ABOUT a year ago we called attention to a book called "Dharma Sikshā," because it was pleasant to find that, among a host of inferior producers, there were at all events a few men who knew what was needed to be taught, and the proper way to teach it. There can be no doubt that everything tending to promote honest effort, self-reliance, and manly virtue, is of inestimable value to the Indian people, and that if such lessons are to produce due effect they must be conveyed in simple, unaffected, and earnest language going straight to the hearts of the hearers. The writers of this admirable treatise have cleared their minds from the vice of most Eastern writers—the irritating obstructiveness of magniloquence and "tall" writing. The subject alone engages the attention of these men, and familiar words flow from their pens without regard to derivation or homogeneity. The consequence is that the reader also can appreciate the matter without mere style being obtruded upon his attention by erudite terms, and high-flown expressions. "Good wine needs no bush," and this little book has proved it; for it sold out in the course of a few months, and now reappears in a much enlarged and improved form. Our commendatory remarks on the simplicity of the language seem to have been echoed on all sides, and have borne practical fruit in the present edition. Men of education can scarcely avoid the occasional use of words somewhat above general comprehension, but all such terms have now been carefully eliminated from this book, and the flow of the sentences is improved by the change. We would strongly urge Indians to keep to the plain sense of such a style of writing, and they will then be on the right path to build up a national literature worthy of the strong and expressive Hindī language—the eldest daughter of their revered Sanskrit.

A GRAMMAR OF THE KHASI LANGUAGE.†

QUITE recently it was announced that the Indian Government is desirous of inducing officers to give attention to the study of the Sub-Himalayan group of languages. Employment and gratuities are the usual inducements; the former being useful; the latter, for the most part, mere waste. The greatest impediment to the study of these languages has, however, always been the want of books; it is, therefore, not a little remarkable that the publication of grammars and dictionaries should be left to private firms and societies. Special exceptions have been made, it is true; but it would seem only reasonable that authors of books on such languages should have the lion's share of the encouragement. They are the pioneers; it is they who clear the path and enable the official student to walk behind them; yet the students get all the prizes, and, if the authors lack departmental interest, they are left to make such terms as a publisher can afford to give them. The Khasi Grammar now before us has happily found a publisher in the representatives of Trübner's famous firm. A few months ago, however, a less fortunate author of a Sub-Himalayan grammar failed to get a publisher to undertake his book for the mere cost of the printing. He loved his subject, as all such men do, and therefore asked nothing for his own labour; but he had to leave England with his MS. in his pocket.

The Khasi language is remarkable for the regularity of its grammatical structure; if we can speak in this way of a language which is totally devoid of inflexion. It is a language spoken by a quarter of a million people, living in the very centre of Assam. It is monosyllabic, with aspirates and accents; but free from the plague of tones. Word-relationship is, in all cases, indicated by pre-positional particles, which are unchangeable in form, as are also the nominal and verbal bases which they link together. Grammar, therefore, becomes a matter of syntax, as it consists merely of the placing of words and particles idiomatically in various positions. No student can fail to be struck by the marvellously logical character of the Khasi language. As soon as the principles of its structure are acquired all difficulty vanishes; for the correlations of all parts of even the most complex sentences are immediately apparent, even before the meanings of the particular words may be known.

The Rev. Mr. Roberts has evidently perfect command of his subject, and has therefore been able to make each part clear to others. It is, indeed, rare for an unstudied language like Khasi to be presented for the first time in so complete a form before Europeans. The structure of the Khasi language will prove extremely interesting to philologists, for it will show how languages pass into the inflexional stage, and some of the reasons for their doing so. In the Sub-Himalayan group the diversities in the words for ideas is a strange characteristic; but in the midst of this great diversity it is still more strange to find that all, as far as known, agree in expressing the first personal pronoun by a sound like nga. In about twenty of them the word "from" is rendered by a nasal; and the figure "one" by a sibilant. While all the substantial words of these languages may apparently differ, it is curious to find persistence in a few such fragments. But it is really astonishing to find that, on the very opposite side of India, the Brahui language of Beloochistan, has the same particles of declension as Khasi, only they are affixed, instead of being prefixed. This similarity in an essential part of both languages is certainly unexpected.

	Khasi.	Brahui.
Nom.	(the unaltered word)
Acc.	ia	e
Dat.	ia	e
Inst.	da	at
Abl.	na	an
Loc.	ha	ae
Gen.	jong	nâ
Plural Sign	ki	k

The Brahuis use Persian figures, but they have preserved the first three, as follows:—

	Khasi.	Brahui.
One	shi	asi
Two	ar	ira
Three	lai	musi

Many Sub-Himalayan languages use a sibilant to express the figure "one," but it is only Khasi and Brahui which employ the letter r for "two," all the rest have a nasal. Khasi is quite peculiar in the use of lai for "three," but here, where Brahui differs from Khasi, it agrees with Japanese, in which language "three" is mitsu. This is not a mere coincidence, for in Japanese the sign of the Dative is ye, the Instrumental is de, the Genitive is no, and o is the Masculine prefix, just as in Khasi.

Mr. Roberts has produced a very valuable book, which must prove as useful to the student of language as to those officers who may be called to duty among the very intelligent people who speak the Khasi.

The Indian Staff Corps.—If the India Office will only prove as ready to listen to and remedy the grievances of the officers serving in the Indian Staff Corps as they have been those of the candidates for commissions therein, says the military writer of the Morning Post, all grievances will soon cease to exist. Of course in the one case there is no question of expense, whereas in the other a considerable sum of money is involved. Nevertheless the India Office are certainly showing a spirit of fairness in dealing with the entrants to the Staff Corps, which makes the prospects of an amelioration in the condition of those now serving decidedly hopeful. In addition to the proposal to keep open the present means of entering the Staff Corps by way of a British regiment, it is under consideration at the India Office to consider all cadets who pass out of Sandhurst before Sept. 1 next as eligible to enter the Staff Corps under the old rules, whether they be appointed to a regiment before that date or not. It is also practically settled that the bar against University candidates will be removed, and a proportion of Staff Corps commissions will be given among such candidates at each half-yearly examination.

The Indian Famine Insurance Fund.—In the current issue of India, remarks the Pioneer, Mr. William Digby publishes a long correspondence between himself and Mr. J. Petrocokino, whom we must confess to never having heard of before, on the subject of the Indian Famine Insurance Fund. Mr. Petrocokino, it appears, some time ago desired to satisfy himself that the Fund had not been misappropriated, and wrote to the Under-Secretary of State for India with that view. The reply he received did satisfy him, and for reasons best known to himself, the fact not being on the face of it of Imperial importance, he wrote to the Manchester Guardian to say so. Thereupon Mr. Digby rushed into the breach and fell upon Mr. Petrocokino, and the result was a long correspondence, which ended in Mr. Petrocokino's admitting that he was vanquished, and that Mr. Digby was a very knowing man indeed. It is perhaps needless to say that the arguments advanced by Mr. Digby would not appear so absolutely convincing to everybody as they have done to Mr. Petrocokino; but we have no intention of going over them. What may be noticed is Mr. Digby's statement that the Famine Insurance Fund was intended to be "independent of surpluses." This can only mean that Lord Northbrook and Sir John Strachey, when they instituted famine insurance, intended that, no matter whether there was any money to do so or not, one and a half million sterling was annually to be set aside for the prevention or reduction of debt. The only result of this would be that in years when the Finance Minister was only able to obtain an equilibrium, or when there was unavoidably a deficit, fresh taxation would have to be imposed. It is hardly necessary to point out that no such thing was contemplated. The essence of the plan, as Sir John Strachey himself has said, was to reserve in prosperous times a substantial surplus of revenue over expenditure, so that this might be devoted to the reduction of debt, or spent on the construction of railways and canals. When famine occurred there would thus be no objection to meeting from borrowed money charges to the full amount of the money expended on these objects. If the times were not prosperous the application of the plan must fall into abeyance. To impose fresh taxation for the purpose of maintaining the appearance of a fund would merely be to take money out of one pocket to put into another.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS AND TROOPSHIPS.

A COURT of Inquiry was held on board the Crocodile on Dec. 3 for the purpose of investigating the circumstances attending the recent collision. The members of the Court consisted of Captain Palliser (president), of the Victory; Captain Woodward, C.B., of the Nelson; and Staff-Captain Phillips of the Fire Queen. The following witnesses were examined:—Captain Pattison, commanding the Crocodile; Staff-Commander Napier; Lieutenant Fowke, officer of the watch; and the pilot, Mr. Reuben Main. The inquiry, as is usual in like circumstances, was held with closed doors. A report of the proceedings has been forwarded to the Admiralty, and it is not expected that any further steps will be taken in the matter. The Crocodile was docked during the day to ascertain whether any injury had been sustained to her hull, and it was found that she had escaped without damage.

The undernamed officers have been ordered to embark at Portsmouth in the Crocodile on Dec. 11 for conveyance to Bombay:—

LONDON: SATURDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1891.

MR. GOSCHEN ON ONE-POUND NOTES AND THE SILVER QUESTION.

THE practical value of MR. GOSCHEN'S proposals for inducing an increase of the available deposit of gold in the Bank of England depends upon the question whether it can be permanently held. If it can the Bank will be able to give relief in times of crisis such as it can now only grant under a suspension of the Bank-Charter Act. In other words MR. GOSCHEN proposes to establish an automatically working modification of that Act, with the advantage, as he showed, of a larger security behind the operation. MR. GOSCHEN thinks the gold may be held, chiefly because it can only be got at by presenting the 17. notes issued against it, and as these, instead of the gold, would be in the waistcoat pockets of the people, it would not be easy to get them. There is no doubt something in this point, but in a time of severe panic it is possible that there would be a general rush to exchange the notes for gold, and the carefully built-up security might thus disappear. We should like to see that point met more thoroughly than the CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER seems to have met it in his speech. We cannot doubt, as he says, that forty millions in gold at the Bank would inspire greater faith in our solvency abroad than 21,500,000*l.* in the Bank and gold at the same time flowing out of the country. If however MR. GOSCHEN'S view on this point of the holding of the gold is unsound his whole edifice tumbles to pieces. In a crisis the Bank, unable to retain its forty millions, could not render the relief to the extent provided by MR. GOSCHEN'S automatically working system.

In explaining that he had abandoned the idea of ten-shilling notes to be issued against silver, MR. GOSCHEN incidentally touched on the Silver Question, alluding, by the way, to the circular just issued by the Legislative Council of the Textile Factory Worker's Association in favour of "a recognition of silver as standard money throughout the British Empire and between this and other nations," as to which they say that it is "imperative that the whole force—political and moral—of the industrial classes of this country shall be exercised to promote it to a successful conclusion." He stated that his dropping that part of his plan must not lead any one to suppose that he receded in any way from the position which he has always maintained of being anxious to see the use of silver extended so far as it was possible to be done under the existing system. MR. GOSCHEN regards the demand of the Bimetallists to be one which "cannot be ignored," and takes it as put at present in this form—If you, as a Government, cannot establish a parity between gold and silver, will you do what you can in conference with other Governments to promote the use of silver in those other countries by offering as much as you can do without abandoning your own principles? In answer to this he says that the Government in 1881 did make an offer to the Monetary Conference, that "if the mints of other countries return to such rules as would insure the conversion of gold into silver and silver into gold," the Bank of England would be open to the purchase of silver. Moreover the Indian Government agreed that if other countries opened their mints to the coinage of silver India would do the same. Nothing came of it; but MR. GOSCHEN says that "so far as the Government of 1881 went we might safely go again if the necessity arose"—safely, he says, because by the adoption of free mintage in other countries the pressure upon our stock of gold would be considerably avoided. The declaration is interesting if only that it seems to hold out an olive-branch to other countries in favour of another conference on the currency question, and moreover to encourage the Lancashire workmen to push on the agitation. The probability is that the matter will end pretty much as it has ended before—in other countries declining to accept this comparatively insignificant contribution by our own Government to the solution of the Silver Question. It hardly seems worth while to go into a conference if we are only going "to offer as much as we can do without abandoning our own principles." It is doubtful whether the working men can carry things any farther by agitation, for after all it is the capitalist classes which have to be convinced that their interests will not be impaired by tampering with our present system.

THE DISTURBANCES IN CHINA.

SIR JOHN WALSHAM has the repute among our countrymen in China of being a Gallio, but we cannot suppose that the telegram which the Foreign Office has received from the Minister at Peking, is otherwise than a judicious and fairly accurate estimate of the situation. At all events we know who the informant is, that he is responsible for the correctness of his statements, and that he is in a better position than any unofficial European can be to get at the facts. Moreover the general tenor of his communication, which is to deprecate the alarmist reports now being circulated by several correspondents and agencies, is confirmed by a telegram from our Consul at Newchwang, previously sent to the papers from the Foreign Office. It ought, by the way, to be acknowledged that LORD SALISBURY is doing good service in issuing these communications on to the Press at once instead of keeping them for some distant Blue book. The very natural panic which has seized on the English at Shanghai and elsewhere—reflected as we have seen of late in the Anglo-Chinese papers—seems to have communicated itself to the correspondents of our Home journals, and, not content with serving up a horror once, it is reproduced with astonishing variety and iteration on its way here by the mail, by telegrams from Japan or San Francisco on the one side, or Singapore on the other. Reading the official telegrams, one might take almost a cheerful view of the Chinese scare, and regard the alleged outbreaks in Manchuria, or Pechili or wherever they may be located by sinister reports, as expected annual incidents in parts of the country where, as in Sicily, brigandage forms one of the recognised means of existence. "Not abnormal in winter" is the Newchwang Consul's report, while the Minister says that brigands are "always present in the northern parts of the Province of Pechili." Less assuring however is his statement that they are "no doubt assisted by the secret societies," as well as by Mahomedans from Mongolia, and that at all events seems to confirm the theory of the more sensational correspondents, who represent the rising as one of rather more than ordinary importance. It may be supposed that the Government at Peking is not forced every year to send out six thousand soldiers to suppress troops of brigands, and following on the unrest indicated by the risings against Europeans in different parts of China, such disturbances as SIR JOHN WALSHAM describes seem to be serious enough to justify much of the alarm that has been created in Europe by recent reports. The news this morning that the rebels have been met and defeated by Chinese forces is so far re-assuring, but the Singapore telegram to the Times gives details which do not create a favourable impression of the organisation and discipline of the Chinese troops.

LORD CROSS said a few words last night at Hanley on several subjects of high importance. He disclaimed any disposition on the part of the Government to encroach on the privileges or rights of the Native States, pointing to Cashmere and Manipore as illustrations of British policy, which is "to see that the people of the Native States are governed according to the rules of justice and prudence." He assured the AMEER that we only wish him to "rule his subjects properly and remain our friend." We have no jealousy of his independence or ulterior views of infringing upon it. So far the SECRETARY OF STATE'S remarks contain no novelty. But he went on to speak of Siam and Persia. As to Siam he expressed the hope that it "would not be trenced upon by the French"; a gentle remark which our neighbours may take note of while they discuss the annexation of the entire country up to the Mekong River. As to Persia, he hopes that the pressure exercised by Russia would not be so intense as to affect its independence. As the SECRETARY OF STATE put them in somewhat bald fashion, these appear to be merely academic opinions, and are perhaps not to be strained beyond the expression of pious wishes. If they are meant as gentle intimations to those concerned of the policy of the Government in relation to Siam and Persia, we may commend them.

We pointed out recently that the writer of the fortnightly article on Indian affairs in the Times had given an incorrect version of the Pamir incident. Our remarks, however, would appear to have made no impression; for his article in the Times of Monday last begins, "We have already given a correct outline of what really took place." This infallible writer then proceeds to "fill in the details." As his exposition of the claims of Russia is said to be based on information "gathered from Russian officers on the spot" (on what spot?), we cannot, of course, gainsay this portion of his story. His version, however, of the Anglo-Russian agreement of 1873, is absolutely incorrect; and it seems almost incredible that the Times could have printed such a farrago of nonsense. The article is elucidated by means of a large map, in which details are indeed filled in with a vengeance. Shignan, together with the Alichur and Rang Kul Pamirs, and all the country from Badakshan to the Little Kara Kul is marked "Neutral territory under agreement of 1873"; and the writer says "The territorial claims to this region were left an open question (in 1873), and the region itself was supposed to form an undefined, inaccessible, and neutral ground." Not a single square inch of this region was supposed to be neutral territory under the agreement of 1873, or under any other agreement. If it was, how could the Indian Government justify Afghan rights in Shignan? As a matter of fact the idea of a neutral zone was not realised. In proof of our statement we quote the following extract written by LORD SALISBURY'S directions by the Under-Secretary of State for India in June 1875, and printed in Parliamentary Papers I., of 1878, page 43:—

Lord Salisbury will, for the sake of brevity, confine his observations to a few points to which he more particularly desires to draw Lord Derby's attention. The points primarily affect (1) the neutral zone. . . . In April 1869 Lord Clarendon, after reference to this office, distinctly informed Baron Brinow that Afghanistan would not fulfil the desired conditions, and substituted for his original suggestion, in regard to a neutral zone, a proposal that the Upper Oxus should form the boundary line, which neither Power should permit their forces to pass. This was followed by a protest from Lord Mayo's Government against the proposal of a neutral zone, the idea of which was thenceforward, so far as the English Government is concerned, definitely abandoned.

Prince Damrong, the brother of the King of Siam, arrived at Athens on Nov. 28, accompanied by one of the King's sons. Prince George of Greece, who, with the Czarevitch, was entertained with such splendour during their late visit to Siam, welcomed the royal visitors at the Piræus, and returned with them to the palace. The King of the Hellenes has conferred a high decoration on the King of Siam, through Prince Damrong, who, in his turn, has invested his Majesty with the White Elephant of Siam. Prince Damrong, accompanied by Prince Chira, son of the King of Siam, arrived at Rome yesterday evening. One of King Humbert's aides-de-camp waited upon their Royal Highnesses at their hotel.

Mr. Buxton Forman, of the General Post Office, has arrived in Paris. He is accredited to the Postal Administrations at Paris and Rome for the purpose of negotiating for a revision of the existing arrangements for the transport of the Indian mails through France and Italy.

It is announced at the War-Office that the following officers have qualified as military interpreters:—In Turkish, Major F. R. Wingate, R.A., Captain S. Bird, Royal Fusiliers, and Captain P. Bulman, Shropshire Light Infantry; in Russian, Captain E. St. C. Pemberton, R.E., Captain H. C. Filmore, Royal Highlanders, and Captain J. Vans-Agnew and Lieutenant Hon. H. D. Napier, Indian Staff Corps; in German, Lieutenant F. Tweddell, Indian Staff Corps; in Italian and Spanish, Captain V. Semini, Leicestershire Regiment; and in French, Second Lieutenant E. A. F. Redl, Royal Lancaster Regiment.

The correspondent of the Glasgow Herald writes:—I am able to throw some light on a remark made by the Duke of Connaught when presiding the other night at a discussion upon combined military and naval operations, and which has not been generally understood. The Duke, who is an enthusiastic soldier, has since his appointment to the Portsmouth command taken a great deal of trouble to practise his troops in the various operations which would be necessary in actual warfare. All went well until he desired to have a sham battle, which included the landing of troops and the employment of some vessels. The local naval authorities were quite ready to assist, but the Admiralty rather curtly refused. Upon this the Duke now somewhat bitterly remarks, "He was afraid there was an idea at headquarters at the Admiralty that the naval duties were so important that they could never spare ships and men to assist the Army in things of this sort," and he thinks it a matter to be regretted.

While speaking of the Duke of Connaught, perhaps I may remark that there is in Army circles a growing conviction that he is to succeed Sir Frederick Roberts as Commander-in-Chief in India when that officer retires next November, and to afterwards fill the Duke of Cambridge's place at the Horse Guards. A little while ago, when a Times Calcutta telegram stated that the Viceroy and his military advisers had recommended as Sir Frederick Roberts's successor Sir George White, a major-general of only four years' standing, I said that the statement was discredited here, and I now learn that it is not believed in India. In truth, it would not only be a breach of etiquette, but a gross injustice to several exceedingly able Indian officers, who are Sir George White's seniors. Of course, the seniority argument would also apply to the Duke of Connaught, but it is felt, even by the most eager supporters of the policy of India for the Anglo-Indians, that the filling of this high post with a royal personage would, politically, be a wise step. Meanwhile the appointment will not be formally made until the Spring.

"A Sepoy Officer" sends Truth the following remarks, which seem to the editor well worth the attention of the Indian military authorities:—

A great feeling of unrest, verging upon discontent, is pervading the native ranks of our Bengal army. Hindoostani regiments do not know if they are to be disbanded or turned into caste regiments of Rajputs or Brahmins or Hindoostani Mahomedans. At present these elements are generally mixed up in regiments, but kept separate in companies, and I think the present system is the best.

Purely caste regiments are a mistake. There are good men in every caste, and it is a mistake to move about native officers, non-commissioned officers, and men from one regiment to another without good excuse. There is a strong feeling of esprit de corps in our Hindoostani regiments, and very often our men and non-commissioned and commissioned officers refuse promotion in other regiments, and prefer to stick to their own corps in which they have served ten, twenty, or even more years. But what the men object to most is leaving their own British officers, who have been with them for years on active service and in cantonments.

I see no reason for any change in the present system. As a rule there is an excellent feeling between the different castes in a regiment. The Hindoos perform the duties of Mussulmans on Mussulman holidays, and vice versa. Above all, these changes, unless absolutely necessary, cause great expense to the State.

I know from experience that in every sepoy's mind doubt exists as to what is to be the future of him and his regiment. That is not a good feeling for the rank-and-file of any army to have, and the sooner such doubts are terminated one way or the other the better.

A marriage took place on Nov. 16, at Christ Church, Woburn Square, by the Rev. Glendinning Nash, between General W. F. Nuthall, H.M. Bengal Army, and Mrs. Strathmore Stromqvist, second daughter of the late George Beckwith Baker, of Hertfordshire. The service was choral and was conducted by F. T. Lowden, A.T.C.L., organist of the pretty church. A number of Indian officers and officials were present; among whom we noticed General and Mrs. Ardagh, General and two Miss Pasks, Colonel Ferris, Surgeon-Major Ferris, W. E. and Mrs. Caldwell, Colonel H. Nuthall, Major W. F. Nuthall, Captain Henry and Mrs. Nuthall. After the ceremony the party adjourned to the bride's home in Woburn Place, where a reception was held and the numerous handsome presents were laid out. In these days of advancement and high culture we must notice the unusual occurrence of a most feeling and eloquent speech by the bride in returning thanks to Captain J. Kershaw, 2nd T.H., R.E., and the many friends present.

The Bengal-Nagpore Railway benefited very considerably by the expansion of the export trade of the Central Provinces during the summer months. The official returns issued under the Chief Commissioner's orders for the quarter ending June 30 show that, as compared with the similar quarter in 1890, the exports of wheat rose from 26½ to 57½ lacs of maunds; while the increase in raw cotton, linseed, gram, and pulse was at the same rate. It is noted that the export of wheat from Chhattisgarh trebled, and Mr. Fuller remarks concerning this:-"Of the total amount exported 98 per cent. was consigned to Bombay, and it is a striking fact that the opening of through communication with Calcutta from the Chhattisgarh country had practically no effect in changing the direction of the traffic, although the greater part of this tract is nearer Calcutta than Bombay. Of 11,14,345 maunds exported from Chhattisgarh, only 27,433 maunds were consigned to Calcutta." The linseed, like the wheat, was almost all taken by Bombay, the exports from Chhattisgarh increasing cent. per cent. A great trade has sprung up in the better qualities of rice since the opening of the Bilaspore-Katni branch of the railway, the North-West Provinces and Oude drawing upon the Central Provinces for their supply. In the quarter under notice over 4 lacs of maunds were exported as compared with less than 1½ lacs last year, the greater part being sent through Bilaspore.

BURMA-CHINA RAILWAY SCHEME.

THE Pioneer says:-The Glasgow Chamber of Commerce have followed the lead of the Liverpool Chamber in petitioning the Secretary of State on the subject of the Burma-China Railway. The Glasgow merchants adduce no fresh arguments, but urge, what everyone admits, that the proposed railway would be "an important trade route establishing communication between Burma and a very vast, rich, and populous district of China." Their assertion, however, that such a line would contribute to the general opening, settlement, and development of Upper Burma, must be taken with a grain of salt. From Mandalay to the Kunlon Ferry on the Salween is about 350 miles, through a country which is certainly not densely populated, and possesses little natural wealth, though coal has been discovered at Lashio. The general opening out of the country will not be secured by the line, but it is undoubtedly the fact that Yunnan would be tapped if there were railway communication with the Kunlon Ferry, which the Shan caravans make for as the best crossing of the Salween. The question really is whence the funds are to come for the projected railway. It is easy enough for the Chambers of Commerce at home to ask that the surveys shall be completed, and that as soon as the best route has been ascertained the Government shall sanction the work of construction being undertaken with the least possible delay; but, meanwhile, all the funds available are being devoted to opening out the country between the Irrawaddy and Chindwin rivers. Internal lines must be built before attention can be turned to those which would have China as their objective. Fifty lacs a year are all that can be spared at the present time for Burma railways, though treble that amount could be spent on the Mu Valley line and on extensions from the Tounghoo-Mandalay system. Upper Burma would benefit in a measure by the construction of a railway towards Yunnan, but it would be English manufacturers who would reap the richest harvest. This being so, they should put their hands in their pockets, and find the three millions required for the line which the Chambers of Commerce are so enthusiastic about. As a home paper remarks, "the Chambers are ready enough to resolute, but the beginning and end of their energy are their resolutions, for which no one cares a farthing." Let a Syndicate be formed with money at its back, and the Government of India will assuredly not stand in the way of a Burma-China Railway Company.

CEYLON AND THE COLONIAL OFFICE.

THE Ceylon Association in London has addressed to the Under-Secretary for the Colonies a temperate and well-reasoned letter on the subject of the military contribution levied on the island. The amount of the contribution is fixed by the Colonial Office at 75,000*l.* a year for five years, the question of a further increase being left open for future consideration. The colony of Ceylon objects to the contribution, and to the manner in which it is attempted to enforce it. So long as the Colonial Office reserves to itself the right of revising the amount of the contribution at short intervals, the colony feels that it is deprived of any effective control over its own finances; and it urges the not unreasonable plea that if the amount is fixed without any regard to colonial opinion, or any fair calculation of the benefits to be derived from military protection, there will be just ground for discontent. The Colonial Office seems to have intimated, in the despatch sent to the colony in August last, that payment should be exacted from the colony on account of the general defence of the empire. Against this doctrine the association energetically protests, though it declares that were all the colonies assessed for this purpose Ceylon would readily bear its part. It objects, however, to a burden being laid upon it—because it is weak and powerless—which the Imperial Government does not impose on colonies of greater strength. The position of a Crown colony like Ceylon is very different, in the matter of financial contributions, from that of a self-governing colony like Victoria or New South Wales. In the former the contribution is not voluntarily voted, but compulsorily appropriated; in the latter it is the free tribute of the elected representatives of the people. The Ceylon Association directs attention to the fact that all naval and military expenditure in this country is also voluntary expenditure, whereas that imposed upon Ceylon is wrung from her by external command. It ought further to be borne in mind that Ceylon has no control over the application of the money. The funds may be wastefully applied, as generally happens where the power of spending and the responsibility for expenditure are divorced from each other. In the concluding paragraph of the letter to the Under-Secretary the Ceylon Association justly complains that the Secretary of State has not in any despatch yet laid before the Legislative Council of Ceylon taken any notice of the address to her Majesty unanimously agreed to by that body. When an address from the Governor and Legislative Council of any colony is transmitted to the Secretary of State for submission to her Majesty, the Council has undoubtedly a right to be informed whether the address has been laid before the Sovereign. We await with some curiosity Lord Knutsford's explanations on this important point.—Daily Chronicle.

COMMERCIAL.

THE directors of the Indian and General Investment Trust have declared interim dividends at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on the 5 per cent. cumulative preferred stock and on the deferred stock, for the six months to Oct. 31, payable on Dec. 11.

The report of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company states that the net surplus for the year, including 4,820*l.* brought forward, amounted to 179,184*l.*, which, after deducting the interim dividend of 2½ per cent. on the preferred and 3½ per cent. on the deferred stocks paid in June last, admits of a further payment of 2½ per cent. on the preferred and 6½ per cent. on the deferred stocks, making 10 per cent. on the latter stock for the year. The dividends thus paid and payable are, therefore, equal to 7½ per cent. on the paid-up capital of 2,320,000. A balance of 5,184½ will be carried forward. The directors find themselves under the necessity of charging the profits of the year with the sum of 70,265½, this being the amount at which the Nepaul and Hong Kong stood in the company's books at the date of their being lost.

CALCUTTA, November 17.

The directors of the Bank of Bengal, at their meeting held on Nov. 12, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 2½ per cent.

The following changes have taken place in the bank's figures for the week ending Nov. 10:—

LIABILITIES.
Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 5,39,862	Decrease
Do. at Branches	5,96,798	Increase
Other Deposits	24,51,961	Decrease
Post Bills	4,017	Decrease

ASSETS.
Bank's Investments	Rs. 6,44,663	Decrease
Loans	6,90,124	Decrease
Accounts of Credits	1,45,909	Decrease
Mercantile Bills	8,31,739	Decrease
Cash at Head Office	3,30,203	Increase
Do. at Branches	2,65,192	Decrease

The analysis of the above figures shows an increase of over 7½ lacs in the ordinary trade demand, made up as follows:—By a decrease of over 2½ lacs in "Other Deposits," minus a decrease of nearly 7 lacs in "Loans," about 1½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills." The Treasury Balance at Head Office stands reduced by over 5½ lacs, while there is an increase of about 6 lacs at the Branches. The bank's investments were realised to the extent of about 6½ lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase of above 3½ lacs in the cash at Head Office, while at the Branches it stands reduced by over 2½ lacs, making the exact total 5,02,75,595 rs., equal to 60¼ per cent. of the liabilities of the bank, against a proportion of 58½ per cent. last week.

The gradual though slow decline in the price of bar silver has produced a corresponding drop in sterling rates, and the market has slowly and almost imperceptibly weakened, and at the close an all-round decline of 3-32 for the week has been established, and the market closes decidedly quiet at quotations.

TEA.—Arrivals were again small for last week's auctions, when, of 11,800 packages offered, 11,400 were sold. All desirable teas, and especially broken pekoes, were very firm, and occasionally showed some advance. Ordinary and common qualities showed no material change.

JUTE.—A decidedly firmer tone has been apparent, with renewed buying of good first native marks at 33-8 rs. for Nov., 34 rs. for first week of December, and 34-4 for all the month. Even at these higher rates balers are not disposed to sell much, as the supplies of loose jute are very small, at all events of good quality, and reports from up-country all point to an early closing of the season. A feature of the market is the almost entire absence of demand for fine jute (red marks).

GUNNIES.—The tone of the market has been quieter than for some time back, and prices are a trifle easier. A moderate business has been done with Mills for the early months of next year. Dealers are less anxious buyers forward and are the principal sellers for November-December. Hessians are quiet but firm. There has been some inquiry for San Francisco, and a small business is reported for the sellers at 12-8. Offers are now out at higher rates.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—The business of the week has not been nearly so large as the list of the week's transactions would lead one to believe. These have been more of a retail character, and though there is money still available for investment in private hands, speculation is completely at a standstill. In the absence of the latter, there is a want of "go" in the market, and prices remain stationary. Some business has been done in most of one jute mill's shares, which keep fairly steady. Howrahs are a shade easier. Unions have been in good request for investment at a substantial increase in price, 170 rs. having been paid, and shares are very scarce and extremely difficult to procure. In gold shares the market has been sluggish and has continued without variation. In regard to Sonapets in particular, some are very sanguine as to the ultimate success of the enterprise, and as to the successful issue of the sale to an English company. As a matter of fact, the actual work now being done is satisfactory, and an undertaking of this nature requires time to develop it. In tea Mesais have been reported at a big advance over previously quoted rates. In miscellaneous stocks nothing of importance has to be reported. India Generals have changed hands almost daily, and keep steady with a rising tendency. Great Easterns are in request. Bengal Paper Mills show a drop of some 4 rs.

BANK OF BENGA.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2½ per cent.

BOMBAY, November 20.

The increased activity in wheat has not been sustained, and business in this staple, as in seeds, has been upon only a moderate scale from day to day, though previous prices have been maintained. Cotton has been dull and declining, no transactions to speak of having been reported for shippers' account, while local consumers have also been almost out of the market. Exchange has fluctuated to the extent of 1-16d., closing rates showing a decline of 1-32d. compared with those quoted a week ago.

The plethora of money continues, and the Presidency Bank's minimum rate remains at 2 per cent. Government Paper has been active and advancing, and Fours are 7-16 per cent. higher than they were a week ago. Freights have become quiet and weak, shippers holding back for lower rates. Business in imports has been no brisker, and prices of staple goods have, in some cases, slightly favoured buyers.

MONEY.—At a period of the year when there are, in times of normal ebb and flow of the monetary tide, some indications of an expansion in the requirements of trade in the not distant future, the movement in the Presidency Bank still points to plethora, and the Bank's minimum rate of discount remains at the quite exceptionally low level of 2 per cent., or half that of the Bank of England. The statement of affairs issued at the beginning of the week showed an increase in the Bank's cash balance of over 2½ lacs, compared with 7½ lacs disclosed by the previous return, making the balance 359½ lacs; but a considerable portion of the increase was due to an accession to Government Deposits. There had, however, been a large addition to Private Deposits, and though both Loans and Bills Discounted had increased to the extent of 2½ lacs and 1½ lacs respectively, the net falling off in the trade demand had been close upon 14 lacs, against a diminution of 12 lacs indicated at the close of the preceding week. No change in rates was made at the board meeting of the Bank of Bombay, and 2 per cent. is still the minimum rate.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—Notwithstanding the state of exchange holders of staple grey goods have been free sellers from stock at current rates, and in some cases they have accepted a small reduction therefrom. Up-country buyers have been freely executing their retail orders, but are indifferent about wholesale operations. Prices generally may be called the same as they were. There has been a moderate demand for bleached, dyed, printed, and Turkey red goods at current rates, which are the same as ruled last week. Holders of local goods are willing sellers, and rates are somewhat weaker. The clearances of imported goods have been about 4,000 packages; those of local goods about 1,800 bales.

YARNS.—Imported twist is unchanged in value, and only a small business has been passing in a quiet market.

METALS.—A moderate business has been passing in copper on a quiet market, but prices have advanced 4 a. per cwt. Yellow metal has been taken to a small extent at an advance of 1 a. per cwt. Iron has not been much inquired for, but the market has been steady at last quotations.

COAL.—Sales have been reported during the week of Beyts Merthyr Cardiff, per s. Caledonia, from 14½ rs. to 14 rs.; part cargo of the same description, per s. Kedcross, shortly due; and part cargo of Lemises, Merthyr Cardiff, from the same steamer, at 14½ rs. per ton. Some Powell's Duffryn and Davison's West Hartley for November-December and December-January shipment have also been sold at 15½ rs. and 14½ rs. per ton respectively, 2,200 tons of South Yorkshire coal ex s. Mary Beys has also been placed at 12½ rs. per ton. There are forward sellers of Powell's at 15½ rs., and of Davison's at 14½ rs. per ton. The stock on the bunder is still very heavy.

Exports.—COTTON has been almost entirely neglected by exporters, no transactions whatever having been reported for their account on several days; while the purchases of old stuff from stock by local spinners have hardly exceeded 2,500 bales in the aggregate, consisting of Ginned Compta and Oomra and Dholera descriptions. Contracts for the new crop were quoted 1 r. to 2 rs. per candy higher on Nov. 14; but since then the tone of the market has been quiet, when not actually dull, and the advance was lost; and afterwards a further decline of 1 r. to 2 rs. per candy, embracing old cotton as well, was established. The market closes steady, with prices of old cotton 2 rs. to 3 rs. per candy lower, and for new 1 r. to 2 rs. higher than former quotations.

WHEAT remained firm in tone to the end of last week, and a further advance of half an anna per cwt. in prices took place, but transactions were only upon a moderate scale; and on the resumption of business on Nov. 16 (Monday having been a holiday) there was no increase on demand from shippers, but the feeling remained steady.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY THE INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. —See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is an admissible breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,

TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of

EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-

ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The

IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY

has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1ld., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Nov. 25; Madras, Nov. 26; Bombay, Nov. 28.

A statue of Lord Dufferin was unveiled at Calcutta on Dec. 8 by the Viceroy. His Excellency, a Times telegram says, in a short and graceful speech, gave an appreciative sketch of the career of Lord Dufferin, and dwelt on his services in Lebanon, Canada, Turkey, Russia, and India, and said that his wide and varied training had made him not a politician but a statesman able to take imperial views.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes on Dec. 13:—Lord Wenlock has arrived in Madras. He will start again on the 18th inst. on a tour through Bellary, Cuddapah, and Kurnool, his object being to confer with the district officials regarding the distress, and to ascertain the real causes of the grain riots at Kurnool. Three hundred Sepoys are now quartered in that town. Reports from the ceded districts continue to be gloomy.

Sir George Greaves and Staff returned to Poona off tour on Nov. 24.

The Hon. Mr. Nugent, commissioner, S.D., and member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, was to give over charge of his commissionership at Belgaum about Dec. 1, and would leave Bombay on the 6th to rejoin the Viceregal Council.

Dr. Robertson, who has been for some time past in Kafiristan, where his medical skill has been highly appreciated by the people, was on his way back to Gilgit when the Mail left. Everything was reported quiet on the Gilgit Frontier, but there was a rumour of a tribal gathering again in the Hunza Valley similar to that which occurred last June.

Fighting, telegrams state, has occurred on the Gilgit frontier between the force under Colonel A. Durand and the hill tribes of Hunza. Owing to the hostile attitude of the Hunza Chief, Colonel Durand advanced from Chaprote, and after severe fighting captured the fort of Nilt. He himself was severely wounded, and three British officers were also wounded. It is not known whether the advance on Hunza will be continued.

The Hon. Mr. E. Spencer Pratt, lately United States Minister at Teheran, will shortly pay a visit to India, and it is officially desired that all possible assistance will be given to him by any Government official to whom he may apply for information or other help.

Nov. 18 saw the final act of the Manipore tragedy. The Shahjehan took away from Calcutta to Port Blair the Regent, Senaputty, and all the other prisoners sentenced to transportation.

The Gazette of India contains a long official Resolution reviewing the operation of the Deccan Ryots Relief Act, and nominating a commission of inquiry.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Dec. 6:—The Government of India have issued a resolution dealing with the recommendations of last year's Parliamentary Committee on the Grievances of the Uncovenanted Service. The resolution declares that it finally disposes of those questions which had not already been settled. But the disposal is far from final, as the resolution is certain to cause grave dissatisfaction, and to lead to the renewal of the agitation, which has so often occupied the attention of the House of Commons. The Government agrees to a minimum furlough allowance of 200*l.* a year to officers leaving on a medical certificate, but refuses the minimum allowance to officers going on other than sick leave. The Government declines, as recommended by the Committee, to simplify the regulations, and insists on modifying from time to time as it pleases the rules under which an officer entered the service. This is contrary to a principle regulating both the Home Civil Service and the Indian Covenanted Service. It is a matter for regret that the Government has not seen its way to deal with the case in such a manner as to prevent a renewal of the agitation.

The Director of the Department of Agriculture in Bengal estimates the outturn of the rice crop in the entire province at nine to ten-sixteenths of the average crop. At present, a Calcutta telegram of Dec. 5 says, distress is feared only in limited tracts, where the outturn is below six-sixteenths of the average crop, but there is cause for strict watchfulness in several considerable tracts where the crops are likely to fall below half the average.

At a meeting of the Himalaya Bank's creditors at Dehra Dun, on Nov. 21, it was resolved that the liquidation be conducted by the Alliance Bank of Simla, the provisional liquidators, and by the District Court.

Experiments in producing rain are to be tried in Upper Burma.

A Calcutta telegram of Dec. 13 states that the evacuation of the Black Mountain district was completed last week. It is believed that the influence of the outlaw, Hashim Ali, in that district is now quite broken, and that if he ventures to return he will be powerless to disturb the peace.

It is now definitely settled to keep one native infantry regiment at Oghi to watch the Black Mountain Border. The Frontier Militia raised by the deputy commissioner of Hazara will actually do duty on the border at Abbottabad.

"General" Booth arrived at Colombo on Dec. 10. His campaign in Ceylon has, says a Reuter telegram, had a successful beginning. He met with a good reception at Point de Galle from all classes, while at another place a new temple was opened amid great enthusiasm. There were crowded meetings in the Pandal, and sixteen persons, including Mahomedans and Buddhists, professed salvation.

Prince Chira, son of the King of Siam, had an audience of King Humbert on Dec. 5, when he handed to his Majesty the insignia of the Grand Crown of the Maha Chakri Order. In the evening the King visited the Prince at his hotel.

The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company has now seven steamships in course of construction, of a registered tonnage of no less than 35,200. Two of the steamers will be larger than any the Company now owns.

We understand that there is a vacancy at the Royal School for Daughters of Officers of the Army for a nominee of the Secretary of State for India. The age for admission to the School is from ten to fifteen years, and the candidate must be the daughter of an officer who has served in the Bengal Infantry or Cavalry. Applications should be addressed to the Secretary of the School, 25 Cockspur Street, London, S.W.

The Pioneer writes:—There has been some "tinkering" of the Public Works' Committee at the India Office, which will perhaps allow business a better chance of getting through hereafter. Sir Alexander Arbuthnot goes out, to be replaced by Sir John Strachey: this will give Sir Alfred Lyall, the President, as his colleagues Sir James Peile, Sir John Strachey and Mr. Robert Hardie, and perhaps, on the majority of questions, leave Mr. Hardie to represent the left alone. But this tinkering is of comparatively little use unless the Government of India can be tinkered too, a rather bigger job. The last few years of Public Works' administration, and, sad to say, the few years of Lord Lansdowne's administration especially, have enjoyed a bad eminence for the persistence with which the majority of railway projects have been shaped by the narrow views of the Public Works Department, where they have been shaped at all. "Private enterprise," by the way, of which there was once much fruitless talk, is clean dead; and while there is still a professed desire to extend the railway system on imperial lines, every project put forward—no matter whether from outside or within—is ultimately dealt with in a hole-and-corner fashion with the faintest possible sense of imperial needs, and more often than not with reference to the supposed interest of existing schemes, or the fads and fancies of those who manage them. But the evil is too many sided to be dealt with in half-a-dozen paragraphs.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

NEW ROYAL WARRANT

A ROYAL WARRANT, dated Dec. 7, 1891, has been issued under which officers of the Indian Medical Department will in future bear the same designations as those granted to officers of the Medical Staff by the Warrant of Aug. 7, 1891. These designations are as follows:—

Surgeon-Major-General.
Surgeon-Colonel.
Brigade-Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel.
Surgeon-Lieutenant-General.
Surgeon-Major.
Surgeon-Captain.
Surgeon-Lieutenant.

On entering the Service medical officers will receive the rank of Surgeon-Lieutenant. After three years' service they will be promoted to Surgeon-Captain; after twelve years, to Surgeon-Major; and after twenty years, to Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel. Promotion to the rank of Brigade-Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel and to higher ranks will, as hitherto, be made by selection.

Retirement of medical officers holding the rank of Surgeon-Major, Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel, or Brigade-Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel, will be compulsory at the age of fifty-five; Surgeon-Colonels and Surgeon-Major-Generals may stay on till they are sixty years of age.

"Surgeon-Colonel" corresponds to the grade now termed "Deputy-Surgeon-General," and "Surgeon-Major-General" to "Surgeon-General."

These grades will carry the rank and precedence expressed in the several designations.

To Correspondents.—"I. S. G. M." It has been arranged by those who have charge of the case that for the present no further correspondence on the matter shall be published, pending further action.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times:—

DEC. 8.—A fatal collision has occurred on the North-Western Railway, about seventy miles south of Lahore. It appears to have been due to some mistake on the part of the stationmaster. Over thirty persons were killed and a large number were injured.

DEC. 10.—With reference to the announcement that the French Senate has passed a Bill imposing import duties on British-grown gingelly and ground nuts, the British merchants in Madras assert that it will be impossible to distinguish French from British-grown produce, as the Pondicherry territory consists of small patches lying side by side with British territory, and it will require an army of Customs officers to prevent smuggling.

DEC. 13.—The Bishop of Madras, in the course of his charge delivered at his triennial visitation on Wednesday, dwelt at some length on the difficulties surrounding the question, now being considered, of the partition of the diocese by the creation of a bishopric at Tinnevely. His lordship said that he could not resign a portion of the trust committed to him by Letters Patent unless he was authorised to do so by a special Act of Parliament. He, therefore, could not conscientiously accept the endowment of 15,000*l.* which had been promised by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, the Society for the Propagation of Christian Knowledge, and the Colonial Bishops' Council; but rather than deprive the diocese of that substantial aid, he would resign. The Diocesan Council met on Friday, and passed resolutions expressing sympathy with the Bishop, and requesting him to submit the whole question to the opinion of the Archbishops and Bishops of England. It appears that there is a strong feeling in Madras that the Bishop's views are sound, morally and legally, and that the assistance which the magnitude of the diocese necessitates should be rendered, as heretofore, by suffragans.

The Financial and Public Works Departments are now engaged in considering the estimates for railway work in the coming year, and although the calculations are still subject to alteration, it is likely that about 430 lacs will be devoted to this purpose. Of this sum the East Coast Railway will absorb about 100 lacs, and the open and military lines about 70 lacs, the remainder being expended on various smaller undertakings. It is satisfactory to know that the most recent returns of railway working show that the improvement which has set in since the Budget was issued is even greater than was supposed, and that the revenue from this source is likely to exceed the estimates by about 70 lacs.

FROM GOVERNOR, Madras, Dec. 8.—There has been no improvement during past fortnight in the condition of Kurnool, Bellary, Anantapore, and Cuddapah. Owing to drought, extensive areas have been left waste, and, unless heavy rain comes soon, dry crops will fail over further large tracts. Relief works will have to be opened in these districts almost immediately. Condition of parts of Nellore, Chingleput, North Arcot, Salem, and Coimbatore also such as to give cause for anxiety. Rain falling at Madras. Prices of all grains continue to rise, and have approached or even exceeded scarcity rates in some districts. Condition of southern districts fair. Number of persons employed on relief works in Chingleput, North Arcot, Coimbatore, and Salem, 15,277; on gratuitous relief, 2,803—a fall of 8 and 26 per cent. respectively as compared with last fortnight.

FROM VICEROY, Dec. 12.—Condition not so good as last report. In Madras, Bombay, Deccan, and Carnatic there is no change. There has been rain in Southern Madras.

PRINCE GALITZIN and his party of Russian servants left Baramulla, Cashmere, on Nov. 16, for Murree and Pindi. The Prince, says an Anglo-Indian contemporary, takes his whole party, including the native servants and baggage ponies engaged in Yarkand. Tongas not being available, the party have had to fall back on country tats. No European is in charge of the party, nor is any State official deputed to look after their wants. The Prince is a rather delicate and elderly-looking man, with one arm, and more resembles a French gentleman than a Russian explorer. His servants are all dressed in the usual long Russian cloak, puckered in at the waist, long boots reaching above the knees, and the white forage cap used by the Russian Infantry. They are fine broad-shouldered fellows, and salute every one with a military salute. The party are armed with the Berdan and French rifles. With the party is a smart native gentleman, probably a Persian, who has visited London, Paris, &c. The party profess to have come from Samarkand to Srinagar in fifty days, and without the slightest trouble. The Prince says he was unaware of the "incident" on the Pamirs until his arrival here. During his stay in Srinagar the Prince was very affable and polite to every one, but did not allow his servants out of camp.

After all, the Pioneer observes, it has been decided by the management to make another attempt to keep the New Club at Simla on its feet. Colonel Mackenzie, the chairman of the club, has written as follows:—"In spite of persistent telegrams, prophesying and latterly announcing its dissolution, the New Club at Simla is not yet wrecked. It has passed, owing to various causes, through a very unfavourable season, but it is believed to possess abundant vitality, and a vigorous effort is now being made to restore it to the progressive prosperity which up to this season it enjoyed, but which has been temporarily checked. Its members and those gentlemen of the non-official classes, for whose benefit mainly it was instituted, are requested to believe that there is no valid reason why it should not safely weather the squall, and have a long and prosperous career. Like all young clubs, its chief need is a well-filled roll of members, and a proposal will shortly be submitted to a general meeting and is almost certain to be sanctioned, admitting a limited number of new members free of entrance fees, and liable only during absence from Simla to the annual subscription of twelve rupees. In the meantime I would be glad to receive the names of gentlemen who would desire to join the club if the above rule is passed. It is hoped that the large and increasing class of clubbable gentlemen throughout India who may from time to time have occasion to visit Simla, and many of whom are not under present rules eligible for full membership of the United Service Club will seize this opportunity of showing that they so desire to have a club of their own at the summer seat of Government." Commenting on the above communication, the Pioneer says:—"One may be permitted to doubt, however, whether the admission of members entrance free will mitigate or remove the causes to which the ill success of the new club at Simla is mainly ascribed: but time will show."

The Indian papers are filled with long accounts of the Viceroy's tour. A report of his Excellency's speeches will be found in another column. Here we may quote the Englishman's description of the scene at the capital of Bhopal:—

The demonstration to-night was, indeed, such a spectacle as has rarely been seen in India. The whole route through the city to the palace was worked into one continuous scheme of illuminations. The palace itself with its immense gangways was a blaze of lights and was decorated with the maximum alike of taste and splendour. The gateways were richly adorned with gold and silver embroideries, while several vast and elaborate triumphal arches were erected. Some distance from the palace these arches bore the usual greetings, but differed from the rest in the character of the inscriptions. The words were cast in the form of a Persian anagram, the number of the letters on the double inscription giving the year of grace in Christian reckoning and that of the Hegeira. The bund over the lake was again illuminated, together with the fort, the water palace, and other buildings on the margin of the lake, and in addition the line of illuminations was carried along the ridge of the hills beyond for a distance of a couple of miles.

The Pioneer's correspondent, writing of the great annual gathering at Sonapore, says:—"The Maharaja of Durbhungha during the fair lived in Bankipore at night, and only came across to Sonapore for the day. Next came the Queen's and the Royal Artillery camp, and behind, Mr. Ricketts' (manager of Forbes' estates, from Purneah). Then came his Honour's camp, very tastefully arranged on three sides of a quadrangle, with white bricks marking the entrance to each tent. In the middle of the quadrangle stood a huge shamiana for receptions. Next came Mr. C. C. Stevens, the Commissioner's camp, and on the opposite side of the road stood Mr. Kemble's and Mr. Bourdillon's camp. Going towards the race-course was the Chupra District Superintendent of Police, and next to him Mr. Lockhart's camp. Near the race-stand were Mr. J. McLeod's and Mr. Brett's camps, and on the west side of it stood Framjee's refreshment-room, where a very free and easy style of living prevailed, and it was commonly said that in one night 25,000 rs. exchanged hands over the card-table. At night the camps lit up with Chinese and camp lanterns looked very pretty, the lace and fancy muslin curtains adding greatly to the beauty. The races were not quite so good as in other years, the attendance being rather small, especially on the second day, when his Honour did not attend. Some very good games of polo were played, especially in the match that took place on the 17th when some excellent hits were made. The Lieutenant-Governor's ball on the 12th was a great success, the place was simply crowded and the dancers could with difficulty make their way. On Monday, the 15th, an "At Home" was given by Mrs. Stevens, where we had some excellent music and singing. There was also some good music on the violin and banjo, the latter being in great request, and some amateur performances being repeatedly applauded.

The bathing day was on the 15th, and as the eclipse of the moon took place at night, the occasion was considered a specially holy one, and pilgrims had two ablutions, one during the day and one at night when the eclipse was on. The gambling-tables, both in the European and native quarters of the fair, seemed to present great attractions, and were markedly patronised by the natives.

The Times of India writes:—"Judged in the light of the authoritative details supplied us by our Special Correspondent on the Cashmere Frontier, the writer of the Times' article on "Indian Affairs" has hit very wildly at the mark in his circumstantial version of the adventures of Captain Younghusband in the Pamirs. Captain Younghusband was sent to that region by the Government on "special duty." What that "special duty" was our readers have already learned, but the Times writer says it was "chiefly in reference to commercial matters"—a very random venture. The Times observes, too, as a "fact" that has "emerged" that "the party which turned back was not of the nature of a Russian expedition in force." A more delicate meaning may attach to the phrase than we are able to detect, but since Colonel Yanoff was accompanied by thirty Cossacks and a body of one hundred Russian Infantry, it would certainly seem to have been at least something of the nature of "a Russian expedition in force." Then, again, the writer of the Times article enforces the contention "that any army with the appliances of civilised war should reach India by this route is physically impossible." Yet this "physically impossible" feat, as our correspondent clearly shows, has been actually accomplished.

The Nagpore Golf Tournament, says the Pioneer, just concluded is probably the biggest meeting of its kind that has yet been held in India. Players turned up from all parts of the Central Provinces, as well as from Bombay, Nasik, and elsewhere. For one match alone there were forty-six entries, and the tournament, which extended over the whole of last week, seems to have been a great success in every particular. The Gold Medal and Championship of the Club was won by Mr. Rivett-Carnac, who also, in partnership with Mr. Fraser, carried off the Champion Foursomes. The Resident's Cup was won by Mr. Fraser, after a tie with Mr. Rivett-Carnac. Mr. Fraser also won the Silver Medal of the Club. One of the features of the meeting, we are told, was the fine form shown by the ladies.

Of the three public matches which Mr. John Roberts, junior, has played in Bombay during the first week of his tour in India that which came off at the Skating Rink on Nov. 21 against Mr. Cassum, the well-known Mahomedan amateur billiard-player, was by far the finest exhibition of the game, and evoked an unusual amount of excitement. A local paper writes:—The game was 1,000 up, and the stakes were 1,000 rs. aside; the champion conceding his opponent no fewer than 750 points, or 50 more than given to Mr. Saklatwalla and 100 more than the start accorded Mr. Broadbent. Almost every seat in the saloon was occupied, and the progress of the game was watched with the keenest possible interest. Although Cassum was beaten he certainly made a brilliant exhibition, and deserves every praise for the pluck and calmness with which he tackled his redoubtable opponent.

Kalka, the Punjab paper writes, was en fête on Nov. 9, when Her Highness the Maharani of Patiala came down from Simla, bringing her little son, one month old, en route to Patiala. His Highness the Maharaja came from Patiala by special train to meet his family and escort them to his capital, where great preparations were in progress for the reception of the young heir. At Kalka the one street was thronged with Patiala people, villagers from the vicinity, and religious mendicants, who loudly sang the praises of Patiala and its chief. A company of Patiala soldiers were drawn up at the entrance of Lowrie's Hotel. The following morning numbers of children paraded up and down before the hotel to the strains of a small band, each with a flag carried in the hand, and a banner bearing the device of "Long live the New-born Prince," in gold letters on a crimson ground. Largesse in no stinted measure was thrown to the crowds, while order was kept by a company of police.

The death of Mr. Nusserwanjee Manockjee Petit, one of the great benefactors of this city, will be much deplored, the Times of India writes, by the native community in general and the Parsees in particular. Mr. Nusserwanjee, like his distinguished brother, Sir D. M. Petit, Bart., commenced his mercantile career for a very small salary under his father, who was a broker to the firm of Messrs. Dyrom, Richmond and Co. The experience he had gathered and the insight he was able to obtain in the management of such a large and flourishing firm stood Mr. Nusserwanjee in good stead when he started business on his own account a few years afterwards. When the price of cotton rose to an almost fabulous figure at the time of the late American Civil War, Mr. Nusserwanjee was one of those who took advantage of the opportunity and amassed a large fortune, but subsequently when many of the merchants, flushed with fortune that seemed to favour them for a time, launched themselves into wild schemes of speculations of various kinds which brought ruin and disaster in this city in the years 1864-65, Mr. Nusserwanjee, like his brother, Sir Dinshaw, and his late uncle, Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, was one of the very few individuals who saw the danger ahead, and escaped the fate which overtook hundreds of reckless and ambitious persons. Mr. Nusserwanjee's charities, which are chiefly confined to his own community, amount to nearly fifteen lacs of rupees, no less than ten lacs being devoted to the establishment of an orphanage for the Parsees, which is perhaps the first institution of its kind started by any native of India.

PERSONAL.

LORD WILLIAM BERESFORD arrived at Calcutta on Nov. 21.

The Bishop of Calcutta has given 5,000% towards the endowment of the Lucknow Bishopric.

Mr. Ribbentrop, Inspector-General of Forests, had left Calcutta to attend the Forest Conference to be held at Quetta.

The Hon. Mr. Bliss was to leave Madras on Nov. 27 to join the Legislative Council at Calcutta.

Messrs. G. Walker and C. Vincent, Under-Secretaries in the Public Works Department of the Government of India, have returned from leave to England.

Mr. Macdonald, who has been lent to Cashmere to supervise the Forest Department, is now engaged in overhauling the State wood depôts on the Jhelum and Chenab rivers.

Mr. W. E. Neale, Commissioner of Agra, on return from furlough, arrived there on Nov. 22, and took over office from Mr. H. B. Finlay, his locum tenens, next morning. Mr. Finlay proceeds on a year's furlough immediately. Mr. Neale goes into camp at an early date.

Mr. Barrie, an engineer employed on the Mu Valley Railway, is reported to have been attacked by dacoits and to have been severely hacked by dahs. Mr. Barrie was taken into Wuntho, where he lies in a precarious condition.

The honorary title of Doctor of Laws was unanimously resolved to be conferred on Mr. Justice Straight, previous to his retirement in March next, by the Syndicate of the Allahabad University, at their last meeting.

Major-General Goodfellow, V.C., R.E., ceases to be in civil employment on attaining the age of fifty-five years, and his services are placed at the disposal of the Bombay Government in the Military Department; Colonel J. D. Cruickshank, R.E., will succeed to the superintending engineership of the Southern Division.

Lieutenant-General Sir George Greaves, accompanied by the members of the Headquarter Staff, and his own Staff, consisting of Brigadier-General Gatacre, adjutant-general; Brigadier-General Hogg, quartermaster-general; Colonel Greig, R.A., assistant adjutant-general; Lieut.-Colonel Leach, R.E., military secretary to Sir George; and Captain Le Gallais, A.D.C., arrived in Bombay on Nov. 24 from Ahmedabad.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

General H. J. Pelly, Bombay Staff Corps, while driving through Hereford on Dec. 10, was thrown from his trap, owing to the breaking of the harness. He alighted on his head, and has since succumbed to concussion of the brain. General Pelly served in Scinde from 1840 to 1847, and was on the staff of Sir Charles Napier at the battle of Meeanee and Hyderabad. He was also in the campaign against the mountain and desert tribes, in recognition of which service he received a medal and brevet of major. The deceased officer was seventy-five years of age.

The death is reported of General G. U. Price, who served in the Sind Campaign of 1843, at the battles of Meeanee and Hyderabad. He died at St. Leonards on Dec. 7, in his seventy-first year.

Major-General J. I. Robinson, who was at the siege of Lucknow and other actions during the Indian Mutiny. He died at Narberth on Dec. 6, in his fifty-ninth year.

Major-General G. G. Brown, Retired List, Royal (late-Bombay) Artillery, died at 4 Victoria Square, Clifton, Bristol, on Nov. 29, aged sixty-six years. He joined the Army June 7, 1844; became colonel Sept. 1, 1868; and retired with the hon. rank of major-general, Dec. 31, 1878. He served during the Indian Mutiny, including the siege and capture of Awah, siege and capture of Kotah (mentioned in despatches), and action of Somnagar (mentioned in despatches, brevet of major, and medal with clasp).

Colonel F. J. Hutchison, Retired List, late 64th Regiment, died at 6 Nelson Villas, Stoke, Devonport, on Dec. 2, aged sixty-one years. Colonel Hutchison joined the Army Dec. 20, 1848, and retired with the rank of colonel, Oct. 1, 1881. He served with the 64th Regiment in the Persian Campaign of 1856, including the storm and capture of Reshire and surrender of Bushire (medal with clasp); also in the Indian Mutiny (medal). He subsequently passed through the Staff College, and held several staff appointments.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. French, Retired List, Bombay Staff Corps, died at Edgbaston, on Nov. 27, aged forty-eight years. He joined the service Oct. 27, 1859; became major, Oct. 27, 1879; and retired with the honorary rank of lieutenant-colonel, July 7, 1883.

Major H. G. Bowden, late 22nd Regiment, died at 7 Irving Street, Dumfries, on Dec. 1, aged seventy years. He served with the regiment throughout the operations in Sind (medal), including the battles of Meeanee and Hyderabad, in the former of which he was wounded in the breast; also served in the campaign in the Southern Mahratta Country in 1844-45.

The death took place at Moston Hall, Chester, on Dec. 12, of Major James Swetenham, late of the Buffs. The late officer, who was in his sixty-seventh year, saw active service in India, where he was wounded.

We (Englishman) regret to hear of the death at Lucknow, on Nov. 20, of the Rev. Dr. Badley, whose abilities have kept him for years before the public in the North-Western Provinces and before missionaries of different denominations throughout India.

The ex-Maharaja of Manipore died on Dec. 3, and his remains were cremated.

Mr. Nusserwanjee Manockjee Petit, J.P., of Bombay, younger brother of Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, died suddenly in Poona on Nov. 21 at his residence.

The Times of India of Nov. 28 says:—On the 19th inst. most of the vessels in port at Calcutta had their flags half-mast high on account of the death of Captain Treadwell, of the ship Regent, trading regularly between that port and London. He was apparently in good health and spirits on Monday evening; but on his return aboard he complained of feeling unwell, and on Tuesday was seized with cholera and died on Wednesday night. He was buried on Thursday evening, and the funeral was attended by a large number of captains and members of the shipping community.

THE VICEROY'S TOUR.

STATE BANQUET AT GWALIOR.

As we noted in our last issue, the Viceroy arrived at Gwalior on Nov. 17. On the 18th his Excellency went on a pigsticking expedition, and afterwards a State banquet was given by the Maharaja in the Jai Bilas Palace. The toast of the health of the Queen-Empress having been duly honoured, the Maharaja proposed the health of the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne, whose presence in the State he heartily welcomed. The Viceroy, in replying, said:—

Your Highness, ladies and gentlemen,—His Highness the Maharaja is now fifteen years of age, and we are able to look forward to the time when he will assume the responsible duties of a ruler. The progress which he has hitherto made in acquiring a suitable education, and the sympathy which he has inspired in the minds of all those who have the advantage of knowing him, justify us in the hope that when the time comes he will take a very high place indeed amongst the most distinguished ruling Chiefs of India. (Applause.) During the minority of his Highness the administration of the affairs of the State has been in the hands of a Council which has been fortunate in being presided over by such statesmen as the late Sir Gopun Rao Khadki, and by his successor, the distinguished gentleman who now occupies the honourable post of President. (Hear, hear.) The Council deserves much credit for the manner in which it has discharged its arduous duties since the death of the late Maharaja in 1886. I must take this opportunity of expressing the interest which I feel in the proposals made by the Council for the construction of two important lines of railway, one running from Goonah to Bena and the other from Ujjain to Bhopal. The first of these has already been sanctioned by the Government of India, and both the projects are now under survey. It only needs a glance at the map in order to realise the effect which these two lines may produce upon the welfare of this part of the Indian Empire. I feel no doubt that the State will be well advised if it sees fit to invest a part of its savings in the construction of these railways. (Applause.) One of the great difficulties with which the State has had to contend is that which has been occasioned by the prevalence of dacoity within it and on its borders. The durbar police has co-operated loyally with that of the North-West Provinces for this purpose, and I am glad to know that several gangs have been captured or broken up, and some of the most notorious leaders taken prisoners or got rid of. But sustained effort will be necessary if this scandal is to be put an end to, and I earnestly commend the matter to the attention of the Council. (Applause.) I cannot end my notice of what has been done in the different departments without a reference to the contribution which the Gwalior State is making towards Imperial defence. The State has offered to maintain two regiments of cavalry, each 600 strong, as well as a transport train of 500 ponies with 200 carts. The necessary expenditure has been sanctioned by the Council, and the organisation of the force is proceeding satisfactorily. Sir Frederick Roberts, the Commander-in-Chief, has, in recognition of the efforts which have been thus made, invited one regiment to attend the camp of exercise which is to be held during the present cold weather at Alighur. Since I have arrived in Gwalior his Highness has mentioned to me in conversation that it would be very agreeable to him to be present at the camp of exercise, and I am able to tell him this evening that, if that is his wish, the Government of India will be glad to accede to it. (Applause.) Ladies and gentlemen, all these improvements have, I need not say, cost the State a considerable sum of money; but I am glad to be able to tell you that so sound is its financial condition, and so wisely have its resources been administered that, far from being threatened with a deficit, the Council is able to point with pride not only to an equilibrium between income and expenditure, but to a handsome surplus. The treasury has a cash balance of more than four and a half crores of rupees, and it has been able to invest, in round numbers, five and a half crores of rupees, either in railways or in Government securities (applause). I call your attention to the latter fact because I know that in some parts of the country there has existed a prejudice against the investment of the savings of an Indian State in Government paper. The transaction is not always understood, and is represented as if it were a somewhat irregular mode of disposing of any accumulation of money which may be available for State purposes; but I hope that the time has come when no one will be found to contend seriously that if a private individual or an Indian State has one or two crores of rupees which it has no occasion to spend at the moment, he or it will do better to hoard the money away, and allow it to remain unproductive, rather than to invest it in some sound securities returning a reasonable rate of interest, without in the slightest degree endangering the safety of the capital sum.

All present rose and drank the Maharaja's health. His Highness rose and said:—"I thank you most sincerely for the way in which you have drunk my health, and I am deeply grateful for the many kind things which your Excellency has said about me and my State" (loud applause).

VISIT TO BHOPAL.

The Viceregal party arrived at Bhopal on Nov. 20, and were enthusiastically welcomed by the Begum. On the 21st the Viceroy went out snipe-shooting. Subsequently the Begum paid a formal visit to his Excellency, which was returned by the Viceroy in the evening. At half-past eight a State banquet was held in a shamiana at the Viceregal residence, over fifty guests being present. At its conclusion, the Begum, veiled in a burkha, entered and took her seat between Lord and Lady Lansdowne. Her Highness proposed the health of the Queen-Empress, and then that of the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne. She spoke in Hindoostani, and Colonel Robertson then rose and read a translation. Her Highness said:—

I may say without fear of contradiction that from the earliest times my ancestors have repeatedly and unswervingly exhibited their friendliness and fidelity to the British Government (loud applause), whilst I, on my part, from the day of my accession to the gaddi, have been equally firm in my obedience and loyalty. I confidently cherish the hope that his Excellency the Viceroy will, on some suitable occasion, convey to Her Majesty the Queen-Empress my determination always to exert myself in the interests and for the welfare of my people, as well as my fidelity and loyalty to Her Majesty. Furthermore, that Her Majesty's most obedient servant Shahjehan is ever ready, with all her forces, subjects and the resources of this State, to render service, of whatever kind, to the British Crown, and, if necessary, to sacrifice her life for Her Majesty. (Loud applause.)

The Viceroy, in acknowledging the toast, said:—

Your Highness, ladies and gentlemen,—I shall not fail to make known to Her Majesty the manner in which Her Highness has referred to her this evening. (Applause.) The Rulers of Bhopal have always been conspicuous for their loyalty, their administrative ability and their magnificent charity. (Applause.) The service rendered to the British Government by the mother of her Highness, the Sikandar Begum, during the mutiny, when such services were most needed, are not and can never be forgotten. Her Highness, the present ruler of the State, is a worthy inheritor of those traditions; she has shown herself to be a wise and sagacious ruler, and she has contributed largely towards the welfare of the State by her generous support of many very good and useful works. She has assisted liberally in the development of the railway system of this part of India, she has constructed roads, built hospitals, secured for the people of Bhopal an invaluable supply of good water, and only to-day she has intimated to me her desire that the Government of India should take advantage of an offer which she had made some time ago, to place a part of the military forces of her State at the disposal of the Government for the purpose of Imperial Defence. (Applause.)

ARRIVAL AT INDORE.

The Viceregal party arrived at Indore on Nov. 23, and was introduced to the Maharaja by Mr. Crosthwaite. After a short conversation the chiefs and principal sirdars were presented to his Excellency, and the party then left for the Residency.

In the evening a State banquet was given at the Maharaja's Palace in the Lal Baug. Replying to the toast of his health, given by the Maharaja, the Viceroy said:—

I should certainly have been sorry to conclude my present tour without paying a visit to this important State. (Applause.) His Highness is responsible for the welfare of a million of human beings, and I have no doubt that the task of governing them and providing for their requirements is not without its irksome responsibilities. I am glad, however, to learn that his Highness takes a personal interest in public affairs, and I have heard with especial satisfaction of the zeal which he has shown in promoting the cause of education amongst his subjects. (Applause.) I wish also to take this opportunity of congratulating his Highness upon the successful measures which he has taken, since I have been in India, for the suppression of dacoity—(applause)—and for the dispersal of some of the gangs whose depredations were until lately a serious source of danger and a public scandal in this part of India. I can assure his Highness that it is the earnest desire of the Government of India to give him every possible encouragement, and that so long as he is animated by the feelings which he has so well expressed in his speech this evening he may count upon my cordial support and goodwill. (Loud applause.) I will not end my acknowledgments of your Highness's kindness without thanking you, especially, for your graceful reference to Lady Lansdowne. (Applause.)

FIGHTING NEAR GILGIT.

GALLANT CAPTURE OF A FORT IN HUNZA. OFFICIAL DESPATCHES.

TELEGRAMS have been received at the India Office announcing that hostilities have broken out in the vicinity of Gilgit, which is garrisoned by Cashmere troops, and where a British Agent is maintained. The military force stationed at Gilgit has lately been reinforced by a detachment of Goorkhas of the Indian Army, and a portion of the Hazara Mountain (Native) Battery.

The Hunza and Nagar tribesmen having threatened Chalt—a fort held by Cashmere troops—Lieutenant-Colonel A. G. Durand, the British Agent at Gilgit, advanced to that place, from which he telegraphed on Nov. 29 that he would move on Dec. 2 unless attacked before. He reported that though he had done everything possible to prevent hostilities he feared they were inevitable.

The fort of Nilt, which is situated on the Hunza river a few miles above Chalt, was taken by our troops on Dec. 2 after a short engagement. Lieutenant-Colonel Durand, Captain F. J. Aylmer, R.E., and Lieut. F. F. Badcock, 5th Goorkhas, were severely wounded. Lieutenant R. St. G. Gorton, R.A., is also reported to be wounded. Captain Aylmer and Lieutenants G. H. Boisragon and Badcock displayed extraordinary gallantry, the first named blowing open the strong fort gate with gun-cotton, and the three officers entering, with a few sepoy, after desperate fighting.

In accordance with Lieutenant-Colonel Durand's orders, Captain Bradshaw has assumed military command of the forces. The fort was of great strength and carefully fortified. The enemy suffered heavily. One gun was taken, and nine prisoners captured. Lieutenant-Colonel Durand's wound is very severe, but the ball has been successfully extracted, and he is reported to be doing well, as also the other wounded officers. Seven sepoy were killed and twenty-six wounded.

FURTHER DETAILS.

The following are the telegrams, in reference to the fighting, sent by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times :—

DEC. 11.—The force under Colonel Durand, the British Agent at Gilgit, attacked a hostile gathering of the Hunza and Nagar tribesmen on the 2nd inst., and took a fort on the south bank of the Hunza river, about four miles above Chalt. The enemy made a desperate resistance. Captain Aylmer, having blown in a gate, entered with Lieutenants Badcock and Boisragon. Colonel Durand was severely wounded while laying a gun within 200 yards of the fort. He was doing well on the 4th inst., the date of the latest news. Captain Aylmer and Lieutenant Badcock were also badly wounded on the same day, while two sepoy of the 5th Goorkhas and one sepoy of the Cashmere troops were killed; one jemadar and twenty men were wounded. The enemy lost heavily, and one gun and nine prisoners were captured. There was more fighting on the 3rd inst. The enemy held a strong position at Mayan. Their sharpshooters gave some trouble, and Lieutenant Gorton and seven men were wounded. The next day was passed in desultory firing, without any further casualties. Three of the wounded sepoy have died, but all the wounded officers are doing well. The British force was building a blockhouse prior to advancing.

DEC. 13.—News from Gilgit takes some days to reach India, as telegraphic communication has not been completed beyond Astor, so no details of the recent fighting have yet been received. As far as can be gathered from what was previously known, it appears that the Hunza and Nagar tribes, who have been showing themselves recalcitrant for some time past, had resolved to attack the working parties who were engaged in making a military road from Gilgit to Chalt. Colonel Durand, however, anticipated them and reinforced the fort at Chalt. It is not known what force he took with him, but the total strength of the Gilgit garrison consisted of about 300 Goorkha sepoy, a small body of the 20th Punjab Infantry, some Bengal sappers, and three regiments of the Cashmere Imperial Service troops. There was also a Gatling gun forwarded some weeks ago, and it would appear to have been sent forward with the column. The fort, which was taken after a desperate resistance, is situated at Nilt, a village belonging to Nagar, about 15 miles below the capital of that petty State. The extent of the tribal gathering is not yet known, but it seems clear that the Hunzas and Nagaris have laid aside their jealousies and combined in order to try to stop the construction of the road, which, though it is in Cashmere territory, will command approaches to their country. A letter from an officer of great authority in that country says that the enemy is quite contemptible, and that the rising will be easily put down, so it is hoped that the fuller despatches, which are expected daily, will announce the collapse of the combination. A private telegram, dated Nilt, Dec. 5, reports that Dr. Robertson has extracted the bullet from Colonel Durand's wound, and the latter's condition is said to be most satisfactory.

DEC. 14.—A telegram dated Nilt, Dec. 7, states that desultory firing was going on, but there had been no further casualties. All the wounded officers were doing well, and had started for Gilgit. Evidently the snowfall has not yet been sufficient to block the passes, otherwise the news would have taken a much longer time to reach here.

Reuter's Agency supplies the following account of the engagement :—Colonel Durand, the British Agent at Gilgit, and a body of Indian troops under his command, have had a severe encounter with the hostile Hunza and Nagar tribesmen, on the northern frontier of the Gilgit country. Owing to the threatening attitude of these tribes, Colonel Durand advanced against them, and, after severe fighting on the 2nd inst., stormed Nilt, a fort about four miles higher up the River Hunza than Chalt. Colonel Durand, Captain Aylmer, and Lieutenant Badcock, and twenty men were severely wounded. After the capture of the fort the enemy gave a great deal of trouble by keeping up a desultory but telling rifle fire from the mountain side. On the morning of the 3rd inst., Lieutenant Gorton was sent out with a party to dislodge the enemy, and in the skirmish which ensued that officer himself and seven of his men were wounded. The latest despatches from the front are dated the 4th inst. No further casualties are announced, and the wounded are reported to be progressing favourably. The health of the troops is good.

The Times of India publishes the following letter, apparently from Gilgit, and written early in November, but not dated :—

All the troops detailed by the Government of India for service on the Cashmere frontier have now arrived. The first division and the second division with the two 17-pounder guns had a comparatively easy time coming over the passes, but owing to snow having fallen in the meantime the third division suffered somewhat severely, no less than fifty men being badly frost-bitten. One (a driver) has already succumbed, and it is most probable that three or four more will not be able to pull through; several have had from two to four toes removed by the doctor, and it is feared that some will lose their feet entirely.

Captain Barrett, who is in command, was rather severely bitten in the right foot, but no serious results are anticipated, though up to the present he is confined to his bed, and will not be able to use his foot for another week at the earliest.

The Gatling gun, with 10,000 rounds of ammunition, arrived at Astor on Nov. 6, under Lieutenant Badcock, having left Baramula on Oct. 25. They were very fortunate in their weather, and experienced no special difficulty in getting over the passes, though there was eight to ten feet of snow lying.

Owing to the hard work and scarcity of fodder, a large number of the transport mules are on the sick list, and the task of taking forward the men's baggage and supplies has to be performed by the sound animals, thus causing some delay, and it is not likely that the force will be in a position to take the field for a fortnight yet.

Matters here have been somewhat further complicated by the sudden and wholly unexpected arrival of Mr. Olpherts, an assistant superintendent in the Indian Telegraph Department, who was ordered up at a moment's notice from Agra to survey the passes leading from the Astor-Gilgit Valley to Skardu, with the view to the erection of a line of wire to connect the two existing systems, viz., Gilgit to Astor, and Skardu to Srinagar, and so to bring Gilgit and Srinagar, and consequently India, into telegraphic communication. The authorities by sending Mr. Olpherts up at this season of the year have exhibited most extraordinary and culpable ignorance of the country, for the passes to be surveyed, some of which run to 17,000 feet above the level of the sea, are all now, and have been for ten days at least, closed for the next four months by snow, and any attempt to cross them would be sheer madness. To add to the difficulty of the situation, Mr. Olpherts, completely in the dark as to the kind of country he was coming to, has brought his wife, a lady only a few months out from England, an ayah, and a large camp, constituting a very serious drain on the resources of the country.

To relieve the strain as much as possible, all the mules, about 1,200, which have come up with the troops, will be sent back to India as soon as they can be spared, and it is most sincerely to be hoped that the weather will hold up long enough to enable Sergeant Young to take his long line of animals in safety over the passes—a task enough to appal the heart of many a brave man, and requiring the utmost energy and skill, combined with constant and untiring watchfulness, in order to keep the men moving and overcome their intense desire to lie down and rest and die.

A large convoy of grain, &c., coming up last week suffered heavy losses on the road. Sixty-seven horses, 145 yaks, and 48 donkeys left Khargil, and only 27 ponies, 129 yaks, and 35 donkeys reached Astor, leaving 40 ponies, 15 yaks, and 13 donkeys dead on the pass. Six drivers also perished at the same time.

All these things considered, it is not to be wondered at that Gilgit has always been regarded by the natives as a sort of penal settlement, and even now, though every possible aid is afforded with the means at the disposal of Colonel Durand, the British Agent at Gilgit, to lessen the horrors of the journey, personal servants and others demand and obtain fabulous sums to induce them to accompany their masters to this wild and inhospitable region, and they take leave of their families as though they were setting out to meet certain death.

The construction of the new military road has, of course, done much to rob the journey of many of its terrors by considerably shortening the time occupied on the march, and by its easy and regular gradient and level surface enabling travellers to get along comfortably.

The following is a complete list of the Europeans who will be wintering in the Gilgit Valley this year :—

With the British Agency at Gilgit.

Colonel A. G. Durand, British Agent.	Lieutenant Mannors Smith, B.S.C.
Captain R. H. Twigg, B.S.C.	Dr. Roberts, I.M.S.

With the Special Force.

Captain A. A. Barrett, 5th Goorkhas, Commanding.	Lieutenant Badcock, 5th Goorkhas.
Captain Bradshaw, 35th Sikhs, Brigade Major.	Lieutenant Widdicombe, 9th B.I.
Captain Aylmer, R.E.	Lieutenant Duncan, of the Pioneers.
Captain Colin Mackenzie, Seaforth Highlanders, A.-D.-C. to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India.	Lieutenant Baird.
	Lieutenant Malony.
Captain Kemball, 3rd Sikhs.	Lieutenant Townsend, C.I.
Lieutenant Boisragon, 5th Goorkhas.	Lieutenant Taylor.
	Lieutenant Gorton, R.A.
	Dr. Luard, I.M.S.

On the Gilgit Road Work.

Mr. C. Spedding.	Mr. W. P. Appleford.
Mr. W. Mitchell.	Mr. G. W. Millais.
Mr. H. C. Blaker.	Mr. H. F. Maynard.
Mr. W. E. Ayton Wilkinson.	Mr. C. McCulloch.

With Special Permission.

Mr. L. Lennard.	Mr. R. Beach.	Mr. E. F. Knight.
-----------------	---------------	-------------------

Expected to arrive shortly.

Captain Stewart, Assistant Resident, Cashmere.	Dr. H. D. McCulloch.
Lieutenant Williams.	Mr. W. H. Johnson, M.I.C.E., Executive Engineer.

In the event of hostilities arising with Hunza, writes a Gilgit correspondent to the Civil and Military Gazette, the following would compose the force which Colonel Durand would employ to bring these brigands into subjection :—2 guns Hazara Mountain Battery, under command of Lieutenant Gorton, R.A.; 2 companies 1-5th Goorkhas, under command of Captain Barrett; 350 men 1st Jammoo and Cashmere Regiment; 350 2nd Jammoo and Cashmere Regiment; 150 men Native Levies, under command of Lieutenant Mannors Smith. Captain Bradshaw, 35th Sikhs, would probably command the 1st Jammoo and Cashmere Regiment in the field, and Lieutenant Townsend, C. I. Horse, the 2nd Regiment.

THE DECCAN AGRICULTURISTS RELIEF COMMISSION.

AN official resolution has been issued by the Government of India reviewing the working of the Deccan Agriculturists Relief Act, which has now been in operation in Poona, Satara, Sholapore, and Ahmednagar for twelve years. It has been three times amended, and five years have now elapsed since the alterations took place. Having regard to the extreme importance of the questions involved in the application of the Act, the Governor-General in Council has resolved that a fresh inquiry shall be made into the working of the measure by a Special Commission, consisting of the following officers:—

Mr. John William Neill, Judicial Commissioner, Central Provinces, President;

Mr. Charles Montgomery Rivaz, Commissioner, Punjab;

Mr. Henry Farrington Evans, Judge, North-Western Provinces;

with whom will be associated two members selected by the Government of Bombay. Mr. Leslie Porter, of the Indian Civil Service, will be Secretary to the Commission. The Government of India, in its resolution, says:—

"It has often been pointed out that the Deccan Agriculturists Relief Act, though in some of its details specially adapted to the districts where it is in force, in its broad principles embodies an attempt to meet an evil which presses with greater or less urgency in many other parts of India—the growing indebtedness of the agricultural population, and the gradual transfer of proprietary interests in land from the martial and cultivating classes to the trading and money-lending castes of Hindoo society. Not only has its operation been watched with interest in other provinces generally; the Government of India have now before them a definite application from the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab for legislation on substantially the same lines for that province; and the late Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces in November 1889 submitted proposals for the constitution within his jurisdiction of special courts, empowered to go behind the bond, to inquire into the history of transactions, and to reduce unconscionable interest, in the manner provided by Chapter III. of the Deccan Act. It is not, therefore, only with the object of deciding whether the Act shall be retained, with or without modification, where it is at present in force, nor even whether it should be extended to other districts in the Bombay Presidency, that the Governor-General in Council seeks the assistance of the Commission. It will be their task also to examine how far the principles which may have approved themselves by experience in the Deccan are capable of extension to other provinces where a similar problem presents itself, and are likely to afford an adequate remedy for the evils which are there complained of. Should the Commissioners be of opinion that the measures embodied in the Deccan Act can only be of temporary effect, and afford no lasting solution of this difficult problem of Indian administration, they should state what other measures, if any, they would recommend for the purpose. But in the first place it is essential that the question should not be approached merely upon a priori grounds, but that the working of the Act should be scrutinised and studied locally in detail, with the assistance of such persons as are likely to afford the best information as to its practical operation.

"The Governor-General in Council does not wish to fetter the Commissioners in the conduct of their inquiry. The course of the previous discussions, as summarised in the preceding paragraphs of this resolution, will indicate the expectations which were entertained from, and the apprehensions which were expressed regarding, the working of the Act. It will naturally be the first task of the Commissioners to ascertain how far the results have justified the anticipations. The Act was assailed by some critics as amounting to a denial of justice in its application to existing obligations, and as leading inevitably to the extinction of agricultural credit in the future. On the other hand, it was said that the agriculturist could not get on without borrowing, and that the only result of the restrictions of the Act must be to make the terms harder for the assistance granted. It was alleged that no protective measures of the kind were sufficient to secure the helpless and ignorant agriculturist against the craft of the money-lender, and that after a temporary check the tide of alienation would flow fuller than ever. What answer is afforded by experience to these allegations?"

THE IMPERIAL DIAMOND CASE.

THE Imperial Diamond Case was begun at Calcutta on Dec. 7, a telegram says, before Mr. Justice Wilson and a special jury. The accused pleaded "Not guilty." The Advocate-General was still opening the case when the Court rose.

The case was resumed on the 8th. The Advocate-General concluded his opening speech. Mr. Inverarity, the leading counsel for the defence, objected to the admission of the Nizam's evidence taken on commission. After some argument the Judge held that the application for the commission should have been made to the High Court and not to the police-court; also that the prosecution had failed to show that the Nizam's personal attendance could not be procured without excessive expense and inconvenience. He therefore refused to admit the evidence. The Advocate-General applied for the issue of a fresh commission, but the Court ruled that it was too late, the accused having been given in charge to a jury. The prosecution then called Abid, the Nizam's chamberlain, whose examination was proceeding when the Court rose.

A telegram of Dec. 13 says:—The case has been dragging its slow length along during the whole of the past week, and it shows no signs of approaching the end. The last four days have been devoted to the examination and cross-examination of Abid, the Nizam's chamberlain. Little was elicited beyond what came out in the police-court.

THE IMPERIAL SERVICE TROOPS.

MAJOR-GENERAL COLLEN has taken the opportunity of his tour down country to inspect the Imperial Service troops in camp-of-exercise about eight miles from the town of Patiala. The General, accompanied by Lieutenant Bond, arrived in camp at 8 A.M. on Monday, Nov. 16. The whole of the troops were drawn up in line on a maidan in rear of the camp, in all about 3,000 strong, viz., six squadrons of cavalry (lancers), composed of two squadrons from Patiala, two from Jhind, and two from Nabha; three battalions of infantry, viz. one from each of the above States. The parade was under the command of the Inspector-General, with Captain Cox as his Staff Officer; the cavalry under Major Drummond and Captain Cowper; and the infantry under Major Hogge and Lieutenant Harris. The General Officer was received with the usual salute, and was attended by the native Commanders-in-Chief of the Patiala and Nabha States.

After an inspection of the line the troops marched past in column, to the stirring music of a massed pipe band, the infantry returning along the saluting base in mass and again in line of quarter columns. The feature of the march past was the steadiness of all ranks. The troops looked exceedingly well in their serge clothing, and their turnout left nothing to be desired. The cavalry trot past was, as usual, marred as a spectacle by dense clouds of dust. Immediately after the march past the General directed the Jhind Battalion to form for attack. This was carried out in a satisfactory manner by the Battalion Commander, Major Gurmukh Singh. A troop of the Jhind cavalry then went through the lance exercise at the canter in a very creditable way. The troops were then reformed, and advanced in review order, finishing with a general salute.

General Collen addressed Colonel Melliss, and expressed the great pleasure it had given him to come to the camp, and his complete satisfaction with what he had seen. He remarked that the behaviour of the troops under arms, their smart turnout, and the efficient state of their equipment left no doubt but that they were ready to take their part with the British Army for Imperial defence. He added that he was of opinion that such a state of efficiency reflected the greatest credit upon the Chief Inspecting Officer and those officers working under him, and he requested Colonel Melliss to convey his remarks to the British and Native officers present. All officers were then called to the front and, having been informed of the General's approval, were introduced to him. It would perhaps be hard, says the Pioneer, to find a finer-looking body of Native soldiers than these officers presented as they stood grouped together at the close of the parade. They are nearly all Sikhs and of splendid physique; the picturesque dark green Alkalik, heavily braided with gold, and turban of the same colour worn by the officers of the cavalry, and the highland cut doublets and white gaiters of the infantry officers being most effective.

General Collen and his party lunched in camp, and in the afternoon kits were laid out for the General's inspection, and he witnessed stick drill by a squad of the Patiala Cavalry, bayonet exercise by the Nabha Infantry, and physical drill with arms by the Patiala Infantry. These various exercises were carried out as smartly as the morning's work had been performed.

The General left camp in the evening for Patiala, where he was the guest of His Highness the Maharaja, and continued his tour down country early next day.

It was evident from the day's work that the military education of the Imperial Service troops has already made vast strides, and when they have learnt to shoot as well as they drill, and have been brigaded in camps of exercise with the British Army, they will be allies of whom we may have just cause to be proud. Their discipline in camp is said to be excellent, and a most remarkable keenness and wish to learn pervades all ranks. General Collen on the day previous to the parade inspected the new lines built by the Maharaja of Patiala, just outside the town, for the accommodation of 1,200 infantry and 600 cavalry, and expressed unqualified approval of the buildings. The troops would occupy these commodious lines on their return from the camp-of-exercise.

SIR JAMES LYALL AT AMRITSAR.

THE double function of the laying of the foundation-stone of the Jubilee Victoria Hospital at Amritsar by Lady Lyall, and the holding of a Durbar in connection therewith by the Lieutenant-Governor, went off very successfully on the afternoon of Nov. 17. The arrangements were complete, the Pioneer says, and the Durbar was well attended by raises of the Amritsar and Gurdaspore districts. Fourteen gentlemen were the recipients of khillats bestowed on them in recognition of special services rendered in connection with the administration of the district, and some of these also received sanads conferring titles granted to them by his Excellency the Viceroy. At the conclusion of the Durbar the municipal address was read by Mr. Nicholl, the secretary of the Municipal Committee. His Honor replied at some length, calling to mind his connection with the district for a time in 1862-63, nearly thirty years ago, since which time his regard and respect for the people of the district had never diminished. His Honour said the pleasure of his visit had been much enhanced by his Excellency the Viceroy's stay at Amritsar, and he was proud of showing his Excellency so manly and high-spirited a population as that of Amritsar—energetic alike in war, agriculture, and commerce. He lauded their zeal in the cause of education, and expressed a hope that yet more would be done by them in the education of the girls of the upper classes and in industrial or technical education. He further spoke of the public spirit and intelligence shown by them in all matters of local self-government; in regard to sanitation, he noticed the high death-rate, and said the measures which were now being taken in this direction could not fail to improve the health and comfort of the people. The question of a water supply scheme had, he said, been at last worked out in the Public Works Department, and they may depend on all the help that he could give. He highly commended the services of Dr. Mulrone, Civil Surgeon, and Mr. Nicholl, the secretary to the Municipal Committee. He promised to carefully consider the project of connecting Tarn Taran with Amritsar by a branch railway. In conclusion, he thanked them once again for their kind welcome and good wishes.

From the Durbar Hall all proceeded to an adjoining shamiana to witness the ceremony of the laying of the foundation-stone of the Jubilee Hospital. This was opened with a few short prayers suitable to the occasion offered up by the Rev. Mr. Brunnesson, Chaplain of Amritsar. Lady Lyall then, after going through the usual formalities, declared the stone to be well and truly laid, the silver trowel used for the purpose being presented to her as a memento of the occasion.

TERRIBLE BALLOON ACCIDENT AT BOMBAY. DEATH OF LIEUTENANT MANSFIELD.

A BOMBAY telegram of Dec. 10 says:—

Lieutenant Mansfield, of the Royal Naval Reserve, who on Nov. 13 made a most successful ascent in his balloon Wanderer, descending by his parachute from an altitude of upwards of 11,000 feet, met his death to-day in circumstances which have thrilled the entire city with horror. His recent descent attracted extraordinary interest here, partly on account of the remarkable success which attended it, and partly owing to the cool courage which Lieutenant Mansfield exhibited both in his preparations for his dangerous exploit and in his management of his parachute in the descent.

An immense crowd accordingly assembled to-day in the Victoria Gardens to see his second attempt. Lord Harris, the Governor, and all the principal civil and military authorities, were present. The balloon, having been filled with gas, was held by a number of blue-jackets, who let go the ropes the moment that Lieutenant Mansfield, having taken his seat on the bar, gave the word. The balloon went up very rapidly. When it had reached a height of some 400 feet the balloon burst with a loud explosion, and began to fall with terrible velocity. The horror-stricken spectators saw Lieutenant Mansfield making desperate efforts to disengage his parachute, but the ropes were entangled and he could not free them. The unhappy officer fell to the ground with an appalling swiftness. The body was terribly mangled.

The catastrophe, which was witnessed by thousands of people, caused profound emotion. Lieutenant Mansfield had gained great popularity during his stay here. He aimed at promoting the use of balloons and parachutes for both military and naval warfare. His balloon—which on Nov. 13 descended in the sea—was much injured by the people sent to bring it to land, and it is feared that this damage may not have been properly repaired before the second and fatal ascent was made.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT AT SONEPORE.

ON Nov. 12 at Sonapore Sir Charles Elliott was presented with an address by the Indigo Planters' Association, which was read by Mr. Hudson, the Secretary of the Association.

His Honour, replying, said to Mr. Hudson and the gentlemen representing the Indigo Planters' Association, that he had received with great pleasure and satisfaction the address with which they had been good enough to welcome him on his arrival among them in Behar. What he knew at present about the indigo industry was to a large extent due to a report which was drawn up by his predecessor, Sir Stuart Bayley, just before resigning office. This report had lately been published as a Parliamentary paper, and he would take this opportunity of reading to them a few passages in order to give publicity to those views. Sir Ashley Eden, addressing the Indigo Planters' Association, said:—"I take this opportunity of thanking your association for the cordial co-operation which you have always given to me and the officers of Government for the admirable influence which you have exercised throughout Behar, and for the conciliatory and moderate spirit in which you have adjusted disputes between contending interests." He then read extracts from the Administration Report of the Patna Division for the year 1883-84. The Commissioner wrote as follows:—"With regard to the Behar Indigo Planters' Association, I understand that it is doing much good work. The Secretary of the association complains that some indigo planters benefit by the institution while declining to be bound by its rules or to contribute to its necessary expenses. He thinks that an expression of opinion on the part of the Government would be sufficient to induce these gentlemen to join the association." Sir Charles was sorry to find that this anticipation of the Commissioners had not altogether been realised. Another report says:—"The Secretary of the Behar Indigo Planters' Association writes to the Collector of Mozufferpore that he believes the relations between planters, zemindars, and ryots are satisfactory, and that during the past year there has been hardly any necessity for the interference of the association with the affair of any factory." He adds:—"The operation of the Cadastral Survey Department, under Colonel Barrow, and of the records of rights under Mr. Collin, was begun in November last, and there has been, I am happy to believe, no friction between the members of the association and the officers mentioned, owing in a great measure to the tact and courtesy displayed by them in all matters which have been brought to their notice." Another report says:—"The Indigo Planters Association yields the best possible case of local self-government. It is completely voluntary. It is latent till occasion arises, and then it springs into action. And the last passage in that part of the report that dealt with Behar, and which sums up Sir S. C. Bayley's own views, were as follows:—A reference to the general correspondence of this Government shows that whereas formerly the subject of indigo was a burning one, which gave constant anxiety and required unremitted attention, it now rarely elicits allusions such as those quoted from the Administration Report—a change which indicates how much more smoothly the work is carried on at present." He needed hardly to say to the gentlemen there present that he had read these reports with great satisfaction, and he trusted that the opinions formed by such experienced men were still justified, and that the working of their association was still directed to smoothing away and removing all harshness and injustice, and that the members were doing all in their power to ensure the progress and success of this great industry.

One passage which he had just read spoke of the experimental cadastral survey carried on in the Mozufferpore district about four years ago. He would take this opportunity of referring especially to that, because, as they no doubt were aware, the cadastral survey was about to be commenced in the four districts of Northern Behar. He need hardly say that he had not entered on an undertaking of this kind without a due sense of the difficulties that might arise and the considerable labour that it would entail on himself and many of his officers. It was not a work one would undertake with a light heart. He knew that there had already been signs of an agitation commencing against it, but he was quite satisfied that the cadastral survey was wanted in this country, and that it would be highly beneficial. From what he had been able to learn from some of their number, he believed that all the most influential members would welcome the measure. It would give them an accurate knowledge of every one's rights with which they had to deal. They were all of them obliged to have constant dealings both with ryots and landholders, and it would be found to be most important to know the exact extent of those rights and the nature of the leases and contracts they were making. The ryots were another body extremely interested in the survey, and to them it would be an almost unmixed blessing, as it would be a record, for each of them, of the exact nature and extent of the rights conferred upon them by the Tenancy Act. The third great class interested in the question was the zemindars, and from them he knew that some agitation and opposition might be expected, but he hoped that these would melt away when they heard more of the facts. Every zemindar was obliged to keep up a record of his ryots, their holdings, and their rents, but this record was generally most inaccurate, as for the most part they were obliged to rely on the putwari, who was not described as a trustworthy person. Well, the survey would give them an accurate record of these facts, and would clear up all the disputes and uncertainties which caused so much annoyance and loss. He trusted it was hardly necessary for him to assure the zemindars that Government would not have entered on this undertaking unless it had been convinced that it would be for the good and not the harm of the landlords. He was convinced that when the three parties most interested—the ryots, the zemindars, and planters—came to know what the survey really meant, they would welcome it as a thing beneficial to themselves.

He had just issued a resolution which he hoped they would read carefully when it was published in the next Government Gazette and in the newspapers, and he had gladly taken this opportunity of explaining its contents and arguments briefly to them. He trusted that all who read it and understood its full scope and intentions would lend him their hearty co-operation in the performance of this arduous task. The Indigo Planters' Association had been spoken of as a part of the administrative machine, assisting Government and being in return assisted by Government. As long as they carried out this silent compact, which was made with them by Sir Ashley Eden, and carried on their operations with justice and equity, he could assure them that the association would receive his hearty support. In conclusion, he begged to thank them cordially for the kind way in which they had received him, and he would look forward to the remainder of his tour as likely to be equally pleasant and profitable to him as it had hitherto been.

The members of the deputation were then introduced to his Honour by Mr. Hudson.

FRENCH AND GERMANS IN CHINA.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times at Tientsin has had an opportunity of ascertaining the views of the French Minister at Peking, M. Lemaire, who has just returned to China after a year's absence:—

The Government of China, M. Lemaire considers, has at the present time to encounter two powerful foes, one within and the other without its territories; and the first is not less formidable than the second. The party of revolution is reinforced every day by numerous adherents. The Kalao-Hui makes proselytes, extends its field of action, and no longer confines its operations to the central provinces, but shows itself in the south, in the environs of Canton, and threatens to advance to the north. Already rumours are in circulation even at Tientsin and in the vice-royalty of Pechili. A few days ago, a number of weapons, introduced clandestinely, were seized here, on two different occasions. The Mason affair at Shanghai affords evidence that the administration of the Custom-houses must furnish, at least among the subaltern agents, among the "examiners," a number of affiliated members, who are all the more dangerous because they have not hitherto been suspected. One could hardly have imagined that the Chinese insurrectionists had recruited partisans among the very Europeans whom they detest and whose houses they pillage and burn. This suggests that the party of insurrection is strongly organised, and injures Europeans only in order to get more surely at a dynasty which they are striving to overthrow. The way to excite the European Powers against China, to raise difficulties for the Government at Peking, is to weaken it with regard to its interior adversaries. It is only on this hypothesis that we can explain these enrolments of foreigners—enrolments of which we are only too certain.

This calculation of the leaders of the revolt, if it be true that it has entered into their heads, we shall be able to upset, because, while bringing a strong pressure to bear on the Tsung-li-Yamen and the Imperial Government, and while exacting from them complete reparation we can protect the latter against the rebellion by causing the Imperial troops to be directed against it, and in the event of their insufficiency, cowardice, or defection, by repressing the rebellion ourselves. Our cruisers and our gunboats are ready to do that business.

Chinese diplomacy believed it could laugh with impunity at our ultimatum, when they were of an individual character and emanated from a single Power, or from two Powers. Taught by the agents in Europe, represented in the Legations, it was persuaded that a war with China was repugnant to all, and that it became impossible, unpopular. But to-day those very Powers of Europe which were heretofore divided all energetically insist upon what formerly some of them demanded with sufficient timidity. It must be admitted that the coup de grâce of the last illusions of China has been struck by Germany, hitherto the secret adviser and the moral protector of the Chinese Government. Her subjects, her colonists, her "voluntary exiles," thanks to their obstinate perseverance, to their insinuating ability, to the qualities peculiar to the race, have been able to assume in less than twenty years an important colonial situation, and at Tientsin, where we are, they are masters of the place. They are the majority in the English "settlement," and in the French concession we hardly count by the side of them. The German Bank is very prosperous; as for the grand industry, the house of Krupp has almost the monopoly of it. The Commissary of the Imperial Custom Houses, a high functionary of China, is a German subject, and his friendship with the Viceroy, Li Hung Chang, is known to all. He is designed, it appears, to take the situation of Sir Robert Hart at Peking. The Chinese troops have German instructors, and the Grand Chief of the Imperial Military School, under the general but nominal direction of his Excellency Lien Tang, is no other than the Major of Artillery Von Richter. At the arsenal of Taku, close by here, we find a chief artificer from Berlin. Examples might be multiplied.

In the much-controverted question of the audience at Peking the dignity of all the diplomatists of Europe accredited to the capital of the empire was singularly compromised by their doyen, M. Von Brandt, Minister Plenipotentiary of Germany. The incident is well known, and was much commended upon by all the journals of Europe. M. Von Brandt adroitly took advantage of the situation which his seniority gave him, and obtained an industrial monopoly for his country, and the installation of German factories and ironworks at the collieries of Kraiping, near Tientsin. The house of Krupp obtained permission to construct workshops for rails and cannon, reserving for itself, to the exclusion of every other foreign house, the supplying of raw material.

From the foregoing remarks it is easy to understand how the Chinese Government, favouring in so special a manner the subjects of Germany, had a right to expect from her unchangeable gratitude, durable support, and just reciprocity. But everything has collapsed. Berlin has changed its policy. Germany has sent orders to China, the line of conduct hitherto pursued has been modified; in order to enter into the views of the other Powers, and to practise solidarity of action in the important and delicate questions which have to be settled as soon as possible. Hence there is a tremendous disappointment at Peking.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

It has been an open secret for some weeks, writes the Madras Mail, that Mr. J. D. Rees has decided to vacate his appointment as Private Secretary to Lord Wenlock after the expiration of the three months' leave which he takes at the end of the year. He will then join his permanent appointment as Collector of the Nilgiris, and Mr. C. F. MacCartie will take his place as Private Secretary to Lord Wenlock. Mr. MacCartie is one of the most popular members of the Madras Civil Service, and his appointment will give universal satisfaction.

Referring to a matter upon which we have already commented, the Pioneer says:—"The following extraordinary announcement relative to the Land Indebtedness Commission appears in the Times:—"The Governor of the North-West Provinces has nominated Mr. Evans as member of the Commission for the Punjab, Rivaz, and Bombay, but has not yet nominated a member for Bengal." To transform Sir Auckland Colvin into a Governor and make him supervise the affairs of the Punjab and of Bengal, and to metamorphose Mr. Rivaz into an Indian province, is a feat even for the ingenious sub editor of the Times.

The same paper of Nov. 26 says:—"Mr. Logan, who has been completing his report on the finances of the Cashmere State at Jammu, returns to Lahore this week. It has been decided that an enrolled officer of the Financial Department shall be appointed account officer to the State, and the choice seems to lie between Mr. Kiermader, at present officiating Accountant-General at Madras; Mr. Hart, officiating in the same capacity at Bombay; and Mr. G. Bleazby, Chief Superintendent of the Accountant-General's office at Lahore. The appointment of the latter would have the advantage of being more economical to the State than that of the other names suggested; and if, indeed, as is reported, the intention is that the pay of the appointment shall not exceed 1,000 rs. a month, officiating accountant-generals may presumably be eliminated from the competition.

A farewell dinner on his retirement from the Service was given at Meerut on Nov. 7 to Mr. A. J. Lawrence, C.I.E., commissioner of the Meerut Division. The hosts were the civilians of Mr. Lawrence's division, twenty-two in number, and the Hon. Mr. Macpherson and Mr. Harrington were present as guests. The former was an old Haileybury friend of Mr. Lawrence, who happened to be in Meerut at the time. After their arrival in India in 1856 they were posted to different provinces and did not meet again till November 1891, when one was a judge of the Calcutta High Court and the other a commissioner on the eve of retirement. Mr. Harrington was about to succeed Mr. Lawrence as commissioner. Mr. A. M. Markham, judge of Meerut, was in the chair. The chairman proposed the health of the guest of the evening in an eloquent and sympathetic speech. After alluding to the three great brothers who had made the Lawrence name for ever famous, he traced Mr. Lawrence's career from his early days in Rajputana, where he saw some active service during the Mutiny, was wounded and earned a medal. Mr. Markham then touched on his services for seven years as an assistant and joint magistrate in the Meerut Division, on his deputation to the Central Provinces as a Settlement officer, and on his career as a district officer in the North-West Provinces, where he was so well known as the "crack Collector" of Agra, where so many traces of his rule still remain. Mr. Lawrence was then for six years Commissioner of Allahabad, where his strong individuality, energetic character, and kindly disposition will long be remembered by all classes. In 1889 he was appointed Commissioner of the Meerut Division—the scene of his youthful service—and thus closed his official career in the most coveted post in the Administration of the N.-W. P. Mr. Markham touched on Mr. Lawrence's long and distinguished services as a Volunteer officer. Government has recognised the great value of these services, and he retires as a colonel and an A.-D.-C.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

The New Indian Cantonment Code has passed through the press, and copies forthwith will be issued to local Indian Governments. Col. Young, Assistant Quartermaster-General at Army Headquarters, who was on special duty for six months in connection with the revision of the Code, has striven to make it as practicable as possible, though it necessarily is of great length.

The New Burma Local Battalions.—The selection of officers for the two new Burma local battalions is under consideration at Ootacamund. The regiments will be known as the 5th and 6th Burma Battalions, Madras Infantry. The probable command of one of the regiments will go to an officer of the Bengal Service, who has been some years with the Police Levy. The regiments will be composed chiefly of Punjabis. Mustering out of the 30th and 31st Madras Inf. will take place as soon as the officers are found for the two new local battalions.

The Cavalry Camp at Aligarh.—The real work of the Cavalry Camp at Aligarh began on Nov. 26, when the division assembled in rendezvous formation on the course, moving thence to a plain south of the Khair Road, when the several brigades were manoeuvred by the inspecting brigadiers. The total strength on parade was almost 5,000 men. Six hundred sabres of the Gwalior Imperial Service Cavalry attend the camp. They have with them a transport train of 250 ponies.

The Madras Times learns that negotiations are being carried on with the owner of Woodside Hotel, Ootacamund, for the purchase of the property as a residence for H.E. the Madras Commander-in-Chief.

The two handsome brass guns captured at Mandalay by the force under General Sir Harry Prendergast, V.C., K.C.B., have been presented to the Corps of Royal Engineers by Col. G. E. L. Sanford, R.E.

The question of making a change in the present tests for examination in Hindoostani by the lower standard is under consideration, it having been brought to notice that the British soldier is rather handicapped owing to the difficult nature of the tests.

One hundred and forty recruits, for the most part of the classes required, were enlisted during the month of October in the 24th Beloochistan Regt., Bombay Inf., new being raised in the Quetta district, bringing the strength of the regiment, on the 1st inst., up to 519 natives of all ranks.

The undermentioned batteries of Royal Art. will take part in the Camp of Instruction to be held near Poona during January 1892. viz. R Battery, Royal Horse Art., 26th, 27th, 36th, and 72nd Field batteries. At the close of the Camp of Exercise these batteries will carry out their annual gun practice on scale "A."

The Government of India have sanctioned a wing of the 5th Bombay Cav. being sent to Fort Sandeman, in relief of the 12th Bengal Cav., now quartered there.

Her Majesty's flagship Boadicea, under the command of Capt. C. S. Donner, arrived at Bombay on Nov. 26 from Malta, where she had been refitted and recommissioned. The Boadicea with the Admiral on board was to sail for Calcutta on Nov. 30. She had had fine weather during the voyage.

The Indian Marine steamer Canning, Capt. H. S. Black, arrived at Bombay on Nov. 26, from Kurrachee, which port she left on the 24th, with the following officers and men of the 36th Field batty., Royal Art., and details:—Major J. Douglas, Capt. A. Wedderburn, Lieut. J. Giddes, Lieut. H. Thomas, 113 men, 5 women, 4 children, 8 native non-commissioned officers and men, 111 followers, 23 women, 27 children, 117 horses, and 3 ponies, 36th Field batty., Royal Art., the details consisting of Major Scott, R.A., Lieut. Watling, R.E., Lieut. Barratt, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, Mrs. Gray and child, 1 European man, 1 Commissariat clerk, wife and child, 7 native men, 22 followers, 7 women, and 7 children.

Brig.-Gen. B. A. Combe, C.B., Commanding Sind District, resumed his duties on Nov. 17, on return from privilege leave to England.

Brig.-Gen. George Luck, inspector-general of cavalry in India, will shortly proceed on a tour of inspection in the Bombay Presidency, commencing about the end of December. The inspection will probably commence at Mhow, after which Poona, Secunderabad, Fort Sandeman and Quetta will be visited in succession. The Inspector-General will, on his arrival at Poona, after the first week in January, carry out the inspection of the Bombay Cavalry regiments present at the Camp of Exercise.

On the departure of Col. Chaplin, assistant judge advocate-general, on leave, about the end of December, Capt. Lambert will be transferred from the 9th to the 4th circle, and Capt. J. M. Carpendale, 8th Bengal Cav., will officiate as assistant judge advocate-general in the 9th circle.

Lieut.-Col. A. M. Hogg, commandant, 6th Bombay Cav., has applied for one year's leave to England on private affairs.

Major E. C. Kellie has been selected for the command of the 23rd Bombay Light Inf., vice Col. J. Gatacre, C.B., appointed to the command of the Nagpore District.

Major E. R. Elles, R.A., will officiate as head of the Intelligence Branch during Col. Woodthorpe's absence on leave next year.

Capt. E. Houston, R.E., is posted to the Bombay command and proceeds to Aden. Lieuts. D. Brady and C. de W. Crookshank, Royal Eng., are transferred to the Madras command, the former proceeding to Rangoon and the latter to Ootacamund.

Capt. Wahab, R.E. (survey of India), is about to make a survey of the Arabian districts in the vicinity of Aden, which are under British protection. He will be provided with a suitable escort, as large tracts of the country to be surveyed are inhabited by wild mountain Arabs.

The following gentlemen have been nominated for commissions in the 1st batt. of the B. & C. I. Railway Volunteers:—To be captain—Mr. Robert Wylie; to be second lieutenant—Mr. H. C. Davies.

Paymaster-Sergt. Tomsett, of the Buffs, was in custody on a charge of desertion. He was apprehended up-country, and taken back to Fort William.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Nov. 25.

Purchase of the Field of Plassey.—Raja Sir Surendo Mohun Tagore, Kt., C.I.E., has lately purchased the property, called the Plassey, where the famous battle took place in 1757.

Deportation of the Manipore Prisoners.—At 3 P.M. on Nov. 25 the fifteen Manipore prisoners, whose arrival in Calcutta has been previously reported, were embarked on board the Asiatic Steam Navigation Company's steamer Shahjehan, en route to Port Blair. A curious incident was witnessed when the prisoners were walking over the jetty. Three of them suddenly threw themselves flat on the ground, manacled as they were, kissed the ground, and bowed to the sacred Ganges with folded hands.

The Calcutta Municipality.—A resolution reviewing the last annual report of the Calcutta Municipality says the report discloses much excellent work done by the Commissioners, and real progress made in several important branches of municipal administration. That the public believe the financial position of the Corporation sound is proved, says the Times of India, by the practical test of their loans being readily taken up, although the rate of interest has been reduced. The money thus raised appears to have been wisely laid out. The water supply has been extended, an improved drainage scheme has been prepared, work on the Central Road has been pushed forward, the question of the disposal of refuse has been advanced a stage by the experimental purchase of an incinerator, revision of assessments has been carried on, and a variety of useful improvements have been made in the added area. The thanks of the Lieutenant-Governor are due to the Commissioners, the Chairman, the Health Officer, and the Engineer for the energy and good-will they have shown in meeting the increased responsibilities laid upon them by the introduction of the new Municipal Act.

A horse valued at 20,000 rs., belonging to Mr. Wilson, Superintendent of the Viceroy's stables, was run into by a pony and dog-cart at Calcutta, when out for exercise, and had to be shot.

A Marwari piece-goods dealer was fined 500 rs. on Nov. 18 by the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, for counterfeiting a trademark of Messrs. Ralli Brothers on grey dhoties. The alternative to the payment of the fine was six months' rigorous imprisonment. The magistrate also awarded 200 rs. to the complainants as compensation for the costs of the prosecution.

The Englishman regrets to hear that Captain E. V. Petley, Port Officer, Calcutta, has sent in his resignation. "It is to be trusted, in the interests of all concerned, that the Government of India will not accept it. Captain Petley has filled the post of Port Officer in a way which has given the greatest satisfaction to all who are connected with or interested in the Port of Calcutta and its surroundings."

A Manipore telegram of Nov. 17 says:—Major Maxwell, Political Agent, Manipore, who has only recently returned from inspecting the salt works at Chundra Koll, settling the revenue there and getting rid of many hangers-on, who eat the profits while maintaining a high price for salt, has again started on a tour on the Manipore-Kohima Road. He intends visiting the villages near the road, and impressing on them that head or gun hunting or thefts on the road will result in the destruction of the village nearest the spot where any such event may occur. This is the very sound policy of making the villages near the road keep their brethren who are further away from troubling. One or two suspicious cases have already been reported of Nagas giving trouble on the road.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Nov. 26.

Reception by Lady Wenlock.—Lady Wenlock held a reception for Gosha ladies on Nov. 19 at Government House, Guindy. Her Highness, Kaira-un-Nissa Begum Sahiba, of the Carnatic, and Lady Ramasawmy Moodeliar were among the guests. Mrs. Firth's services were again called in requisition, and the interpretation was very kindly conducted by her. On Nov. 21 her Excellency entertained the lady medical students of the Madras Medical College, most of whom are Dufferin scholars, at an evening tea-party from five to six o'clock at Government House, Madras. The Governor's band was in attendance, and played a short but choice selection.

The distinction of Raja has been conferred on the Zemindar of Ramnad by Government.

Dewan Bahadure Subramania Iyer has been sworn in as a judge of the Madras High Court during the absence of Mr. Moothooswamy Iyer, and took his seat.

At the invitation of the Madras Society, the Anglo-Indian and Eurasian Association for the North-West Provinces is calling for candidates among Anglo-Indians and Eurasians for the corps d'élite about to be formed under the auspices of Mr. Rowlandson at Madras.

The Municipal Council, Ootacamund, has applied to Government for a loan of 43,000 rs. for the special work of piping the Dodabetta or South water-supply system of Ootacamund. It is proposed to repay the loan in twenty instalments in twenty years.

Acting on a suggestion of the Government of India, the Madras Government has provided a clause in the rules for grant of loans under the Land Improvement Loans Act for cases where individuals who fail to carry out the conditions of the loan from causes beyond their control may be granted a remission of the whole or part of the loan made to them.

A Madras paper is glad to learn that the Government of India has again sanctioned the continuance of the office of Sheriff of Madras for one year, pending the final decision of the Supreme Government on the matter. When communicating with the Government of India on this subject the Madras Government forwarded the opinion expressed by the Judges of the local High Court that there did not seem to be sufficient reason to alter the existing system. Mr. Ranganadha Moodellair has been appointed Sheriff.

The Maharaja of Mysore, the British Resident, the Dewan, and other recent visitors to the Keddahs, had returned to Bangalore after a week spent in the forest, and though only a small herd of fourteen elephants were captured the party enjoyed themselves greatly, with charming weather and comfortable arrangements. The herd included two good tuskers and some females; also two tiny calves.

The estimated amount required for famine relief in Madras during 1891-2 is about 2,15,000 rs., of which 40,000 rs. is to be allotted for gratuitous relief. Should the season continue favourable in North Arcot and Chingleput, the amount, it is expected, could be reduced to two lacs of rupees. But, on the other hand, the season is at present very critical in Ganjam, Kurnool, Anantapore, and Bellary. The position may be improved by an early fall of rain, which may avert any serious distress, and obviate the necessity for opening relief works; should the rains fail, the consequences will be deplorable, and will necessitate the expenditure of a large amount for relief of distress. The estimate will then be greatly exceeded.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Nov. 28.

The Governor's Tour.—His Excellency the Governor of Bombay started, in company with Sir Frederick Roberts, Sir George White, and several other officers, by special train early on Nov. 26 to visit Khojak and Chaman. They stopped a short time at Karur Karez, where the Commander-in-Chief inspected the 40th Pathan Regiment, a corps being locally recruited; also at Shelabagh, the entrance to the tunnel, where two companies of the 4th Rifles, under Colonel Grant, are quartered. Chaman was reached about 12.30, and here the party rode round the barracks and the Sind Horse lines, returning to the station for lunch, after which the Governor made a short speech to propose the healths of Mr. Rose and others who had successfully carried out the engineering difficulties. On returning the party reached Quetta at 7 P.M. On Nov. 27 Lord Harris would witness a parade of the garrison by the Commander-in-Chief. There would be a dinner-party at night at the Residency, followed by a ball given by the Durham Light Infantry.

A Gazette Extraordinary announces that the administration of the Bombay Presidency will, in H.H. the Governor's absence, be conducted by the remaining members of Government.

King Theebaw's Jewels.—Before Mr. Richardson, third presidency magistrate, on Nov. 27, Sirdar Abdool Ali, superintendent of the Detective Police, charged a Mahomedan piece-goods merchant, named Hajee Jan Mahomed Hajee Mahomed, having his shop at Chukla, with being in possession of a large ruby, worth about 2 lacs of rupees, and also four emeralds of considerable value. The ruby and the four emeralds were valued by the accused at 91,000 rs. collectively. From what information the police are in possession of, says the Times of India, the valuable gems are believed to have been stolen property, or to have been fraudulently obtained from Theebaw, ex-King of Burma, now interned at Rutnagherry. After the inspector's evidence the case was adjourned, pending receipt of news from Rutnagherry, &c., the accused being in the meantime enlarged on bail in his own recognisances of 20,000 rs., and a surety for a like amount.

The Oriental Assurance Company.—In the Bombay High Court on Nov. 23, before Mr. Justice Bayley, the case of The Oriental Government Security Life Assurance Society v. D. D. Shroff came up for hearing. The plaintiffs prayed that the defendant may be ordered to deliver over to them Four per Cent. Government paper of the nominal value of 245,000 rs. or to pay the value thereof at the rate of the day (April 27, 1891, the date of the filing of the plaint) viz. 2,58,475 rs.; that he may be ordered to pay the sum of 54,376-10-4 rs., and interest thereon at 9 per cent. from April 19, 1891, &c. Mr. Starling, with Mr. Basil Scott, instructed by Messrs. Ardasir, Hormusjee, and Dinshaw, appeared for the plaintiffs; but there was no appearance for the defendant, who is supposed to have gone to China. He had, however, filed a written statement on Aug. 24, 1891, prior to the institution of the criminal proceedings against him. The plaintiffs stated that the defendant had since the formation of the company, in 1874, been the assistant-manager thereof, and as such was in charge of the cash and securities which remained in the office. It was his duty to invest the surplus cash in Government paper, and to send paper, representing about 8 per cent. of the premia, to the official trustee, who was custodian of such paper for the company. According to the books kept by the defendant, there was on April 19, 1891, in the defendant's hands, Government Four per Cent. paper of the nominal value of 2,45,000 rs., and cash to the amount of 54,376-10-4 rs. On April 16, 1891, the defendant left Bombay, and the paper and the cash which were in his charge were not to be found in the plaintiffs' safe, where they ought to be. The defendant, by his written statement, denied the material allegations of the plaint, and put the plaintiffs to the proof thereof. They were not entitled to the relief claimed, and he submitted that, in any event, the suit should be referred to the Commissioner. He said that the suit had been filed with the object of hampering and prejudicing him in his defence in the criminal proceedings taken against him by the company. Mr. Starling, having read the plaint and the written statement, said he need not enter into the details of the claim made against the defendant, with which his lordship was acquainted, and he, therefore, called evidence for the plaintiffs. Jamsetjee Muncherjee Billimoria, who was employed under the defendant in the office of the company, was the first witness called, and gave evidence similar to that given by him at the trial of the defendant at the last September Sessions. He said the premium on the Government paper for 2,45,000 rs. at the rate of the day was 13,934-6-0 rs. Mr. Starling said there was no appearance for the defendant, and he need call no further evidence. His lordship gave a decree for the plaintiffs for 3,06,356-9-10 rs., with interest at 6 per cent. from April 28, 1891, costs, and further interest on the judgment.

BURMA.

DIFFICULTIES ON THE CHINESE FRONTIER.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue from the correspondent of the Times at Rangoon :—

DEC. 6.—There is no material change in the condition of the distressed districts in Upper Burma. The crop prospects in Lower Burma continue to be good. Gloomy accounts are received from Siam as to the prospects of the rice harvest there.

Sir A. Mackenzie leaves Rangoon to-morrow on a tour of inspection in Akyab and along the Arracan coast.

The local Government is engaged in considering proposals made by the Government of India for a new provincial contract, which will regulate the finances of the Lower Province for the next five years. The Government of India has proposed sums for expenditure on public works which are wholly inadequate to the wants of the province. The local Government at present withholds detailed information, but it is understood that the supreme Government seeks to reduce the amount allowed for public works by nine lacs yearly, and also wishes to reduce the expenditure under other heads. These proposals are stoutly resisted by the local Government. The action of the Government of India appears to be unjustifiable in the face of the large surplus which the Lower Province yields even under existing arrangements. Last year the surplus revenue of Lower Burma amounted to nearly 19 lacs. In Upper Burma, which still shows a considerable deficit, there is no provincial contract, and finances are regulated by the annual Budget. More liberal expenditure on public works, and especially on railways, is urgently required in Upper Burma if its resources are to be developed. The total of the present annual grant for expenditure on railways in Burma is 50 lacs. The whole of this amount is required for the Moo Valley line, which, under the present system of expenditure, will not be completed until 1896.

Unless the grant for railways is increased, any extension of the railway to the Shan States must be adjourned until after 1896. A railway to the Shan plateau would unquestionably result in a great development of trade with China, and would also render available a sanatorium for the troops. Irrigation works are also greatly wanted in the upper provinces, and in most districts there are neither court-houses nor police quarters.

DEC. 8.—The Chinese have fired blank shots at one of the posts recently established on the Nampoung stream, and are strengthening their own stockade on the other side of the river. A reinforcement of fifty men of the Devonshire Regiment and forty mounted infantry has been despatched from Bhamo to the Nampoung.

DEC. 9.—The difficulties with the Chinese on the Bhamo frontier have not yet terminated. The Chinese commander on the east of the Nampoung river has informed the Deputy Commissioner at Bhamo that he has been instructed to reoccupy the positions on the west bank of the river, from which the Chinese troops recently withdrew. The Chinese commander has also requested the Deputy Commissioner to withdraw the British post recently established on the Nampoung river. The Deputy Commissioner has been instructed to reply, declining to withdraw the post, which has been reinforced, as stated in my telegram yesterday. He has also been urged to do his utmost to avoid a collision with the Chinese. The position of affairs on the Bhamo frontier is, however, undoubtedly critical, as a collision with the Chinese troops or irregulars may at any moment occur.

DEC. 10.—The local Government has issued a note referring to the occurrences on the Nampoung river, expressing disbelief in the current report that the Chinese had fired blank shots at our post at Nampoung. The note states that, owing to the visit of Sir J. Dormer to Bhamo, and the recent establishment of a post at Nampoung, some alarm was caused among the common people on the frontier, who believed that an invasion of China was intended. It is added that the correspondence between the Wun of Momein and the Deputy Commissioner at Bhamo as to the withdrawal of our post at Nampoung has been couched in friendly terms. The Wun has been informed that the Chinese Government at Peking had been apprised of our intention to establish the post.

DEC. 13.—The latest reports from Bhamo state that everything is quiet on the Nampoung river.

There has been no material change in the general condition of the distressed districts in Upper Burma. In the Lower Chindwin district the distress has become more acute. In the Ayadaw township 3,300 persons are receiving relief, and the Deputy Commissioner reports that they will require relief for eight months. There is a complete failure of the crops in Thayetmyo. For Lower Burma the official forecast of the coming crop estimates that 1,200,000 tons of rice will be available for export. This includes the quantity required by Upper Burma. The mercantile opinion appears to be that the Government forecast underestimates the quantity available for export, which will probably reach the total which was exported during the present year—namely, about 1,300,000 tons. This year Upper Burma took about 80,000 tons of rice. Of the next crop the Upper Province will require a considerably larger quantity.

The Wuntho Tsawbwa is still hovering about the northern portion of his former territory.

Sir James Dormer, with his staff, will arrive in Rangoon on the 18th inst. on the completion of his tour of inspection in Upper Burma.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

ENTERIC FEVER still lingers in Meerut. Out of eighteen cases in hospital three have proved fatal.

MORE GHILZAI REFUGEES arrived at Peshawur from Cabul recently, and go to swell the Afghan refugee colony at Rawalpindi.

THE KHAN OF HANGU, who was suspected of complicity with the eldest son in stirring up troubles on the Kohat frontier, and misappropriating fines, and has been under strict police surveillance at Lahore, has now been released therefrom, and allowed to go where he likes. His eldest son is still in the Lahore Central Gaol.

ORES FROM THE KULU LODS of silver-lead, which have recently been submitted to Australian experts, have been pronounced by them to be equal in value and richness to those from the Tasmanian silver-mines, and the "Broken Hill" silver mine in New Zealand. They further expressed an opinion that the lodes from which these samples were taken would increase greatly in richness for gold and silver as they were sunk upon.

POORUN SINGH, the ex-clerk of the Military Accounts Office who was prosecuted and sentenced by the Cantonment Magistrate at Rawul Pindi to two years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of 500 rs. for stealing some official documents, appealed to the Sessions Court, and the decision of the Lower Court has been set aside and the man acquitted.

IN ANSWER to an application by Babus Sita Ram and Brijmohar Das, two Benares residents, whose houses were plundered in the late riots, praying for compensation for damages estimated at 25,000 rs., His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor has requested that they may be informed that, while he sympathises with them in their losses, he regrets he is unable to sanction an assignment of the public revenues in compensation.

THERE HAS BEEN serious trouble in the Kuram Valley, where the Turi tribesmen have been assailed from two quarters. In the Upper Kuram they were attacked by Jajis and Mungals, but managed to repel them. In the Lower Kuram the notorious outlaw Chikai, with a contingent of Khostwals, made a raid and inflicted considerable damage, the Turis being unable to hold their own against him. It is believed, however, that Chikai has now only a small force with him, the Khost tribesmen having left with their loot.

A MEETING OF THE CREDITORS of the Himalaya Bank, Limited, in liquidation, convened by order of the District Judge of Saharanpore, dated Aug. 21, for the purpose of ascertaining the wishes of the creditors as to the method of liquidation, was held on Nov. 21 in the District Court-house at Dehra Dun. Mr. C. W. Hope was chairman. He requested all present who were not creditors to withdraw. This was objected to by Colonel Ouseley and Mr. Quarry, but the objection was overruled by the chairman, with the concurrence of the meeting. There were present twenty-three creditors in person and by proxy 118, representing altogether a credit value of over 13 lacs. The chairman, having explained the objects of the meeting, invited proposals. Colonel Ouseley, speaking at great length, complained that the creditors had no means of forming an opinion, as he had been forbidden to communicate to the press what he had discovered from inspection of the bank's books. He concluded :—"I propose that the liquidation be conducted voluntarily—that is, by shareholders themselves, and not by the Court." The motion not being seconded collapsed. Mr. W. J. Smith, as attorney representing Lyell and Company of Allahabad, proposed, and General Parrott seconded, that the liquidation be conducted by the Alliance Bank, subject to the High Court, not the District Court. Mr. T. T. Forbes, barrister, proposed as an amendment that the liquidation be conducted by the Alliance Bank and the District Court. Mr. Smith, with the consent of General Parrott and the chairman, withdrew his motion. Mr. Forbes's amendment was then put as a motion, and carried unanimously, Colonel Ouseley only dissenting on behalf of himself and his proxies, without demanding a poll.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

A TELEGRAM from Uzun-ada on the Caspian, dated December 9 (new style), states that General Kuropatkin, the Governor-General of the Trans-Caspian territory, had arrived there, accompanied by the Director of the Railway, to superintend the construction of the new landing stages, which are required, it is said, by the exigencies of the traffic.

The Anglo-Indian papers have reported the arrival in India, from the Pamirs, of the Russian Prince Galitsin. He was hospitably received by the Governor-General, and it was stated last week that he would attend the Camp of Exercise at Aligarh. The Journal de St. Petersburg, however, publishes a telegram, dated Namangan, December 9, which states that "Prince Golitsyne, who has been shooting on the Pamir, has arrived at Taskend."

THE PAMIR QUESTION.

The St. Petersburg Herald has made a summary of the English and Russian accounts of the Pamir dispute, as taken from the Turkestan Vedomosti and the Times of India, and it concludes that "it appears clear from both reports that Russia in the Pamir considers herself the inheritor of the rights of Khokand (now the Russian province of Fergana) over all the mountainous regions which were formerly in any way dependent on the Khanate in question." This, says the correspondent of the Times at St. Petersburg, was known before, but the Herald, which is a German journal published in the Russian capital, further says that neither Afghanistan or China thinks for a moment of making any protest as regards the claims or action of Russia, and, therefore, the so-called Pamir question, which has been worked up by officious British agents, in reality does not exist.

The Odessa correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs :—The construction of the new railway which is to bring Persia into direct communication with the Transcaucasian system will, I am credibly informed, be commenced almost immediately. The starting-point will be from Adjicabula to the south-west of Baku, and the route will thence traverse the Mougan Steppe, touching at Beliasouvar and Lenkoran, and strike the Persian frontier at Astara. M. Radzyg, chief engineer of the Russian Crown railways, who has been charged with the necessary surveys, reports that the construction of the new line presents no particular physical difficulties or obstructions. In fact, the whole route to be traversed lies through a comparatively flat country, and there will be very little embankment work needed. Several rivers have to be bridged, but with the exception of one they may be spanned by medium-sized structures. Besides the new railway, which comes within the category of what are officially termed "strategic lines," a macadamised road is to be made simultaneously with the construction of the new line between Lenkoran and Ardabil in Persia, a place situated a little to the south of the Peak of Savalan. This highway will traverse a magnificent forest rich in the better kinds of constructive timber, a commodity the want of which is very sorely felt at Lenkoran. The country is also rich in various kinds of valuable minerals, whose exploitation will receive an immediate impetus from the easy means of transport now about to be abolished.

AFFAIRS IN PERSIA.

The following telegram, dated Teheran, Dec. 14, has been received through Reuter's Agency :—The opposition to the Tobacco Régie has become so strong, in spite of the efforts of the authorities to suppress it, that the opinion now prevails that the corporation will not be able to continue operations. Various meetings have been held, with the object of inducing the mollahs to give way, but without result. The priests declare that they will only countenance the corporation as a trading company and without a monopoly. Discussions are therefore now taking place on the question of compensation to be paid to the corporation for the loss of their monopoly, and it has been proposed to raise the requisite sum by a tax on tobacco, some native merchants guaranteeing payment in instalments extending over five years. Meanwhile the interdiction laid by the mollahs upon smoking is maintained.

Professor Vambéry, who is always en evidence when Russia is in question, writes to the Times suggesting that the opposition to the Tobacco Régie in Persia is due to Russian intrigue. The Times correspondent at Teheran telegraphed on Dec. 8 :—The chief priest at Kerbela has laid an interdiction upon smoking, and has ordered the people to break their pipes. The Shah acts with great firmness, and has exiled the Malek el Tojar, the chief merchant of Teheran, on account of his opposition to the Régie. There is a deadweight of opposition to the tobacco monopoly which it is difficult to overcome at present, but it is hoped that it is only temporary.

A long account of the results of the mission confided to M. Jacques Morgan, who has returned from an exploration of Northern Persia, appears (Reuter's Paris correspondent says) in the Matin. M. Morgan, who left Paris in September 1889, travelled from Atrek to Arave along the southern shores of the Caspian Sea. He then passed through Aderbeidjan, Persian Kurdistan, from Ourniak to Kirmancha, and finally explored Luristan and Arabistan. The voyage lasted twenty-six months, and the distance travelled on horseback was about 12,400 miles. His wife accompanied him throughout, notwithstanding the great hardships encountered and the frequent hostility of tribes. The documents brought back are voluminous, including several geographical and archaeological maps, upwards of 600 photographic negatives, numerous plans and drawings of monuments, remarkable collections in natural history, and about thirty vocabularies of the countries traversed.

The Times of India publishes the following notes from a correspondent in the Persian Gulf :—

Captain Somerset, Commander of the s.s. Blosse Lynch, Tigris and Euphrates Steam Navigation Company, died suddenly on board his ship at Bussorah on Oct. 26, at the early age of 36 years. The Blosse will now be commanded by Mr. H. E. Hanslow, late chief officer of the Co.'s s.s. Khalifah.

His Excellency Nizan-a-Sultan, Governor of Bushire, was at Bunder Abbas on Nov. 11. He left his seat of government about a month ago to collect the revenues of Southern Persia. He will leave in a few days for Hormuz and Jask; on returning to Bunder Abbas, he will likely remain all December. His Excellency is travelling about in the Persian gunboat Persopolis, Commander Pathe.

Bunder Abbas is, I hear, very much in need of telegraphic communication on account of the large business existing there. Without entering into details, it may be estimated that the native merchants alone do a business to the extent of about 30 lacs annually. To send telegrams they have to fall back on Jask. If the matter is taken in hand, it would entail very little expense, as by tapping the cable between Jask and Bushire, a line could be run into the port. As regards remuneration to the telegraph company, there is every probability of them earning sufficient to cover the outlay for the present, with every chance of improvement after a certain lapse of time.

Messrs. Hotz and Sons, of London and Bussorah, have established a branch of their business there, and are importing a large amount of piece-goods, &c. Their opinion on the matter may be of service.

According to a telegram from Teheran, the Amir Nizam has been appointed Governor of Kurdistan and Kermanshah.

AFGHANISTAN.

We take the following items from the Civil and Military Gazette :—A rumour comes from Cabul that a serious rising against the Ameer's authority had occurred in the Manghal country.

The Ameer was expected on Nov. 6 to leave shortly for Paghman, where the hill-tops were already snow-covered.

With regard to the cholera epidemic which, in spite of the Ameer's precautions, reached Cabul from Jellalabad about Nov. 1, about twenty cases and ten deaths occurred up to Nov. 6.

Up to November 8 no reduction whatever had been made in the Ameer's taxation of British Indian trade. The buying price of green tea, for instance, was from 12 rs. to 16 rs. a seer, the selling price 24 rs. Cabuli per seer; and even if the suggestion that it should be assessed at 30 rs. instead of 72 rs., had been carried out, it would still have been overtaxed; and while the octroi duties, State brokerage, and other local duties remained unchanged, no material improvement would have been effected.

As another result of the high taxation of the Ameer of Cabul upon trade, it may be stated that the Cabul dry fruits, such as pomegranates, almonds, pista (pistachios), kishmish (raisins), &c., which used to be imported into India annually in large quantities as early as October, have not yet appeared in the Indian bazaars: nor at present does there seem to be any hope of their early arrival.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE Chinese Legation at Paris has received the following official despatch regarding the outbreak of disturbances in Mongolia :—

On the night of Nov. 18 two secret societies, composed of emigrants from China proper, proceeded to Mongolia, where they inaugurated an insurrection against foreigners and Christians. These societies bear the name of Tsintan and Tsaili respectively. The centre of the revolt is the district of Chayoyang, in the province of Jehol. According to the latest estimates, 300 to 500 Chinese Christians, including several native priests, as well as a Mongolian Prince, and some unconverted natives, were massacred. Several churches were pillaged and burned, especially in the towns of Tsien-Tchang and Ping-Tsuen. The Emperor ordered the Tsung-li-Yamén to telegraph to the Governor-General of the Province and to the Tartar commanders in Manchuria to despatch all the troops at their disposal to the scene of the insurrection. The first engagement took place on Nov. 25, when the rebels were defeated.

A later telegram received by the Legation in Paris, and dated Pekin, Dec. 7, says :—"The Imperial troops, under the command of General Jeh, have gained a complete victory over the rebels in the district of Tsien-Tchang, after two days' fighting, viz., on Nov. 28 and 29. The defeat of the insurgents in the districts of Tsien-Tchang and Ping-Tsuen is final. According to the latest despatches from the front, the Imperial troops on Nov. 29 were marching on the district of Chao-Yang, which is in the occupation of the rebels. In other districts the Imperial troops have inflicted several defeats on the rebels on the borders of Manchuria. The region where disaffection prevails being surrounded on all sides, the complete dispersal of the insurgents is only a question of time."

Telegraphing from Pekin on Dec. 9, Reuter's agent states :—

"The movement which was planned by the Chinese General with the object of surrounding the rebels was not effected, owing to considerable delay having occurred in concerting with the Mongolian tribes in the north. Consequently, after severe fighting, in which the Imperial troops were victorious, the rebels dispersed."

A Times correspondent, telegraphing from Singapore, on Dec. 9, says :—

"News received to-night from Tientsin gives an account of the recent fighting. A great slaughter of the insurgents is reported. Some Christians have been massacred near Pakouscive by banditti, and an undisciplined mob. The military commander, who connived at the massacres, has committed suicide. A magistrate who was also implicated, has been arrested and committed for trial."

The following telegram, dated Dec. 13, received through Dalziel's agency at Shanghai, appears to refer to operations in Manchuria proper :—Advices from Neuchwang report that General Tsao has defeated a body of 5,000 rebels, and captured their leader, a Lama priest. The rebels announce that their intention is to restore the Ming dynasty.

According to the Standard, the latest official information received in Paris from Shanghai is to the effect that the disturbances in the Mongolian Provinces have been suppressed. Forty-two rebels guilty of murdering Christians have been executed at Pakcu. A chief who had shown complete indifference in the presence of the massacres committed suicide, poisoning himself after he had been severely blamed by the authorities. The rebels of the two provinces have been routed in several encounters with the Imperial troops.

A Singapore telegram states that Mr. Parker, of the London Mission, at Chao-Yang, who was reported to be missing, has arrived at Tientsin. He confirms the news of the decisive defeat of the insurgents on Nov. 28 and the occupation of Chao-Yang by the Imperial troops. He describes the whole region to the north-east of the Great Wall as unsettled.

The Dibats has learned from a sure source that the chiefs of the insurrectionary movement in China are in communication with influential families of Tonquin, and especially with the members of the former reigning family of Annam.

The following telegram has been received at the Foreign Office, London, from her Majesty's Consul General at Shanghai. No date is given :—

"I have received satisfactory reports from the British Consulates at Newchwang and Tientsin stating that the rebel forces have been completely dispersed. There seems, unfortunately, reason to believe that the report of massacre of Christians is correct; but the statement as to outrages upon women is not confirmed."

With regard to the massacres of Christians by the insurgents in Mongolia, the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Chronicle telegraphing on Dec. 5 says:—For some time there prevailed a veritable reign of terror, or carnival of blood. Even the innocent occupants of the orphanages established by the missionaries were not spared. Several of these institutions were attacked by the merciless horde. The children and their native guardians were given no opportunity or option of escape. The buildings were fired, followed in nearly every case by an awful holocaust. Terrible scenes were witnessed on the roads along which the adult Christians fled in terror from the ruthless mobs. Many of the poor creatures fell by the way of exhaustion, and died where they fell. The course of their flight was still marked only last week by corpses from which the flesh had been partly devoured by pariah dogs.

The congregation of the Mongolian missions at Scheut has received a telegram from Taku confirming the news of the persecutions in that district. The despatch adds that 500 Christians were massacred, but that all the Europeans were saved.

Telegraphing from Singapore, Dec. 5, a Times correspondent says:—Tientsin telegrams report that the Emperor of China has begun the study of English arithmetic under two Manchu students of the Tungwen Kwan College.

The riots in the north were wantonly provoked by an outrage on the part of some cavalry officers on the family of a wealthy man of Therayang, who was known to be intimate with the leader of banditti.

The French Minister, M. Lemaire, is renewing his demands on the Peking Government for commercial contracts for railway material, and is using minatory language towards the Government, intimating that relations cannot go smoothly unless his demands are conceded. The Tsung-li-Yamen is urging Li Hung Chang to pacify the French Minister.

According to a later telegram from Singapore, news has been received there that on December 4 a severe gale occurred at Hong Kong, and a very large number of Chinese craft were destroyed. Hundreds of Chinese are reported to have been drowned. Among European shipping there was but little damage.

A telegram received in Paris from Shanghai announces that the Chinese Government has paid indemnities, amounting in all to 600,000 taels, to the sufferers in the recent riots in Wuhu.

A Reuter telegram, dated San Francisco, Dec. 6, says:—According to mail advices from Yokohama, dated Nov. 10, further particulars of the recent earthquake continued to reach there. The director of the Gifu Observatory had been examining the district where the disturbance was most severely felt. Some years ago, he reported, there appeared in the ground holes to which no bottom could be found, and which were believed to communicate with immense cavities below. The director now thinks that the recent earthquake was caused by the Gifu mountain slipping into these caverns. In the district of Onno an immense landslide occurred, damming the river. A lake was consequently forming, which was already 50 feet deep. The earthquake still continued on Nov. 9, no fewer than 730 shocks being felt during the twenty hours preceding the despatch of the intelligence. There was sufficient food in the regions affected by the earthquake to prevent actual starvation, but over 400,000 persons were homeless and almost without clothing. As the winter approached the suffering would consequently be great.

The North China Herald gives a translation of an inflammatory document which was being circulated in the province of Hunan. This anti-foreign manifesto was alluded to in a recent telegram from Shanghai and was said to contain the words "let us banish the families of the guilty on the ships of the American fleet. Germany comes flying to our aid." Nothing of the kind appears in the translation. Its general purport may be gathered from the following extracts:—

Should any person be found who does not sacrifice to the spirit of Confucius, and to the spirit tablets of his own ancestors, he is one who has been bewitched by the spies of the goat (foreign) devils. He is to be compelled to forsake his depraved heresy and return to the right way. Should he dare disobey the whole clan shall take the entire family of the pig-goat-devil, young and old, male and female, and drive them out of the place.

In the case of travellers coming to the province as traders, doctors, fortune tellers, &c., it is difficult to secure that among them there may not be pig-goat-devils. They shall therefore be subjected everywhere throughout the province to the most rigorous search. They must be asked if they worship Jesus or not. If their reply is evasive and prevaricating, let all unite and drive them out.

It is reported that recently among the officials, both civil and military, there are some who have renounced allegiance to the most holy teacher Confucius and the Emperors of the Great Dynasty, and have submitted themselves to the pig-goat-devil countries. The sin and guilt of these fellows being full, they will find it difficult to escape the law of the land or the chastisement of Heaven.

Should the pig-goat-devils (foreigners) dare to show any desire to oppress the country, and from any cause create trouble, then the moment the Emperor's command to chastise and exterminate them is received, the clan elders of the entire province will themselves lead their able-bodied men to call for troops.

Whether there be trouble or not, we agree that we will not allow the burning of churches and chapels, because, first, it might lead to the destruction of adjoining native houses, and, secondly, because they ought to be handed over to the authorities, to be sold for the benefit of the revenue. Besides, the burning of houses is in itself a lamentable thing.

As already reported by telegram, Charles Henry Allen Welch Mason was charged on Oct. 29, before Chief Justice Hannen, at Shanghai, with having three packages of dynamite in his possession without a lawful object. The prisoner, who pleaded guilty, read a remarkable statement, in the course of which he said:—"In June last there were several riots, and they were supposed to be the beginnings of a rebellion. I shared the common curiosity on the matter, and decided to try and find out all about it. I pretended to join the movement. I engaged to get arms and men, and join operations at Chinkiang. I was told certain outlines of a plot to seize Chinkiang. I discussed the details with Mr. Croskey over the dinner table. We together, as a suppositious case, amused ourselves by perfecting a theoretical plot and put down names as they suggested themselves. We neither of us intended to take action. I carried on the matter with every semblance of reality, in order to deceive any real conspirators into a belief of my earnestness. I was very reckless of consequences, being heartily tired of four years' monotony at an outpost. At the same time I was unaware then of a law against carrying dynamite, and the utmost danger I foresaw was dismissal from the Customs, than which at the time I could imagine no greater misfortune. I engaged to pay all expenses myself, the money being deposited at Chinkiang to be handed me on returning with the contract fulfilled. As the party I was dealing with still mistrusted me, it was arranged that I should carry contraband in my luggage as a guarantee of good faith. Dynamite was fixed on. On delivery at Chinkiang I believed it would be thrown into the river or disposed of into lawful channels. I intended to inform the British Government of any possible danger to foreign concessions. I volunteered full information of the plot to the local Chinese official at the request of the Commissioner of Customs. At Hong Kong I likewise acted so as to deceive any member of the conspiracy who might be watching me. I got the first stranger out of work I met, the witness Toussaint, to go about pretending to raise men. I did not trouble to see any of the men, to pay them personally or to arrange about their passage. If I pleaded not guilty I should have to introduce names of Chinamen. My so doing might possibly result in their execution. As it is, I prefer that one person should suffer who has the advantage of a just and enlightened Court. I have not recovered and have no prospect of recovering the money advanced by me. A large part of it was borrowed. I therefore find myself ruined in pocket, my position lost, four years' study of the language thrown away, and with no chance of trying to earn my living in this country, where I have a slight qualification, as this affair will have rendered it necessary for me to get out of the country. I have been in prison several weeks. I therefore beg your lordship to deal leniently with me."

The Chief Justice in passing sentence said:—No doubt this is not as serious a matter as it might have been. No doubt there is in it almost a childishness which reduces the gravity of the offence; but at the same time it is so grave in all its circumstances that it would be impossible for me to pass a nominal sentence. I do not forget that the charge is the carrying of dynamite, and I agree with the Crown Advocate that while that is the charge all the surrounding circumstances must be taken into consideration. It might be a very light offence—it might be a very grave one. This I conceive to be between the two. I cannot under all the circumstances pronounce a less sentence than one of nine months' imprisonment, and I also include in the sentence that you find two sureties of 2,500 dols. each for your good behaviour from the expiry of your sentence. If you do not find them you will have to be deported.

The Emperor of China, on the recommendation of Li Hung-Chang, has conferred the Order of the Double Dragon on Mr. C. W. Kinder, the well-known engineer in charge of the Chinese railways in the North, as a recognition of his services in connection with the railway and mining interests of the country.

A correspondent at Tientsin, writing on Oct. 16, reports the departure of the Russian Prince Vassrinsky and suite for Hankow. From there the travellers will go overland, through Yunnan, to Tonquin, Annam, and Siam, and thence to India, Persia, &c., to St. Petersburg.

The Singapore Free Press (Nov. 10) reports the return of Dr. Jagor, the eminent German anthropologist, from a prolonged tour in the Archipelago and Sumatra.

Captain Devrez, of the French Army Staff of Indo-China has published a pamphlet entitled "Les Grandes Voies Commerciales du Tonkin." Captain Devrez devotes considerable attention to the trade routes of Burma and Siam, and also to the Yang-tse route. His main object is to show the great superiority of the routes of Tonquin for communication with Yunnan and Kwangsi.

Recent papers from the East report an extraordinary condition of affairs at the Russian town of Vladivostock, on the shores of the Pacific, in Eastern Siberia. It is said that 14 convicts employed in the new Trans-Siberian railroad succeeded in making their escape from the guards, and the only means they have of providing themselves with private clothes is by a succession of murders. At the date of the report they had already made five victims—three harmless occupants of a farmhouse, one French naval officer belonging to the squadron that was visiting the port, and a Russian bandmaster. The last of these was murdered as he was returning from the funeral of the French officer. There was not a revolver for sale in Vladivostock, and those who had these arms kept them at hand ready for immediate use as they sat in their houses. It is described as worse than if a menagerie of wild animals had broken loose at Vladivostock, for these miserable human wild beasts must have clothes, and to get them they must murder those who are wearing the clothes. If anyone were to try to save his own life by giving them clothes, he would fall into the clutches of the Russian police as an accomplice.

LONDON: TUESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1891.

THE RE-OPENING OF THE UNCOVENANTED QUESTION IN INDIA.

IF the abstract telegraphed home by the Times correspondent at Calcutta of the Resolution which has at last been issued by the Indian Government on the Uncovenanted Service case be accurate, we can only say that it is a gross breach of faith with the Service and a cynical defiance of public opinion. It has been received by those who took the lead in advocating the cause in this country with surprise and indignation. They are not likely to allow an honourable understanding that both sides should accept the decisions of a Select Committee to be deliberately and wantonly broken. The Service will of course consider itself released by this action of the Government from any obligation to accept as final the recommendations of the arbitrators. For it was virtually an arbitration that was agreed to by the SECRETARY OF STATE; and the report is not to be treated like that of an ordinary Committee of inquiry by the House of Commons, as to which the Government is free to reject or accept any or all of the recommendations.

When the report of the Committee was made public in August last year there was grave disappointment among the members of the Service in India. On several matters which were of great importance to influential classes in the Service no pronouncement had been made, while in relation to other points the report did not go so far as was expected. The feeling of disappointment was deep and general, and found vent in the utterances of the Simla Committee; but the general body of members of the Service, believing that the Government would frankly adopt the resolutions which had been settled between the Under-Secretary of State, as representative of the Indian Government on the Select Committee, and those of its members who sympathised with the Service, took the view that they were bound by the decision of the arbitrators to whom they had agreed to refer their grievances, and that they would loyally accept that decision as a final settlement of their disputes with the Government. We then urged the Service to be content with a fulfilment of the Select Committee's recommendations and pointed out that MR. KING and others who had advocated their cause felt themselves constrained by an honourable understanding to abide by the result of the reference. On the other hand we stated that we looked to the Secretary of State to take care that the Indian Government should carry out in a generous and loyal spirit the recommendations of the Report, and respect the declarations explicitly made to the Select Committee by SIR JOHN GORST on behalf of his chief. So far as can be judged from the brief telegraphic abstract in the Times, the Resolution of the Indian Government ignores SIR JOHN GORST's most important declaration—namely that relating to the abandonment by the Secretary of State of any wish to apply the well-known rule in the Civil Service Code in such a manner as to alter, by an ex post facto application of new rules, the acquired rights of Civil Servants under regulations existing when they joined the Service or were gazetted to higher offices. The Government now, according to the Times telegram, "insists on modifying from time to time as it pleases the rules under which an officer entered the Service." Until the actual text of the Resolution lies before us we cannot judge to what extent this announcement may contravene SIR JOHN GORST's emphatic disclaimer. It may only go so far as to restate the Rule in the Code that the Government reserves the right of altering the regulations, and it may not affect his disclaimer of any intention to apply such alterations to the injury of men whose contract with the Government was expressed in previous rules. If it goes beyond that, a question arises which may well be brought to the serious attention of the House. An official of the Government sits upon a Select Committee, before which witnesses appear, and as one of the chief points of their case against the Indian Government, offer to prove that it has been in the habit of altering the regulations from time to time by new rescripts with an ex post facto application, and that it still arrogates the right to do so. As part of a general case attributing to the Government a long series of acts of injustice towards its servants, this was manifestly a point in the evidence calculated to produce on the minds of an impartial Committee a profound impression. The mouthpiece of the Government on the Committee is alive to the influence which such evidence is likely to exert upon the minds of his fellow-committeemen. He repudiates the charge and the intention in emphatic terms, thus managing to exclude a great part of the evidence tendered to prove the point, and, at the same time averting the pronouncement by the Select Committee of a condemnation in terms of the unjust rule. If the Government of India has now virtually discarded SIR JOHN GORST's assurances to his fellow-members, it will be their duty to bring the matter before the House of Commons. The Secretary of State knew of these declarations; he never repudiated them; they purported to be made by his authority. In the demoralisation of English politics we have not yet reached the stage at which the word of a Minister given in his official capacity to the House of Commons is left open to change or retraction. The late Under-Secretary of State is interested in vindicating himself from the charge of having given an undertaking, accepted in good faith by his colleagues, which the Government of India declines to fulfil. MR. KING and the other members of the Committee will not sit quietly under so flagrant a violation of good faith. They must of course take the earliest opportunity of bringing the question before the House of Commons—possibly as a matter of privilege—and if the answer should turn out to be unsatisfactory, they may ask that as the recommendations of the Committee were made under a misunderstanding—to use the mildest word—the whole case must be reopened.

We cannot usefully discuss the other points of the Resolution until we see the text. It appears to have been—on the showing of the Times correspondent—conceived in a spirit of meanness and indifference to public opinion which goes even beyond the past achievements of the Indian Government in dealing with the Uncovenanted Service—and that is saying a great deal. It will revive the discontent which was injuriously affecting the tone and efficiency of one of the most important branches of the Indian administration. Moreover it must excite unfavourable impressions of the capacity of the chief advisers to the Government at Calcutta to conduct the affairs of our Indian Empire. They had an opportunity of binding to them in loyal contentment a great and useful body of hard-working men. They have only sown the seeds of a just dissatisfaction, and they will reap the harvest in a dispirited and demoralised service. On Wednesday night the PRINCE OF WALES addressed to the Civil Servants of the Crown in England, the position of the largest body of whom is analogous to that of the European Uncovenanted officers in India, words expressive of the regard entertained in the highest quarters for that important class on whom fall the duties and responsibilities of administration. Had he been addressing the Indian European Civil Servants—whether Covenanted or Uncovenanted—he might have spoken in terms as appreciative of their work and their prestige. In a memorable speech at Calcutta MR. KING, speaking on behalf of the Service appealed to the Government of India in eloquent and pathetic words to do justice to the great claims of these men, who did its work so well, under conditions so much more onerous than those of the kindred service at Home. If the Government have forgotten that appeal it will be renewed. The agitation will be reopened, and the men may rely on having MR. KING once more at their head.

THE FIGHTING ON THE GILGIT FRONTIER.

It is perhaps only in official circles that the grave significance of the news from Gilgit is fully realised. No one, however, who has watched the situation in Central Asia can fail to see that the present position of affairs is extremely critical. Quite apart from other considerations, it is no small anxiety to know that a British force, fewer in numbers than the escort MR. QUINTON took with him to Manipore, has suffered heavily in an encounter with the enemy, and is cut off for the next three months, at least, from all communications with British India save for the messengers who at rare intervals may succeed in getting over the passes. The Political Agent, COLONEL DURAND, has been severely wounded, and may be compelled to hand over the control of all operations to a junior officer. With no wish to take a gloomy view, we are bound to say that the prospect is far from reassuring. With the force at his disposal—that is to say, with a contingent of Cashmere troops as well as his reinforced escort and two guns of a mountain battery—COLONEL DURAND, it was said, was strong enough not only to hold Gilgit but also to reduce Hunza and Nagar to subjection. But he himself and three other officers were wounded almost as soon as the force entered Hunza territory; while the other casualties number twenty-five wounded and six killed. If, as is supposed, the advancing force consisted of not more than 300 men, this is a heavy loss in proportion to the strength engaged. It is at any rate so heavy that we are bound to take into consideration the consequences that would be entailed should the attempt to bring the chiefs of Hunza and Nagar to their senses prove a failure. The chances of a military disaster, perhaps, would more wisely be ignored, since nothing can be done now to lessen them. The Gilgit force, moreover, although it has met with heavy losses, has nevertheless held its own gallantly, and we prefer not to speculate on what might happen if everything went wrong—if the advancing troops were caught in a trap, if the Cashmere contingent got out of hand, if the tribes to the rear were to rise, and if a variety of other misfortunes should once more upset the Indian Government's programme. But it is only right, indeed it is imperatively necessary, to ask what would be the result if the Political Agent finds it impossible to subdue Hunza and Nagar, and if he is compelled to fall back on Chaprote, if not on Gilgit. The answer is clear. Unless these petty hill States are brought under British influence, they will be brought under Russian influence; and if once the Russians secure a foothold in Kanjut, our line of defence will have been seriously damaged. It is this that makes the situation so unmistakably serious. GENERAL RICHARD STRACHEV, who marvelled that anyone could set any value on the Pamirs, will now perceive, perhaps, that undisputed access to the Great and Little Pamirs will also give the Russians access to Kanjut, where a couple of officers of the GROMBCHEVSKY or IANOFF type might now do us almost irreparable mischief without anything been known of it till the mischief had been done.

But it is time we gave a more detailed account of the situation. The events which led to the re-establishment of a British Political Agency at Gilgit in 1889 are already known to our readers. Mainly in view of the hostile attitude of the chiefs of Hunza and Nagar—Hunza territory is known as Kanjut—the Political Agent's escort has lately been reinforced; and at the same time steps were taken to strengthen the Cashmere garrison in Gilgit. Kanjut is nominally a dependency of Cashmere, but the chiefs have an immense idea of their own importance; while owing to the inaccessibility of their country, it is exceedingly difficult to bring them to a sense of their subordination. For miles, the road from Gilgit to Hunza runs along the side of a precipice, resting in parts on wooden supports. The Indian Government decided that an effort must be made, this cold weather, to reduce the Kanjutis to subjection; it being evident that unless the authority of Cashmere could be asserted in this quarter, the Russians would very quickly forestall us. The orders given to COLONEL ALGERNON DURAND, when he came to India to confer with the VICEROY in September last, were that a good mountain road should be made as far as Chalt, which commands a narrow valley leading to Hunza; and it seems also to have been resolved—though this point is not quite clear—that SAFTAR ALI, the Chief of Hunza, should be punished if, as seemed extremely probable, he offered any opposition. The British force now in Gilgit or at the front consists of about 250 men of the 5th Goorkhas, under CAPTAIN A. A. BARRETT; and two 7-pounder guns of the Hazara Mountain Battery, under LIEUTENANT GORTON, R.A. A Gatling-gun, borrowed from the Seaforth Highlanders, was also sent up to Gilgit recently. Some 200 of the Goorkhas and the guns were despatched toward the end of September, and only reached Gilgit just in time, as an early snow-fall threatened to make the road from Cashmere impassable for troops. In addition to the Goorkhas, COLONEL DURAND was able to reckon on the services of three regiments, over 1,500 strong, of the Cashmere Imperial Service troops. Last of all he has at least twelve British officers with him, specially selected for the arduous service on which the little force is now employed. The total number should be sixteen, but it is not certain that all those detailed for this special service reached Gilgit.

Owing to the difficult nature of the country, not more than 300 men can be used in operations beyond Chalt. The bulk of the Cashmere troops have probably been left behind to garrison the forts of Gilgit and Chaprote. The chief of Hunza is said to be able to put 1,500 fighting men in the field; the chief of Nagar, not more than 500. These men are armed with very indifferent matchlocks; but judging from the opposition already met with by COLONEL DURAND, they are making a better stand than was anticipated. For further details we may refer to the information which is extracted elsewhere from the Times of India and the Civil and Military Gazette.

THE Débats professes to have learned from a sure source that the chiefs of the insurrectionary movement in China are in communication with influential families of Tonquin, especially with the members of the former reigning family of Annam. Accounts from Tonquin of late have not been reassuring as to the power of the authorities to maintain order and safety throughout their territory, and possibly they may find that the agitation in China will react somewhat strongly on the discontented elements which they have not as yet been able to suppress. If true, the news indicates how widespread is the movement among the Chinese population which has been stirred up by the secret societies, and increases the interest of the French Government in urging the Government at Peking to take more strenuous measures against the conspirators.

THE SHROFF CASE.

(To the Editor of THE HOMEWARD MAIL.)

SIR,—In your issue of Oct. 26 last you comment strongly on the trial and acquittal of Shroff in Bombay by a jury of whom you say six were Europeans.

As one of the jury, and one of the Europeans, permit me to contradict this statement. Your article suggests that the jury had been influenced, and as the verdict of acquittal was by six against three, at least three of the Europeans (if there had been six) must have voted for the acquittal. However, for the reputation of Europeans in general, and myself in particular, in Bombay, I am glad to say that there were only three Europeans on the jury, the remaining six being Hindoos and Goanese, some of them receiving a salary of not more than 20 rs. (about 17. 7s.) per month.

The Calcutta case which you mention is not analogous to the Shroff case, as Mr. Justice Bayley distinctly stated in his summing up, that it was not necessary, as in the Calcutta case, to fix the exact date of any of the misappropriations. I therefore quite agree that it appears strange how an unbiased jury could arrive at an acquittal. I merely write this correction as your article implies that Europeans in Bombay are not sufficiently like Caesar's wife.—Yours, &c., B.

Bombay, Nov. 20, 1891.

A Chinese Buddhist Missionary is now touring in India. He has travelled from Peking to Mandalay on foot without funds. He passes under the name of Lama Thochin. It is said that for more than a hundred years no Chinese monk has made a religious tour of India.

Our Indian Frontiers.—Dr. G. W. Leitner delivered an address on "The Races, Religions, and Politics of the Pamir Regions," at a meeting held on Dec. 14 at the Westminster Town Hall, under the auspices of the East India Association. General Sir R. Meade presided. Dr. Leitner described the Pamirs as a series of plateaus and valleys, chiefly frequented by shepherds, and bounded on the south by the Hindu Koosh. If the tribes inhabiting these regions could be made to regard us as a strong but distant friend, who in cases of emergency would aid them with counsel, with money to a small extent, and with weapons, it would be enough to keep the whole Indian frontier against any millions of armed Slavs who choose to invade the home of liberty we were trying to plant in India. It was better not to interfere with the frontier tribes. The Chairman said that, whilst he fully appreciated the importance of Dr. Leitner's views respecting a district on which he was almost the only authority, he thought it ought to be borne in mind that we knew nothing of the complications which had led to Colonel Durand's advance from Gilgit. At the same time, he agreed with Dr. Leitner that it was a very great misfortune that war should have broken out, as he thought our policy ought to be to keep on friendly terms with the frontier tribes.

COMMERCIAL.

The Peninsular and Oriental Company.—The fifty-first annual general meeting of the proprietors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company was held on Dec. 10 at the offices, Leadenhall Street. Sir Thomas Sutherland, the chairman, moved the adoption of the report, and in doing so expressed satisfaction at the absence of any hostile criticism either on the part of the proprietors or the public generally, and this he attributed to the clearness of the accounts and the publicity always given to the affairs of the company. The past year had not been a year of unalloyed prosperity for this or any other company. It was accordingly very satisfactory to find that the trade of the company had not fallen off more than had been the case; and though the year 1891 could by no means be compared with the previous one, it must be admitted on the whole to be tolerably satisfactory. Their actual falling off amounted to a little over 80,000/. An interim dividend of two and a half per cent. on the preferred and three and a half on the deferred stock had already been paid, and a further payment was now proposed of two and a half on the former and six and a half on the latter, making it ten per cent. for the year and seven and a half per cent. on the paid up capital of 2,320,000/., and carrying forward over 5,000/. The value of their fleet on the books stood at 117. 10s. 1d. per ton; and, despite the decreased subsidy they were receiving, the opposition they met with, and the crisis they had passed through, their trade was in a healthy state, and he believed that it would still increase. Mr. J. S. Godfrey seconded the motion, which was carried. Sir James Fergusson, having resigned his seat on the board on his appointment as Postmaster-General, Viscount Wolmer, M.P., was elected in his place.

Mercantile Bills	4,91,451	Increase
Cash at Head Office.....	5,17,376	Decrease
Do. at Branches.....	5,39,225	Decrease

The analysis of the above figures shows a decrease of about 17 lacs in the ordinary trade demand, made up as under :—By an increase of over 26½ lacs, minus an increase of over 1½ lacs in "Loans," over 3 lacs in "Accounts of Credits," and about 5 lacs in "Mercantile Bills." The Treasury balance at head office stands reduced by about 6½ lacs and by about 13½ lacs at the branches. The Bank's investments were increased by about 9 lacs. The final result of these changes is a decrease of over 5 lacs in the cash at head office, and over 5½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 4,92,18,993 rs., equal to 58·6 per cent. of the liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 60·4 per cent. last week.

TEA.—Arrivals were again small, only 9,900 packages being offered at the sales on Nov. 19. Of these, 9,800 found buyers at prices which showed a further slight advance for the better grades. Common kinds were unchanged.

JUTE.—A quiet market. Shippers are doing very little in ready lots owing to want of freight, but prices remain quite steady. There is a fair demand for December delivery at 34 rs. to 34·4 rs. for good 1st native marks, and not much desire to sell on the part of balers. Prices of loose jute continue strong.

GUNNIES.—There has been some little inquiry for the U. K., and business is reported in 2½ lbs. A Twills at 26·8 and 26·12. The Cape also has been buying to a small extent 2½ lbs. No. 2 Twills up to 26·8, and 8 lbs. packs at 14·9.

HESSIANS.—A few more wheat-bags were taken for Frisco sailers at 12·12, and sellers now ask higher rates. Inquiries for cloth for New York have not resulted in business.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—There is no improvement to be noticed in the share market. There has been a great dearth of inquiries or buying orders, and consequently the business put through has been limited.

The market is in a state of stagnation, and does not move one way or the other, and this restricts business enormously. On the one hand, holders of stocks do not feel disposed to give way in prices, whilst on the other, the hands of would-be speculators are tied to a great extent by their losses and holdings of gold scrip; and although capital is still seeking employment on private account, all investment stocks are firmly held, and stand mostly at a high premium, so that on all sides circumstances have combined to make the week a particularly poor one. In jute stocks scarcely half a dozen transactions have been reported. In gold shares, the transactions, few as they are, have been confined chiefly to Bengal gold and silver and Sonapets, though Western Bengals, in sympathy with the rise in the former, have advanced in price. Bengal gold and silver are not nearly so strong as they were, and Sonapets have remained quiet, with slightly easier tendency. India General Preference shares have attracted attention for investment, but the Ordinarys appear to have reached their highest for the present at 70 rs. Equitable coals have been done at 165 rs., landing and shipping at 93 rs., Great Easterns at 88 rs. Tarkessur Railways have changed hands at 130 rs. Bank shares are scarce, and 1,000 rs. have been paid for them.

BANK OF BENGAL.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2½ per cent.

BOMBAY, November 27.

Business has, on the whole, remained very quiet, without signs of improvement in the near future; with silver still an uncertain and disturbing factor in both branches of our trade; and with money still abnormally abundant. Wheat was active at enhanced rates for a day or two in the earlier part of the week, but the demand soon subsided; and in seeds only a moderate business has been passing in a steady or quiet market. Beyond the purchase of a few small early parcels of the new crop, which have come to market, exporters have done nothing in cotton, and the mills have been very small buyers of old stuff. The course of exchange has been downward on the whole, and rates are 1-16d. lower for Bank, and 3-32d. for Private Paper than they were. Government Paper has fluctuated materially, but rates are now ½ per cent. higher for Fours than they were. Freights have latterly become weak, and holders of tonnage having lowered their pretensions more business has been done. In imports the wholesale demand for staple manufactures is slack for the time of year, but prices show no material change.

MONEY.—With the Bank's cash balance standing at the close of last week at 360½ lacs, the trifling increase of three-quarters of a lac was shown compared with the figures given in the previous return; and, in other respects, the statement of affairs, issued on Nov. 23, indicated the continued sluggish movement of the monetary current as far as the Presidency Bank was concerned, reflecting also the position of things in the open market, where money was still superabundant and opportunities wanting for its employment in the ordinary channels of trade. The principal feature in the return was a decrease of nearly twelve lacs in loans, which was not counterbalanced by a sensible falling off in private deposits, and an increase to the same extent in bills discounted, so that a net diminution of over 4½ lacs in the trade demand was disclosed, against which, however, there was a material decrease in Government deposits. The Presidency Bank's minimum rate remains at 2 per cent.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—The wholesale demand for grey goods during the week, compared with that in an average week at this season of the year, has shown a sensible diminution; but a good retail inquiry has continued to be felt at current rates. Sellers are still willing operators, and prices may be called generally unaltered. In bleached, Turkey red, dyed, and printed goods a moderate retail business has been passing on the basis of previous rates. Prices of local goods are also unaltered; but the demand is not more than ¾ of the average. Weavers, however, do not care to make slight concessions to attract buyers. The week's clearances of imported goods are estimated at 3,800 packages; those of local goods at 1,600 bales.

YARNS.—The market has been dull for imported twist, and only a small business has been reported; but former quotations are still named. The sale of local spinnings at the two China ports and in Japan for the fortnight ending Nov. 23 were returned at 12,000 bales, with exchange on Bombay at 221 rs. Matters in Bombay are rather worse than better for these advices, and China buyers continue to make lower offers, but sellers are averse to making further concessions. The sales for the week are put down at only 600 bales, and the market closed dull in tone, with nothing doing.

METALS.—Copper has been taken to a moderate extent in a steady market, and on the basis of previous rates. In yellow metal only a small business has been done, and prices have given way 3 annas per cwt., the feeling being quiet at the decline. Iron has been steady at an advance of 4 to 8 annas, but only a moderate business has transpired.

COAL has been steady when not firmer. Sales have been reported of 1,000 tons of Powell's Duffryn, November-December shipment, at 15½ rs. per ton; and about 2,800 tons of the same description, on the Bunder, at 15½ rs. per ton.

Exports.—COTTON.—Only a few hundred bales of the earliest arrivals of the most forward growth of the new crop of Oomrawattee have been taken by shippers. Local consumers have also been out of the market on some days, and on others have been small buyers of old stuff from stock, their purchases, consisting of Oomra descriptions and Bengals, having aggregated about 2,000 bales. The tone of the market, which had been dull or quiet, has latterly become steadier, and an advance of 1 r. per candy in the price of new cotton has been established. The market closed quiet, with prices unaltered.

WHEAT.—Last week closed with a small business passing in a steady market, and on the basis of previous rates; but on reopening on Nov. 23 the feeling became firm, and dealers put up prices one anna per cwt., business, however, being only on a moderate scale. On the following day an active inquiry from exporters was felt, and a large business was done, in a firm market, prices of white Delhi and hard yellow further advancing half to one anna per cwt., others remaining as before; but thereafter the demand subsided in presence of lower quotation from the other side, and prices here receded one anna per cwt., the tone of the market, however, being steady at the decline. The receipts of wheat since Jan. 1 have been 400,000 tons heavier than for the same time last year.

SEEDS have been taken for shipment to only a moderate extent, the feeling having on some days been quiet and on others steady.

The receipts of linseed have been some 114,000 tons heavier this year, so far, than they were in 1890. In rape, gingelly, and groundnuts there has also been an increase compared with last year, poppy and castor alone showing some falling.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Dec. 2; Madras, Dec. 3; Bombay, Dec. 5.

The Viceroy was present at the St. Andrew's Dinner held at Calcutta on Nov. 30, and made an important speech. After referring to the relations of the paramount power with Native States, he alluded to the question of the abolition of the income tax, of which he could offer no immediate prospect.

The Governor of Pondicherry will visit H.E. the Viceroy in Calcutta in January.

Lord Harris, in company with Sir Frederick Roberts and a large party, visited the Khojak and New Chaman on Nov. 20.

A correspondent, writing from Camp Dhanowri on Nov. 28, says:—"His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, Bombay, has had a sharp attack of fever for the last two days, the temperature ranging from 100 deg. to 104 deg. He is better to-night, but weak. The exposure he has been subjected to during his late tour with his long rides under a hot sun was possibly the cause. Notwithstanding the high fever he is remaining in Camp Dhanowri to witness the Rifle Meeting. The Worcesters and Lancashire Fusiliers are running neck and neck for all the big prizes up to date, and are shooting evenly and well in team matches."

General Brackenbury continues to make fair progress towards recovery at Apozai. He expects to reach Umballa about Dec. 18 or 19 on his way to Calcutta.

The Maharaja of Benares, who recently went through the ceremony of weighing himself against gold at Muttra, is going to devote 30,000 rs. of the sum thus consecrated to charitable uses and to raising a middle class school at Kourh and a high school for the benefit of Brahmin students. Formerly, remarks a Bombay paper, the money would have been distributed outright among the priests and mendicants present on the spot.

The Supreme Legislative Council is unusually late in beginning its winter session. No meeting had been summoned when the mail left, so it would seem that not much important legislation is intended.

A telegram from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, dated Dec. 20, says:—"The leaders of the Native Congress are busily engaged in preparing for the annual meeting, which begins at Nagpore on the 28th inst. It is understood that the principal question for discussion will be whether it is advisable to suspend the further sittings of the Congress in India till after the meeting which it is proposed to hold in London in 1893 or 1894. A number of pundits have been consulted on the question as to whether Orthodox Hindoos wishing to attend that meeting can do so lawfully, and they have given it as their opinion that there is nothing contrary to the Hindoo religion in merely crossing the sea, so long as proper precautions are taken to avoid forbidden food.

It was ordered that the Commission to inquire into the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act should meet at Poona not later than Dec. 15:—"The following three members were added to the Commission:—The Hon. Rao Bahadur Krishnaji Lakshmun Nulkar, Mr. Stephen Hammick, and Mr. F. S. P. Lely.

Telegraphing from Calcutta on Dec. 20 the Times correspondent says:—"The Imperial Diamond case, which has been under trial for twelve days, is at last approaching an end. The case for the prosecution was closed on Thursday; that for the defence occupied the remainder of that day and the whole of Friday. Counsel argued that Mr. Jacob never had any dishonest intention, but had acted under the belief that he had a rightful claim which still existed. Yesterday, Mr. Woodroffe, the second counsel for the prosecution, began his reply, which was not finished when the Court rose. The verdict is expected to be given on Tuesday.

All the Local Governments are in possession of the proposals of the Government of India regarding the new provincial contracts. Their replies will probably be received within the next six weeks.

The final figures of the census for portions of India are complete. The Province of Bombay has a population of 15,985,270; Sind, 2,871,774; Aden, 44,079; Ajmere, 542,358; Punjab, British territory, 20,866,847; Punjab, feudatory, 4,263,280; Berar, 2,897,491; Assam, 5,435,243; the Andamans, 15,609; Coorg, 173,055; Mysore, 4,943,604; Cashmere, 2,543,952.

The corrected figures of the Bengal census show the total population of the Province to be 74,610,500, being an increase of 7.29 per cent. The number per square mile is 398, or an increase of 37.

The women employed in the Ahmedabad factories have petitioned Lord Harris against any interference with their hours of labour. They declare that they do not feel unhappy as they are, and do not wish for any change. Evidently, says the Pioneer, the Ahmedabadis do not take in the Times. Or is it possible they can be so perverse and ungrateful as to think they know their own business better than Mr. Holt Hallett?

The question of raising new regiments for the Punjab Frontier Force still remains unsettled. The delay is believed to indicate serious doubts on the part of the Indian Government whether more should be done than adding a fourth squadron to the Corps of Guides.

On receipt of Colonel Cadell's report from the Andamans regarding the recent cyclone, it is probable that Government will consider the advisability of remitting the sentences upon the convict women who behaved with such heroism on the occasion of the wreck of the Enterprise at Port Blair.

A durbar had been summoned to take place at Fort White, at which all the chiefs of the Northern Chin country will attend. The object is to explain to them that British troops are to march through their territory; that summary punishment will follow any firing on our men, and that the British Government is only working for their good.

The Rangoon Gazette states that the irrigation scheme recommended by the Chief Commissioner some months since has not met with the approval of the Government of India, and it is highly improbable that any large outlay on irrigation works in Burma will be sanctioned for some time to come.

Lieutenant Clay, with an escort of troops, was marching through the Manipore country when the mail left. Some villages had been burned, and others had paid the fines levied.

Cholera was reported to be still prevalent in Cabul. The Ameer had left his capital for the Paghman hills in the neighbouring Kohistan.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times since our last issue:—

DEC. 15.—The Bombay Government is arranging to open relief works in Bijapore. The distress extends into the districts of Sholapore and Dharwad also. The rain-making experiments in the Mozufferpore district have proved a failure. Bags of dynamite suspended by a wire 50 feet above the ground were exploded without effect. It is now proposed to try explosions from balloons. The British Indian Association has expressed an opinion strongly adverse to the scheme for a cadastral survey of Behar.

DEC. 17.—A great scarcity of water is reported from the Bombay districts of Bijapore, Sholapore, and Ahmednuggur. The ryots are selling their cattle at nominal prices rather than let them die of thirst.

DEC. 20.—Last week's reports from the distressed districts in Madras show but little change. Lord Wenlock started on Friday to visit Bellary, Anantapore, Kurnool, and Cuddapah. He displays great energy in making himself personally acquainted with the position of affairs. The news from portions of Bombay continues to be gloomy, and points chiefly to the want of water, from which the cattle are suffering. The Bengal ryots are looking anxiously for the showers which usually fall about Christmas, but as yet there is little sign of their coming. The Kuki tribes between Manipore and Kohima have been showing some signs of restlessness, but it is not likely that they will give serious trouble. It is thought advisable, however, to strengthen the small posts along the road.

We have received the following telegram from the India Office for publication:—"From Viceroy, Dec. 19.—Prospects continue gloomy in parts of Madras, Rajpootana, and Bombay, where rain is urgently required. There is no change in Upper Burma."

(BY TELEGRAM TO THE Bombay Gazette, POONA, DEC. 4.)

THE Commander-in-Chief is pleased to make the following appointments:—

1ST DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S OWN BOMBAY LANCERS.—Capt. G. Tinley, 4th squadron commander, and Capt. Thomson, squadron officer, to be 4th squadron commander, sub. pro tem., in succession to Capt. Minchin, seconded.

14TH BOMBAY INFANTRY.—Surg. Ferguson, Indian Medical Service, 17th Bombay Inf., to officiate in medical charge during the absence of Surg.-Major Ferguson, Indian Medical Service, on furlough, or until further orders.

Lieut. Paul, officiating wing officer, on probation, 23rd (2nd batt. Rifle Regt.) Bombay Inf., is attached to the 5th Bombay Light Inf. in the same capacity.

Lieut.-Col. Lawrence, Indian Staff Corps, is placed on general duty at Poona.

Surg.-Capt. Bartlett, Medical Staff, is transferred from Aden district to general duty, Mhow district.

Under instructions from Horse Guards, Capt. Lovett, Gloucestershire Regt., is directed to proceed to England to join the 1st battalion of his regiment, into which he has recently been promoted.

Under instructions from India headquarters, it is notified that Lieut.-Col. Galloway, commanding Royal Art., Kurrachee, has been transferred to Barrackpore.

Under instructions from Horse Guards, War Office, it is notified that Second Lieut. Evans, No. 14 Company, Southern Division, Royal Art., has been transf. to No. 13 Company, Western Division, Royal Art., in room of Second Lieut. Anley, who has been transferred to No. 14 Company, Southern Division, Royal Art.

The undermentioned officers have leave of absence:—2nd batt. Lancashire Fusiliers—Major Birch, to England, for one year, on private affairs; 2nd batt. Royal Dublin Fusiliers—Lieut. Downing, to England, for one year, on private affairs; 22nd Bombay Infantry—Lieut. Wooldridge, Staff Corps, to Bombay, from date of departure, to Jan. 10, 1892, to study the native language.

G U P.

THE St. Andrew's Dinner of 1891, the Englishman declares, will long be remembered as the most successful festival of the kind that has ever been held in Calcutta. The gathering, in the first place, was far larger in point of numbers than in any previous year, while the presence of his Excellency the Viceroy lent an added importance to the event which it has enjoyed on only two previous occasions. Moreover, the visit of her Excellency the Marchioness of Lansdowne, who was present during the speeches, was another, and not the least memorable, feature in the proceedings. The decorations as well as the dinner arrangements were worthy of the occasion. The appearance of the Town Hall was changed as if by the touch of a magician's wand. The interior of the building under normal conditions is undoubtedly stony in aspect, a quality which has its appropriateness under some circumstances, but is scarcely in harmony with the prevailing note on such an occasion as the St. Andrew's Dinner. The appearance of the central hall from the rustic gate was brilliant in the extreme. Immediately facing the entrance was a large trophy, consisting of a shield and seven flags. The centre piece, showing St. Andrew and the cross, had been painted from an authentic copy of considerable antiquity, and bore the national motto, "Nemo me impune lacessit." The shield was surmounted with seven flags; at the top the Scotch standard, on either side the thistle, below this the standard repeated, and at the bottom the St. Andrew's cross. This trophy was flanked on either side by a smaller trophy, similarly arranged, while between each was placed the time-honoured Blanket flag of the Covenanters. The seats of his Excellency the Viceroy and the chairman were placed immediately below the principal trophy. The opposite side of the hall was similarly decorated, though the trophies were somewhat smaller in size and in the number of flags. The extreme east end of the hall was reserved for the lady visitors, the Marchioness of Lansdowne's fauteuil being placed immediately in the centre of the first tier. One of the prettiest decorative effects was obtained in this part of the hall—three handsome trophies resting on a ground work of pale blue drapery, the whole in a setting of crimson curtain work, looped up with an ornamental device in the shape of the thistle. The trophies in this case were flanked on each side by the Blanket flag, which came out in strong relief on the crimson background of the curtain work.

In accordance with local custom the St. Andrew's Dinner held at the Madras Club was of a semi-private character, which precluded the reporting of the many excellent orations that were delivered. But we may perhaps mention, writes the Madras Mail, without giving any offence, that for solid value Mr. Leighton's reply for "Commerce," for wit and humour Mr. Rowlandson's reply for "The Guests," and for theology tempered by anecdote the Rev. Mr. Ogilvie's reply for "The Scotch Church" took the cake. Mr. S. R. Turnbull presided, and a real live piper patronised the room between the quaiachs, and the haggis, and the more quaiachs.

The Commander-in-Chief and party reached Quetta on Nov. 26. The Governor of Bombay and staff arrived two hours later. Sir Robert Sandeman and a large number of officers and ladies were at the station, and a guard of honour of the 7th Fusiliers was drawn up on the platform. The Commander-in-Chief, Lady and Miss Roberts, a correspondent writes, are the guests of Sir George and Lady White, the Governor of Bombay staying with Sir R. Sandeman. The Governor of Bombay and a large party went on Nov. 26 by special train to Baleli, and rode round the defences, returning to Quetta by train at 5.30. The officers of the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers entertained all comers at luncheon. On Nov. 26, the Governor of Bombay, the Commander-in-Chief, Lady and Miss Roberts and a large party, including several ladies, proceeded by special train to New Chaman via the Khojak tunnel. At New Chaman, after inspecting the fort and garrison, the whole party were entertained at luncheon by Mr. Rose, under whose superintendence the Khojak tunnel has been constructed. The Governor of Bombay, in a neat speech, referred to Mr. Rose's eminent services and the magnitude of the work. On the 27th there was a review-order parade of the troops in garrison, after which the Governor and the Chief inspected the British lines and hospitals. The ball of the Durham Light Infantry in the evening was an unqualified success. Among the visitors to Quetta were Mr. A. Lawrence and Captain Younghusband.

His Excellency Lord Harris, the Commissioner in Sind, and party were afforded a good day's sport on Dec. 2 by his Highness Sir Ali Murad Khan, the chief of Khairpore. Fifteen hog-deer and thirty hog were shot. His Excellency shot well, shooting five of each. His Highness served breakfast to the party in a spacious tent close by the shooting-ground. All were much pleased and gratified. After breakfast the party returned to the steamer Outram, witnessing hawking on the way back. Colonel Mayer, political agent, was unable to accompany the party, having received injuries on board the Outram, fortunately, however, not serious. The grating of a bunkerhole was faulty, and stepping on it he fell into it and sprained his foot and ankle. His Highness was so indisposed as to be quite unable to be present at the shooting afforded to his Excellency this morning. His Highness is thought to be seriously ill and suffering much. Dr. Corkery announces that there is no immediate danger. The heir-apparent, Mir Faizmahomed Khan, and Mir Ghulam Husen Khan were present at the departure of his Excellency from Pirsabro. His Highness regretted his inability to personally bid Lord Harris farewell.

There are many visitors at the Aligarh Cavalry camp, a correspondent writes, including two from the Royal Dragoons at York, Captains MacMahon and Burn-Murdoch. These officers are to be congratulated for their professional keenness; I doubt if many of the much-belauded German officers would travel half the globe at their own expense to improve their minds as these exemplary young men have done. The order requiring officers to wear uniform on all occasions during the camp is very unpopular. Many pairs of beautifully cut gaiters and artistic "blazers" are mouldering in enforced seclusion, and, seriously, the gêne of tight strapped overalls and spurs the live-long day, even when off duty, is felt by all to be an infliction. General Luck, I am glad to say, is in his grandest form. He rides, on an average, forty miles a day, and is the most genial and considerate of generals. In my next letter I shall have something to say about the new drill which has just come out. As there is apparently only one copy of the work in India, it has been passed round to regiments for three days each. Naturally the amount of instruction they have been able to assimilate is small. The heat in the daytime is great, but the general health of the men is good.

The Englishman hears a grumble from Manipore. Lieutenant Dan, an officer there writes, in his "Official Gazetteer" of Manipore, states that living is very cheap here. He meant, of course, for the natives of Manipore, who lived on the produce of the country; and as the policy of the Rajas always was to strictly prohibit all exportation, the Maniporis naturally fed and clothed themselves for next to nothing. For there can be no question that trade increases the cost of living generally. Now with so many extra mouths to feed, and no prohibition against each man doing what he likes with his own production, the prices of articles of food even for natives have gone up very considerably. But Europeans require something more than rice and dhall to live on, and their requirements can only be met by importation. A few fowls and, from the Commissariat Department, a little fresh meat, are all that are locally procurable, and the price of fowls even has risen to double what it was when the troops first arrived. Kerosene oil has been selling at 15 rs. per tin, and other imported articles have run to equally fabulous prices. The cost of carriage up to here very often trebles the original cost of the article, and yet with all these cogent reasons why we should have the larger allowance; viz. the Burma allowance of 100 rs. per mensem, the Government appear unable to make up their minds to help us, or at least is in no hurry to do so, and, strange to say, influential papers seem to all maintain a strict silence on this point, not, perhaps, of much general interest, but of great importance to those whom a stern fate has sentenced to two or three years' exile in this unapproachable place. Our only amusements here continue to be polo and an occasional gymkhana; but now that the Battery has left us, the chance of being able to get up a game of polo seems small.

Five of the members of the Committee of the New Club at Simla have resigned. These are Colonels Woodthorpe and Wace, Mr. Barnes, Mr. Ker, and Captain Holland. These five gentlemen with Colonel Mackenzie were the only members of the committee at Simla. The club therefore remains with Colonel Mackenzie, the Chairman, as its sole representative. A Bombay paper hears that Mr. J. E. Rowe and Mr. L. T. Arathoon have been asked to join the committee, but as interim vacancies have to be filled up by the committee themselves, and there is no committee—only a president—at Simla, it would seem that the affairs of the club have come, for the time being, to a standstill.

PERSONAL.

AMONG the distinguished guests at the St. Andrew's Dinner in Calcutta were Count Kreutz, of the Russian Imperial Guard, and Baron de Nolde, the Russian travellers who arrived recently from Ceylon.

Lord Douglas Compton, aide-de-camp to the Governor of Madras, owing to continued illness, will probably not return to India. The Hon. G. A. Lascelles (P. W. O.), Yorkshire Militia, half-brother to Lady Wenlock, is expected to arrive shortly in Madras to fill the vacancy thus caused.

The Earl of Carlisle and Lord Morpeth had gone to Mahabeshwar to stay with Mr. Lee Warner.

General Channer arrived at Shillong on Nov. 24, and takes command of the Assam District from General Collett, who proceeds to England on five months' leave. The station were to give the latter a farewell dinner at the club.

Sir George Chesney has in preparation a new edition of his "Indian Polity," of which now not a copy is obtainable.

Colonel Moore, President of the Municipality of Madras, takes six months' leave early in March.

The Hon. Mr. J. Nugent had given over the duties of Commissioner of the Southern Division, Bombay, preparatory to proceeding to join the Viceroy's Council.

The Hon. Mr. Prince, Chief Secretary to Government, Madras, proceeds on short privilege leave at an early date, when Mr. Galton will probably act for him, and Mr. Arundel for Mr. Galton as Revenue Secretary.

The Hon. Mr. Rattigan, Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, has arrived in Calcutta. Mr. Rattigan is engaged for the defence of Mr. Jacob in the Imperial Diamond Case.

Professor Eric Robertson, the editor of "The Great Writers" Series, has resigned the Chair of Literature at the Punjab University, and will not return to Lahore. He has decided to settle down in Edinburgh.

Mr. C. M. Rivaz, Second Financial Commissioner, Punjab, proceeds to Poona to serve on the Agricultural Indebtedness Commission, and Colonel Hutchinson therefore continues to act as Commissioner of Lahore.

Mr. Moore, district judge of South Malabar, has been appointed to conduct a special inquiry into the settlement of irregularities in Malabar.

Mr. Carter, chief engineer, has been appointed to act temporarily for the late Mr. Hanna as agent and manager of the Madras Railway.

A telegram from Ootacamund states that Mr. Maccartie, the collector, proceeds on three months' leave. Mr. Rees assumes charge of the collector's duties on his return from Calcutta. Mr. Carr acts as private secretary during Mr. Maccartie's absence.

Mr. G. R. Irwin, Under-Secretary in the Foreign Office, India, having returned from leave, Mr. Tucker, who has been officiating, resumes his substantive appointment as first assistant to the Agent to the Governor-General in Central India. Mr. Tucker, who had been travelling with the Viceregal party, remained at Indore.

Mr. Lee-Warner, Secretary to Government in the Judicial Department, goes home, we (Times of India) hear, on short leave almost immediately. It is rumoured that Mr. Ollivant, Political Agent in Kattywar, will act during his absence. Mr. Fleet, C.S., has been appointed to act as Commissioner of the Southern Division, and has gone to Belgium to relieve Mr. Nugent, who proceeds to the Viceroy's Legislative Council at Calcutta for the cold weather.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

The death has been reported of General J. Murray Macgregor, who took part in many of the operations connected with the suppression of the Indian Mutiny, being mentioned in despatches for his services. He had previously, in 1842 and 1843, been engaged in important operations in Central India. He retired from the Madras Army in 1881, and died at Folkestone on Dec. 18, in his seventy-third year.

Sir J. F. Dickson died rather suddenly on Dec. 21 at 26 Randolph Crescent, Maida Hill. He had only lately come from Gibraltar, where, with Mr. Anderson, of the Colonial Office, he had been engaged for some time on official business. He was the son of Dr. Dickson, of Harmondsworth, Uxbridge, and was born in 1835. He was educated at Westminster and Christ Church, Oxford. In 1859 he entered the Ceylon Civil Service. He was police magistrate at Galle in 1865; Service Tenures Commissioner, 1870; Government Agent for the North Central Provinces, 1873; and for the Central Provinces, 1882; Colonial Secretary for the Straits Settlements since 1885; and member of the Legislative Council. Sir J. F. Dickson married, in 1859, the daughter of the Rev. J. Waters, D.D. (she died in 1866); and, secondly, in 1875, the daughter of Mr. George Lee.

Mr. William Young, chief officer, Clan Murray, while supervising the discharge of cargo from the hold at Bimlipatam on Nov. 20, fell into the hold and broke his neck. He died shortly afterwards.

Sir Chunder Singh, the old ex-Raja of Manipore, as briefly noted in our last issue, died on Dec. 3 of fever and dysentery in one of the suburbs of Calcutta. On the news of his death being received the Viceroy at once sent the Superintendent of the Toshakhana, as his representative, to arrange for the funeral rites. It was at first proposed to take the body to the Ganges, about forty miles from Calcutta, but the idea was abandoned, and arrangements were made for cremation near Nimtollah Ghat.

Swami Govrishankar Oodeshankar, C.S.I., late Dewan of Bhownugger, died on Dec. 1 at Bhownugger at the advanced age of nearly ninety years.

The Nawab Ahmed Yar Jung, of the Galib Jung family, an Arab chief of some importance, died at Hyderabad on Nov. 30.

LORD LANSDOWNE AT THE ST. ANDREW'S DINNER.

THE Viceroy left Indore on Nov. 26, and arrived at Calcutta on the 28th. The St. Andrew's Dinner took place on Nov. 30, when covers were laid in the ball-room at the Town Hall for over 340 persons. The room was effectively decorated, the pillars being ringed with evergreens and flowers, while red and blue streamers, flags and ensigns were freely used to give colour to the scene. The Viceroy on arrival was received by the Hon. Mr. Mackay, Chairman, and conducted to his seat, the band playing the National Anthem.

At the conclusion of dinner, the usual royal toasts were given, and the Chairman then proposed "The Viceroy, and the Land we live in." This was received with tremendous applause, three cheers being given for the Viceroy, and one more for Lady Lansdowne, who was present on a dais at the end of the room. Mr. Mackay, in his speech, touched upon the outbreak in Manipore and the attacks made by the native press on the Government of India, as showing the heavy responsibilities and anxieties which a Viceroy had to bear. He waxed eloquent upon the inadvisability of direct taxation, and practically appealed to the Government to remove the income-tax at the earliest opportunity. These remarks elicited loud applause. Referring to the repeated rumours of the Viceroy's resignation, Mr. Mackay said he was glad to learn such statements were quite unfounded. (Cheers.)

The Viceroy, on rising to reply, was received with loud and repeated cheers. He said:—

Mr. President and Gentlemen,—One of the most enjoyable moments in the Viceroy's year is that in which, after six months of a somewhat monotonous existence within the narrow limits of a hill station, followed by as many weeks of the unrest and rapid travelling which attend his movements, he finds himself again in your city. On the present occasion the pleasure of my return to Calcutta is enhanced by the kind welcome which you have given me, and which has been expressed by your Chairman in terms I am afraid somewhat coloured by a personal friendship which I am very proud to possess. (Hear, hear, and cheers.)

THE NATIVE STATES.

After reference to the services of Scotchmen in Canada the Viceroy continued:—I should like to say a very few words with regard to the tour which I have just completed. It took me to no less than four Native States, over States all of them more or less important. I found in Gwalior a young chief of very great promise, and likely, I hope, one day to preside with distinguished success over the destinies of the State, the affairs of which have, during his minority, been faithfully and skillfully administered by the State Council. Its finances are in good order, it has been able to spend liberally upon public works, as well as upon education, the administration of justice, and other useful public objects. (Hear, hear.) In Bhopal I had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of her Highness the Begum, a lady who had already impressed me by her shrewdness and sagacity, the traditions of whose State are thoroughly loyal, who is herself the firm friend of the British Government, and whose courteous reception of me at a time when she is still feeling the effects of a heavy domestic affliction, I shall not readily forget. (Loud cheers.) At Indore I found his Highness the Maharaja Holkar taking a personal part in the administration of his State, and interesting himself actively in the diffusion of knowledge amongst his subjects. (Hear, hear.)

THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT ON CASHMERE.

My longest visit was that which I paid to the State of Cashmere, and, gentlemen, I must express the pleasure which it gave me, after a very careful enquiry into its affairs, to be able to invite his Highness the Maharaja once more to take a part in the government of the State, of which we have never ceased to regard him as the legitimate ruler. During his temporary withdrawal from the Government, the State Council, ably presided over by Raja Amar Singh and assisted by the British officers whom we have lent to the State, has laid the foundation for a sound system of financial administration, and has introduced improvements which will, I believe, in time effect a transformation in the position of the cultivators, and secure the removal of most of the abuses which had previously disfigured the State. (Hear, hear and cheers.) I dwell upon these facts because I regard it as a matter of first-rate importance that the States in subordinate alliance with her Majesty should be governed in such a manner that we need have no scruple in preserving for them the measure of independence which they at present enjoy. Not only would it be an act of injustice to deprive them of the privileges of self-government to which they are entitled, but it would, I am convinced, be a distinct misfortune to the Empire if these interesting remnants of indigenous rule were to be entirely effaced (Hear, hear.) They may not all of them be governed entirely in accordance with our ideas of good government, but it is a question whether, in spite of this, they do not from their point of view prefer to remain under their own rulers, even if they are denied some of the administrative luxuries which we provide for the people of British India. Be this as it may, the territory directly under the Government of India is already so large, and our tendency to govern it in accordance with uniform principles and according to stereotyped methods of administration is so strong, that from our point of view I should regard with unfeigned regret any events which might force us to assume the responsibility for any part of the large areas at present governed by Indian chiefs and rulers. It is instructive, both for the natives of this country and for Europeans, that the two kinds of government should be in force side by side, and in the full view of public opinion. We are all of us fond of dwelling upon the necessity of decentralising our administration, and considering all the circumstances of India I doubt whether there is any form of decentralisation more useful than that which leaves the domestic affairs of a large portion of the country to the management of its own people. (Hear, hear.)

AGRICULTURAL PROSPECTS.

We are at this moment, I regret to say, confronted with the prospect of serious scarcity in several parts of the Empire, and our thoughts travel from this cheerful scene to regions in which distress and grave anxiety for the future must prevail for some time to come. In portions of Rajputana, and more especially in that part of it which is under the Government of India, parts of Madras and of Burma, the outlook is, I grieve to say, a very gloomy one. The same may be said of the Hyderabad State, and of the eastern parts of the Bombay Deccan, and there are some districts in this province in which everything depends upon the climatic conditions of the next few weeks. We may console ourselves by the reflection that we are better equipped than we ever were to meet the danger. Our intelligence is more timely, our means of supplying relief more adequate than they were. (Hear, hear.) It may interest my hearers to know that, taking the whole of the affected areas, the total numbers in receipt of State relief, either in the shape of work or charity, is at present under 60,000. (Hear, hear.) The smallness of these numbers will be appreciated when it is remembered that they were considerably exceeded in the Ganjam district alone during the scarcity of 1889; and I may add that, although there has been great mortality amongst cattle, the loss of human life, properly attributable to scarcity, has, I am glad to say, up to the present time been insignificant. (Hear, hear.) The measures adopted by the Local Governments have been well considered and vigorous—(hear, hear)—and I am glad to have this opportunity of placing on record my appreciation of the valuable exertions made by the authorities in the threatened districts, and more specially by Sir Alexander Mackenzie—(cheers)—in Burma, and by my friend Lord Wenlock, whom we shall have the pleasure of welcoming to Calcutta almost immediately, and whose personal solicitude for the welfare of the people of his Presidency at one time led him to run a serious risk to his own health. (Loud cheers.)

WAR OR PEACE.

As to the spectre of war, we may, I hope, say confidently that there is but little prospect of strife within our own borders. (Cheers.) Not only is the surface smooth, but the great mass of the people are probably convinced that their prosperity is closely bound up with the peace which we have been able to secure for them, and that they will be the greatest losers if that peace should be disturbed. (Cheers.) As for aggression from without, all that we can say is that the maintenance of peace does not depend upon our action here, but upon events occurring in other parts of the world and over which we have no control. If that peace is broken it will certainly not be in consequence of any acts of aggression or of any desire for territorial aggrandisement on our part. (Hear, hear.) Here, too, we may find consolation in the thought that we were never stronger for the purpose of resisting attack from without than we are at the present time, and in view of this fact I hope my friend the President will not grudge us that expenditure upon the country's defence to which he has referred, and which we shall, I devoutly hope, ultimately be able to curtail. (Cheers.)

But, gentlemen, there is another kind of warfare which does not come within either of the categories which I have mentioned, and with which we are unfortunately but too familiar in India. I refer to those little wars upon our frontiers, of which, within the year which is about to end, we have unfortunately had no less than three upon our hands. With a land frontier of some 5,000 miles, a great part of which is occupied by predatory and uncivilised tribes, complications of this sort are unhappily inevitable, and we cannot expect entire immunity from them. But I can assure you that upon no Government of India have these minor quarrels been more reluctantly forced than upon that of which I have the honour to be the head. My colleagues and I have fully realised the strain which they occasion to our resources, and the fact that their results are often scarcely commensurate with the trouble and the cost which they involve. The only point upon which I venture to insist is that if disagreeable work of this kind has to be done, we should do it thoroughly. (Loud cheers.) The three little wars which we have had to wage during 1891 have been brought to a deliberate and satisfactory conclusion. None of them could, I believe, have been avoided without a serious blow to our credit and good name. (Cheers.)

FINANCE.

Just as the maintenance of international peace depends upon the course of events in other parts of the world, so the maintenance of our financial equilibrium depends to a great extent, not upon ourselves, but upon the vagaries of Washington and Westminster. (Cheers and laughter.) The triumph of the gentlemen who are, I believe, known as the "gold bugs" in the one place, or of the extreme anti-Opium party in the other, may at any moment not only destroy the prospect of a surplus, but may render it extremely difficult to maintain an equilibrium between revenue and expenditure. A few months ago we were basking in the sunshine of a one-and-ninepenny rupee, but the "kittle" coin has already been degraded to its former low estate. As for opium, our danger seems to me to lie in the extraordinary misapprehensions which prevail as to the attitude of the Government of India in regard to this much-vexed question. We have lately, as the President has told you, addressed the Secretary of State in an important despatch dealing with a part of the subject, a despatch which will, I hope, convince some of our critics that nothing is further from our intentions than to push the sale of opium for revenue purposes, that the alleged increase of consumption has been much exaggerated, and that where it exists it is to be explained by the increase of the population, and by the fact that, owing to greater vigilance on the part of our officers, the legitimate consumption of the drug has increased at the expense of the illicit traffic which prevails in many parts of India. Whether a moderate use of the drug is worse than a moderate use of the national beverage, of which the president has spoken so affectionately, I will not now inquire, but of this I am persuaded, that if we were to be deprived by a stroke of the pen of our opium revenue to-morrow, the consumption of the drug would continue in spite of us, and that it is as much beyond our power to put an end to the use of opium in China and in India as it would, I believe, be beyond the power of the friends of temperance in England to put an absolute stop to the consumption of intoxicating liquors in that country. (Loud cheers.) The question is one which requires to be dealt with in a reasonable and judicial spirit, and I need scarcely add that the Government of India are ready to accept any useful suggestions which may be made, by those who approach it in such a spirit, for the removal of the undoubted abuses which attend the immoderate use of the drug. The despatch to which I have referred contains proposals which ought, I think, to satisfy our critics of the bona fides of our intentions in this respect. (Hear, hear.) If a reasonable view of the question prevails, I believe that, thanks to the elasticity of our revenue, we need not, even with the rupee at one shilling and fourpence, despair of making both ends meet, without adding to the burdens of the taxpayer. (Cheers.)

But then my hon. friend is not content with an equilibrium on the basis of existing taxation. He has kindly told us that he does not propose to invite a discussion of his particular complaint on such a joyous occasion as the present, but I must be allowed to assure him that I entirely agree with him, both as an income-tax payer on an income which no amount of watchfulness on my part can possibly conceal from the vigilant eye of the tax collector (cheers and laughter), and as one who has considered these questions as matters of principle, in thinking that a direct tax on incomes is an impost which is open to a great many objections. But then I am bound to add that so also is the increased tax upon salt, which we have been lately obliged to require from the poorest class of the community, while the same might be said of the duty upon rice, against which I have heard my friend Mr. Steel argue from his place in Council with convincing force. (Hear, hear.) I am afraid, therefore, that all the comfort which I can give my hon. friend is to assure him that whenever we arrive at the blissful moment for considering what remissions of taxation we shall propose, the earnest protest which upon this and upon other occasions he has recorded against the income-tax shall be carefully weighed (cheers).

THE HUNZA NAGAR EXPEDITION.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

IN reference to the fighting near Gilgit, the following telegrams have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times :—

DEC. 16.—The situation in the Hunza district has undergone no change, except that the Hunza chief has shown a disposition to open a correspondence. He sent a letter on the 8th inst. to Dr. Robertson, which is described as being so defiant in tone that it could not lead to negotiations.

DEC. 18.—Colonel Durand has returned to Gilgit. He is recovering from the wound in his right thigh. News has been received from Nilt up to the 11th inst. All is well, there is no sickness nor are there any fresh casualties. The wounded are doing well. Communications are secure, and supplies are ample.

DEC. 20.—The situation in Hunza remains practically unchanged. The tribesmen appear to have shut themselves up in the hill forts, while our troops are completing the erection of block houses. The fact that telegrams reach India with fair regularity proves that there has been no heavy snowfall in the passes yet, but such a fall may at any moment delay the arrival of news for several days. Further details of the casualties in the fighting on the 2nd inst. have been received. They show that besides the British officers already mentioned, the 5th Goorkhas lost two sepoy killed, and one native officer and nine sepoys wounded; the detachment of the 20th Punjab Infantry lost four wounded; the Sappers and the Cashmere Bodyguard each lost one wounded; and the Cashmere Rajhu Partab Regiment one killed and three wounded. One mule-driver, who was with the Gatling gun, was wounded. On the 4th inst. Lieutenant Gorton, of the Royal Artillery, and seven sepoys were wounded. Since Colonel Durand was disabled, Dr. Robertson has acted as Political Agent, and Captain Bradshaw has commanded the troops; but Major Hill, of the 2nd Goorkhas, who has been ordered up from India, will take charge of the troops till Colonel Durand recovers. The following officers have been selected to accompany Major Hill :—Lieutenants Chesney, of the 5th Goorkhas; Woodward, of the 37th Dogras; Campbell, of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry; Stanton, of the Royal Artillery; Captain Craster and Lieutenant Weston, of the Royal Engineers.

The Gilgit correspondent of the Times writes a long letter, dated Nov. 16, in the course of which he says :—

To Lieutenant-Colonel Durand, the British Agent at Gilgit, has been intrusted the command of an expedition whose object is to teach the ruffianly chieftains of Hunza and Nagar a lesson that has been long needed, and to bring their territory definitely under British influence. Ever since the British Agent entered upon his duties at Gilgit, in the summer of 1889, he has insisted on the expediency of this step, and the soundness of his advice has been proved by the recent hostile manifestations and generally aggressive attitude of the Hunza-Nagari tribesmen, coupled with the appearance of Colonel Yanoff's Cossacks at the foot of the passes leading from the Pamir steppes into the Hunza valley.

That the Hunza-Nagaris are hostile to British influence, and disposed to be friendly to Russia, is well known. Captain Grombchevsky, who visited this region with one of his usual exploring parties of armed Cossacks three summers ago, boasts of this fact. That British influence should be paramount up to the southern slopes of the Hindoo Koosh is by all acknowledged to be necessary for the protection of the Empire of India; but even were Imperial interests in no wise affected by the attitude of these tribes, there are other urgent reasons for bringing them under proper control. The natives of the adjoining and closely allied States of Hunza and Nagar, known to their neighbours under the name of Kanjutis, are the terror of all the frontier peoples between Afghanistan and Yarkund. Inhabiting a group of arid and scarcely accessible defiles on the southern slopes of the Hindoo Koosh, they make frequent raids across the mountains and earn their livelihood by an organised brigandage, which is not merely tolerated, but even enjoined, by the Tums, or kings, of these two petty States, who derive from this source the greater portion of their revenue. So great is the dread inspired by these robbers that large districts have been abandoned by their inhabitants, and land formerly cultivated has lapsed into wilderness under the perpetual menace of the Kanjuti raids. The most profitable hunting-ground of the Kanjutis is the great trade route between Leh and Yarkund over the Karakoram Pass, and many a rich caravan on its way from India to Central Asia has been waylaid and pillaged in the neighbourhood of Shahidulla.

But this wholesale brigandage, bad as it is, is only a minor offence when put by the side of the systematised slave-dealing in which these scourges of the frontier have been engaged from time immemorial. All prisoners of any commercial value—men, women, and children—captured in their raids are driven across the mountains to be sold either directly to the slaveowners in Chinese Turkestan or to Kirghiz dealers who serve as middlemen in this trade. The forced marches across the snowy ranges that these unfortunate captives are compelled to undertake, thinly clad as they are, and provided with but a minimum of food, cause the death of a considerable proportion; and the abominable cruelty with which the Kanjutis treat their prisoners has been remarked by most travellers on the Pamirs. Numbers of the subjects of the Maharajah of Cashmere are at this moment slaves in Central Asia; these are for the most part natives of the province of Baltistan, an honest, harmless, and amiable people who win the good opinion of every European who visits their country, while entire outlying garrisons of Cashmere Sepoys have been surprised and carried off into captivity by these daring ruffians. It is to be hoped that Colonel Durand's expedition will put an end, once and for all, to this intolerable state of things.

The rulers of these two States are, as might be expected, ignorant and bloodthirsty scoundrels, with whom it would be folly to enter into any sort of treaty; they are incapable of respecting anything but force. The King of Hunza murdered his own father in order to insure to himself the sole sovereignty over his country, while the King of Nagar, actuated by a similar policy, had his brother waylaid and assassinated. The Tum of Hunza has no small opinion of his own importance. He boasts of being the descendant of Alexander the Great—a common claim hereabouts—and it is said to be a point of etiquette in his savage court, on certain occasions, for the Wazir to ask in the Tum's presence, "Who is the greatest King of the East?" and for another flatterer to reply, "Surely, the Tum of Hunza; unless, perhaps, it be the Khan of China; for these, without doubt, are the two greatest?"

That the Hunza-Nagari tribesmen have for so many years been able to defy the power of Cashmere is due to the corrupt system of administration which has hitherto prevailed in this state. It is a far cry from Gilgit to Srinagar—twenty-two marches along a difficult and often dangerous road lying between the capital and the frontier outpost, so that it has been easy to hoodwink the Durbar as to the true condition of affairs on the borders. Thus, on occasions when it was understood at Srinagar that several thousands of sepoys had been marched to Gilgit, a large proportion of these had no existence save on paper, though the officers in charge did not fail to claim and embezzle pay and rations for the full number. And again, the transport of grain for the troops—a difficult matter on the Gilgit road, even with a good organisation—afforded an easy opportunity to certain officials for robbing the State on a large scale, with the result that a very insufficient supply of food used to reach Gilgit, and that the unfortunate sepoys stationed there were left to starve through the winter on the smallest possible rations of grain—that too most probably damaged and unfit for food, having been bought up cheap—while as a natural consequence their ranks were woefully thinned by fatal disorders.

Discontented, badly officered, badly equipped, and utterly undisciplined, the troops of the Gilgit garrison were quite useless from a soldier's point of view, and never displayed much keenness in their desultory campaigns against the Hunza-Nagaris; but the maintenance of this garrison, in consequence of the dishonesty and shameful incapacity of the servants of the State, has ever been an excessive drain on the Cashmere Treasury; while the unnecessary inhumanity with which the begar or local forced labour has been conducted on the Gilgit road—a system attended with a great annual loss of life—has driven the inhabitants to desperation, compelling them to fly from their homes, so that now in many places walled terraces of bare earth and dead fruit trees alone remain to show where were once green, laboriously irrigated oases.

No one who has not visited these inhospitable regions can fully realise the difficulties which beset the organisation of even the smallest military expedition. The road from Cashmere to Gilgit, roughly, 200 miles in length, traverses for the most part a practically desert country; all supplies have to be carried up from Cashmere, while even the grass with which to feed the transport animals has to be brought from a distance. In summer the heat in the arid gorges is intense, and on some of the waterless marches the bones of dead baggage mules are a frequent sight. The road becomes impassable in early winter, for two high passes have to be crossed, the Rajdrangan and the Burzil, both liable to sudden gales of deadly coldness which surprise and kill numbers of travellers every year. Last autumn one of these gales, accompanied by a snowstorm, destroyed a whole train of 300 mules, together with their drivers, on the Rajdrangan. Such disasters could to a great extent be obviated by the building of rest-huts at suitable places on the passes, and the absence of these implies a criminal negligence on the part of the Cashmere Public Works Department. The want, however, will be supplied next year.

Lieutenant-Colonel Durand, in addition to the Gorkhas, has at his disposal three regiments of the Cashmere Imperial Service troops and a Cashmere mountain battery, in all, upwards of 2,000 men, while a local levy of some hundreds of Punial Irregulars has recently been raised in the Gilgit Valley. A considerable portion of these troops will be left to guard Astor, Bunji, and other positions accessible from Chilas, for it is possible that the tribes of the Indus Valley, whose sympathies are undoubtedly with the Hunzais, may attempt to descend on the Gilgit road, and attack us from behind.

We are now locked up here till next May; for the passes, if not already closed, will be so very soon, while the only other exit from this country is by way of the Indus Valley through territories held by warlike tribes hostile to the British. When the conditions of this expedition are considered it will be recognised that it is in some respects unique.

The news that Dr. G. S. Robinson, agency surgeon at Gilgit, who disappeared a year ago into the wilds of Kafiristan, has emerged in safety and arrived in Gilgit will have been read with satisfaction, says the Times of India. His explorations have carried him through the heart of this hitherto unknown region, and he returns to India, after having pierced the veil which has up till now hung between us and any accurate knowledge of this mysterious people and country. His experiences will be most interesting and valuable, and we trust that they may be published. For month after month, entirely alone, he has lived among his barbarous hosts, dwelling in their villages, watching their sacred rites, coming across war parties in wild forays, at one moment an honoured guest, the next surrounded by frantic crowds swayed by all the furious impulses of covetous savages and clamouring for blood, carrying his life in his hand and establishing his supremacy by the calm audacity which has taken Englishmen so far. Never perhaps has a bolder or more dangerous exploration been carried out, and we feel, says the Lahore paper, sure that our readers will rejoice to hear of his safety, and that there will be a general feeling of satisfaction at the thought that an Englishman, armed with no authority, backed by no escort, but relying solely on his own determination and coolness, has been the first to explore Kafiristan.

The party sent to survey the telegraph line to Gilgit has been obliged to return to Srinagur from Astor, owing to the road being impassable from heavy falls of snow. They will most likely remain there till February.

A PLEA FOR THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

THE Pioneer says:—There is reason to believe that one of the things that the Department feels most is that its administration should be always entrusted to a covenanted civilian. If the Viceroy's Council require a special member for Public Works, it is surely sound that he should be a man with some professional knowledge, and also more or less acquainted with the rules and regulations of the Department, and the way in which its personnel is thereby affected. It may be willingly acknowledged that a civilian who rises to the position of a member of Council is usually a man of high attainments and broad experience. Such men might safely be entrusted with the other portfolios held by members of our Indian Government; but a large scientific department would preferably be in the hands of one with some experience of its work and duties. We do not necessarily advocate the appointment of a purely technical specialist, though we may remark that this does apparently hold in military matters; but, ceteris paribus, if an engineer have the necessary abilities, he is more likely to prove a sound adviser than an outsider, however able he may be. It is true that in England civilians administer such departments as the War Office and the Admiralty; but we do not know that the administrative success of these departments has been very pronounced; and, moreover, the cases are not parallel. The work that falls to the Member for Public Works can hardly be congenial to a civilian, who has gained his experience in quite another line. For this reason the appointment is rarely likely to be held for its full term of years. As soon as some more inviting post looms in view, the honourable Member for Public Works betakes himself elsewhere with ill-concealed joy. The sole exception, so far, has been Sir T. Hope, a man who happened to have a peculiar aptitude for the work. If there be any department in which continuity of administration is of obvious importance it is that of the Public Works; and the shifting policy of successive members, holding office for short periods, has no doubt been largely responsible for the hopelessness into which it has now drifted. The problems to be solved are often so intricate that no one could be expected to grapple with them con amore, unless a personal interest were aroused. There is no question of imputing prejudice to the members who have hitherto held charge; but it is incontestable that the officers of the Department would feel their case better understood and represented by one of their own class.

If this be out of the question, it would be preferable to revert to the system of appointing a complete outsider—as was Sir Andrew Clarke—of professional eminence at home, and who would, at all events, bring some fresh views into the Council, untrammelled by official red-tape or Indian routine.

The next point, and the one which lies nearest the root of all the present dissatisfaction, is the stagnation of promotion. When Government in 1870 decided on a new policy, and inaugurated Coopers Hill College, it informed the public that young men entering the Department might expect to serve six years as assistant engineers, and then be placed in executive charge of works, rising in twelve years, through the different grades, to the position of executive engineer, 1st grade, on a salary of 950 rs. a month. This was a tangible promise, and one easily understood by boys and their parents. It meant that with eighteen years' service, at about forty years of age, the average man would be in receipt of a good salary, and if he proved himself better than his fellows, he had prospects of further advancement. The promotion at that time was even better than this, and there is no doubt that the originators of the prospectus never dreamed how illusory and overdrawn it was. The question of the rate of recruitment could never have been carefully investigated. There seems to have been a sort of idea that there was no limit to the expansion of the public works; quite regardless of the fact that such works had to be constructed with borrowed money, and that no country could commit itself to such an expenditure for more than a limited period. It very soon became apparent that the scale of recruitment was far in excess of requirements. In 1878 the number of annual appointments was reduced from fifty to thirty-five. Meanwhile, those who had already joined soon discovered that their expectations of promotion were never likely to be realised. In 1879 a large number of senior and incompetent men were retired, and this gave a fillip of promotion all up the line. In 1883 the case was recognised to be so bad that a special committee was appointed to discuss it. The results of this discussion were a redistribution of the assistant and executive classes, equalising the numbers in each; and the increase of 50 rs. in the salaries of the lower grades. Promotion was thus again obtained, in a roundabout way; and then the outlook was as black as before. The Government was ready to go further, and not only to improve the pay of the higher grades, but also to make the number of executives double that of assistants. These proposals were unfortunately negatived by the Secretary of State's Council. In 1884 the Government of India, reviewing the situation, was of opinion that the four successive executive grades should be attained in 6½, 11, 14½, and 19 years respectively. This was very nearly the rate of promotion promised in the Coopers Hill prospectus. From tables compiled from the latest official list, the percentage of men who have obtained this promotion is as follows:—

1st Grade Executive	50 p.c., or one-half
2nd " "	30 " less than 1 in 3
3rd " "	16 " about 1 in 6
4th " "	nil

These figures show that the promotion is the more retarded the lower we go down the list. The reason is the block caused by over-recruitment between the years 1874 and 1880. Such a condition of affairs is calculated to dishearten any service, and the better and more able the men, the less likely are they to be satisfied with their prospects.

Possibly the best way out of the difficulty would be to award promotion, fixed by length of service and scale, provided it had been earned by hard work and merit. This would be just to both Government and its servants. The only complainants would be the bad bargains; but some differentiation in this direction could only have a salutary effect. We would also urge that the pay of first and second class executives be increased. These are the men best fitted to hold important charges, and the present salaries of 800 rs. and 950 rs. are out of all proportion to the responsibility and hard work involved.

There can be little question that the Public Works Department, considering the education of its officers, and the laborious and lonely lives they so often have to lead, is the very worst paid service in the whole country. The fact that Royal Engineers will not remain in it points to the same conclusion. It is now notorious that few officers of this corps will elect for service in India, because they are, comparatively speaking, better paid at home. If, therefore, a Royal Engineer, whose salary is from fifteen to twenty per cent. higher than that of a civil engineer, does not think it good enough to serve in India, à fortiori his civilian confrère is not likely to remain content. True, he has not the option of getting away, but that is no argument in favour of a rich Government driving a hard bargain on a bond, the conditions of which have been honestly fulfilled by the weaker vessel. If an argument be needed to show that the work is worth better pay, we have only to point to those members of the Department who are lucky enough to be employed by private companies which are not in the habit of paying above the market value.

We now pass on to consider the question of the small number of the higher and better paid administrative posts of superintending and chief engineers. These appointments average about 1 in 15, a ratio which, we believe it correct to say, is lower than that of any other department of at all equal importance. Nor are the few prizes necessarily given to members of the Public Works proper. Some chief engineer appointments have always been reserved for Royal Engineers in the Military Works Branch; and even were this not so, the proportion is so low that only a very small number of acknowledged able men can ever hope to attain to them. This fact has been recorded in an unpublished note; but it is sufficiently patent to every officer in the Service.

There is one other point to which allusion might be made. The higher departmental posts, if held for three years, carry special pensions; but it must occasionally occur that the full qualifying term cannot be completed before a man has to retire from ill-health, or under the action of the fifty-five year rule. In such cases it would be a gracious act if service were allowed to count proportionately in calculating the pension. Thus, eighteen months of superintending engineer's service would entitle a man to an increase of $\frac{15}{100} \times 1000$, or 500 rs. There would then be small excuse for a man to hang on for the extra pension, after he had become inefficient from indifferent health, and there would be no scruple in compulsorily retiring him, under the age clause, for any sentimental reason.

THE INDIAN PRESS ON LORD LYTTON.

THE Pioneer, in an article on Lord Lytton, says:—He had not been landed a week before it came to be understood that he had arrived in the country as an instrument of the Ministry for putting into practice a forward policy towards Afghanistan. He may have been unfortunate in this, but he was unfortunate in being the subject of a strange number of similar impressions, well or ill-grounded. Unfortunate in that he was always supposed to have arranged with Sir John Strachey the coup by which he trumped the opinions of the rest of his Council upon the abolition of the cotton duties, not out of any conviction of his own upon the subject, but as a sacrifice acceptable to his chiefs in the Ministry. Unfortunate in that he will always be believed by a large section of the English public, again in conjunction with his Finance Member, to have deliberately underestimated the cost of the Afghan War, in order to help his party at the General Election. Unfortunate in that his leaning for secrecy and reserve were always giving the colour of a sudden impulse to measures that were in reality the outcome of long deliberation, like the Pelly Mission and the Vernacular Press Act. It would be going too far to weigh the justice of these impressions; they are none of them wholly accurate, and some, no doubt, are totally inaccurate. But the point is that at the bottom of all of them will be found the mischief of the diplomatic habit of mind and the diplomatic training. Nor would a man versed in the ways of official life have offended his officers and scandalised the public by the influence which he allowed in the affairs of Government to his private secretary, the untrustworthy adviser who, after doing as much harm as possible in his situation here, was destined to bring disgrace to his country, and ruin to his troops on another continent. And, in addition to all, the personal manner and habits of the Viceroy were unfortunate in being such as to encourage the popular conception of the dawdling diplomatist, no doubt largely a creature of fiction, who transacts his business in picturesque costume over curaçoa and cigarettes. It is certain that Lord Lytton could work hard enough on occasion, as he showed during the Madras famine, even if his industry was liable to be spasmodic. He kept up an immense private correspondence on public subjects even as Governor-General for which a lazy man would hardly have found inclination. But in this point also the impressions he managed to create were against him, and the general idea of him was faithful to the last as an indolent voluptuary who did no work but the work that was to his mind. Certainly he left India as heartily disliked as a Viceroy could hope to be. With the native community the little transient popularity he had obtained by his minute on the Fuller case had long faded under the introduction of the Vernacular Press Act and the re-introduction of direct taxation solemnly abjured by his predecessor. With the European community at large he was disliked vaguely, but it can hardly be said unjustly. Those who were brought into personal contact with him, for more substantial grounds, neither respected him nor could trust his sincerity. But the remembrance of these things has softened with time, and even did the grave not stand between, we could look at the public acts of his time now without prejudice and discern their bearings more clearly.

SIR WILLIAM MOORE ON "FAMINES."

A PAPER on "Famines" was contributed to the "Epidemiological Society of London" on Dec. 16, by Surgeon-General Sir William Moore, K.C.I.E. Sir William Moore had seen several famines in India, but did not recollect having observed anything so bad there as has been reported from Russia. He had seen people dying from starvation in India, and he had seen their corpses partially devoured by wild beasts. He had seen the Indians digging for roots, and supplementing their scanty grain with wild fruits, stalks of herbs, and seeds of grasses. But he had never known in India, as reported from Russia, that "the administrations were quite unable to cope with the situation." It is also stated that "abuses in the purchase and distribution of grain are heard of on all sides, and with so little knowledge of the actual condition of things is the relief distributed, or under such conditions is it administered, that the comparatively well-to-do are constantly receiving unneeded help, while the poverty-struck peasants are dying of hunger." Now the Indian Government declared that no person should be permitted to die of hunger, and the orders of the Government were well carried out by the officials, and supplemented by others who were not directly concerned in the administration of the country; for example, Colonel Carnell (now general), commanding the Eripore Irregular Force, who collected 1,000 starving children, and the Rev. Mr. Shulbred, of the Presbyterian Mission, who housed, fed, educated, and settled some 300 starving children. But we are told that Russian officials, from the highest to the lowest, assert their right to a bribe, and that grain even in famine times cannot pass through their possession without being mulct. The Indian administration is conducted by English gentlemen, supplemented by Indian gentlemen, and the system is a fair day's pay for a fair day's work. In Russia it would appear that the authorities are utterly lacking in the knowledge of how to distribute relief so that it actually reaches the people for whom it is intended. Although people had undoubtedly died in India from famine, it was really more the fault of the people themselves than of the authorities. Sir William Moore would not say that famine relief had always been afforded immediately it was wanted, but as soon as the fiat went forth that famine relief should be afforded, no one need die of famine, unless indeed he had been so starved previously that food at the last was insufficient to renovate his system. The plan adopted in India was usually the formation of famine camps, and putting the people to labour on some work of public utility. Officers of all kinds were appointed to superintend this. Medical, sanitary, engineering, police, and general administrative. Once in the famine camp no person need die of hunger. Food was generally provided, or, when grain merchants were found willing and able to supply food, money was given. This had always been a question, whether it was better to give money or grain? There were objections to both plans. Money was not always spent advantageously; but if the authorities purchased grain it disorganised trade, and the authorities could not purchase nor convey so economically as grain merchants. Local conditions and circumstances were usually suffered to decide this important question, the principal civil authority of the district being given discretion by the Central Government.

RUSSIA AND COREA.

SEVERAL Russian newspapers, including the Novoe Vremja and the Petersburgskaja Vedomosti, have been discussing the question of the attitude to be observed by Russia towards Corea. The views expressed by these journals are believed to agree substantially with those of the Government, and, a Reuter's despatch from St. Petersburg says, may be summarised as follows:—

Russia, it is argued, could not think of annexing Corea, for a number of reasons, among others, because the country is too thickly populated, and Russia herself has too few subjects in that region ever to enable her to colonise and maintain her authority in the Peninsula. Moreover, Corea is too poor to be of material advantage to Russia, and the habits of the two peoples are so different that there would be no prospect of eventual assimilation; on the other hand, it would be dangerous for Russia to seek to establish a Protectorate over Corea and to occupy some of its ports, as such proceedings would meet with opposition from China and Japan, while some other European Powers might make it an excuse for occupying other strategic points in the Peninsula, and thus create complications for Russia.

It is considered that it would be much more to Russia's advantage to concentrate her forces at Vladivostok and improve that fine port than to scatter her limited resources, and thus weaken her position in the extreme East. The Russian Government ought not, therefore, to cherish any ideas of conquest in Corea; but, at the same time, it should not be regarded as a matter of indifference whether the country preserves or loses its independence, for although, by falling under Russian dominion, Corea would become a cause of weakness for Russia, the Peninsula would constitute a real danger if it fell into the hands of another Power, and the Korean forts, which are at present useless to Russia, would become a menace to her if occupied by the troops of another State.

It is also to be considered that the Power which seized Corea, or established a Protectorate there, might give the country a military organisation constituting a real danger for Russia, which has but few troops near at hand. Russia, it is concluded, must therefore be careful to maintain her preponderance in Corea, not seeking to obtain possession of the country, but remaining on her guard, so that it may not become the prey of China, Japan, Great Britain, or any other Power, as such a solution of the Korean question would be equivalent to Russia's abdication of the rôle necessarily assigned to her by her interests in the extreme East.

THE RIOTS AT KURNOOL.

THE Madras Mail correspondent at Kurnool gives the following account of the riots at that place:—

During this month (Nov.) we have had two serious riots in this large town of 24,500 inhabitants, one-half of whom are Mahomedans, and the other half Hindoos. The first riot, on the 5th instant, was a mild one. The people looted the shops laughingly and jestingly, and dispersed when asked to. The riot of the 17th was a painful surprise to all. Unfortunately the Collector and the Police Superintendent were out on circuit. If they had been in both riots would probably have been prevented. How the looting on the second occasion began it is difficult to say. Some say that a poor woman bought a measure of cholum, and paid 2 annas to the merchant for it. He gave her a few pice change, when she said: "I have children at home and am very poor. How can I live if you charge such prices for grain?" Thereupon the Kometi replied: "If you don't want the grain, leave it and go!" She then threw the grain in his face, and a crowd gathering, the cry of Joot was raised, and some thousands were stealing grain from every shop. The looting began at 8 A.M. Mr. Shortt, the Town Inspector of Police, Mr. Hunter, the European Head Constable, and Mr. Huggan, the Reserve Inspector, tried, with the help of the police constables, to disperse the mob. Mr. Swamikannu Pillay, the Deputy Collector, also begged the people to disperse, and tried to persuade the Kometis to accede to the wishes of the people; but all in vain. Mr. Shortt seized two thieves, when the mob crowded around him and he was roughly handled. He is unable to leave his house, and will suffer for some time from the blows he received. The mob increased in size, being augmented by the influx of people from the surrounding villages. They came from everywhere, the news of the looting spreading like wildfire. The Police Reserve was called out, and after some delay came. Mr. Huggan then ordered them to fix bayonets and charge the mob; but this they refused to do, saying, "They are throwing stones." The mob, seeing the police hesitate, grew bolder than ever. One shop after the other was emptied of its contents, and but little was done to prevent the people from carrying off whatever they wanted to. The Deputy Magistrate did his utmost to persuade the people to disperse; but neither persuasion nor threat would move the masses. Then the order was given to fire blank cartridges; but this, instead of frightening the mob, only amused them, and they laughed at the policemen. When all else had failed, the order was given to fire buckshot into the crowd. Some ten or fifteen rounds were fired. This thoroughly enraged the people, and, with hoots and yells and hurling a large volley of stones, they boldly attacked the police, who turned and scattered like frightened sheep in all directions. The Reserve Inspector, who tried to rally his men, was severely beaten, and he too had to make his escape. Some fifty of the rioters were wounded, and one will probably die. He was shot in the stomach, and peritonitis has set in. Another poor ryot, a witness in a lawsuit, was shot in the leg, and the bone was so badly fractured that the limb had to be taken off. Another received a shot in his lungs.

At the hospital Dr. Staunton and his assistants were kept busy cutting off bullets and caring for the wounded. After the police had been driven away the town was at the mercy of the mob, and it is a wonder that greater depredations were not committed. There was nothing, or almost next to nothing, to keep the crowd from the European quarters and from the Treasury; but the people were contented with looting the shops of the main bazaar, carrying off grain, cotton, ghee and everything they could lay their hands on. While this was going on Mr. M. R. Weld, the judge, was driving to Court. He was told about the rioting and looting that had been going on for some hours, and at once drove to the bazaar. He succeeded in rallying some of the police, and he then arrested some of the rioters and dispersed the rest. But for him the riot might have continued for an indefinite period. By about 3 P.M. quiet was restored, the crowds having dispersed.

On the morning of the 18th the merchants opened their shops and sold cholum at the rate of thirteen measures for the rupee, and all was peaceful, for when grain sells at this price all the people are quiet. The magistrate came in to-day from the district, having been sent for post-haste. The Inspector-General of Police and the Police Superintendent have also come in, as well as a company of Madras Infantry from Bellary. No further trouble is apprehended, unless the merchants again raise the price of grain.

The District Magistrate of Kurnool is holding an inquiry in camera regarding the recent riots. The police, it is found, did their best, but were too few to cope with the mob. Only one death has yet resulted from the firing of the police on the mob. The men arrested during the riot are being tried. Some have been sentenced to six and others to three months' imprisonment. Six companies of the 14th Madras Infantry are now quartered in the town, and guards are posted in all the principal streets.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

THERE has just been placed in the hall of the Bombay Municipal Corporation Offices a fine marble bust of Mr. E. C. K. Ollivant, C.I.E., C.S., who so successfully held the municipal commissioner-ship of the city for a period of nine years. The bust, like that of the late Sir Frank Souter, which also stands in the municipal hall, has been executed by Mr. E. Roscoe Mullins. It is of the purest white marble, and is supported on a high pedestal of veined marble, on the front panel of which the following inscription is wrought in gold letters:—"E. C. K. Ollivant, C.I.E., Bombay Civil Service, Municipal Commissioner for the City of Bombay, May 1881 to May 1890." Although, however, the carving has been most delicately done, it must be admitted, says the Times of India, that the artist has not quite succeeded in bringing into sufficient prominence all those distinguishing lines in Mr. Ollivant's somewhat striking physiognomy. The jaw is a trifle too heavy, while the nose and other features have not been given the requisite sharpness, but, considering that the sculptor had only a portrait for his guide, he has done remarkably well; and, despite the one or two little matters we have mentioned, the bust is, under the circumstances, an exceedingly good representation of the original.

As numerous statements have been made in the Calcutta newspapers respecting the approaching retirement from the Bench of Mr. Justice Wilson, it may as well be stated, the same paper remarks, that nothing has as yet been decided, though the learned Judge contemplates leaving India in February. It has been an open secret that Mr. Justice Wilson has long aimed at an appointment as Chief Justice, and it may be that his being passed over for the Madras appointment by Sir Arthur Collins has induced him to believe in the futility of further cherishing his hopes. The unanimous opinion in Bengal is that the Government will lose in him a servant whose place will be difficult to fill, whilst lawyers are unanimous in saying that his strict adherence to the rules and forms of practice have been invaluable in checking that tendency to go-as-you-please laxity to which the influences of climate and the Oriental disposition so readily lend themselves. It is on the eve of the departure of such men as Mr. Justice Wilson that the public reiterate the oft-repeated query—"Why cannot our legal appointments be filled by local talent?"

An unfounded rumour has been put in circulation to the effect that Mr. Lee, chairman of the Calcutta Corporation, is about to proceed home, on ten months' leave. In the event of Mr. Lee taking leave, the Englishman says, it would not be until April next, and would then probably extend over eighteen, and not ten, months. It is doubtful whether, having regard to the harmony with which the chairman and the commissioners have worked together during the past two years, he will seek to leave them at so early a date as April. The question, however, will possibly depend upon the decision of the commissioners with regard to the pay of Mr. Lee's appointment, which is at present below the normal.

A Bombay paper says:—A very noticeable change was to be seen on Saturday in the uniform of the Viceroy's Bodyguard as they escorted Lord Lansdowne through Calcutta. Instead of the small caps with aigrettes, the officers and men wore a very handsome red, dark blue, and gold turban. This innovation, which is most becoming to the wearers, has been made by the express wishes of her Majesty the Queen-Empress, who desired that the turban should replace the old head dress.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Good-Service Pensions.—It is notified that, on the recommendation of the Government of India, her Majesty's Government has been pleased to confer a good-service pension on each of the under-mentioned officers, with effect from the dates specified:—

From April 6, 1891, in room of Col. (Brig.-Gen.) Sir W. S. A. Lockhart, K.C.B., C.S.I., Bengal Inf., succeeded to the colonel's allowance—Col. DAVID ROBERTSON, Bengal Inf.

Dates of Commissions.—Ensign, Jan. 20, 1861; lieutenant, March 29, 1862; captain, Jan. 1, 1870; brevet major, Sept. 11, 1872; major, Jan. 20, 1881; brevet lieutenant-colonel, July 18, 1879; lieutenant-colonel, Jan. 20, 1887; brevet colonel, July 18, 1883.

War Services.—India, 1857.—Siege and capture of Delhi, actions of Bulandshahr, Aligarh, Akrahad, and Agra (twice severely wounded).—(Medal and clasp.) China, 1860.—Actions of Sinho, Chankiawan, and Tang Chow, and occupation of Pekin.—(Medal and two clasps.) Afghanistan, 1878-80.—Actions of Saif-ud-din, Ahmad Khel, Arzu, and Patkao Shana.—(Mentioned in despatches; medal and clasp; brevet of lieutenant-colonel; C.B.) North-West Frontier, 1881.—Expedition against the Mahsud-Waziris.—(Mentioned in despatches.)

From July 26, 1891, in room of Col. W. G. Cubitt, V.C., D.S.O., Staff Corps, succeeded to the colonel's allowance—SURGEON-GENERAL WILLIAM ROCHE RICE, M.D., INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE (BENGAL).

Dates of Commissions.—Assistant-surgeon, Nov. 20, 1856; surgeon, Nov. 20, 1868; surgeon-major, July 1, 1873; brigade-surgeon, April 10, 1889; deputy surgeon-general, Dec. 9, 1887; surgeon-general, March 29, 1890.

Appointments.—On duty at Indore, Kampti and Jabalpor, and in medical charge, 3rd Irregular Cav., 1857-58; civil surgeon, Saugor, 1858-63; at the Medical Store Depot, 1863-65; civil surgeon, Jabalpor, 1865-87; inspector-general of Civil Hospitals, North-Western Provinces and Oude, 1887-90; surgeon-general and sanitary commissioner with the Government of India, 1890-91.

War Services.—India, 1857.—Present and under fire at Indore when the outbreak occurred there on July 1, 1857; afterwards employed with the Nagpore Field Force and in Central India.—(Medal).

Manipore and the Recent Honours.—Most people probably noticed, says the Pioneer, how the telegram a few days ago that conveyed the news of the honours bestowed for recent military operations was carefully worded so as to omit all mention of Manipore. "Services rendered in connection with Burma, Hazara, Zho Valley and Chin Frontier Expeditions" was the way it ran. It is true that the commander of the Manipore Field Force, General Collett, receives the K.C.B.; but this was a mere coincidence. General Collett had been previously recommended for the honour for his services in Burma in 1889, and his name only just escaped appearing in the last Birthday Gazette. The Secretary of State and H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief were agreed in thinking that nothing should be done which would tend to preserve the memory of the miserable Manipore affair, and no one will be disposed to question the soundness of their judgment.

The Central Rifle Meeting.—A military correspondent writes to the Times of India of Dec. 5, from the camp at the Central Rifle Meeting:—"The Musketry Cup was won by the 9th Bombay Inf., making 184 at each distance; total, 368. They take the Cup, which they have won twice before in succession. The Council Plate was won by Havildar Shaik Abdul Kadir, 9th Bombay Inf., with 90 points; 2nd. Subedar Mir Ali, 13th Bombay Inf., 89 points. The Bombay Army Cup (2,000 rs.) was won by the Worcestershire Regt. The Lord Harris Challenge Cup was won by the 2nd Bombay Lancers, 3rd Team. The Central India Horse and 3rd Lancers, H.C., tied with 152 points, but it goes to the latter, who made the most points in shooting. A great number of ladies and visitors were on the range watching the Harris Challenge Cup competition, among whom were H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, many ladies, General Blundell, all the Headquarter Staff, and others who could find their way here from Poona. Up to the present Mrs. Rivett Carnac heads the score for the Diana Cup with a score of 66, but Mrs. von Donop has made a score of 63, and is improving in her shooting.

Miss May Pottinger is also shooting well. A great many officers are shooting in the Revolver Competition and Pool, but no very high scores have been made up to date. The R. batty. Royal Horse Art. team won the British Lloyd-Lindsay team with 112 points, the Bombay Light Horse being second with 90 points; but no particular style was exhibited by the winning team."

Passages in Private Steamers.—The rules for passages in private steamers are as follows:—(i.) The General Officer Commanding, Bombay District, is to exercise his discretion in providing passages for officers proceeding home on medical certificate, or otherwise entitled to passage, by steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, or give them passages in other vessels, provided the latter have suitable passenger accommodation and carry surgeons. In all cases the General Officer Commanding is to be guided in his decision by considerations of economy, and as a rule officers should be provided with passages by the line which is most economical to Government, both as regards passage-money and date of sailing, provided the accommodation is considered suitable. (ii.) Officers, whether proceeding on leave on medical certificate or not, may be sent from Kurrachee when the expense of rail passage to that port is less than that to Bombay. (iii.) Officers allowed to make their own arrangements will receive the British India Steam Navigation Company's rate of passage-money, viz. 525 rs., as heretofore. They are entitled to rail passage to Bombay or Kurrachee, whichever journey may be the cheaper.

The Government of India have sanctioned a wing of the 5th Bombay Cav. being sent to Fort Sandeman, in relief of the 12th Bengal Cav.

Two squadrons of the 19th Bengal Lancers are to be sent to Kohat, to watch the borderland below the Samana Range.

A company of 6th Madras Inf. was being held in readiness to depart to the north-west of the Presidency at a moment's notice, as grain riots were feared in that district.

A general parade of the troops in Poona and Kirkee was to take place on Monday, Dec. 7, for the purpose of witnessing the ceremony of the presentation to Col. Westmacott, C.B., D.S.O., with the insignia of the Companion of the Bath, and the D.S.O. to Col. F. W. Rhodes and Surg.-Major Wilkins, Indian Medical Service.

Amongst the passengers who recently returned to India were Colonel Caldecott, the Superintendent of the Gunpowder Factory at Kirkee, and Major-General Walker, R.A., the Director-General of Ordnance, who have during their stay at home settled the arrangements for the manufacture of smokeless powder and other high explosives in India. The experiments will, it is understood, be carried on at Kirkee.

Lieut.-Colonel A. M. Hogg, 6th Bombay Cavalry, has been granted a year's furlough to England.

The following ladies have been appointed as Sisters in the Indian Nursing Service:—Miss Beatrice Luxton Cann, Miss Jemima Campbell, Miss Eleanor Rose Green, Miss Fanny Jane Harris, Miss Mary Lavinia Hayes, Miss Mary Hammans, Miss Mary Katherine Lowrie, Miss E. Maude Russell, Miss Florence Emma Walton, and Miss Agnes May Waterhouse.

Lord Wenlock has selected Subadar-Major Mahomed Anief Sirdar Bahadur, of the Body Guard, a Native Aide-de-Camp in his Excellency's Personal Staff, in room of Subadar-Major Oosman Khan Sirdar Bahadur, whose tenure of office expired on Dec. 8. He served in the Indian Mutiny in 1857-58. He also proceeded to Cabul. For his services he has been awarded three medals, and he is a Member of the Order of British India of the 1st Class.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Dec. 2.]

Lord Wenlock, accompanied by Mr. Rees, private secretary, and Captain Baring, aide-de-camp, arrived at Calcutta on Nov. 27, by the steamer Landaura. His Excellency was met on board by Captain Harbord, aide-de-camp, Sir Philip Hutchins, Mr. Lambert, and others. After calling at Government House, his Excellency drove to Sir Philip Hutchins' for lunch, and left by the afternoon train for Darjeeling, whence the party were to return on Dec. 1, probably leaving Calcutta for Madras on the 9th.

Bengal National Chamber of Commerce.—The annual report of the Committee of this Chamber for the past year is, on the whole, an encouraging one. Seven new members were elected during the year, which saw the realisation of one of the Chamber's cherished hopes, namely, its right of representation in the Port Trust recognised by Government. The Committee laments the want of a permanent habitation, and makes an earnest appeal to the "public spirit and liberality of the numerous members, friends, and supporters of the Chamber for contributions in aid of this object." The Committee then give a résumé of the subjects which engaged their attention during the past year, which, as they have already been before the public, it is scarcely necessary to notice.

The Indian Association has addressed the Government of Bengal on the Chowkidari Bill, in favour of enlarging the functions of punchayats.

We (Englishman) regret to hear that Mr. Cooper, the third officer, has lost his life in the stranding of the Lawada. The latest advices give little hope of saving the vessel, but, with the sad exception of Mr. Cooper, the officers and crew have been safely landed.

It is announced that the provision opium to be brought forward for sale by public auction next year will consist of about 25,800 chests, prepared at the Paina Factory, and 28,200 prepared at Ghazipore. The chests in each case will contain about 1 maund 18 seers 12 chittacks of pure opium, besides 9 seers 6 chittacks used for pasting the leaves of the shell.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Dec. 3.

The Late Mr. F. B. Hanna.—A very imposing funeral, attended with military honours, was accorded the late Mr. F. B. Hanna, who had been Commandant of the Madras Railway Volunteers. The four head-quarter companies of this corps and the Madras Volunteer Guards turned out, and under the orders of the General Commanding the district, all military officers off duty attended. The other services were also well represented, among the immense concourse of gentlemen being the Members of Council and the High Court Judges. The chief mourners were the principal officials of the Madras Railway, and the pall bearers were all military officers. The bands of the Madras Volunteer Guards and the Somersetshire Light Infantry played, and the funeral service was performed by the Archdeacon and two chaplains. The volleys at the grave were fired by the Volunteers.

The Stranding of the "Waverley."—The Court of Inquiry held into the stranding of the steamer Waverley in Madras Harbour has delivered the following judgment:—"The Court considered the stranding was an accident which cannot be said to have been caused by incompetency or misconduct of anyone concerned. We are of opinion it would have been better if the pilot had dropped anchor and steamed round instead of trying to turn the ship by going ahead and astern. The captain is said to have suggested this, but the pilot says he did not do so until too late. The fact of the pilot not having taken that course was, we consider, an error of judgment. The Court cannot close this judgment without remarking on the number of suggestions the captain thought proper to make to the pilot. It cannot be said, however, that he interfered with the pilot's orders, or that he did not do his best to carry them out."

The district of Salem, which hitherto formed a part of the Coimbatore Public Works Division, has been recently organised into a separate Public Works Division and placed under an Executive Engineer with Salem as his headquarters.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Dec. 5.

The Bombay Co-operative Stores.—A strike occurred on Nov. 28 among the shopmen of the Bombay Army and Navy and Civil Service Co-operative Stores. We (Times of India) are informed that it arose in consequence of some vagueness about a notice as to an increase in the hours of working which the work-people understood to be permanent instead of relating to the busy season only. The matter having been satisfactorily explained, the strikers apologised for their conduct and resumed work on Nov. 30. It appears that intimidation had been exercised, and a prosecution of the offenders is said to be under the consideration of the managing agents. It should also be stated that none of the European staff or the office staff took part in the strike; on the contrary, they redoubled their efforts and did their best to do the work that should have been done by the men who had left the premises. Relays of packers and coolies were promptly obtained, so that the business practically suffered nothing on account of the strike.

Accident to the P. and O. Steamer "Mirzapore."—This steamer, while being taken into the Victoria Dock, Bombay, on Nov. 30, ran into the "bull's nose" and sustained serious damages. The following official report of the occurrence was received from Mr. I. M. Shields, the acting superintendent of the P. and O. Co.:—"The P. and O. Co.'s ss. Mirzapore, while entering the Victoria Dock on Monday night, in pilotage charge of Mr. Harvie, struck against the dock walls, staving in her bows and doing considerable damage to the forepart of the vessel, but fortunately the collision bulkhead kept watertight. Steps were at once taken to discharge the cargo as promptly as possible, and as it was found that the Mirzapore could not continue her voyage to China, she was at once replaced by the Ravenna, which, it is hoped, will be despatched by Thursday morning, so as to be at Colombo in good time to take on the outward English mails for China. On account of the accident to the Mirzapore it will be necessary to levy a general average contribution from consignees of cargo by that vessel."

The Bombay Government, in a Resolution issued on Nov. 27, dissolved the Municipality of Dhanduka, as not being competent to perform and persistently making default in its duties.

The annual report of the Administration of the Bombay Salt Department exhibits an increase of 8,58,255-11-4 rs. in gross, and 7,82,735-14-4 rs. net receipts as compared with last year.

The directors of the Bombay Burma Trading Corporation have resolved to recommend the declaration of an 18 per cent. dividend this year, the same as last year.

On the motion of Colonel Merewether, the Standing Committee of the Bombay Corporation, at their meeting on Dec. 2, sanctioned a grant of 2,500 rs. for lighting the University Clock Tower with electricity during the ensuing year.

At the annual general meeting of the Bombay University Senate, to be held on Dec. 12, Surgeon-General Pinkerton would propose and Mr. Ghanasham Nilkanth Nadkarni, B.A., LL.B., would second the election of Dr. Peterson, M.A., as registrar for the ensuing two years.

The Bombay Cotton Trade Association, at their annual meeting, passed a resolution authorising the committee to incur the necessary expenditure for obtaining plans and estimates for the new Cotton Exchange Buildings proposed to be erected at Colaba, as also for cost of preparing memorandum and articles of association of a new company in connection therewith.

The German cruiser Schwalbe, 670 tons, under the command of Captain Oehrichs, arrived in Bombay Harbour on Nov. 26 from Zanzibar, which port she left on the 21st. The Schwalbe, which has been cruising on the Zanzibar coast, carries eight big guns and quickfiring machine guns. She visits Bombay to be docked for repairs, and will remain for about six weeks, after which she will again sail for Zanzibar.

The Bombay Government will, it is to be feared, have to deal with something very like a serious scarcity, the Times of India of Dec. 5 says. "Unless rain falls within the next fortnight—and there seems little prospect of it—the failure of the rabi or late harvest will be absolute in a great portion of the Deccan. Already—and we are at a season when the supply should be at its highest point—we hear reports of a serious scarcity of water, while the want of fodder for the cattle is equally felt."

The Hon. Mr. Basil Lang having resigned his seat in the Council of his Excellency the Right Hon. the Governor of Bombay for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations, his Excellency the Governor, under the authority vested in him by the Statute 24 and 25 Victoria, Chapter 67, Section 32, has been pleased to nominate Mr. F. L. Latham to be an Additional Member of the said Council.

A case, somewhat similar to a recent one in England against Dr. Barnardo, opened at Bombay on Nov. 30 in the High Court, when Miss Minnie Abrams, superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Girls' School, appeared to show cause why a minor said to be illegally detained should not be delivered up to her natural mother. The defendant deposed that the petitioner was practically a pauper and of feeble intellect. The girl was sixteen last June, and would soon be able to earn her own living by teaching. The petitioner had no home, but living with her was a reputed Freethinker and man of reputed bad moral character. The petitioner has abandoned her child for eight years, and the girl was unwilling to go. Judgment was reserved.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Rangoon correspondent of the Times :—

DEC. 16.—The Wun of Momein has proposed to pay a visit to the Deputy Commissioner at Bhamo for the purpose of discussing frontier affairs. The Deputy Commissioner has replied that he would be very glad to see the Wun of Momein. It is hoped that the meeting may result in the further improvement of arrangements for protection of the caravan route from China. Sir A. Mackenzie has ordered the Wun of Momein to be well received and entertained.

DEC. 17.—Two sharp encounters have taken place to the north-east of Katha between a large gang of dacoits, supposed to be the immediate followers of the Tsawbwa of Wuntho, and a body of military police under Lieutenant Magrath. On the first occasion the dacoits numbered 60, and on the second they were 100 strong. They were well armed. The police, consisting of 30 Punjabees, dispersed them, captured their camp of 50 huts, and seized a quantity of provisions. One sepoy was killed and one wounded. Owing to the transport coolies bolting, the column was unable to follow up the dacoits, whose loss is unknown. Troops from Mansi have been sent to co-operate with Lieutenant Magrath's force. A column will also be despatched from Mogoung.

DEC. 20.—There is no improvement in the distressed districts of Upper Burma. The ex-Tsawbwa of Wuntho is being followed up by various detachments of troops and military police. The difficult nature of the country makes the pursuit very laborious. It is believed that the Tsawbwa is likely to surrender, as he is worn out by being constantly pursued. Lieutenant Donald Macnabb, the political officer at Haka, who will accompany the columns to be despatched to the Chin country as political officer, has marched from Haka to Mengwa accompanied by a small escort. Lieutenant Macnabb was well received at Theta and other localities, and slept in the chiefs' houses at the various villages. The Chins to the south of Shwebwa are reported to be hostile, and some fighting is likely to occur. Owing to a delay in the commissariat arrangements, the columns have been unable as yet to start. Considerable progress has been made with the roads in the neighbourhood of Haka. Sir James Dornier, Commander-in-Chief in Madras, arrived at Rangoon yesterday after a lengthened tour of inspection through Upper Burma, and he is now the guest of the Chief Commissioner. It is understood that after the cold weather there will be a redistribution of garrisons in Burma. Sir James Dornier is of opinion that the troops should be more concentrated. He leaves Rangoon for Madras on the 23rd inst. The Government of India has sanctioned a considerable increase in the staff of the Public Works Department in Burma. One superintending engineer and twenty-one executive and assistant engineers are to be added to the existing staff. These additional officers were urgently required. The local Government is taking active steps to increase the number and efficiency of the Volunteer force.

A minute by Sir A. Mackenzie on Volunteering in Rangoon has been published. He expresses his satisfaction that in the majority of public departments every able-bodied European and Eurasian clerk has joined or expressed his willingness to join either the Volunteers or the Reserve; but he points out that in certain departments the officers hold aloof from the movement. Hitherto such excuses as general decrepitude and ill-health have been accepted as reasonable excuse for not joining the Volunteers. In the Comptroller's Department nearly 40 per cent. of the clerks represent themselves as physically incapable of even joining the reserve. The Chief Commissioner observes that if this be really the case, it is to be feared that the work of the department must suffer, and the necessity for gradually weeding out the physically incapable clerks should be borne in mind.

The well-known African traveller, Lieutenant Ehlers, of the German army, who has spent some months in visiting various districts in Burma, is leaving for Siam. He will start from Moulmein for Zimme, whence he will descend to Bangkok. Thence he will go, via Luang Prabang, to Annam and Tonquin, and will ultimately visit the Philippine Islands and the Dutch East Indian colonies. The object of his travels is to observe the various systems of colonisation adopted by other countries for the purpose of utilising his knowledge in the German African colonies. Lieutenant Ehlers speaks in very warm terms of the courtesy shown to him and of the assistance received by him from all the British officials in India and Burma whom he has met.

A Reuter despatch from Rangoon, dated Dec. 19, says :—The column which is to proceed against the Baungshwe tribe in the Chin country will be commanded by Colonel Gunning instead of Colonel Chalmers, as previously arranged. This force has been strengthened by twenty-five mounted infantry of the 12th Burma Regiment. The force is collected at Mengwa awaiting rations. The officers attached to the expedition are Lieutenants Sackville-West and Western, of the King's Royal Rifle Corps; Lieutenants R. M. and E. F. Rainey, of the 12th Madras Native Infantry; Captain E. L. Holloway, of the 4th Madras Pioneers; Lieutenant Nicols, who will be in command of the Coolie Corps and 500 Goorkhas; and Surgeon Marshall. Lieutenant R. M. Rainey will be staff officer and Lieutenant Macnabb political officer, while Surgeon Newland, of the 12th Madras Native Infantry, will be senior medical officer. Surgeon Philson will be medical officer of the British troops. The force will also include 400 Burmese. Another detachment of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, in charge of Captain Allgood, Lieutenant Markham, and Second Lieutenant Lainson, has left Mengwa en route for Haka. The headquarters of the 12th Burma Regiment have been delayed at Pank owing to the difficulty in procuring carriers. The weather is fine and the health of the troops good.

A TELEGRAM DATED THAYETMYO, Nov. 26, says :—The 12th Burma Regiment, under the command of Major Howlett, and 150 men of the King's Royal Rifles, under Major Gunning, embark to-morrow by the steamer Irrawady for Pokoko, en route to the Chin frontier. On arrival at Pokoko the troops will march up in detachments. The troops for the Bounghshwe column rendezvous at Minywa and march into the hills on Dec. 18. Major Gunning goes in command with Lieutenant R. M. Rainey as Staff Officer. Surgeons Newland and Philson accompany the column as medical officers.

IN THE MATTER of the Burma-Tonquin boundary it is understood, so we (Pioneer) learn from Burma, that the Secretary of State and his advisers are in favour of taking up the furthest limit of Burmese boundaries, but that the Government of India is opposed to this and anxious to keep back as far as possible. If the former course be adopted we get Kyaingchaing: if not the danger is that this State will most probably be occupied by the French.

THE STATUE of the late Sir Arthur Phayre, first Chief Commissioner of British Burma, was unveiled at the Agri-Horticultural Gardens, Rangoon, on Nov. 18, by Sir Alexander Mackenzie, in the presence of a large gathering of all classes of the community. The statue is seven feet high, and represents Sir Arthur Phayre wearing his three orders of Knighthood, K.C.S.I., K.C.B., and K.C.M.G., in his general's uniform. He stands bareheaded with his face turned slightly to the left, his plumed hat resting on the right arm and pressed close to the body. In his left hand he carries his gloves. The left knee is slightly bent, and the whole posture is one of dignity and yet absolute ease.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

PROPOSALS FOR REMEDYING the defects in the present system of supply and distribution of water at Umballa are to be carried out at once.

THE PROSECUTION of Mr. Smith, late Managing-Agent of the Rohilkund and Kumaon Bank at Cawnpore, who was charged with criminal breach of trust, broke down completely at the High Court at Allahabad, counsel for the prosecution ultimately asking leave to withdraw. The accused was acquitted on all counts.

SIR JAMES LYALL arrived at Jagadhri on Nov. 23, received the Municipalities of Jagadhri and Buria, and then rode to Dadarpore on the Western Jumna Canal, where he was the guest of Colonel Ottley. Next day Sir James Lyall was to visit the head-works of the canal, returning to Jagadhri on the 25th, leaving on the 26th for Hardwar, arriving at Saharanpore on the 27th and Buddarpore on the 28th.

THE LAHORE PAPER learns that under the orders of the Local Government, Mr. E. B. Alexander, C.S., Magistrate and Collector, has been placed on special duty in connection with the scheme for the revision and readjustment of district establishments in the North-Western Provinces and Oude. These establishments were fixed some twenty years or more ago, under what has been known as "Mr. Cust's scheme," and the large increase in work in the offices of collectors and magistrates has led to the present inquiry for revision of establishment.

A RESOLUTION APPEARS in a recent Gazette dealing at considerable length with the official management of the great Hardwar Fair of last April. It is apparently almost a unique experience for one of these monster gatherings to be held at Hardwar, as this one was, without an outbreak of cholera, which, once it appears in the gathering, is carried abroad by the pilgrims as they disperse to every part of the surrounding country, says the Pioneer. The spot being at the foot of the hills the gathering is attended by swarms of hill-men from Kumaon, Gurhwal and the Nepal frontier, whose dress and habits make them certain marks for the contagion if there is any abroad. But this year all dangers were successfully eluded. Though effective, the procedure was necessarily expensive, the result being a net loss of 40,000 rs., which the Lieutenant-Governor has consented to take up as a charge against provincial revenue. The officers concerned in the arrangements come in for unstinted praise from Government, notably Mr. Patterson, the collector of Saharanpore, Dr. Hutcheson, the sanitary commissioner, and Captain Ryves, deputy inspector-general of police.

THE NATIVE STATES.

HYDERABAD.

HIS HIGHNESS' Government have sanctioned the sum of 3,000 rs. for rain-making experiments by dynamite explosions. These experiments will be conducted under the supervision of Mr. A. J. Dunlop, Inspector-General of Revenue, and his Excellency the Prime Minister and the Nawab Vikar-ul-Umra, Revenue Minister, propose to be present on the occasion.

Mr. Plowden, the Resident, has been somewhat indisposed. His Highness the Nizam was to receive the Resident in durbar at the Chow Mahalla Palace on Dec. 3, when Mr. Plowden was to present to the Nizam his credentials, as also the Kharita from his Excellency the Viceroy.

Captain E. S. Masters, Staff Corps, has been confirmed in his appointment as Cantonment Magistrate of Secunderabad, vice Captain Ravenshaw, transferred to the Political Department. This appointment has given general satisfaction to the residents of Secunderabad, as Captain Masters is a terror to evil doers. The heavy sentences he has recently passed on old offenders have caused many of the budmashes to migrate to fresh fields and pastures new.

THE report from Hyderabad that a compromise had been effected between the Nizam's Government and Sirdar Diler Jung in the matter of the pending suit in the Bombay High Court have become less assured lately, and the officiating Resident is said to be exerting himself to induce the Government to let the matter go on to the bitter end. The Pioneer observes:—The history of Mr. Plowden's reign in Cashmere has prepared the world to anticipate that in any matter requiring discretion he and judgment are to be found on different sides. What is to be gained by litigation? The Nizam's Government have slept on their claim against Abdul Huk for so long that it is absurd to say that they are taking it up as a matter of principle; and as a matter of expediency the answer to the plaint which was published by the Sirdar last September, though of course it did not show his whole hand, showed enough to make it clear that he has a good deal to say on his side of the case, and to ensure a prolonged and enormously costly trial. The Nizam's Government is believed to have spent already some five lacs of rupees in one way and another upon the suit; if it continues for two years more—and it can scarcely be finished under that time—it will probably cost as much more. On the other hand, the utmost that the Government, if successful, considering Abdul Huk's counter-claim, can expect to realise would seem to be about fifteen lacs. And who is to guarantee success? As everyone must know the only certainty about the law in a case like this is the certainty that there will be much mutual recrimination, and that a vast deal will be said and suggested against the reputations both of living and dead. The only interest that will be served by going on is the interest of the lawyers, who must see before them the éclat, the excitement, and the rewards of a great fight.

The Pioneer, in concluding an article on the report of the Chloroform Commissions, says:—“We cannot conclude this article without alluding to the munificence of the Prince who has made this investigation possible. Probably no other ruling Prince in the world would have incurred the expense which the Nizam has in this case, and in few other countries could experiments on so large a scale have been conducted. From beginning to end the cost of the Commission and of the printing of the report will not be less than 10,000/. The report itself will be distributed to the whole of the civilised world, and, whether the conclusions are right or wrong, the record of the experiment will remain an indestructible storehouse of facts never before collected, from which those learned in the subject can draw their own conclusions. When delivering a lecture at Bombay Dr. Lawrie said:—“Many people I have conversed with appear to think that it gave me an immense amount of trouble, and that I had to employ a great deal of persuasion to get the Commission appointed. Gentlemen, I never spoke to the Nizam but once about the appointment of the Commission. The Nizam is one of the cleverest men in India, and directly I explained to him what was wanted he understood it exactly, and after a short conversation he said he would issue orders for the Commission.” All honour to the Prince who is so ready to listen to the voice of science, and who is so willing to spend thousands on the possibility of being able to demonstrate how to ‘save people's lives.’”

CASHMERE AFFAIRS.

The Lahore paper writes:—The serious responsibility which, as we said, the Government of India have undertaken in restoring the Maharaja of Cashmere to power is already becoming apparent, for impartial observers in Cashmere can already observe signs of friction, and we are in daily receipt of letters of the old intriguing kind regarding alleged proceedings in the State. Anyone with a little foresight and knowledge of Cashmere affairs can easily see that, unless the brothers honestly make common cause together, the administration is bound to fail again. The Maharaja's advisers have not proved themselves of noted integrity previously, and unless the Maharaja now reposes confidence in his brother Raja Amar Singh, and acts by his advice, his old ill-advisers will soon cause trouble. The department which has proved least satisfactory under the present administration of Cashmere is, perhaps, its police. There have been, it is said, more thefts; and person and property are more unsafe now than ever. The celebrated police torture case has brought to light many underhand practices, but action is suspended. If the delinquents are punished, police oppression will be checked, and life and property will be more secure in Cashmere.

One result of the Viceroy's visit to Cashmere is that a fresh reconnaissance has been ordered of the northern route for a railway, that is by way of Abbottabad. This would be as much a strategical as a commercial line. Mr. J. R. Bell is now examining the country about the Kishnaganga River with a view of seeing if an alignment in that direction is possible.

RAJPUTANA AND CENTRAL INDIA.

The opening-out of the Native States of Rajputana and Central India is likely, says the Pioneer, to make steady progress during the next few years, a forward policy being in favour with most of the Durbars. Thus, in Rajputana there is the Jodhpore-Bikanir line well under construction, and the survey of a broad-gauge railway from near Jeypore southwards to the Chambal has been completed. The Gwalior Council of Regency have practically made up their minds to connect Bina on the Indian Midland system with Guna on the Grand Trunk Road from Agra to Bombay; and, as we recently indicated, this line will in the future be extended probably to the Chambal, there to meet the Jeypore railway. The Indian Midland Company will, it is presumed, connect Saugor with Katni at the earliest opportunity, as they will thus place their line within easy reach of the Umria coalfields. The importance of having rapid communication with these fields in case of the sea-transport of coal being affected in time of war should not be overlooked. In the southern part of the Central India Agency the Bhopal-Ujjain project is rapidly maturing. This is a joint affair between the Gwalior and Bhopal Durbars, and a beginning will be made upon it next year.

A steady stream of immigration has set in to Western Malwa from the districts of Rajputana most affected by the late failure of rains. The people who are on the move are well-to-do cultivators, and they drive their cattle with them, their great object being to secure pasture. They are only following the traditions of Rajputana in thus migrating for a time into Western Malwa, where fodder is fairly plentiful.

THE SIKH STATES.

Colonel Grey, C.S.I., Commissioner of the Delhi Division, who was especially deputed for the purpose by his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, in a full Durbar held by his Highness the Maharaja of Patiala on Nov. 25, and in the presence of his Highness the Maharaja of Dholpore, his Highness the Kanwar Sahab of Patiala, Sardar Jewan Singh, C.S.I., of Shahegadpore, and all the Ministers and high officials of the State, presented to his Highness the Maharaja, on behalf of the Imperial Government, jewels for his Highness's newly-born son and heir. The Commissioner made a brief but suitable speech, which was replied to by his Highness the Maharaja in well-chosen words. His Highness the Maharaja, and everyone connected with the Patiala State, feel highly pleased with this mark of the favour and consideration of the Imperial Government towards the house of Patiala.

THE BOMBAY STATES.

The opening ceremony of the Victoria Jubilee Hospital was performed by his Highness the Jamsaheb on Dec. 3. According to the correspondent of the Times of India, the élite of Jamnagar, including several European ladies, were present. The hospital is a spacious, airy building, and has been built by our able State Engineer, Mr. McLeland, at a cost of about fifty thousand rupees. Rich poshaks were presented to Mr. McLeland and the medical officers.

The death, at the age of 86, of Govrishankar Udayashankar, ex-Dewan of Bhownugger, on Dec. 1, has removed, says a Bombay paper, what was perhaps the last living link between the India of the beginning of the century and the India of to-day. Mr. Govrishankar's public service began in 1822, when British interests in Kattywar were represented by little more than some Customs dues made over half a century before by the then effete administration of Surat, and when the province itself, relieved by us from the predatory taxation of the Gaekwar and the Peishwa, was standing at the parting of the ways between anarchy and a stable and prosperous government. Bhownugger and India have lost in him a native statesman of rare gifts and of signal devotion to the best interests of his own people. He conversed with Sir John Malcolm in his youth, and in his old age he congratulated Queen Victoria's grandson on the mighty heritage that lies before him. Scholars in particular loved to see in Govrishankar a type of the Hindoo at his best, rising above the distinctions of place and caste, and holding fast to the only links that run through this great continent, the links of philosophy and of religion.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

A REUTER'S telegram from Teheran dated Dec. 19 states:—It is officially announced that the tobacco monopoly in the interior of Persia is abolished, and that the Chief Priest has been requested to raise the interdict recently laid by the Mollahs upon smoking. The Persian Government grants to the corporation a monopoly for the export of tobacco, and will discuss the question of the indemnity to be paid to it. The Teheran Gazette states that the Syed who recently declared himself a prophet and caused a revolt in the province of Mazanderan has not been sentenced to death, but merely imprisoned; the Shah deciding that his life should be spared.

According to the Berlin correspondent of the Daily News, considerable sensation has been caused in St. Petersburg by the statement from Teheran that the ex-King Milan has been appointed by the Shah to the command of the Persian cavalry. Whether he owes this appointment to his military capacities as proved at Slivniza against the Bulgarians, or to the experience he has gained on the racecourse and in the circus, is not stated. The Czar is said to have been particularly astonished at the Shah's choice.

A lecture has been delivered at St. Petersburg by General Pevtsoff on his scientific expedition from Prejevalsk, a place named after the late General Prejevalsky, to the Kuen Luen and North-Western Tibet in 1889 and 1890. The following is a brief summary of it:—

General Pevtsoff, Lieutenants Roborofsky and Koyloff, accompanied by a mineralogist and an escort of a dozen Cossacks, started on May 26, 1889, traversed the Thian Shan, and entered the desert of Western Kashgar, which stretches from west to east for 800 versts and is 350 versts broad. Owing to the total absence of water, the expedition was obliged to quit this wilderness as quickly as possible, and go through Yaikand to Kerija and Nia, at which last place the travellers wintered. In April 1890 General Pevtsoff pushed forward over the pass in the Kuen Luen discovered by Lieutenant Koyloff. In the desert, at an average height of 17,000 feet, there was to be seen nothing but vast dreary wastes cleft into numberless crevices and fissures by the severe frost. The inhabitants of Kardjei or Kardshei, in the Kuen Luen, where a halt was made, declared that no strangers had ever before reached them from the south, and they themselves never ventured further southwards as they were unable to breathe freely the thin atmosphere prevailing in that part of the country. General Pevtsoff and his companions were the first Europeans to visit these deserts. The expedition then turned eastward to the low-lying plain of Toksan, which they were able to prove was below the level of the sea. Passing over the Thian Shan the expedition returned to Russian territory via Urumtsi, where a Chinese governor resides. The explorers traversed altogether a distance of 9,600 versts, or 6,400 miles. General Pevtsoff succeeded in taking very valuable measurements and making a large collection of animals, plants, geological specimens, and photographs. The ostensible object of the expedition was to continue the journey of General Prejevalsky, which was interrupted by the latter's death.

The Civil and Military Gazette publishes a translation of an account which has reached it in Persian manuscript of the alleged experience of a Turk in Afghanistan, who complains that he was arrested and imprisoned for four months in Badakshan by the Ameer's authority on suspicion of being a "British spy."

Well supplied with money and weapons by the Ameer, that dangerous cutlaw, Malik Chikai, according to the same authority, has caused a reign of terror in the Kurram valley. He is reported to have killed, since his return there, five or six men, captured one or two mud forts, and taken Malik Gholam a prisoner. A messenger arrived at Cabul from the seat of Malik Chikai's operations on Nov. 12, bringing news of his success and "display of skill." The messenger was, it is said, allowed audience at Paghman by the Ameer, who had made it conditional upon Chikai that he should "display skill" in the Ameer's behalf in Kurram, before he could be taken into the regular Afghan service.

Later reports from Cabul regarding the Manghal revolt say that only one clan, inhabiting Darra-i-Lej, revolted, and were soon suppressed by the Ameer's troops. It is, however, reported that the troops employed there suffer severely from malarious fever, and some losses occurred.

The Pioneer gives a biographical sketch of an Oriental gentleman who is at present attracting some notice in London. Sheikh Jamal-ud-din, we are told, is a well-known individual. He is said to be a native of Saidabad Hamdan in Persia, and at the age of twenty to have gone to Constantinople, where he eventually rose to the position of a member of the Educational Board. Being a freethinker, he had differences with the Sheikh-ul-Islam on religious matters, left Constantinople, and went to Egypt. Here for a long time he was Professor of Logic in the Cairo University. In 1879 he took part in the movement which forced the Khedive Ismail Pasha to abdicate in favour of Tewfik. In 1881 he was a rather prominent figure among those who supported the cause of Arabi Pasha. He was leniently treated, being merely deported to the Hedjaz. From Arabia he came to India, and after a short stay at Bombay proceeded to Hyderabad, Deccan, where he remained for about eighteen months, associating chiefly with the followers of Sir Syed Ahmad Khan of Aligarh. In spite, however, of their kindness to him he published a book in Persian entitled "Ressala-Rad-i-Naturia" directed against their doctrines. After a visit to Bhopal, he reached Calcutta early in 1882, where he remained some five or six months, gaining some small measure of notoriety by using seditious language in public. From Calcutta he journeyed on to Madras, and towards the close of the year sailed for England, where for a short time he was the guest of Mr. Wilfred Blunt. Not satisfied with England he crossed over to France and took up his abode in Paris, there assisting one James Senna, a Jew, to edit the Abu Nazara, an Arabic comic newspaper directed against the English. Later on, in connection with one Mahmud Effendi, he started the Mewat-ul-Wasqa, an Arabic newspaper, in which the English were regularly denounced. In 1886 Sheikh Jamal-ud-din went to Teheran, stopping on his way at Bushire, Shiraz, and Ispahan. But he found Persia too hot for his advanced ideas, and was forced to leave the country. Going to Moscow, he joined Monsieur Katkoff and his protégé Maharaja Dhuleep Singh. He made a very good impression in Russian society, and being a good talker, was soon looked upon as a great man, and quite overshadowed the unlucky Dhuleep Singh. This led to a quarrel between the two, which resulted in complete estrangement. Later on the Sheikh was said to have gone to St. Petersburg, and to have entered the Russian service. He was heard of in the spring of 1888 as trying to start an Arabic-Persian newspaper in favour of the Russian Government, but this came to naught. At the end of 1889 Jamal-ud-din appeared again at Teheran, where he represented himself to be an agent of the Russian Government. He remained on at Teheran till January 1891, when, on suspicion of his having written an anonymous letter to the Shah, abusing him for surrendering Persian interests to England, the Sheikh was seized and sent under a mounted escort to Kerman-shah, with a view to his being banished across the Turkish frontier.

In April last he had found his way to Busreh, and was staying with the Mufti of that place. In August 1891 certain Egyptian newspapers gave currency to a report of his murder, which was subsequently contradicted, and, as now reported, he has appeared again in London. He is one of those clever Mahomedans whom the Russians make use of for a time and then disown. That he should be made a lion of in London society is a little too ridiculous.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue:—

SINGAPORE, Dec. 15 (Times).—Advices from China dated Dec. 1 describe the origin of the troubles at Chaoyang. It appears that some cavalry destroyed a hill robber's village. The chief was absent and all his household were killed save a concubine, who was captured and given up to the Chaoyang magistrate. Afterwards, while the cavalry were being inspected outside Chaoyang, the robbers captured the town and killed the magistrate. They liberated the woman and held the town. The affair was purely a local one. The so-called massacres of Christians were merely faction fights with the local Confucian sect. After rioting and extorting money, this sect fled and joined the Chaoyang brigands.

HONG KONG, Dec. 15 (Paris correspondent).—The state of affairs in South China has improved during the last few weeks, and the Yangtse-Kiang district wears a particularly peaceful aspect. This must to a great extent be attributed to the opening of the annual civil service examinations, in which mandarins of all grades must take part in order to obtain promotion. The army also is just now going through a series of manœuvres, under the direction of the Viceroy of Nankin and Wuchang, at the close of which the annual promotions will be made in all ranks. This pause in the otherwise unsettled state of the country will be very welcome to the men of the foreign squadrons, who have lately been severely taxed by constant cruising. Nearly all the foreign men-of-war are at present anchored in the treaty ports of China. One section of the British squadron, however, has sailed for Japan; the other has been divided between Chinkiang and Hankow, and two gunboats have been ordered to Tientsin and Ichang. The French Admiral has distributed his fleet, which is composed of four men-of-war, between Woosung, Wuhu, Chinkiang, and Nankin, the latter being the principal centre of the French missions in China. The Russian fleet has concentrated principally at Hankow, which is the seat of Russian commercial enterprise in China. The Spanish vessels are now at Canton, which is the chief Spanish missionary establishment, and their number has lately been increased by the arrival of another vessel from Manila. The only Italian ship in Chinese waters is at present on the way to Hankow, where she will afford protection to the members of the Italian mission there. The rice crop this year has been an exceptionally good one, and the abundance of food will, no doubt, have great effect in pacifying the country.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 16 (Times).—Placards are posted up in many parts of the province of Shan-Si, in the west of China, urging a general massacre of the Christian missionaries. A serious attack has been made on the missionaries in Ho-Nan, but no details have yet reached here. The Northern rebellion has apparently been subdued.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 17 (Daily Chronicle).—The Viceroy Li Hung Chang has been seriously indisposed for several days past and confined to his bed. His physicians now announce that he is suffering from a severe attack of influenza, and his condition causes considerable anxiety. There have been no further disturbances. Much unrest is observable, however, in several districts, and several mission stations on the Yangtse-Kiang are said to be threatened. The Europeans have formed themselves into a defence league, armed and drilled, and ready for action at any moment. In the streets here, as well as at other treaty ports, the demeanour of the Chinese is menacing.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 19 (Daily Chronicle).—The chief acting general of the Imperial Army was thrown from his horse to-day and killed, his neck being broken. The loss is a serious one, as this officer was the most competent military commander in China, and Li Hung Chang, who had a high opinion of his abilities, will find much difficulty in filling his place.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 19 (Times).—The Korat Railway contract has been signed. Mr. Murray Campbell says that labour is plentiful. The King of Siam will cut the first sod in February. The contract time is five years, but it will probably be completed in less time. The Siamese Princes are most friendly towards England.

A telegram received in Paris from Hanoi announces that on Dec. 15 a strong French column succeeded in occupying the principal stronghold of the Chinese robber chief Lunky, in the mountainous district of Dongtrieu. The enemy offered a strong resistance to the advance of the French force, whose task was rendered more arduous by the difficulty of the ascent of the heights. It is believed that this success will pacify that district, which was the most disturbed in Tonquin.

A Reuter telegram of Dec. 21, from Brussels, says:—The Belgian Catholic Mission in Scheut has received the following telegram from China:—"Father Minn, a Chinese priest, and 1,000 Christians have been massacred on account of their faith. All the priests attached to the Belgian Mission are safe. Protection has arrived. (Signed) RUTGOS, Vicar Apostolic of Mongolia."

A telegram from San Francisco (Dec. 21), per Reuter says:—According to advices received here from China, Mr. Drummond, a well-known resident in Shanghai, who is versed in Chinese matters, has written to the North China Daily News stating that the Chinese Government, after making secret inquiries, has become convinced of the truth of the statements regarding the danger created by the monopoly of military power possessed by the Hunan and Anhui men. The Government, realising the necessity of prompt and vigorous action, has given orders for the enlistment and drilling of troops in the other provinces, especially in Canton. The writer adds that it is intended to send these troops as soon as they are ready, which will be in the spring, to the Yang-tse-Kiang provinces in order to break the Hunan predominance by disbanding a large proportion of the Hunan troops. It is also reported that as soon as it is considered safe a Viceroy, who is not a Hunanese, will be sent to Nankin. There is no doubt, concludes the letter, that this policy is a necessity, but that a critical situation will arise when it comes to be carried into execution.

The Kobe papers contain some account of the disasters caused by the earthquake of Oct. 28 in Kobe and Osaka, but at the latest date received the vast extent of the earthquake was not even surmised. The severest shock was felt at about 6.40 A.M. on Oct. 28. In Kobe a large number of chimneys fell and walls were cracked, while the curio and crockery shops suffered considerably from breakages. Several foreign houses were seriously injured, and the shock was felt on board vessels in the harbour, as also by the passengers on the Saikio Maru on their way down from Yokohama. The Naniwa Mill collapsed at Osaka, killing thirty people, and seriously injuring a much larger number. Great injury was done to houses on the concession at Osaka, the Bishop of Exeter and his wife, who were staying with Archdeacon Warren, just escaping a falling chimney. Some other mills suffered severely, and a few more lives were lost in Osaka. At Kioto the houses were severely shaken, and some chimney caps and cornices fell at the foreign houses, but no serious damage was done, though some of the porcelain shops and curio stores suffered.

Writing on Nov. 3, a correspondent of the North China Herald at Yokohama writes:—The list of killed has steadily increased, until now it is known to stand at six thousand. These figures are certain to be augmented as reports are received from outlying districts. Altogether 513 distinct shocks were recorded in Nagoya between Oct. 28, 6.40 A.M., and Nov. 2. The area most affected appears to be the Provinces of Owari, Mino, Mikawa, Shinano, and Hida; and Mr. Pownall, of the Railway Bureau, who has just returned from a visit to the district, writing to the Mail, says that "the origin of the outbreak appears to have been at some point in the fertile Owari Plain, which is bounded on the west by the hills running inland from Yokkaichi, and on the east by the mountains of the Nakasendo route, and is traversed by the railway from Nagoya to Ogaki. Within the limit of this plain the greatest damage was caused." It is hopeless to attempt to convey anything like a full idea of the terrible calamity which has devastated these fair southern provinces; the area over which the wand of ruin and death has passed alone renders such a task impossible. Glimpses of the situation may be given, fortunately from eye-witnesses. At Ogaki a guest in one of the hotels was smoking when the first shock was felt, a shock he describes as one of tremendous force accompanied by a loud unearthly sound. Just as he moved from his room the greater part of the wing in which it stood fell with a crash into the river below, and almost immediately afterwards the main building fell. He, with some others, crept from beneath the timbers, only to find the whole city in ruins. Nothing but broken, fallen roof-tops met his eye as he rose to his feet, and made his way as best he could out of the city. The roads and gardens were no longer distinguishable; and he describes as bitterly pitiful the cries of the wounded as he passed. He managed to reach Sekigahara in safety. Another account says that in Mido Temple of Ogaki some 200 devout persons had been engaged throughout the night in a special service. The temple was thrown down by the force of the first shock. Fire broke out almost immediately, so that the report adds the poor worshippers were "in a hell of fire on the earth." At Gifu, the railway station was thrown down just as the passengers from the down train were passing out. The foremost groups were all killed or more or less wounded, whilst those who remained in the carriages, generally speaking, escaped.

The Japan Mail says:—On Oct. 27 Mr. E. L. Woodin, Superintendent of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company in Hong Kong, was arrested by the Japanese police in Tokyo, acting in compliance with an application from the Government of Hong Kong preferred through H.B.M. Minister in Tokyo. The procedure followed in applying for and making the arrest was the same as that observed in the case of the fugitive Campos. No extradition treaty exists between Great Britain and Japan, but the Japanese Executive, if duly approached, is always willing to render every legitimate assistance towards the satisfaction of justice. The charge against Mr. Woodin is one of embezzlement, but no particulars have yet been published.

The Peking Gazette of Oct. 23 contains an Imperial Decree noticing the death of Ma Ju-lung, one of the prominent actors in the Panthay Rebellion. He was originally one of the rebel leaders, but came over to the Chinese and assisted Tsên Yü-ying in carrying out the eminently Chinese methods by which the rebellion was quelled. He was made Commander-in-Chief first in Yunnan, and then in Hunan, and was allowed to retire in 1878. The highest honours are to be paid to his memory, and his son, who was degraded some time ago while serving as a Taotai in Szechuan, is to be reinstated.

The Overland China Mail of Nov. 18 brings the following news:—The small disturbance in the Fokien province, which was partly caused by the salt tax and partly stirred up by bandits, has been quelled without much loss of blood.—Chang Yao, the late Governor of Shantung, is said to have left 1,000,000 dol. debts. Viceroy Li has taken over a part of his responsibility and has, it is said, guaranteed that the foreign creditors will be paid in full.—At Hong Kong there is a strong feeling in the Colony that the cost of administering the government is far too high, the colony being saddled with a hierarchy of officials sufficient to run a large colony like Ceylon. The unofficial members are talking of a commission to inquire into the subject.—Mr. J. F. Webber, formerly practising as a solicitor in Hong Kong, was arrested last week on a charge of perjury in connection with the civil action now pending, Minhinnet v. Fraser Smith.—A despatch from the Secretary of State in regard to public works has been published. Lord Knutsford thinks the electric light ought not to have been introduced without consulting him.—A public subscription is being raised for the sufferers by the Japan earthquake.

A correspondent of the North China Herald at Wusang writes on Nov. 6:—The second batch of Kolao Hui offenders, five in number, were beheaded last Sunday. The double doors of the North Gate of the city were shut and the criminals executed in the intervening square. A proclamation giving their names and offences is placarded all over the city. The precautions taken appear to have been successful, as no symptoms are visible of any uneasiness. Two heads are exposed at the Lung Wang Miao, the Hankow jetty at the mouth of the Han, the rest are hung in terrorem at various other scenes of crime through the province. It is understood that these punishments are directed against the river thieves who have been so bold of recent months. Certainly these thieves were in a regular business company—fifteen hundred in number, the steamer Chinese asset—and succeeded, notwithstanding their recognition by the compradores and others, thanks to the Chinese yearning for a quiet life at the expense of any property but their own.

According to the Shanghai paper, the men-of-war on the Yangtze were stationed as follows on Nov. 7:—At Hankow, Archer, Sivoulch, and Wolf; at Kinkiang, Volturmo and Vipère; at Wuhu, Redpole; and at Chinkiang, Swift. The Monocacy left Shanghai on Nov. 6 for the river, and the Volturmo was on her way down. H.M.S. Eske had passed Hankow on her way to Ichang, and it was hoped that there would be water enough for the Ella to get down. The Linnet was expected at Shanghai from Wenchow and Ningpo to rejoin the Yangtze squadron; the Redpole was going up to Hankow from Wuhu, and the Archer was to leave the Yangtze squadron. Admiral Richards had gone to Yokohama in the Alacrity.

The Singapore Free Press regrets to hear of the death of Mr. Dennys Blair Lockhart, Superintendent of Police and Prisons, and Coroner, Pahang, which occurred at Pekan on Nov. 10. The news was contained in a letter from Mr. Belfield to Mr. Clifford, Acting Resident. The case was one of typhoid fever. Mr. D. B. Lockhart, formerly in the 2nd Battalion Connaught Rangers, joined the Pahang service in 1890. He was a son of General Sir William Lockhart, K.C.B., C.S.I. Mr. McDonald Cameron, M.P., who was in Singapore, was about to visit Borneo, Celebes, and other islands in the Malay Archipelago during the present Parliamentary recess.

A notification calling for proposals for the construction of a Sungei Ujong—Pahang Railway is published in the Gazette.

OUR BOOK NOTICES.

LEPROSY.*

MRS. HAYES'S account of the wretched condition of the Leper Asylum at Calcutta is certain to arouse widely the sympathy of all persons of sense and good feeling. It is painful to find that there should have been any occasion for such a book as this, and that we should have to contrast the courage and kindness of the authoress with the indifference—to use no stronger term—of those who were in a position to have treated the poor sufferers with common care and consideration. We can understand the spirit in which Mr. Lambert and Mr. McGuire resented any outside interference, but we fear that it will be very difficult for them to remove an unfavourable impression of the manner in which they have discharged serious responsibilities.

Dr. Thin's treatise on leprosy is not intended so much for the general as the professional reader. As the question of how best to prevent the spread of leprosy is one which is really of social interest, it will be well for those who have to do with the administration of Sanitary Law, or with the management of institutions like the Leper Asylum, to consider carefully the modes of treatment which are most likely to lead to the extermination of this serious malady, and in the term treatment is included, of course, the prevention of infection. That this disease at one time existed in Great Britain as well as in most parts of Europe, and that it has now disappeared, in consequence of proper management is a very remarkable fact; and there appears to be no reason why leprosy should not be exterminated from all countries where it at present exists. In the interests of humanity, therefore, we recommend both books to general as well as to professional readers.

"Piladex," or Hand Ball. (Published by T. Ordish & Co., 99 Fore Street, London. Price 1s.)—This thoroughly new and ludicrously amusing game has just been published by Messrs. T. Ordish & Co. It is played with an inflated bladder by two parties of players, who strike it with the hand, and try to prevent its falling on their side of a boundary line. Any number may play, and the excitement soon becomes intense. A dull evening would be impossible if Piladex were played.

The Volunteers in India.—Sir James Dormer, Commander-in-Chief, Madras, has suggested to the Local Government the enrolment of natives as Volunteers. It is understood the suggestion, while meeting the Hon. Mr. Garstin's approval, is regarded unfavourably by Lord Wenlock and the Hon. Mr. Stokes, senior member of Council, who holds that natives would be valueless as Volunteers, owing to physical weakness; and further objects that in cases of emergency all the European and Eurasian officers and clerks under Government would be called to arms, and, were the same call made upon natives as Volunteers, there would be no proper staff left to conduct the civil work of the State.

LONDON: TUESDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1891.

THE GILGIT FRONTIER.

THERE is not much further news this week about the expedition to Hunza. The little force holds its ground, but has been unable to advance; and it now appears beyond doubt that COLONEL DURAND was ordered to march against the Hunza chief even if that potentate did not oppose the construction of a road to Chalt. The Indian Government is sending up more British officers to the front; but it seems more than probable that they will not succeed in getting across the passes. A long and interesting account of the events which led to the present crisis is given in a letter we quote elsewhere. It does not often happen that the Times is able to supply such a wholly admirable and satisfactory comment on events in India. The fortnightly writer on Indian topics carefully avoided all mention of the fight on the Gilgit frontier—not being quite certain, possibly, whether Kanjut is inside or outside of the neutral zone which he has discovered on the Pamirs. But a few days ago there appeared a long letter dated Gilgit, Nov. 16, which gave a most opportune summary of the situation. After reading the description of the horrible outrages perpetrated by SAFDAR ALI KHAN of Hunza, not many people would blame LORD LANSDOWNE'S resolve to bring the country under British influence. When the Daily News selected Hunzais and Nagarwals as an example of a down-trodden race of well-meaning mountaineers, it was doubtless unaware that this amiable race are as great a pest as the reiving Turcomans, who have been coerced into good behaviour by order of the CZAR. Perhaps it would have been just as well if the British public had been enlightened somewhat earlier as to the circumstances which demand and justify the activity now being displayed on the Gilgit frontier. The greater part of SIR WILLIAM LOCKHART'S report on his mission to the States on the Upper Oxus might have been published with advantage a long time ago.

The contention of the Daily News, that the action of the Indian Government should be submitted without delay to the scrutiny of public opinion, is indeed remarkable. Everyone who has studied the subject at all carefully has been perfectly well aware for a long time past that our frontier is very weak so long as the chiefs of Hunza and Nagar are allowed to believe they may do what they like. For the last few months it has been no secret that the Indian Government fully intended to take action; and if mistakes have been made in planning the expedition, they are not as yet apparent. It was not the fault of LORD LANSDOWNE and his advisers that the early approach of winter made the march of reinforcements to Gilgit very difficult; and if for the same reason the preparations for the advance were not quite so perfect as they might have been, it would be unjust to blame those who made them. But as regards the future there is much to be said. If, as we hope, the original plan of advancing to the capital of Hunza and compelling the two States to return without delay to their old position as tributaries of Cashmere can be carried out, well and good. If, however, the task proves so difficult that the subjection of Kanjut has to be deferred, it must nevertheless be clearly understood that, having undertaken the work, the Government of India will not turn back, leaving it unaccomplished. The opportunity should be seized for declaring in a way that will leave no room for misunderstanding that Hunza and Nagar are within the British sphere of influence; that this influence will be exerted when and how we choose; and that no other Power will be permitted to interfere. This can be made clear not only by a military demonstration on the spot, but also, and still more effectually, by diplomatic representations in Europe. It is not a point which admits of argument and negotiation. It is no one's business but our own; yet at the same time much might be gained by letting it be known that we mean to mind our own business in a thorough way. LORD SALISBURY, we have reason to believe, has adopted a very firm tone in the remonstrances that have been addressed to Russia with respect to the Pamirs; and there is equal need of firmness here. It is no less desirable, too, that something should be said to that particular section of public opinion in England which has a mania for surrender and withdrawal from every position that is worth holding or ought to be held. The nonsense which is being talked in some quarters about mischievous activity and unwarrantable interference with the patriotic independence of a free people should be made to appear in a proper light.

THE official history of the disaster at Manipore, at any rate so far as the civil authorities are concerned, is now fairly complete. The Blue Book just issued may be regarded, no doubt, as the final chapter. The most interesting of the documents now published for the first time is LIEUTENANT GURDON'S narrative. MRS. GRIMWOOD in her book describes how her husband, after his conference with LIEUTENANT GURDON, was still very much in the dark as to the Chief Commissioner's plans. It was only when MR. QUINTON was within a few miles of Manipore that the Resident rode out to meet him and learnt what was projected. No one was present at this interview, and what took place will never be known precisely. MRS. GRIMWOOD has told us how the Resident was greatly worried at the orders he then received; LIEUTENANT GURDON adds that MR. GRIMWOOD did not approve the design of arresting the Senaputty in darbar. As regards the conversation that had taken place a few days previously between the Resident and LIEUTENANT GURDON, the statement made by the latter officer as to what was said is of course, incontrovertible. It may be doubted, however, whether his account of what MR. GRIMWOOD felt can be regarded as evidence. "MR. GRIMWOOD felt very much put out," we are told, "because he had not been informed about the step Government was about to take before March 15."

It would be very difficult, we might almost say impossible, to find anywhere an Englishman possessing the peculiar assortment of qualifications which seemed to make the late LORD LYTON so pre-eminently qualified to fill the post of British Ambassador in Paris. His wide experience, his keen insight, and the felicity with which he never failed to seize the salient points of the political situation were invaluable to the Foreign Office; his genius as a man of letters and that personal charm which his own countrymen sometimes found it difficult to admire ensured his popularity with all cultivated Frenchmen. Diplomats of the stamp of LORD LYTON are indeed rare, and there is every prospect that they will become still more rare under the conditions of the age. Nevertheless, it must be acknowledged that in the MARQUESS OF DUFFERIN AND AVA qualifications quite as high, if somewhat different, are equally conspicuous. LORD DUFFERIN himself, we expect, would smile at the politeness which finds in "Letters from High Latitudes" the same degree of creative literary instinct that is marked in the poems of OWEN MEREDITH, and to be a great writer has not been the new Ambassador's ambition. But, no less than LORD LYTTON, his Excellency is not only a skilled diplomatist, but a man of highly cultured intelligence. His experience has been no less varied; and if LORD LYTTON charmed by his esprit, LORD DUFFERIN wins as many hearts by his perfect urbanity and exquisite tact. It is, indeed, fortunate at this juncture that so skilful and accomplished a diplomatist is ready to fill the vacant post.

Viscount Cranbrook, Lord President of Council, has been pleased to appoint Mr. C. Purdon Clarke, C.I.E., Keeper of the Art Collections at the South Kensington Museum, Assistant Director of the Museum, in succession to Mr. Richard A. Thompson, who retires from the post from Jan. 1. Mr. C. Purdon Clarke, it will be remembered, was recently promoted to the Art Keepership of the Museum in succession to the late Mr. George Wallis.

It is stated that the Indian Government has decided to pay a special allowance to the naval officers employed in the new gunboats Plassey and Assaye, now fitting out at Sheerness. The crews will be mainly composed of Lascars. Some years ago special allowances were paid to all naval officers employed on the East Indian stations, but the scheme was abolished by a former Commander-in-Chief, and the admiral is the only officer now receiving special pay.

The Opinion announces that Mr. Buxton Forman and Signor Pascolato, Under Secretary at the Ministry of Posts and Telegraphs, have signed a renewal for a year of the Postal Convention for the conveyance of the Indian mails by Brindisi. The conditions are the same as before, excepting a reduction of a halfpenny on printed matter, equalising that to the normal tariff of the Postal Union.

We have the best authority for correcting a statement that appeared in our issue of Oct. 26, regarding a successor to Mr. George Palmer, the Chief Engineer and Secretary to the Government of H.H. the Nizam in the Public Works Department. There is no truth in the rumour that this gentleman is about to retire from his Highness's service, or even to take furlough at an early date. Any speculation as to his successor is, therefore, premature. We may add that his Highness's Government have recently expressed their opinion in the highest terms, and in a substantial manner, regarding the services rendered by Mr. Palmer to the State. The statement that Mr. Gauntlett is about to be transferred to the Godavery Valley Railway is, we find, also incorrect.

CAPTAINS BUTCHER AND BOILEAU.

THE Pioneer says:—One of the first acts of General Collett on his arrival at Manipore last April was to order a court of inquiry to assemble for the purpose of recording evidence regarding the purely military events connected with the disaster of the previous month. This court consisted of Colonel Evans, Major Travers, and Captain Birch. It sat for a considerable time, and a mass of evidence was taken, the four surviving officers belonging to the Goorkha escort being among the principal witnesses. Up to the time when Mr. Quinton and his companions were murdered, Colonel Skene was of course responsible for the military proceedings, but when fire was reopened upon the Residency compound after midnight on March 26 Captain T. S. Boileau, as senior officer on the spot, had to take command of the troops. Next to him in order of seniority was Captain G. H. Butcher. The Court had, therefore, mainly to inquire into the events connected with the evacuation of the Residency compound and the retirement upon Cachar. The evidence taken was not published, but was submitted to Army Headquarters and the Government of India, no opinion being in any way expressed upon it at Manipore, as the duty of courts of inquiry is simply to record statements made. Upon full consideration of the evidence given, the Government of India came to the conclusion that Captains Boileau and Butcher had seriously failed in the discharge of their duty. Their removal from the army was therefore recommended to the Home authorities, and the latter have, after taking four months to deal with the matter, now announced their decision. It is that the two officers are to be removed from the Army, the Queen having no further need of their services. Captain Boileau is granted an allowance of 200*l.* per annum, which is about equivalent to the pay of a captain on the home establishment, and Captain Butcher 90*l.*, which is equivalent to the pay of a second lieutenant. These are special allowances and not pensions according to any recognised scale. Captain Boileau completed twenty years' service, qualifying him for the rank of major, on the 28th of last month. Captain Butcher has a little over twelve years' service.

It is not a pleasant comment to have to make on this unpleasant order, which will be read with pain by every servant of the Queen in India, to say that it will come to few as a surprise. Lay comment, while the decision of the military court of inquiry was yet unknown, would clearly have been ill-judged; but it is possible now to say that had that decision not been what it is, there would have been in most men's minds a feeling that there was something in the retreat from Manipore under the conduct of Captains Boileau and Butcher which needed explanation. The heroic conduct of Lieutenant (now Major) Grant would have sufficed to wipe out the memory of a far greater dereliction from duty than that of which the discharged officers were guilty; but it also brought into relief the fact that such a dereliction had taken place. There may be two opinions possibly about the necessity for the retirement from the immediate neighbourhood of the walls of Manipore, but only one that the retreat might have been conducted in an orderly manner, for the losses during the actual defence of the Residency compound were practically nil, one man only having been wounded. Disorganisation could not consequently have arisen from this cause. Major Grant's exploits naturally contrast in a most striking manner with this evacuation and retirement.

FAMINE FOREBODINGS IN MADRAS.

THE Madras Mail gives a very discouraging account of the prospects in the distressed districts of the Southern Presidency:—

It learns from the Season Reports and from other sources that the dry crops are withering and the wet crops dependent on tank irrigation, will, if there is not a large fall of rain during the next fifteen days, have to be abandoned. Land under well irrigation alone is safe, and the wisdom of spending public money liberally for the purpose of sinking irrigation wells is already abundantly justified. Without drawing at all on the imagination or enlarging facts for the purpose of creating a sensational picture, the present outlook must be regarded as serious in the extreme; and this more especially for the poorer ryots and the working-classes. The former have lost and are losing the crops which they had striven hard to raise with borrowed seed and by dint of such personal endurance. There is already a dearth of fodder, and the cultivators are in danger of losing their cattle a second time in less than twelve months—this time cattle bought with borrowed money. They are, in the midst of all this, being pressed for the payment of the balance of their taxes, due but not collected in the early part of the year. We do not imply that Government is intentionally bringing undue pressure on the poorer ryots. Those who know anything of the country are well aware that some amount of pressure is necessary; the misfortune is that, owing to the present village system, those who are least able to pay find it most difficult to obtain a remission. The village Munsiff's credit is bound up with the state of his accounts, and he knows well who are most likely to yield to a little pressure. In regard to taxes, it must be said on behalf of the Government that large sums of revenue are often lost through a foolish reluctance on the part of the ryots to grow dry crops, such as indigo, gingerly, ragi, and groundnuts, that might be preserved when rice crops must inevitably fail. It belongs to the nature of the people to run all hazards and throw for the largest profit, and then when their crops fail to claim remission of the taxes. If, under such circumstances, remissions are made with great caution, who shall blame the Revenue Department? What does seem as unwise and alike injurious to the interests of the ryots and of the Government is postponement of collection of the net taxes determined on. In all such cases it may be accepted without question that if a ryot is not able to pay his taxes at the time of reaping he will not be able to pay again until he has reaped a better harvest, and the probabilities are that when it comes it will be so heavily taxed with debt that the difficulty will be enhanced rather than otherwise. Remissions should, in our judgment, be determined by the state of the crop, except, of course, where failure of the crop is manifestly due to personal neglect, and the balance collected at the ordinary time.

Among the village labourers, scarcity of work is already felt and must, in the absence of rain, steadily increase. The desperate effort made at present to save such crops as can be watered by picotahs provides work for able-bodied men, and in many cases these are being treated with more than usual liberality. We hear of instances where the water drawers are being fed once a day, and promised a share of the crop if they will save it. This says something for the wisdom of the cultivators, but the pinch is that in the absence of rain there is no work for the village women, and in scarcely any case are the earnings of the men sufficient for the wants of the family. The case is aggravated in the families that have no strong man at the head, and these are not a few. Reduced in strength by long privation, wearied and sick of hope oft deferred, already at the end of every resource of keen-witted poverty, and without work, the condition of the village labourer is indeed a picture for pity and for help. But how to help without harming more is still the question, a question that can only be answered by trying and trying again, admitting failure, and revising methods as often as those who devise and administer charity may find themselves on wrong lines. The thing above all to be deprecated in the arduous and difficult work before the Government and the country is the ill-informed and culpable guessing at facts, which often results in the worst type of falsehood, and the use of a famine, of all things, to foster shameless wrangling and serve the ends of party politics.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

NEW ROYAL WARRANT.

THE following is the full text of the Royal Warrant, dated India Office, Dec. 14, 1891, of which we gave a brief summary in our last issue:—

INDIA OFFICE, DECEMBER 14, 1891.

VICTORIA, R.I.

WHEREAS We deem it expedient to revise the Rules for the promotion and precedence of Our Indian Medical Service:

Our Will and Pleasure is that Our Warrants of 30th April, 1887, and 8th February, 1889, be cancelled, and that from and after the 7th August, 1891, the following Rules shall be established, and that by these Rules Our Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, and Our Governors in Council of Madras and Bombay respectively, shall be governed.

1. The substantive ranks of Medical Officers in Our Indian Military Forces shall be as follows:—

Surgeon-Major-General.
Surgeon-Colonel.
Brigade-Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel.
Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel.
Surgeon-Major.
Surgeon-Captain.
Surgeon-Lieutenant.

These ranks shall carry precedence and other advantages attaching to the rank indicated by the military portion of the title, but shall not (except as provided in Article 2) entitle the officer to military command, or to the Presidency of Courts-Martial, Courts of Inquiry, Committees, or Boards of Survey.

2. The Officers of Our Indian Medical Service shall command the Medical Officers and Subordinates, the Army Hospital Native Corps, the Hospital Attendants, and others doing duty in military hospitals, as well as all patients in military hospitals; and shall command the Medical Staff Corps, when doing duty therewith, in the same manner as Officers of the Medical Staff, as well as such Officers, Non-commissioned Officers, and men as may be attached for duty to the Medical Staff Corps; but otherwise they shall not hold any military command.

3. A Surgeon-Lieutenant shall be promoted to the rank of Surgeon-Captain on completing three years' full-pay service.

4. A Surgeon-Captain shall be promoted to the rank of Surgeon-Major on completing 12 years' full-pay service.

5. A Surgeon-Major shall be promoted to the rank of Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel on completing 20 years' full-pay service.

6. All promotion from the rank of Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel to that of Brigade-Surgeon Lieutenant-Colonel shall be given by selection for ability and merit.

7. All promotion from the rank of Brigade-Surgeon Lieutenant-Colonel to that of Surgeon-Colonel, and from the rank of Surgeon-Colonel to that of Surgeon-Major-General, shall be given by selection for ability and merit; and the grounds of such selection shall be stated to Us in writing, and recorded in the Office of Our Secretary of State for India.

8. On appointment as Our Honorary Physician or Surgeon under Article 11, an Officer below the rank of Surgeon-Colonel shall be promoted to that rank, remaining supernumerary of his rank until he would have attained the rank of Surgeon-Colonel in ordinary course.

9. In case of distinguished service in the field an Officer of Our Indian Medical Service may be promoted from any rank to that next above it, remaining supernumerary in the higher rank until he would have been promoted in ordinary course, or until selected for further promotion for which he shall be eligible according to his standing in the higher rank.

10. With a view to maintain the efficiency of the Service, Medical Officers shall be placed on the Retired List when they attain the following ages:—

Surgeon-Major-General	60
Surgeon-Colonel
Brigade-Surgeon Lieutenant-Colonel	55
Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel
Surgeon-Major

But as respects Officers below the rank of Surgeon-Colonel who entered the Service prior to the 13th January, 1860, this rule shall be relaxed, and an officer who has attained the age of 55 years without having attained the rank of Surgeon-Colonel shall be permitted to remain in the Service for three years more, on his perfect competency and fitness being certified in such manner as Our Secretary of State for India in Council may direct. In any special case where it would appear to be for the good of Our Service that the Officer should be continued in employment, he may be so continued, subject in each case to the sanction of Our Secretary of State for India in Council.

11. Six of the most meritorious Medical Officers of the Service shall be named Our Honorary Physicians, and six Our Honorary Surgeons.

Given at Our Court at Windsor, this seventh day of December, in the Fifty-fifth year of Our Reign.

By Her Majesty's Command. CROSS.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, December 1.

The directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting held on Nov. 26 made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining unchanged at 2½ per cent.

The following changes have taken place in the Bank's figures for week ending Nov. 24:—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 16,89,963	Increase
Do. at Branches.....	4,71,901	Decrease
Other Deposits	12,00,265	Increase
Post Bills	1,01,982	Decrease

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	Rs. 3,88,970	Decrease
Loans	38,043	Decrease
Accounts of Credits.....	8,43,498	Increase
Mercantile Bills	2,23,361	Decrease
Cash at Head Office.....	15,09,301	Increase
Do. at Branches	6,81,685	Increase

The analysis of the above figures shows a decrease of over 5 lacs in the ordinary trade demand, made up as follows:—

By an increase of over 12 lacs in "Other Deposits," a decrease of over ¼ of a lac in "Loans," and a decrease of about 2½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills," minus a decrease of over 1 lac in "Post Bills," and an increase of about 8½ lacs in "Accounts of Credits." The Treasury balance at head office stands augmented by over 16½ lacs, while there is a decrease of about 4½ lacs at the branches. The Bank's investments were realised to the extent of over 3½ lacs. The final result of these changes is an increase of over 15 lacs in the cash at head office, and over 6½ lacs at the branches, making the exact total 5,14,09,979 rs., equal to 59½ per cent. of the liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 58½ per cent. last week.

EXCHANGE.—Rates have, on the whole, steadily declined. Bills have been placed at as low a rate as 1-4-15/16 for six months' sight documents, although there has been very little inquiry for remittance. The market closes rather firmer, but it is difficult at the moment to distinguish any elements in operation which could make a rise permanent.

TEA.—At the usual auctions held on Nov. 26, 14,800 packages were offered. There was again good competition for all the desirable liquoring lots, and more especially for broken Pekoes, which showed an occasional slight advance. Ordinary and common kinds showed no material change.

JUTE.—The market has been much more active since last report, and a large business done at steadily advancing prices. From 33-8 rs. parcels of good first native marks have advanced to 34-8 rs., and for all December 35 is paid. Balers, as a rule, are very reluctant sellers, and not much jute can be bought in the latter position. At Naraingunge the season is almost closed, and in all the up-country bazaars supplies are small and prices rising daily.

GUNNIES.—The excitement among Bombay buyers has subsided, but prices show no material change, and business is at a standstill. Mills show more disposition to sell, but only if they can secure very full rates.

HESSIANS.—Some small lines of cloth have been taken for Bombay, but there is not much offering, and prices are firm. New York and San Francisco quiet.

JOINT-STOCK SHARES.—Rather more business has been doing. Jute mills shares have claimed most attention, and there is a marked improvement in the position of most of these stocks. As anticipated, the inquiry which set in had the effect of raising prices, and that to the extent of some 3 to 4 rs. Purchases of ordinary shares have been made principally to cover the "bear" sales effected a little while ago, and if they are not completely covered yet we shall probably see a stronger market, though at the close prices are a point easier all round. Preference shares have established themselves as desirable investment stocks, and are firmly held as such. In gold shares, business has been dull in the extreme, and nothing of any importance or magnitude has been reported. India General Preference shares are steadily being taken up at quotations for investment, but there has been little or nothing doing in other miscellaneous stocks. Bank of Bengal shares have been in request, and have changed hands at 1,000 rs., and close firm at this figure. In tea there is nothing worth mentioning. It is feared the season will not end with the good results which the prospects at the opening promised.

BANK OF BENGAL.
Rate of Interest for Demand Loans 2 1/2 per cent.

BOMBAY, December 4.

There has been no sensible change in the position of trade generally since the date of last report, though, if anything, the previous quietude has been intensified, and there seems little chance of a revival of activity in any branch until the turn of the year, if then. Small parcels of the more forward growths of the new crop of cotton are beginning to come to market, but this staple fails to attract the attention either of exporters or mill-owners, a few hundred bales daily of new and old stuff having been all the business reported; while in wheat and seed small or moderate transactions only have been reported from day to day. Exchange stiffened latterly in sympathy with silver, but rates again receded somewhat, showing, however, an advance of 1-32d. compared with those at which the market closed on Nov. 27. Government paper has advanced 1/2 per cent. in Fours. The Bank of Bombay minimum rate remains at 2 per cent. Freight rates are weaker, and rather more business has latterly been passing. Business in imports has continued to be on the same very moderate scale, but prices of staple manufactures generally show no quotable change.

MONEY.—The Presidency Banks' Statement of Affairs, issued on Nov. 30, continued to illustrate the general dullness of trade, the Cash Balance having increased during the previous week by 6 1/2 lacs, making it over 367 lacs. The principal movement was in Private Deposits, which had increased by some 10 lacs; but Loans fell off slightly, adding also to the balance, there having been, on the other side, an increase of only 4 1/2 lacs in Bills Discounted, thus disclosing a net diminution in the trade demand of about 7 1/2 lacs, against 4 1/2 lacs shown at the close of the preceding week. No change in the bank's rates at the board meeting, and 2 per cent. remains the minimum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—The wholesale demand for staple grey goods has been as irregular and unsatisfactory as it was last week, but there has been a full retail amount of buying throughout. Prices are much about the same as those quoted in last report, with the exception of those for heavy weights of shirtings, which are a shade lower. Stocks are much the same as they were. Bleached, dyed, and turkey red have been in moderate demand at previous rates. There is a good inquiry of a retail character for local goods, but stocks are very heavy for the time of the year, and rates are in favour of buyers. The total clearances of imported goods from the bazaar are estimated at 3,700 packages, and of local goods 2,000 bales.

YARNS.—There has been little inquiry for imported twist; and the market has been quiet, with prices quite unchanged. The China demand for local spinnings at Hong Kong has somewhat fallen off, exchange having been unaltered. With the exception of a few sails in No. 103 and No. 205, at a further decline of 1-16 a. per lb., there is no business worth noticing. The week's sales are put down at 500 bales, and the market closed dull.

METALS.—A moderate business has been done in copper, and prices have advanced 2 as. per cwt., the market at closing being steady. Yellow metal has been taken only to a small extent, and rates have receded 2 as. per cwt. in a quiet market. Iron has been taken to a moderate extent, the tone having been steady and prices unchanged.

COAL.—Sales have been reported of Powell's Duffryn at 16 1/4 rs. per ton, and of Davison's West Hartley at 14 1/4 rs. per ton, and for December-January shipment at 15 1/4 rs. and 14 rs. per ton, respectively. There appears to be no chance of the Bunder stock being reduced for a long time to come.

Exports.—COTTON.—This market closed quiet on Nov. 28, with prices for old stuff and for contracts for new 1 r. per candy lower, but with a very trifling business doing either for export or local spinners' account. The tone subsequently became quiet when not actually dull, and on Dec. 1 a further decline in rates of 1 r. per candy was established. Exporters bought nothing whatever on two days, and on others their purchases were confined to a few hundred bales of ready parcels of the earlier varieties of Oomrawattee which have come to market. The quantity taken by the mills has not exceeded 2,500 bales during the week, consisting of old Compta Ginned and Oomrawattee, and new Julgaam and Pachora Ginned. The market closes dull, with prices 2 rs. to 3 rs. lower than ruled last week.

WHEAT has been neglected to a great extent by exporters, no more than a moderate business having been done on any day; the feeling, however, has been generally steady, and beyond an advance of 1/2 an anna per cwt. in Delhi, prices have shown no movement.

SEEDS also have been taken to only a small or moderate extent by shippers in a quiet or steady market.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. — Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. — See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but a transient one. We could multiply instances of the infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNDESIRABLE IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1 1/2d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the present mail, via Brindisi, we are placed in possession of advices and gazettes from Calcutta to Dec. 9; Madras, Dec. 10; Bombay, Dec. 12.

Although the mail was due at the Post Office early this morning, our papers were not delivered until mid-day.

The Viceroy held the usual cold weather levée on Dec. 5. The attendance was, as usual of late years, very large.

Lord Lansdowne unveiled the statue of Lord Dufferin in Calcutta on Dec. 8, taking occasion to pass an eloquent eulogy on his lordship's services as an administrator, a diplomatist, and a statesman.

Lord Lansdowne's shooting trip at Kooch Behar is fixed for the middle of February. The party will include Lady Lansdowne and Prince Chistian.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on Dec. 25:—Lord Wenlock, speaking recently at Anantapore, said that the district was not likely to be affected so generally as he had at first feared. Doubtless distress would prevail in those tracts where the crops had failed, but he hoped that the arrangements that had been made would enable the people to make provision for the bad times that were before them.

The correspondent adds on Dec. 27:—Lord Wenlock has returned to Madras after his visit to Kurnool, Bellary, Anantapore, and Cuddapah, during which he personally inquired into the condition of the worst tracts. He appears to have come to the conclusion that things are not so bad as they have been represented, but, although this is probably correct, there can be no doubt that serious distress will prevail over a considerable portion of those districts for some months.

A deputation of grain merchants met the Governor at Kurnool, and presented an address giving a minute account of the recent riots. They charged the local authorities with failing to take due precautions, and they prayed for an investigation by an independent officer.

The Governor of Bombay returned by the s.s. Karagola to Bombay on Dec. 5, after an absence of over a month from his tour in Sind.

Lord Harris, a Calcutta telegram of Dec. 27 says, starts to-morrow on an eight days' tour through the threatened districts of Bombay, a great portion of which tour will be performed on horseback. Water for cattle seems to be the most crying want in Bijapore and the adjoining country. Several attempts at rain-making by dynamite explosions have failed, and a good deal of correspondence is now going on in the Indian papers on the question whether any real success is to be hoped for in that way. The general result of experiments in various parts of India appears to be that success is improbable unless the atmosphere is already heavily charged with moisture, but some persons maintain that no thoroughly conclusive trial has yet been made, and that, even when the conditions are apparently unfavourable, rain may be produced by exploding dynamite at a great height in specially contrived balloons.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal arrived in Calcutta on Dec. 5, having completed his autumn tour.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, with his private secretary, were to leave for Calcutta on Dec. 15. Sir Auckland Colvin would return to Allahabad on the 18th or 19th.

A telegram of Dec. 4 says:—Sir James Lyall is suffering from a slight attack of fever, brought on, it is believed, by the dampness of the encampments near the flooded villages on the Agra Canal. Mr. Clarke is also somewhat indisposed. The change to the Kutab has, however, proved beneficial. A later despatch (Dec. 6) adds:—Sir James Lyall returned to Delhi this morning, looking far from well after his recent attack of fever. His honour will spend a quiet day in camp here to-morrow.

General Brackenbury, who has practically recovered from the effects of his fall, was to leave Apozai on Dec. 8, arriving at Loralai on the 13th and Harnai on the 16th. Thence he would proceed direct to Calcutta, which he would reach on Dec. 20.

Colonel Rhodes was invested with the D.S.O. at a full parade of the garrison at Poona on Dec. 7.

M. Clement Thomas, Governor of the French Establishments in India, is about to proceed on a tour of inspection through all the French dependencies in the East. He will probably embark in the Messageries Maritimes s.s. Niemen at Pondicherry on Jan. 3, 1892, visit Lord Wenlock at Madras the next day, and then proceed to Calcutta. After his inspection of Chandernagore he will pay a visit to Benares, Agra, Delhi, and Lucknow, and then go to Bombay, and return to Pondicherry by the West Coast and round Ceylon, inspecting Mahé and Karikal en route.

H.H. the Gaekwar was in ill-health when the Mail left, and proposed to spend some time in Bombay.

A painful sensation had been caused in Bombay by the shocking calamity which occurred to Lieutenant Mansfield, R.N.R., while making a balloon ascent from the Victoria Gardens. The plucky aeronaut a few weeks previously succeeded in going to a height of 11,400 feet in his balloon.

when he descended in a parachute. The balloon fell into the sea, and was considerably damaged on its recovery.

A Nagpore telegram of Dec. 27 says:—The eighth Indian National Congress will be opened in this city to-morrow. Large numbers of delegates have arrived from all parts, and the gathering promises to be unusually large. The hall secured for this year's meeting is more spacious than that used last year, and the arrangements are altogether more complete.

The revised rules for the management and regulation of Indian military prisons have been published.

Pending the receipt of Mr. Logan's report by the Government of India in the Foreign Department, no steps will be taken to nominate a Financial Officer to the Cashmere State. The status and pay of the officer have yet to be determined.

It is probable that a telegraph line will be extended from Tavoy to Mergui in order to link the Tennasserim Province with Lower Burma. The development of immense deposits of tin in Mergui has already given a great impulse to commerce in that quarter.

The Secretary of State has sanctioned the construction of the Bareilly-Moradabad Railway. The Rampore durbar has agreed to advance 47 lacs to the Government at 4 per cent. for this undertaking. The line will be 56 miles long, and the probable cost will be under 50 lacs.

A disastrous railway accident occurred near Okara, between Mooltan and Lahore, on the North-Western Railway, on Dec. 5, the up mail train coming into collision with the down. Thirty-three persons were killed and many seriously injured.

The Sholapore Mills were destroyed by fire during the night of Dec. 5.

On the night of Dec. 5 a number of dacoits made a sudden assault on the gangmen of the engineering department of the North-Western Railway near Hussan Abdal, and after killing one and seriously wounding four men they fled.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 22.—Another great meeting has been held at Behar to protest against the proposed cadastral survey for that province. Evidently there is a very strong feeling against the measure, which the Government would do well to consider carefully before issuing any positive orders.—Times Correspondent.

MADRAS, Dec. 24.—"General" Booth has arrived here, and has met with an enthusiastic reception from the public. Addresses of welcome were presented to him by the Hindoo and Christian communities at the railway-station, whither the Deputy Commissioner had proceeded to greet him. Perfect order prevailed. A social gathering to meet "General" Booth has been arranged at which the Dewan Bahadur Raganath Row has consented to preside.—Reuter.

MADRAS, Dec. 28.—"General" Booth concluded his Madras campaign to-day, when he expounded the ideas of his social scheme at the Banqueting Hall before an influential gathering, which included the Maharaja of Mysore. Subsequently he delivered a similar address to a meeting comprising 1,000 of the leading Hindoos, the Dewan Raganath Rao presiding. In the afternoon the "General" opened the army's new headquarters and hall, when liberal subscriptions were received, one gentleman contributing the amount of the mortgage—namely, 11,000 rs. He next proceeded to the Memorial Hall, where he addressed the native Christians, after which he had an interview with Lord Wenlock, the Governor. The "General" leaves here to-night, and a great farewell demonstration has been arranged in his honour at the railway-station.—Reuter.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 27.—A party of trained native surveyors belonging to the Indian Survey Department was to leave Bombay yesterday for Zanzibar to map the boundary of the English and German possessions in East Africa.—Times Correspondent.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 28.—The question of allowing the formation of native Volunteer corps has been raised again. The present rule is that natives may join existing corps, but are not permitted to constitute themselves in separate regiments or companies. A number of native gentlemen in Calcutta have presented a petition to the Viceroy praying for permission to form themselves into a separate battalion attached to the Presidency Volunteers. The practical difficulties in working the existing rule have made it almost a dead letter, and the experiment suggested seems worth trying.—Ibid.

LATEST "GAZETTE OF INDIA" NOTIFICATIONS.

(BY TELEGRAM TO THE Times of India, CALCUTTA, Dec. 11.)

THE services of Mr. E. G. Colvin, officiating Postmaster-General, Bengal, are replaced at the disposal of the Government of Bengal.

The services of Capt. E. M. Nedham are placed at the disposal of the Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, for employment as cantonment magistrate of Kamptee.

Mr. D. C. J. Ibbetson, Deputy Commissioner, Punjab, is appointed member of the Commission to inquire into the working of the Deccan Ryots Act, vice Mr. Rivaz.

The services of Lieut. W. G. Hatherell, commandant, Upper Burma Military Police, are replaced at the disposal of the Military Department.

Major D. A. A. Macpherson officiates as controller, Military Accounts, Eastern Circle, Bengal, vice Lieut.-Col. J. A. Miley, on furlough.

The following officers are granted leave:—Lieut. E. J. E. Swayne, four months; Lieuts. E. J. Drummond and C. E. Wood, and Surg. E. W. Hore, one year each.

Mr. E. W. M. Hughes, Revenue Establishment State Railways, is, on return from furlough, posted to Madras.

Capt. C. H. Cowie, executive engineer, is transferred to the establishment under the Government of Bengal.

Mr. J. Manson, executive engineer, is attached to the office of the Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Department.

(BY TELEGRAM TO THE Times of India, POONA, Dec. 11.)

THE Commander-in-Chief has been pleased to make the following appointments:—

STATION STAFF.—Capt. H. R. Tufnell, Gloster Regt., to be station staff officer, second class, at Neemuch.

No. 5 BOMBAY MOUNTAIN BATTERY.—Lieut. R. H. Massie, 53rd Field batty., Royal Art., to officiate as subaltern, vice Lieut. McMunn, transferred to No. 6 Bombay Mountain batty.

No. 6 BOMBAY MOUNTAIN BATTERY.—Lieut. G. F. McMunn, officiating subaltern, No. 5 Bombay Mountain batty., to be subaltern, vice Lieut. W. H. Boyd, deceased.

The undermentioned officers of the Medical Staff, having arrived from England on a fresh tour, are posted to Sind for general duty, namely, Surg.-Capt. W. J. Baker and H. D. Mason.

Surg.-Capt. J. Maconachie, Medical Staff, transferred from the Bengal Command, is posted to Mhow District for general duty.

The undermentioned officer has leave of absence:—Bombay Volunteer Artillery—Capt. A. K. Leslie, to England, for six months, on private affairs.

G U P.

AT the New Club meeting the other day at Simla the position, the Englishman says, was somewhat different from that reported. Before the three members of the Committee resigned, Mr. J. E. Rowe, District Judge, Simla, was elected, and as Mr. Ker had not then withdrawn, and Mr. Arathoon was subsequently elected, at no time was Colonel Mackenzie the sole member of the Committee in Simla. On the question of winding up the Club, eight out of eighteen members present voted in the affirmative, while five voted for carrying on, and the remaining did not vote. The eight who voted had four proxies, whereas the other side had not armed themselves in like manner, although they might have done so to a formidable extent. In order to carry the proposal to wind up the Club it was necessary, according to the required rules, to have twenty votes to set against the five opposing votes. The proposal was therefore negatived.

The virtues of Englishwomen in India, the Bombay Gazette observes, must not be judged according to the estimate of Mr. Rudyard Kipling. A tourist recently arrived in Bombay pronounced himself completely undeceived as to their character before he reached this port. As is the case with many another he had never known any, and judged by the assertions of the paragraphists. "But," said he, "when one of the ladies on board fell ill, I was able to realise their value. They organised themselves, and each went on duty, turn and turn about, untiringly night and day, during the remainder of the voyage, as though they were professional nurses, anticipating every want of the patient, who to them was an utter stranger." If further testimony to the worth of Englishwomen in the East is wanted it may be found in the Administration Report of the Indo-European Telegraph Department for the year just ended. As has occurred before, writes the Director-General, the Department received material assistance in working the offices from one of the wives of the European inspectors. "In the present year, Mrs. Smith, the wife of the inspector in charge of the fourth sub-section, who is stationed at the isolated office of Siwand, kept open the office and worked it single-handed from Feb. 24 to March 30, 1891, while her husband was prostrated with typhoid fever." That this instance of courageous womanhood is not exceptional is certified by Colonel Mallock, who in his Report on the Indo-European Telegraph Department says:—"The English wives of these men are a factor in the success of the undertaking that can hardly be appreciated in the present day, and they form the only relief from the men's solitude."

The Bombay Commander-in-Chief, a Poona correspondent writes, has reappeared, looking none the worse for his shaking in the G.I.P. Railway accident, in which he and his staff had a really miraculous escape, as their carriage was next the engine until the unfortunate troops joined the train at Badnera. Our rifle camp is now in full swing. The change of venue from Wanowrie to The Sisters, though a great improvement when regarded from the primary point of view of the musketry enthusiast, is by no means appreciated by the residents or by the officers attending the camp on duty. The former regard with regret an arrangement which takes away a large number of the male element of society; while to the latter the difference between one mile and seven from the camp to the station makes a deal of odds in the enjoyment of their visit. The annual assau't-arms has been brought to a successful conclusion, the painful waste of time and indefiniteness of purpose which characterised the arrangements of previous meetings being on this occasion—thanks to the Board which assembled last year—conspicuous by their absence; while a marked improvement was visible in the gymnastic part of the entertainments, some of the performances in which were really excellent. The officers' competitions were, as is usually the case, very poor. The tent-pegging was the best; but as what is usually regarded as one of the most important factors in such contests, i.e., pace, was in no way taken into account, the show reads better on paper than it was in reality. Riding "full bat" with a lance at a tent-peg, with two-thirds of its length imbedded in firm ground, and tittupping "four annas" with a hogspear at a piece of lath, with two inches of its tip inserted gently in loose soil, are two very different things.

It may not be generally known that a curious collection of coins of considerable antiquarian value is to be found at the Calcutta Mint. The coins, it appears, are not for exhibition, but for sale, and that at about the actual value of the metal. The real value of the coins lies in their historical interest, and for this there is nothing to pay. Their presence in Calcutta is accounted for by the law of treasure trove, under which all finds of hidden wealth come into the hands of the State. Those who are curious in such things can obtain gold mohurs of the reign of Sultan Alaud-din Mohammed Shah, about 1300 A.D.; rupees coined by Mohammed Shah, by Shah Jehan, the builder of the Taj Mahal, and Aurangzib, together with old copper pieces innumerable. Numismatists on the look-out for specimens doubtless know all about such matters; but there are many others who might be glad to indulge a moderate taste for the genuinely curious.

A correspondent of the Englishman writes:—The devotees of dancing at Calcutta have been raised from profound despair by the announcement that in spite of all rumours to the contrary the Assembly Balls are to be held as before, and the first will be in a fortnight—a little later than usual, but all the more welcome. What would Calcutta be without its balls? Their fame has reached the quietest English home; and a girl about to sail for Calcutta is assured that, if fond of dancing, she can be gratified every evening during the cold weather. How many of the débutantes has it been my fate—or, shall I say, my fortune?—to see during, alas! a too long succession of cold seasons, who confess to disappointment both as regards the number of these dances and their enjoyable qualities. As year by year our maidens multiply the dancing youth seem to become fewer and fewer. But we have other balls in prospect. First comes that to be given by the Bufts, memories of a past splendid ball, given by the same gallant regiment many years ago, being still among the liveliest recollections of some of our inhabitants, who aver that the entertainment then offered to Calcutta society was one of the most magnificent on record, the costume quadrille in particular enchanting the spectators. The Anglo-Indian and Eurasian Association are also, I believe, contemplating a ball in order to found a scholarship, so we are likely to be well provided with dancing. In the matter of theatricals, variety entertainments, and concerts there is much on the tapis. We are promised an excellent musical season, Mr. Hallé and Herr Walther having made a most successful début, and being energetically to the fore in arranging capital concerts to follow. Mr. Hallé's lectures should be largely patronised, opening up entirely new ground, and giving the music-loving such an opportunity as they have never before had. I hear also of a living chess tournament which is to take place with great pomp and clat, all the beauty in the city being pressed into the service.

The members of the Cycling Section of the Calcutta Naval Volunteer Athletic Club had a good run recently to Burdwan. Leaving Scott Thomson's Corner at 6.35 on Saturday evening, the Hotel Casanooa at Chandernagore, a distance of 25 miles, was reached at 9.29, a good run, considering that it was at night. A halt here was made for the night. Next morning an early start was made, leaving the hotel at 7 A.M. The 23rd mile on the Grand Trunk Road was passed at 7.5, and the run continued to the 33rd at Mugra. Here the party had to dismount and walk through the bazaar and over a wooden bridge, the pucca bridge being under repair. Mounting again at the 34th mile no further halt was made until Punduah dāk bungalow, 42½ miles, was reached at 9.5. A halt for an hour was made for breakfast, which was soon discussed, the keen morning air having sharpened all appetites. A fresh start was made at 10 o'clock, a good pace being kept up until the 60th mile was passed at two minutes to 12. Another halt was made here for three-quarters of an hour for a smoke and refresher, and another start made at 12.45. The run was then continued to Burdwan, 73½ miles, without further halts, and the station was reached at three minutes past 2, leaving plenty of time for a wash and brush down before leaving by the 3.30 train for Calcutta. The total distance covered was 76 miles, and the actual time occupied 9 hours and 50 minutes, or, allowing for the halts and the time lost at Mugra, 7 hours and 40 minutes, which gives an average pace of 10 miles per hour, a satisfactory performance considering the stiff breeze which was blowing right ahead. The roads were in capital condition except in a few places, and no one was at all the worse for the ride, the outing being thoroughly enjoyed by all.

PERSONAL.

SIR ALEXANDER MILLER, Legal Member of Council, who has been indisposed, has recovered sufficiently to resume work.

Sir John Edgar, Secretary to the Bengal Government, will probably take furlough in the spring.

Mr. C. E. Buckland, Officiating Secretary to the Bengal Government, in the Revenue Department, has been confirmed in that appointment, vice the Hon. P. Nolan.

Mr. C. C. Stevens, Commissioner of the Patna Division, now on leave, is gazetted a member of the Board of Revenue, Bengal, on the retirement of Mr. Smith.

Mr. Rawlinson, Assistant Commissioner, Peshawar, is transferred to Murdan.

The Hon. Mr. J. L. Mackay has been appointed Sheriff of Calcutta. The appointment is gazetted of Babu Ram Kali Chaudhri to the Legislative Council of the North-West Provinces and Oude in place of the late Babu Bireswar Mitter.

Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu, High Court Vakil, Madras, has accepted the Presidentship of the National Congress at Nagpore. He is a fluent speaker and a shrewd and clever man.

Mr. J. D. Rees, private secretary to the Governor of Madras, who arranged to stay on in that capacity for a year after Lord Wenlock's arrival, will on the expiry of that period revert to his permanent post as Collector of the Nilgiris.

Mr. F. J. Stevens has been appointed to officiate as Judicial Commissioner in the Central Provinces during the absence of Mr. John Neill on special duty as President of the Land Indebtedness Commission.

Mr. Luttman Johnson, whose proposed transfer to a Bengal judgeship after a long period of service in the Assam Valley, which recently excited so much discontent in the lower provinces, has been offered the Collectorship of Bhagulpore.

Lord William Beresford is once again to be represented by a brilliant Newmarket jockey on the Indian turf. Peake goes out to India to ride the horses trained in Mr. Wilson's stables.

Mr. C. M. Rivaz has met with an accident, resulting in fracture of the arm. This will interfere with the duties as a member of the Commission of Inquiry into the working of the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act, which had been directed to meet at Poona not later than Dec. 15. Mr. Rivaz, however, is progressing favourably, and it is hoped will be able to join the Commission in January.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Major-General E. Wilkie, C.B., commanding the Infantry Brigade of the garrison of Malta, died on Dec. 22. He obtained his first commission in August 1854, and served with the 97th Regiment in the Crimea from June 16, 1855, to the fall of Sebastopol, for which he had the medal and clasp, and the Turkish medal. In July 1857 he obtained his company and served in the Indian Campaign of 1857-58, being present with the Jounpore Field Force in the actions of Chanda, Umeerpore, and Sultanpore, as well as at the siege and capture of Lucknow, for which he received the medal and clasp. In October 1871 he became a lieutenant-colonel, and in 1876 colonel, attaining to the rank of major-general in 1886.

Colonel Lawrence, late Cantonment Magistrate, Belgaum, died recently, much regretted by a large circle of friends.

A Reuter telegram of to-day from Mandalay says:—Mr. G. J. S. Hodgkinson, C.S.I., Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma, died here suddenly yesterday. Mr. Hodgkinson entered the Bengal Civil Service after open competitive examination in 1864, and filled various offices in the Service there. In 1878 he was transferred to British Burma as officiating Commissioner, Arakan Division. He became a deputy-commissioner, first grade, in 1879, and was, in 1881, specially appointed a judge under the Land Acquisition Act. He became Commissioner at Irrawaddy in the same year, and Commissioner of the Pegu Division in 1885. He was subsequently appointed Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma.

Mr. Thomas Kerr Lynch, who died a few days ago in London, was born in 1818. He was the son of Major H. B. Lynch, of Partry House, Ballinrobe, Ireland, and was one of eleven brothers. His childhood and boyhood were spent at Partry; later he went to Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated. After leaving Trinity he joined his brother, Captain H. B. Lynch, C.B., in the East, and accompanied him during the second Euphrates Expedition (1837-1842), of which Captain Lynch had command. One of the results of the Euphrates Expedition was the opening of steam communication between the interior of the countries watered by the Euphrates and Tigris and the Persian Gulf. Vessels belonging to the British or Indian Governments plied on the two great rivers of Mesopotamia, and the city of Bagdad, which was in some sense the centre, or headquarters, of the officers connected with the surveys, was brought into touch with India and with the West. But the expense to the Government of such a steam service was great until Mr. Lynch, who, with his younger brother, had become engaged in business at Bagdad, offered to maintain it by means of new trading steamers, which should be specially constructed for the purpose. These steamers and their successors have from that time run continuously on the Tigris, and so much has the commerce and the prosperity of the country increased owing to the facilities offered by them, that places which were wretched villages when the line was first established have now become flourishing towns. Mr. Lynch travelled extensively in Mesopotamia and Persia, and spoke both the Arabic and Persian languages. He married a daughter of the late Colonel Taylor, Political Resident at Bagdad, by whom he has a son and daughter. He was a Deputy-Lieutenant for the City of London, and for many years was Consul-General in London for Persia. The Shah of Persia conferred on him the Order of the Lion and Sun.

Mr. J. Collet, of the Punjab Bank at Srinagar, and at one time sub-editor of the Civil and Military Gazette, who died on November 26, was buried on the 27th in the Shekh Bagh Cemetery. He was the author of the well-known "Guide to Cashmere."

The death is announced of Rao Bahadur Wasudeo Barve, member of the Bombay Legislative Council. Referring to Mr. Barve, the Bombay Gazette says:—The news of the death of Mr. Mahadeo-Wasudeo Barve, C.I.E., came as a painful surprise to his many friends, both European and native, throughout the Presidency. Like the other eminent Brahmin administrator who predeceased him by a few days, Mr. Gowishanker Udayshanker, he had for some years given up active work, but unlike the venerable Kathiawar statesman, he continued to the last to be well before the world, and being still on the brighter side of sixty, there was reason to hope that he might in an unofficial way continue for some time to come to render useful service to the Presidency. For he was a man of marked ability, possessing the clear, quick intelligence of his race in an eminent degree, and his knowledge of the principles and details of administration was exceeded by few of the native officials of his time. His work at Ko'apore was invariably well spoken of, and he enjoyed the esteem of all the political officers who were associated with the South Mahratta country in his time. During the years of his retirement his experience and knowledge were frequently availed of by the Bombay Government, who, if he had lived, would scarcely have thought their inquiries into such a subject as that of Land Indebtedness was complete without his evidence. The Mahratta Brahmins have lost in Mr. Barve a decidedly representative man, whose capacity, high character, and usefulness have made his death a real loss to Maharashtra.

The venerable Swamiji Satohidanand Saraswati, widely known as Gowrishanker Udayshanker, C.S.I., ex-Dewan of Bhavnagar, died on Dec. 1, aged eighty-seven. His death is extremely regretted by all in Bhavnagar.

THE UNCOVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE OF INDIA.

OFFICIAL PAPERS.

THE following is the text of the resolution appearing in the Gazette of India of Dec. 5, 1891, upon the subject of simplifying and amending the present Civil Service Regulations in the matter of leave and pensions:—

LEAVE AND PENSION.

No. 4,863.

The 4th December, 1891.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

READ—

Resolution by the Government of India in this Department, No. 5,800, dated the 12th December, 1890.

Despatch to the Secretary of State, No. 393, dated 17th December, 1889.

Despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 125, dated 25th June, 1891.

RESOLUTION.—In the Resolution read in the preamble, the decisions arrived at on some of the recommendations made in the report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons on East India (Civil Servants) were published. His Excellency the Governor-General in Council now directs the publication of the final decisions on the other questions, which arose in connection with the report of the Committee, and which were in December 1890 held over for further consideration in communication with Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India. These were—

(a) The recommendation contained in the following extract from the report:—

"Your Committee are further of opinion that the greater part of the grievances of the Uncovenanted Service is due to the ambiguity of the terms in which services have from time to time been stated, and recommend that in future there shall be as nearly as possible a uniform scheme, which shall explicitly describe the terms of pension and furlough."

(b) The following remarks of the Committee:—

"Your committee have had their attention called to the obstacles in taking furlough, arising from the insufficiency of the present furlough pay, and they recommend this matter to the consideration of the Secretary of State in Council."

(c) The question as to what action should be taken with reference to the complaints made to the Committee regarding the reservation, in Articles 5 to 7 of the Civil Service Regulations, of the right of the Government to change or modify the pension and furlough rules from time to time and to interpret their meaning.

2. The Government of India are of opinion that the leave and pension rules, as contained in the Civil Service Regulations, are not open to the charge of ambiguity, though from the necessity of the case they are elaborate and complicated. The Regulations have acquired their present form in the course of years, the object of the modifications made from time to time having been, while assimilating as far as possible the conditions of service for similar classes in different branches of the Administration, to remove all ambiguity from the rules, and to enable, on the one hand, officers to ascertain their rights and privileges, and, on the other hand, to enable Local Governments and executive authorities to decide without reference to the Government of India the great mass of questions in regard to leave and pension which necessarily come before them.

3. In view of the great differences which exist in the conditions of service of the many branches of the public service, and in the circumstances of appointments of officers to different branches and sometimes to the same branch, it is not possible to introduce one scheme of leave and pension rules applicable to all branches of the Civil Service. His Excellency the Governor-General in Council considers that the Civil Service Regulations cannot be materially abbreviated or simplified without risk of causing ambiguity and a return to the former state of uncertainty which existed before the rules were codified. His Excellency in Council will always bear in mind the desirability of simplifying the rules wherever possible; but the Civil Service Regulations, without any material alteration in form, must for some time continue to be the authoritative declaration of the rules relating to leave and pension.

4. In order, however, that the more important rules regarding leave and pension may be available in a shorter and more convenient form, a pamphlet containing the principal regulations in a condensed form is being prepared, and will be issued hereafter.

5. The remarks of the Committee quoted in clause (b) of paragraph 1 of this Resolution have been understood by the Secretary of State and by the Government of India to have reference to the absence of any minimum furlough allowance. The decision on this question is contained in the following extracts from the Secretary of State's Despatch of the 25th June 1891:—

"I concur with Your Excellency in thinking that there are certain cases in which it is desirable to guarantee a minimum leave allowance, but I am of opinion that it will be sufficient to give 200% a year, or 75 per cent. of the last salary in India, converted at the rate annually fixed for adjustment, whichever of the two sums may be the less.

"The leave rules are, in my opinion, sufficiently liberal in the concessions made to those who voluntarily take leave of absence; and if they desire to come to this country, I see no reason for giving them an increase of pay beyond that at present permissible. There is, however, a difference in the case of persons whose health may have broken down in India, and who are ordered by a Medical Board to seek the restoration of their health in a temperate climate. Such officers have no option in the matter; and it is reasonable to allow them such a moderate amount of pay as may enable them to avail themselves of the leave ordered for them. Hence I am disposed, if Your Excellency should agree, to consent to the grant of the minimum rates above mentioned in cases of sick leave, and to half those rates in similar cases where quarter pay is at present admissible. I leave it to Your Excellency to determine from what date the privilege should commence."

His Excellency the Governor-General in Council has accepted these proposals, and has fixed the 1st July, 1891, as the date from which they shall have effect.

6. Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, having examined the particular instances which were mentioned in support of the complaints referred to in clause (c) of paragraph 1 of this Resolution, regarding the manner in which the right to alter the leave and pension rules had been exercised by the Government of India, expressed the opinion that in none of them had there been any interference with the rights of the servants of the Government. The Government of India have always been careful to exercise the right of altering rules with due consideration for the rights of their servants. The ordinary course adopted to prevent hardship arising from any change of rule found necessary has been either to defer the introduction of the change for some time after its publication, or to give the officers affected the right of choosing whether they shall come under the operation of the old or of the new rules. It has been decided that the right of altering rules must be maintained, that care should be taken, as in the past, to prevent the introduction of any new rules from operating harshly, but that the Local Governments and the Government of India should not consider themselves precluded from recommending an exception in any case of individual hardship which may arise in spite of the precautions taken. If any case of apparent hardship arises, the local authorities should understand that, when the officer applies to retire, they are not precluded from examining into its merits and ascertaining whether, in their opinion, he has substantially suffered from the introduction of a rule not in force at the time he entered the service. If, after comparing the advantages secured to the officer by the altered rules with any disadvantages incidentally involved, they find that he has on the whole substantially suffered, the point may be taken into consideration in determining whether some compensation ought not to be granted in the particular instance.

7. A list of amendments to the Civil Service Regulations is appended to this resolution, showing the additions and connections made in accordance with the foregoing decisions.

ORDER.—Ordered, that this resolution be communicated to all departments of the Government of India, to all Local Governments and Administrations, to the Comptroller and Auditor-General; to all Accountants-General and Comptrollers, the Director-General of Post Offices, the Mint and Assay Masters (Calcutta and Bombay), the Commissioner (Northern India Salt Revenue), and the Superintendent Government Printing, India.

Ordered also that the resolution be published in the Gazette of India for general information.

ADDENDA AND CORRIGENDA TO THE CIVIL SERVICE REGULATIONS.

Article 346 (c).

Substitute the following for this rule :—

(c) In the case of any other officer subject to these rules—

If on furlough other than furlough on medical certificate out of India.

MAXIMA.

If paid at the Home Treasury of the Government of India, 200l. a quarter; no minimum.

If paid in India, 666⅔ rs. a month; no minimum.

If on furlough on medical certificate out of India.

MAXIMA.

If paid at the Home Treasury of the Government of India, 200l. a quarter.

If paid in India, 666⅔ rs. a month.

MINIMA.

If paid at the Home Treasury of the Government of India, 200l. a year, or three-fourths of last salary, whichever is less.

If paid in India, 166⅔ rs. a month, or three-fourths of last salary, whichever is less.

Article 347 (ii).

Substitute the following for this rule :—

(ii) If an officer not in the Indian Civil Service or in the Army, to 120l. a quarter paid at the Home Treasury, or 400 rs. a month paid in India, or to one-quarter of his average salary, whichever is less. When the furlough is on medical certificate out of India, the following minima shall apply instead of one-quarter salary :—

MINIMA.

If paid at the Home Treasury of the Government of India, 100l. a year, or 37½ per cent. of his last salary, whichever is less.

If paid in India, 83⅓ rs. a month, or 37½ per cent. of his last salary, whichever is less.

Article 374.

*Substitute the following for this article :—*374 (a).—Half "average salary" is subject to the following maxima and minima :—

MAXIMA.

If paid at the Home Treasury of the Government of India, 150l. a quarter.

If paid in India, 500 rs. a month.

MINIMA.

(i) On leave on medical certificate out of India.

If paid at the Home Treasury of the Government of India, 200l. a year, or three-fourths of last salary, whichever is less.

If paid in India, 166⅔ rs. a month, or three-fourths of last salary, whichever is less.

(ii) On leave other than leave on medical certificate out of India.

In the case of non-gazetted officers whose salary is not less than 300 rs. a month, 150 rs. a month.

(b) One-quarter "average salary" is subject to the following maxima and minima :—

MAXIMA.

If paid at the Home Treasury of the Government of India, 120l. a quarter.

If paid in India, 400 rs. a month.

MINIMA.

(i) On leave on medical certificate out of India.

If paid at the Home Treasury of the Government of India, 100l. a year, or 37½ per cent. of last salary, whichever is less.

If paid in India, 83⅓ rs. a month, or 37½ per cent. of last salary, whichever is less.

(ii) On leave other than leave on medical certificate out of India.

In the case of non-gazetted officers whose salary is not less than 300 rs. a month, 75 rs. a month.

The above resolution has caused much dissatisfaction among the members of the Uncovenanted Services both at home and in India. A meeting of the London Committee was held on Dec. 22 at their office at 45 Pall Mall, with Mr. H. Seymour King, M.P., in the chair; and it was unanimously resolved to request Sir Roper Lethbridge, M.P., to whose motion in the House of Commons the Select Committee was granted by the Government as an alternative, to confer with the Indian Committees as to the future action to be taken in the matter. Sir Roper Lethbridge, who was about to visit India on other business, has left for Bombay in the P. and O. steamer Carthage on this errand; and it is understood that Mr. H. S. King and other sympathisers with the Services in the House of Commons will take an early opportunity next session of bringing the subject before Parliament.

A MEETING of the Simla and Calcutta Committees of the Uncovenanted Civil Service Association was held in Calcutta on Dec. 7. A memorandum by the Simla Committee was submitted for consideration, in which a suggestion was made that a permanent committee should be elected by the votes of the provincial committees, and that a committee empowered to represent the feelings of the Service should be composed of members who might be in Calcutta or Simla respectively during the presence of Government in either of those places. The meeting was adjourned to the 18th, when a decision would be pronounced on this point.

THE DUFFERIN MEMORIAL.

ON Dec. 8 at Calcutta the Viceroy performed the ceremony of unveiling the statue of Lord Dufferin. The ground round about the statue was decorated with flags, and there was a large and fashionable attendance of spectators. On arrival Lord Lansdowne was received by the Dufferin Memorial Committee, and the proceedings were opened by Mr. Mackay reading the Committee's report. This showed that the total amount subscribed was 64,314 rs., of which 57,129 rs. had been spent on the statue, a marble bust of Lady Dufferin, and a portrait of her ladyship. The marble bust and bronze statue were the work of the late Sir J. E. Boehm; the portrait was painted by Mr. J. Shannon, and had not yet been received in India, as a copy was being made for Lord Dufferin. Lord Lansdowne, in replying, said :—

THE VICEROY'S SPEECH.

Your Honour, Mr. Mackay, Ladies, and Gentlemen,—I understand that, before I proceed to unveil this statue, I am expected to say one or two words about the distinguished statesman whom it represents. They shall be few and simple. The memory of Lord Dufferin is still fresh in your recollection, and no words of mine can add to, or subtract from, his reputation. I have, however, perhaps a right to address you upon the present occasion, not only as the head of the Government of India wishing to do honour to an Indian statesman, but as one whose friendship with Lord Dufferin carries me back to the earliest days of my childhood—an intimacy which, in spite of long periods of separation, has never been interrupted—and also as one who in two of the important appointments held by Lord Dufferin has had the good fortune to be his successor. My opportunities, therefore, of watching the judgment passed upon him after he had retired from the scene, and when those in whose full sight his work had been performed were no longer under the immediate and irresistible charm of his personal intercourse, have perhaps been greater than those enjoyed by others.

LORD DUFFERIN'S CAREER.

Perhaps the most noticeable feature in Lord Dufferin's career has been the unbroken continuity of his success. Most public men make mistakes, experience reverses, and find themselves for a time, rightly or wrongly, out of public favour, but the even course of Lord Dufferin's advance seems never to have undergone a check. More than thirty years have passed since the time when, in 1860, he was deputed to represent British interest in the Lebanon, at a time when the blood-stained collisions between the Druses and Maronites promised to lead to serious complications in that part of the world. The distinction with which he acquitted himself, and the successful efforts which at this period of his life he made in the paths of literature and politics, established his reputation, and obtained for him appointments which familiarised him with more than one branch of the administration, and notably with that of the great empire which he was one day to govern. His designation to represent the Crown as Governor-General of Canada was received with general acclamation. He undertook the appointment at a very critical period in the history of the Dominion, during the early days of the federation of British North America, and no Governor-General ever did more than he to stimulate the loyalty of Her Majesty's Canadian subjects, or to strengthen the ties which hold together the Provinces of the Dominion, as well as those by which the colony, as a whole, is united to the mother country. As to the tact, dignity, and sympathetic spirit with which he discharged his duties, whether official or unofficial, he left behind him no two opinions. The high degree in which he possessed these qualities pointed to him as one eminently fitted to serve his country in a diplomatic capacity, and, although he had not undergone that training in the diplomatic service which forms the usual avenue to its highest posts, I never heard it said that the absence of experience of this kind in any sense impaired Lord Dufferin's usefulness as British Ambassador at St. Petersburg.

and Constantinople. With each of these Governments our relations were of the most delicate and important kind at the time when they were committed to his charge, and they certainly did not suffer in his hands.

HIS INDIAN SERVICES.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—The recollection of Lord Dufferin's four years' service in India is still fresh in your memories. Whether in regard to the external or to the internal affairs of the Indian Empire, those four years were unusually eventful and laborious, and brought with them more than their share of trouble and heavy responsibility. Upon our western frontiers he left his mark by a settlement, as complete as the circumstances permitted, of a boundary question which, less judiciously handled, would have imperilled the peace of the world, and by establishing upon the throne of Afghanistan a ruler who has since shown himself faithful in his allegiance to us and strong enough to hold in check the turbulent elements of which his kingdom is composed. Upon our eastern confines he brought to a close a long series of complications and anxieties by the addition to the Empire of the province of Upper Burma. It would be impossible within the limits which restrict me this evening to deal adequately with his administration of the internal affairs of India. It will be memorable for many useful measures, among which a conspicuous place must be given to those for the improvement of the position of the cultivators of the soil in this province, in Oude, and in the Punjab. Education, the health of the people, the condition of the public service, the state of the imperial defences, the contribution to those defences made by the Indian States, the extension of our railway system—all received their share of attention. I do not think it will be gainsaid that these and the other grave problems which confronted him were dealt with patiently, courageously, and judiciously. Nor, when the history of Lord Dufferin's administration comes to be written, will it be regarded as the least of his achievements that he throughout conducted the affairs of this country in such a manner as to create and to maintain a kindly feeling and mutual confidence between all classes and sections of your Indian community. One of the most unmistakable proofs that the verdict of his contemporaries in India was a favourable one is to be found in the fact that, as soon as his intended departure became known, a movement to erect this statue was set on foot. It was supported by all classes of the community without distinction of race, class, or creed.

LORD WARDEN OF THE CINQUE PORTS.

Lord Dufferin is still serving his country, and will, I hope, continue to serve it for many years to come. All his old friends must have seen with pleasure that he has within the last few weeks had bestowed upon him the office of Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports—an office which, although purely honorary, confers upon the person who holds it the distinction of succeeding to a long roll of the most distinguished names in the modern history of Great Britain. It would be hard, indeed, among his many brilliant qualities, to designate those to which his success has been specially due. It may perhaps be said that the most conspicuous of these have been his extraordinary perception of human nature, his unerring tact, and his power of conciliating opposition. Nor must we forget that rare gift of appropriate expression in speech and in writing which, it has often been said, came to him as a birthright, but which, as an assiduous student of art and letters, he constantly cultivated and improved—a gift which invariably stood him in good stead, whatever the nationality or the character of his audience, and which enabled him with equal ease and happiness, and with the precise amount of erudition, humour, and sound sense which the occasion happened to require, to describe his own adventures in high latitudes, to take his part in the hot encounter of political debate, to lay rich stores of wit and wisdom before an academical audience, or to give voice to the feelings of a sorrow-stricken nation sharing its Sovereign's grief for an irreparable loss. To the list which I have just given might perhaps be added one other quality possessed, I believe, in the same degree by no other public man of our day. His employment in the various offices of which I have just spoken has, to a great extent, cut him off from the narrower and more purely domestic politics of our own country, and has compelled him to look at the affairs of the empire from a truly imperial standpoint, and to include within his purview a horizon far wider than that of the average politicians of our day. It is no doubt to this that are due those qualities of higher and broader statesmanship which are discernible in almost everything that he has said and written. That is why his reputation will go down to posterity as that of a statesman, rather than a politician, as that of one who, in an age of party rivalries and sectional cleavage, was able to keep steadfastly before his eyes the larger interests of that great empire, the dignity and reputation of which he has upheld in so many parts of the globe. The statue, which I will now unveil, is the work of Sir Edgar Boehm, an artist whose recent decease removed one of the foremost sculptors of our generation. I have no doubt that the work will be worthy both of the great artist who has produced it and of the man whom it represents. (Applause.)

On his Excellency pulling the cord the covering fell away, and the band struck up the National Anthem, while a salute was fired from the ramparts of Fort William.

The statue is an admirable work of art, and a characteristic likeness. Lord Dufferin is represented in his peer's robes, and wearing his various orders. He is standing, as if in the act of addressing an audience, and the pose is at once graceful and dignified. The base of the granite pedestal bears the following inscription:—

FREDERICK TEMPLE,
Marquis of Dufferin and Ava,
Viceroy and Governor-General of India
1884—1888.

At the conclusion of the proceedings, and when the Viceroy was leaving, Mr. Mackay called for three cheers for Lord Lansdowne, which were heartily given by the crowd.

THE IMPERIAL DIAMOND CASE.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

A REUTER telegram from Calcutta (Dec. 22) says:—The famous Imperial diamond trial, which arose out of a charge brought by the Nizam of Hyderabad against Mr. Alexander Jacob, a Simla jeweller, of criminally misappropriating twenty-three lacs of rupees deposited by his Highness as earnest-money for the purchase of the gem known as the Imperial Diamond, terminated to-day, and resulted in the acquittal of the accused. The latter, by his counsel, disclaimed any dishonest intention, and declared that he had paid almost the whole amount received from the Nizam to the owners of the stone.

The correspondent of the Times at Calcutta writes on Dec. 24:—The general opinion concerning the Imperial Diamond case is that no other result was possible on the evidence. The jury deliberated for only six minutes. The Nizam has brought a civil action, praying, among other things, that Mr. Jacob may be restrained from dealing with the diamond, and that a receiver may be appointed. The Court has granted a rule.

The hearing of the charges of criminal breach of trust against Alexander Malcolm Bierry Sabonji, alias Jacob, in connection with the now notorious Imperial Diamond, commenced in the Calcutta High Court on Dec. 7 before Mr. Justice Wilson. In the case for the prosecution, Sir Charles Paul, Messrs. Woodroffe, Jackson and Dunne, instructed by Messrs. Sanderson and Co., appeared. Mr. Gormusjee Vakil, solicitor to the Nizam's Government, was also present. For the defence, Mr. Inverarity of the Bombay bar, Mr. Garth, and Mr. Pearson were in Court, instructed by Messrs. Morgan and Co. Mr. Jacob was accommodated with a seat in the dock. The charges were thirteen in number, under sections 406, 409, and 403 of the Penal Code in respect of sums of 20,72,768-14-10 rs., 1,77,131-1-2 rs., and 50,000 rs.; and also with misappropriating the several sums. Prisoner pleaded not guilty to all. Mr. Inverarity asked permission to appear for the prisoner.

Mr. Justice Wilson: You appeared in the police-court, I believe.

Mr. Inverarity: Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Justice Wilson: Very well, certainly.

The jury was then empanelled, consisting entirely of Europeans. Five native gentlemen called were challenged by Mr. Inverarity. The charges having been read a second time for the benefit of the jury, Sir Charles Paul opened for the prosecution at five minutes to three.

Sir Charles Paul, in opening the case, said the charges rung the changes somewhat, but the sum total of them was that the accused was charged with breach of trust in respect of twenty-three lacs of rupees, obtained from the Nizam for the purpose of obtaining an inspection of a diamond called the Imperial Diamond, a diamond of great value and reputation. The arrangement was to bring the diamond, and if it was not approved of the money was to be returned. As the case proceeded the jury would see that twenty-three lacs were made up by three sums mentioned in the indictment. What the jury had to consider was this: Was accused entrusted with twenty-three lacs for the purpose of obtaining a diamond for the Nizam for inspection in the first instance, the arrangement being that, if the diamond was not approved, the twenty-three lacs should be returned? The case for the prosecution was that the money was paid on that condition. That diamond was not approved, and the twenty-three lacs was not returned, but dealt with as you will presently see. The money was not returned, and the diamond was retained by accused, so that the Nizam lost his money altogether.

In proceeding Sir Charles Paul dwelt upon the history of the accused's dealings with the Nizam, and said it would be seen that Mr. Jacob acquired great influence over this young man of six- or seven-and-twenty. Eleven or twelve months ago Mr. Jacob mentioned this diamond to the Nizam, and said it was worth a crore and twenty lacs. The subject was duly introduced at that time, but between Feb. 26 and March 1 Mr. Jacob was again at Hyderabad, and said the diamond could be got for fifty lacs. Mark, gentlemen, said Sir Charles, he said it could be got for fifty lacs. At last he came down to forty-six lacs. Then the Nizam said he would take the stone on one condition, that it should be a passand ya na passand transaction—that is, if the Nizam liked it he would keep the diamond; if not, he would return it. At the same time Mr. Jacob informed the Nizam that, in order to bring the stone for inspection, he would require a deposit of twenty-three lacs in the bank. If the stone was approved of the balance would be paid; if disapproved of, Mr. Jacob would take the stone, and return the money. Here I may tell you, said the learned counsel, that according to my notions of law, an arrangement made depending upon approval or not is no contract at all. This is laid down in "Henghmen on Sales," fourth edition, page 592, and the view there was adopted by Lord Denman.

Sir Charles Paul then proceeded to detail Mr. Jacob's negotiations with Abid, the Nizam's Chamberlain, with a view to enlisting his interest in the sale of the diamond, and then commenced the reading of letters which passed between Mr. Jacob and Abid and others relating to the transaction. The substance of most of their correspondence has been already published, and their reading was principally interesting for Sir Charles Paul's comments on them. In the first letter read, Mr. Jacob, referring to the difficulty he experienced in getting payment for other goods sold, remarked—"My heart has been on fire for the last two months, and no one knows it," and no doubt the prospect of twenty-six lacs or so profit would set his heart on fire, observed the learned Advocate-General. Among other documents read was Mr. Jacob's agreement with Messrs. Kilburn and Co., which in brief was that Mr. Jacob has to pay 2,000% forfeit money in the event of the purchase of the diamond for 150,000% not being completed by July 31, and 200% insurance.

"When Mr. Jacob told the Nizam that the diamond could be obtained for fifty lacs," proceeded the speaker, "he very probably knew that he was stating what was deliberately false. He knew he could purchase it out and out for 150,000%, and his statement that it would be got for forty-six lacs was an untrue statement; and I submit that in any case the Nizam could have set aside the contract, if he had made one, as being induced by misrepresentation. Courts in England are very strong on that. In another letter from Mr. Jacob to Abid, the former wrote: 'I will bring the diamond to his Highness for inspection. After seeing it, if he likes it, he will pay me the other half, but if he does not like the diamond then the money will be returned to him and the diamond will go back to the owners in Europe.' This," said the counsel, "is quite plain." Further letters were read, in one of which Mr. Jacob said he should forfeit seventy thousand rupees if he did not pay the purchase money on the 8th July. "That," said Sir Charles Paul, "is false. You will find his statements teem with falsehoods," and so through a mass of correspondence counsel proceeded, stopping once to compare Mr. Jacob to Joseph Surface—"full of morality, full of fine sentiment, but internally, habitually, altogether wrong and immoral, the most sentimental man in the world when he is writing false statements."

Counsel pointed out that Mr. Jacob throughout endeavoured to make the Nizam and everybody else believe he was purchasing from a third person, and that the forty-six lacs were to go, not to himself, but to some other person, so that when he said in a letter to Abid that the Alliance Bank of Simla had stood security for the remainder of the purchase money, over and above the twenty-three lacs, that was another falsehood, a wilful and utter falsehood. Coming then to the rejection of the diamond, counsel said on July 21 Mr. Jacob had an interview with the Nizam, who rejected the diamond, and on the 22nd Mr. Jacob left for Bombay with the stone in his possession. On the previous day he sent a telegram to Messrs. Kilburn & Co., saying the diamond was rejected, and they wired the news to London to Messrs. Pittar, Leverton & Co., the owners of the gem. Then a curious thing happened. Though Mr. Jacob saw Abid on the 21st, nothing was said about the new contract with the Nizam; but on the 22nd, when three hours' journey from Hyderabad, Mr. Jacob telegraphed to Messrs. Kilburn & Co. from Gungawaram, "Secure draft if favourable. If not, wait my arrival. Nizam cut me six lacs."

Our case is that there is not a single shred of truth in that. On the same day at the same time Mr. Jacob telegraphed to Abid, saying, "I trust to you to arrange that matter, otherwise I shall be in difficulties." And from Bombay he wired, "Hope you will arrange about money as soon as possible." Abid replied that, according to agreement, the deposit money was to be returned. That telegram was taken to the Great Eastern Hotel, Calcutta, in the night. Mr. Jacob could not be found, and next morning, between five and six o'clock, the telegram was delivered to him and he signed the receipt. Mr. Jacob said he went to Kilburn's and telegraphed 150,000*l.* to London, and then came back and opened the telegram. Would the jury believe such nonsense as that, asked counsel. But on that very point they would have the evidence of Mr. Cheetham, who would tell them that Mr. Jacob said he had received a telegram from a valet or underling, and did not intend to take any notice of it till he heard from the Nizam, because he had seen the Nizam and agreed for forty lacs. Simply because Mr. Jacob had to pay 2,200*l.* forfeit and insurance and repay some seventy or eighty thousand rupees he thought, if I remit the money, it will put the Nizam in a corner, but of necessity I will compel the Nizam to take the diamond. He tried to avoid the true case by setting up a false one.

Mr. Justice Wilson: I suppose you must take considerable time in your opening.

Sir Charles Paul: Oh, yes, my Lord.

The court then adjourned.

At the hearing of the case on Dec. 8, when Sir Charles Paul had concluded his opening address, Mr. Inverarity raised an objection to the Nizam's evidence taken on commission being admitted, as his Highness, by his position, was free from prosecution for perjury. A long discussion followed, and Mr. Justice Wilson finally decided that the evidence was not admissible by the Sessions Court. The Advocate-General then applied for issue of a fresh commission to examine the Nizam, but this his lordship refused. Mr. Abid was the first witness called, and his examination-in-chief, in which evidence was much the same as before the police court, was not concluded when the court rose. Mr. Abid's examination-in-chief was continued on Dec. 9, 10, and 11. He acknowledged the receipt of letters and telegrams from Mr. Jacob, which went to show that Mr. Jacob informed his Highness the Nizam and himself that twenty-three lacs was required to be paid into the Bank of Bengal in Mr. Jacob's name to enable Mr. Jacob to remit the money to the owners of the stone in England. Mr. Abid also acknowledged that although he was aware that this was contrary to the original engagement, he neither wrote nor telegraphed to Mr. Jacob to contradict him, but he showed the telegrams to H. H. the Nizam, who notwithstanding ordered the money to be deposited in Mr. Jacob's name. Mr. Jacob had a paper which he received from England in which the history of the diamond was detailed, and which he read to Mr. Abid and left with him. In this the value of the stone was represented to be 800,000*l.* The remainder of the cross-examination referred largely to the circumstances under which the various interviews regarding the diamond had taken place at Hyderabad.

PRINCE GALITSIN AT LAHORE.

THE Lahore paper says:—Prince Galitsin, the Russian traveller, who has just left Lahore for Rawul Pindi, has been interviewed by a correspondent regarding his visit. He is, it seems, specially anxious that its object should not be misunderstood. The purpose of his visit to India, he says, is to demonstrate to the people of Russian Turkestan the friendly relations of Russia and England—to show that when a Russian gentleman visits India, travelling in his private capacity, with the permission of her Majesty's representative, and with no political object in view, he is kindly and courteously received. The other object of his visit is to write a series of letters on India. It is remarkable, he says, that at the present moment there are only three Russian books relating to India—one by M. Notovitch, one by M. Bonvalot, and one by the late Madame Blavatsky, and neither of these attempt to give any general account of India and its people. The first two treat of the routes through Central Asia to India, M. Notovitch's dealing with the route by the Karakorum Pass, and the other with the way through the Pamirs, and Madame Blavatsky's treats of the subject in which she was specially interested, Buddhism, and the religions of the people. The people of Russia, says the Prince, really know nothing about India; and his purpose is to show them that the peninsula is not a country like France, Spain, or Germany, with one language, but an aggregate of countries like Europe, with many different peoples and languages. His purposes describing the method of Government in India, the finance of the country, its army, and the state of education, and showing generally that the progress of civilisation under British rule in India has been very great. "At such a time as this," he says, "I think it is very important to show Russia the truth about India. It is perhaps more important for Russia than for England. I am a Russian patriot, and I repeat I think it is very important." Prince Galitsin has got another purpose in his visit, which, however, relates more to the bent of his own particular studies. He intends writing a book on Buddhism, making investigations with this object in Burma and Ceylon, as well as in India. As to his journey from Turkestan, the Prince says it was not by any means difficult, though, but for some timely help he received from Captain Evans Gordon, of the Political Department, it might have been exceedingly toilsome. With his attendant and twelve ponies he left Turkestan on August 10 and arrived at Kashgar on August 28, and at Yarkand on September 16, and on October 1 the party crossed the Karakorum Pass. Two days afterwards the Prince was considerably disturbed when his servants told him that nine of his Turkestan ponies had died during the night, apparently from eating a poisonous grass. But on the same day five Tibetan servants, with three yaks, came into camp, having been sent by Captain Evans Gordon, and these got the party out of the difficulty. How useful his present was the Prince was able to tell Captain Evans Gordon when they met in Srinagar. Ladakh was reached on October 19, and Srinagar on November 1. There the Prince experienced the greatest hospitality and kindness.

THE DECCAN RELIEF ACT COMMISSION.

The Times of India of Dec. 12 says:—On a previous occasion we have dealt with the principal reasons which have led the Supreme Government to appoint a special Commission to inquire into the working of the Deccan Relief Act, and to consider and report on the larger question what other remedies can be suggested to meet a pressing evil. That evil, we repeat, is the growing indebtedness of the agricultural population and the gradual transfer of proprietary interests in land from the martial and cultivating classes to the trading and money-lending castes of Hindoo society. It is necessary to dwell upon this point because the discussion of this intricate problem of administration is advanced a definite stage when the Supreme Government expresses its mature conviction that this expropriation of the peasantry is an evil. The fact that the same problem has arisen in other parts of India is a guarantee that a wider effort will now be made to discover a suitable and adequate remedy. Perhaps, too, more general interest will be taken in public discussion of the lessons taught by experience, and in such solutions as may be offered for consideration. We have tried to clear the ground by explaining what the general scope of the approaching inquiry will be, so far as it concerns the interferences of the Deccan Relief Act with the ordinary procedure of civil justice. To-day we propose to clear the ground still further by summarising, as far as is practicable, the main differences established by the special Act of 1879, as compared with the general law applicable to the courts throughout India. On a future occasion we shall come to the general question of expropriation of the peasantry, a matter to which we attach far more importance than to the interference of special legislation already accomplished with the normal working of the ordinary courts of law.

The Deccan Riots Commission submitted their report in 1875. The discussion which ensued between the Government of Bombay and the Government of India regarding remedial measures requiring legislation was interrupted by the intervention of the Secretary of State, who intimated in December 1878 that he was prepared to sanction experimentally the legislation proposed by the Bombay Government. He desired that the matter might be taken up in a comprehensive manner by the Government of India, instead of being dealt with piecemeal, partly at Calcutta and partly in Bombay. Hence came Act XVII. of 1879, to which we owe in the four Deccan districts (Poona, Ahmednagar, Sholapore and Sattara) to which the Act applies such innovations as the following:—The extension of the final and summary powers of the subordinate judges; the entertainment of assistant or subordinate judges for the special duty of inspection and supervision; the appointment of village munsiffs wherever possible to try summarily and without appeal money suits up to 10 rs.; and the appointment of conciliatory judges for the amicable settlement of disputes between agriculturists and other persons. Chapter II. of the Act applies a special Small Causes Court procedure to seven different classes of suits which need not be enumerated. The most marked characteristics of this specially devised procedure are, first, the imperative obligation placed on the Court to examine the defendant as a witness in every suit unless, for reasons to be recorded in writing, it deems it unnecessary to do so; secondly, the withdrawal of the right of appeal from a decree or order in any suit to which this chapter applies. Chapter III. relates to suits and proceedings to which agriculturists are parties, and the following provisions deserve attention. In certain classes of suits the Court must, if the amount of the claim is disputed, go behind the bond, that is, make an inquiry (according to rules fixed in the Act) into the history and merits of the case from the commencement of the transaction out of which the suit has arisen, and must do so with a twofold object. First, with a view to ascertain whether there is any defence on the ground of fraud, mistake, accident, undue influence or otherwise; and, secondly, with a view to taking an account between the parties. Again, agriculturists are exempted from arrest or imprisonment in execution of a decree for money, and their immovable property can only be sold in execution when it has been specifically mortgaged for the repayment of the debt to which the decree relates. But a later amendment withdraws this exemption where standing crops are concerned, though such crops are legally immovable property. Chapter IV. provides a special insolvency procedure for agriculturists, and under a later amending Act the Court is authorised to take insolvency proceedings of its own motion. It may be pointed out, as a matter of some importance, that it is provided that the immovable property of an insolvent is not to vest in the receiver, but may be managed by the collector, if not required for the support of the insolvent and his family, for any period not exceeding seven years for the benefit of the creditors. This protection, however, does not extend to mortgaged property. For, if any scheduled debt is secured by a mortgage of immovable property, the Court may direct the collector to raise the amount of the debt by a premium for letting the property up to twenty years, or, if such premium cannot be obtained, to sell the property. A few more provisions remain to be noticed to complete a summary of the most essential features of this special legislation for the four Deccan collectorates. No appeals lie to the High Court; the special judge (appointed by Government to discharge what would otherwise be duties thrown on the district judges) superintends and revises the proceedings of the subordinate judges instead of hearing appeals from their decisions. Facilities are afforded to agriculturists for bringing redemption suits. Provision is made for appointing village registrars, and where they have been appointed no instrument executed by an agriculturist is valid unless written by or under the superintendence of, and attested by, a village registrar. Pleaders are practically excluded from appearing in suits under the Act. A special period of limitation is prescribed for suits against agriculturists, being twelve years (instead of six) when based on a registered written document, and in other cases six years, instead of the three years or less of the ordinary Law of Limitation.

There are not many points where authoritative opinion is expressed in the resolution of Nov. 20 last with sufficient decision to facilitate further discussion of particular features. The institution of non-official conciliation has long since been damned with faint praise by the Bombay Government, who, in 1884, said that it had been useful in connection with the relief of the Deccan agriculturists, if only in the matter of assisting subordinate judges in the disposal of suits for redemption. Mr. Ranade, the special judge, has always urged that without the assistance afforded by the conciliators the subordinate judges would be overwhelmed with work, and the Government of India leave the working of this institution to the careful examination of the Commissioners. Again, as to village registration. The original intention of the framers of the law was to have a registrar in nearly every village. This has been found impossible owing to the inferior quality of the available agency, which appears to be "incompetent, corrupt, and uneducated." Even after the substitution of special circle stipendiary registrars for groups of villages, the Bombay Government thought that as it was not possible to bring the agency within easy reach of every village, the provision requiring registration of all bonds must be a grievous inconvenience to the people. They recommended the early rescinding of the provision for compulsory registration of money bonds. But the Secretary of State (Lord Kimberley) was not convinced that this proposal was expedient, and the Government of India's last suggestion is that a provision in the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, now to be made applicable to this Presidency, may afford sufficient protection to the agriculturist. This Act virtually abolishes optional registration in the case of documents affecting land. Next, the provisions for the management of the judgment-debtor's land by the Collector have been reported by the Bombay Government since 1884 to be a dead letter. The Secretary of State, still entertaining hopes of possible success, drew attention to a proposal that the Collector should levy full rental from the judgment-debtor and pay the difference between the full rent and the assessment to the decree-holder. But still further experience does not seem to have made the situation more hopeful. A word now as to the important insolvency provisions from which so much was hoped. "A dead letter" is the verdict of the local Government. And the Government of India, too, decide that the whole of Chapter IV., which deals with insolvency, has been practically inoperative, and need not be retained in any modified form of the Act, which may be applied elsewhere within or without the Bombay Presidency. We shall have a word to say about this again. With regard also to the special law of limitation provided for the four Deccan districts, the Government of India seems to be doubtful whether there is sufficient reason for maintaining an exceptional law of limitation for this one locality, or for extending it elsewhere.

MILITARY AND NAVAL.

Good-Service Pension.—It is notified that, on the recommendation of the Government of India, her Majesty's Government has been pleased to confer a good service pension on the undermentioned officer, with effect from Dec. 10, 1890, in room of Col. A. T. Cox, C.B., Staff Corps, succeeded to the colonel's allowance:—COL. WILLIAM POPHAM DICKEN, C.B., D.S.O., Staff Corps (Madras).

Dates of Commissions.—Ensign, Dec. 9, 1853; lieutenant, Nov. 23, 1856; captain, Dec. 9, 1865; major, Dec. 9, 1873; lieutenant-colonel, Dec. 9, 1879; colonel, Dec. 9, 1883.

Appointments.—Regimental duty, 1853-73; general duty, 1873-75; regimental duty, 1875-83; commanding Tounghoo Column (Burma Expedition), 1885-86; regimental duty, 1886-89.

War Services.—Burma, 1885-87.—In command of the Tounghoo-Nyngyan Column. (Mentioned in despatches: Medal and clasp: D.S.O.)

Presentation of Orders and Medals.—The whole garrison at Poona and Kirkee paraded on Dec. 7 for inspection by the Commander-in-Chief, and for the presentation of orders and medals. The following officers and troops were decorated:—Col. Westmacott, commanding 28th Pioneers, C.B., for general field service; Col. Rhodes, Military Secretary to the Governor, Surg-Major Wilkins, Superintendent Matheran, D.S.O., Egypt and Burma, respectively; Lieut. Brownridge and the 28th Pioneers, the frontier medal for the Chin-Lushai Campaign. The troops marched past and then formed a square for the presentation, subsequently advancing in review order. The Commander-in-Chief said:—"Colonel Westmacott, Colonel Rhodes, Dr. Wilkins, and gentlemen and sirdars,—I have great pleasure in having the opportunity of presenting you with these marks of your gracious Queen's royal favour, and I congratulate you on your services having been appreciated by her Majesty. I hope you will long live to wear these honourable distinctions, and that as time goes on you may have a chance of getting others."

The Aligarh Cavalry Camp.—Sir F. Roberts, accompanied by the Adjutant-General in India, the Military Secretary, and three aides-de-camp, arrived at Aligarh on Dec. 8, and was received by General Luck, the Headquarters Staff, and the brigadiers and commanding officers. His Excellency was present at a parade on the 9th. The general idea was that information had been received that a large force of cavalry was marching on Somna from Khair, and the cavalry at Aligarh was sent out to attack it. The enemy was represented by the 1st Brigade, with the Q Batty., Royal Horse Art., 4th Bengal Cavalry, and the Gwalior Contingent Cavalry, under the command of Col. Grant, C.B. The attack took place near Oodeypore. Col. Jenning's Brigade being in the front line, the 4th Brigade supporting, and the 3rd Brigade in reserve and protecting the guns. After the first line of the enemy had been driven back, they had to rally to the right to meet an attack from that direction. This movement was promptly done. After the midday halt the northern force was moved to Somna to await orders. The southern force returned to Aligarh. Col. Buller and Cooke resumed command of the northern and southern forces respectively.

A handsome brass mural tablet has been put up at St. Stephen's Church, Bareilly. It bears the following inscription:—"Rifle Brigade, 1st Battalion, dedicated by their comrades to the memory of (here follow the names of five officers, eleven non-commissioned officers, and forty-nine privates), who died at Bareilly, and on detachment, from January 1889 to February 1891."

As the necessity for more cavalry on the north-west frontier seems desirable, more particularly as the borderland below the Samana Ridge must be carefully watched for some time to come, it is probable that two squadrons of the 19th Bengal Lancers will be sent to Kohat.

It has been decided to give the second Battalion of the 3rd Goorkhas a new home at Sitoli, in the neighbourhood of Almora. The land is to be acquired at once, and barracks will be built next year. The regiment will remain at Lansdowne until the new quarters are ready.

The question of the provision of Officers' Quarters at Fort Sandeman beyond the Gomal Pass, will likely be shortly considered, as it now appears certain that Apozai will have to be occupied for an indefinite period.

Nineteen of the men of the North Lancashire Regiment who were injured in the railway accident near Nagpore will be sent home by the last troopship of the season, as unfit for further service.

Private Grimes, Royal Irish Fusiliers, has committed suicide in the Fort, Delhi, by shooting himself with his rifle, which was discharged with the muzzle in his mouth.

A statement that Sergt. Nolan, Acting Quartermaster-Sergeant, 22nd Field Battery, but attached to the 2nd Field Battery, was drowned whilst endeavouring to recover a duck that had fallen into the water, was not correct. As a matter of fact, as elicited by the court of inquiry, Sergt. Nolan perished whilst bravely attempting to save the life of a comrade, Gunner Herbert, who was also drowned.

The rifle thieves appear to be having a good time of it at Meeran Meer. A short while ago several rifles were reported stolen from the barracks of the Wiltshire Regiment there, and now again three Martini-Henris are reported stolen from the barracks of the 3rd batt. Rifle Brigade. No clue has been found to the perpetrators.

BENGAL.

OUR latest advices from Calcutta are to Dec. 9.

A Bengali Lady-Graduate.—Mrs. [Nirmala Shome is announced to have passed the M.A. examination of the Calcutta University, making the second Bengali lady to gain that distinction. Both ladies are Christians and Nonconformists.

Disturbed Districts.—A notification has been issued by the Bengal Government intimating that, owing to the disturbed condition of the mahal of Udaykrishnapore and Fauhore, in the subdivision of Serajunge, five head constables and twenty constables will be quartered on the affected tracts for a period of one year. The total cost of this measure will amount to over 4,000 rs.

The Russian visitors, Count Kreutz and Baron de Nolde, had returned to Calcutta from a visit to Darjeeling. They had arranged to visit Sikkim, but were refused permission by the authorities under instructions from headquarters.

A rumour was current in Calcutta that Maharaja Sir Jotendra Mohun Tagore, K.C.S.I., and several other Bengali millionaires, propose starting a Steam Navigation Company with a capital of 5 lacs of rupees. The steamers of the proposed Company will ply between Calcutta and Assam, Rangoon, Prome, &c.

The official report on the Kidderpore Docks, dated Nov. 24, is that rapid progress is being made, and that the quality of the work done is satisfactory. At the present rate the work will be completed at a very early date. Since the shutting of the dock gates against the tide, the work on the injured walls has been well advanced.

The Calcutta police have at last been armed in a manner which will enable them to cope with riots similar to that which occurred last May. Superintendents are now armed with revolvers, inspectors with swords, mounted police with cutlasses, and the European reserve constables with Snider rifles bored to five buck-shot. Fifteen hundred stout lathis have also been provided for the native rank and file.

MADRAS.

OUR latest advices from Madras are to Dec. 9.

Retirement of the Commissioner of Police.—The Government of Madras have passed the following complimentary order on the retirement of Colonel Weldon:—Colonel Weldon having vacated his appointment as Commissioner of Police, his Excellency the Governor in Council avails himself of the opportunity to express his regret at losing the services of so valued an officer, and place on record the high sense which is entertained by the Madras Government of Colonel Weldon's devotion to his duty throughout his long and honourable career, and in particular of the administrative and detective ability which he has displayed as Commissioner of Police to the City of Madras.

Another Examination Scandal at Madras.—Another examination scandal at Madras is reported, in which a student in the B.A. General English paper is believed to have obtained a copy of the examination questions before the examination. He wrote to the secretary of the Cuddalore College asking for a brief sketch or plot of any novel of Dickens, Scott, or Thackeray. The secretary naturally refused to do so, and reported the matter to the registrar of the University. It appears the question was almost identical to that set in the B.A. paper. The student is in one of the colleges at Madras. It is not stated what steps the syndicate of the University have taken in the matter, but it is hoped that a searching investigation into the manner in which the student obtained a proof of the paper before the examination will be made.

The Ramnaad Zemindary.—On Dec. 4, at the Madras High Court, the Hon. Mr. H. G. Wedderburn, acting advocate-general, instructed by Mr. T. Runga Chariar, High Court Vakil, appeared before the Hon. Mr. Justice Parker, and moved for the appointment of a receiver to manage the affairs of the Ramnaad Zemindary, regarding which a partition suit brought by the younger brother was dismissed in the Subordinate Court of Madura, and an appeal therefrom is pending in the High Court. The Hon. Mr. Wedderburn submitted that the present Zemindar had squandered away his estate; that he had spent nearly 22 lacs of rupees within three faislis; that the whole of the property was now encumbered by mortgage to the Commercial and Land Mortgage Bank, and that it was thought highly essential to appoint a receiver for the proper administration of the Zemindary. His lordship ordered that a notice be issued to the present Zemindar to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed as applied for.

Dispute about a Racehorse.—A suit which Mr. Lyon, of Pundaioor, Neilgherries, brought against Lieutenant Westlake, of the 1st Madras Lancers, for delivery of the racehorse Orphan, which he alleged he had purchased and defendant had wrongfully withheld from him, was settled on Dec. 9 in the Madras High Court, to which plaintiff had appealed against the decision of the Subordinate Court of the Neilgherries. The judges of the High Court said that the plaintiff had not paid the money within the stipulated time, and consequently was not entitled to claim the horse. The case was, therefore, dismissed with costs. The plaintiff had actually sent the money, but owing to the fault of the person taking a portion of it, it was not all received within the stipulated time; hence the sale was null and void. The case arose at a meeting of the Wellington Races in May 1886.

A Raja Fined.—Their lordships Justices Wilkinson and Shephard have decided a criminal revision petition which came up to the Madras High Court under reference by the Sessions Judge of Godavery, in which Sri Raja Vatsavaya Venkatasimhadri Jagaputi Raju Bahadur, Zemindar of Kottam and Raja of Tuni, appealed against his conviction and sentence by the Second Class Magistrate of Tuni for mischief. The accused dismantled several walls bordering on his estate, and otherwise caused loss and destruction to the owners. One of the aggrieved, Maddala Suriah, complained to the police, with the result that the accused, among others, was tried, convicted, and fined. Their lordships declined to interfere.

The Inspector-General of Police in the Madras Presidency is making a personal investigation into the recent disturbances at Kurnool. The conduct of the ordinary police on the occasion, as a contemporary is given to understand, does not appear to have been all that it might have been.

During November 3,450 tons of quartz crushed at the Mysore mine produced 5,100 oz. 6 dwt. 20 gr. of gold; and 1,761 tons of tailings, 514 oz. 17 dwt. 23 gr., so the total production of gold was 5,618 oz. 4 dwt. 19 gr. The falling off in the amount of tailings treated was due to the scarcity of water.

Ten members of the Salvation Army at Madras have been fined by the Presidency magistrate 3 rs. each because during a procession along the street their music and banners frightened a horse dragging a cart occupied by two solicitors. The horse, becoming restive, damaged the cart, injuring the occupants.

The Madras Board of Revenue having forwarded a claim for exemption from payment of income tax made on behalf of the servants of the Madras Railway Company employed on the section of line running through the Nizam's dominions, the Government of India have held that such servants are not liable to pay income tax.

Employment for a number of distressed ryots in Ganjam has been found upon the East Coast Railway earthwork. If, however, the line running through the affected districts can be completed in a month, this will involve the discharge of 1,500 labourers. These will be drafted to the Ruskilyar project, or employed on making water channels locally.

We (Pioneer) are glad to see that the Madras Government has not only officially thanked the collector of Cuddapah for the trouble he took in connection with the recent experiments in rain-compelling, but has determined that further experiments shall be carried out without delay under the direction of the Public Works Department at Bellary. An allotment of 2,000 rs. has been made for the purpose.

Under the heading "Bad News for British Merchants" the Madras Mail writes:—We understand that one of the mercantile firms in Madras this morning received advice by telegram that the French Senate has passed a Bill imposing a duty of 3 frs. per 100 kilos. on all gingelly seed and ground-nut kernels imported into France from any port but Pondicherry, imports from which will be free. The result of this action on the part of the French Government will be to at once stop all exports of ground-nut kernels from any British Indian port to France, for it will be impossible for British merchants to compete successfully when their French neighbours have such an immense advantage over them by being saved such a heavy duty.

BOMBAY.

OUR latest advices from Bombay are to Dec. 12.

The Governor's Levée.—On Dec. 10 Lord Harris held his second Levée in Bombay at the Secretariat. A noticeable change was initiated in the Levée in specially reserving the front portion of the outer room for the European officers of the garrison as well as of native officers of regiments, who entered from the passage leading to the room on the east side, and these officers were first presented to his Excellency, the general public following.

Bombay University.—A meeting of the Senate of the Bombay University was held on Dec. 4 for the purpose of considering certain proposals made by the Syndicate with reference to the Matriculation Examination and a large number of amendments submitted in connection with the same. After considerable debate Mr. James Jardine proposed that the meeting should be dissolved, and in doing so pointed out that the adoption of this course would not tend to hinder reform in respect to the Matriculation Examination, but would leave it open to the Syndicate to bring forward, at some future time, other proposals of a more generally acceptable nature than those then before them. The proposition having been seconded by Mr. Shewshunker Govindram, was adopted by a large majority.

Bombay and the Congress.—A crowded open-air meeting was held at Poona on Dec. 9 in Hirabag to elect delegates to the Nagpore Congress, and to consider what steps should be taken to make the Congress permanent. The meeting was attended by the leading men of different castes and opinions. Rao Bahadur Vasudev Bapuji Kanitker presided. It was proposed by Mr. Namjoshi, and seconded by Mr. Tilak, and unanimously carried:—"That it was undesirable either to discontinue or to suspend the Congress sittings. That if no other province undertakes to hold the next Congress, Poona may undertake it on behalf of the Deccan." It was also resolved that in consultation with other provinces steps should be taken to raise a memorial to Mr. Hume in consideration of his valuable services to India. About thirty-five delegates of all classes and opinions, including Sirdars, were elected.

Destructive Fire at Sholapore.—A Sholapore correspondent, telegraphing on Sunday, Dec. 6, said:—An alarming conflagration occurred yesterday at Sholapore, resulting in the almost total destruction of the Morari Goculdass Cotton Mill. On Saturday afternoon at half-past five the fire was discovered. One of the engines stopped, and the workpeople observing something wrong, quickly streamed out just in time. Only one woman was seriously burnt. In a few minutes the building was in flames from end to end. The escape of the workpeople was miraculous. Fortunately there was no wind. By eight o'clock the main building was completely gutted. The mill and other officials on the spot did everything possible, but little or nothing practically could be done. The mill has no fire-engine, but the Municipality sent a small hand-engine. The mill was provided with a tank at the top, but the hose proved short and unworkable. The Municipal engines under the Municipal Secretary and the mill officials succeeded in saving some weaving sheds and one engine and boiler house. The other engine is a hopeless wreck. The sheds of stored cotton were also saved. The damage is roughly estimated at about four lacs. The destruction of the mill is a serious calamity in the present condition of the district, as 500 hands are thrown out of employment. It is a piteous sight, the crowds of workpeople looking on helpless, while their means of subsistence is perishing before their eyes. If the fire had commenced in the middle instead of the end the loss of life would have been fearful, there being no ladders or other external means of escape. This deficiency will doubtless be remedied during the process of reconstruction. The woman injured is in hospital, but not expected to live. According to a later message, the fire proves to be even more serious than was reported at first. The mill is a very extensive one, the buildings and compound occupying sixty acres. The premises are only of recent construction, are three storeys high, and fitted with modern machinery and appliances. The fire first broke out in block "A," comprising the spinning, carding, and mixing rooms, and was first observed by the workpeople about half-past five in the evening. The workpeople, numbering close upon 1,000 hands, were prompt in leaving the building, and no loss of life would have occurred had not one unfortunate woman re-entered the burning portion of the mill with the object of saving her clothes, which she had left behind. She was seen to go in, and as she did not return a party of mill-hands courageously went in search of her and succeeded in bringing the poor woman out alive, though terribly burnt. She was at once taken.

to the hospital, but died on Sunday morning. The fire naturally spread with great rapidity, and the meagre extinguishing appliances at hand were only of use in protecting the other portion of the building. Eventually the small hand-engine of the Municipality came on the scene, and by their aid the weaving-room, engine-house, machine-shop, boiler-house, and godowns remained undamaged. The mill is valued at 12,80,000 rs., while the loss sustained is roughly estimated at 4,00,000 rs. This amount is fully covered by insurance, most of the principal companies in Bombay being affected. The damage is so great that the working of the mill is entirely suspended, which will cause much distress among the 1,000 hands.

In the Diana Competition at the Bombay Presidency Rifle Association's meeting, the first prize has been taken by Miss Pottinger, who made 67; Mrs. Rivett Carnac, 66, second; and Mrs. von Donop, 63, third.

The Bombay Chamber of Commerce have received a letter from Sir James Fergusson, in which he regrets he cannot hold out any prospect of the adoption of a penny letter-post to India, it not being justifiable from a financial point of view, nor in accordance with the uniform tariff lately adopted. He points out that post-cards have been reduced, and a reduction in newspapers, &c., is in contemplation.

His Highness Aga Akbar Shah, third and youngest son of the late Aga Khan, has been appointed Sheriff of Bombay for the ensuing year, commencing on Dec. 20. The eldest son, Aga Ali Shah, having been head of the family and spiritual guide of the Khojas, died some years ago, and was succeeded in the office by his only son, his Highness Aga Sultan Mahomed Shah. The present senior member of the family is his Highness Aga Jenghi Shah, elder brother of Aga Akbar Shah, whose appointment of Sheriff is certain to give satisfaction to the Mahomedan community.

BURMA.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Dec. 27:—

The latest news from the Bhamo frontier is satisfactory. Some discussion had taken place between our officer and the Chinese official in reference to a small mountainous territory called Matin, situated near the Shweli river, and governed by a Kachin Tsawbwa. Both parties claimed it, and both proposed to occupy it. The question who is entitled to Matin is certainly doubtful. The Viceroy of Yunnan has now proposed that Matin shall remain in the charge of both nations until the frontier is definitely delimited. This proposal will be accepted.

A Commission to delimitate the frontier will probably be appointed next year. The columns sent out from Bhamo during this cold weather will do much exploring work along the frontier, and it is anticipated that they will collect much useful information.

Little progress has yet been made by the Chin columns, owing to the difficulty experienced in forwarding supplies. The Rangoon Times announces that the Maingkan column has arrived at Namaing, after considerable delay. It experienced great difficulty in river transport, as the villagers fled and hid their boats in the jungle.

Sir A. Mackenzie leaves Rangoon to-morrow for Meiktila, in Upper Burma, and will remain for about a month in the centre of the distressed districts. He will carefully examine existing relief works, and decide what further steps are necessary. The new paddy crops are coming in. The market has opened with very high prices, being nearly 30 per cent. over last year's opening prices. These prices are not likely to continue, as the crop prospects in Lower Burma are excellent. Large sales of rice for delivery in February and March are being made at prices greatly below those obtained for January deliveries.

It is understood that Major Peile, who has officiated as Inspector-General of Police since Brigadier-General Stedman's departure, will be confirmed in that appointment.

Amongst other military reforms likely to result from Sir J. Dornier's recent tour in Burma is the localisation of the newly-established Burma regiments which have replaced the disbanded Madras regiments. The headquarters of these regiments will be definitely fixed in certain localities. This scheme is very popular with the men, and is supported by the officers of the Burma regiments. It is opposed, however, by Major-General Stewart, commanding in Burma, on the ground that it may lessen the military efficiency of these corps. It is understood that General Stewart is alone in his opposition, the grounds for which are not easily understood.

TELEGRAPHING ON DEC. 5, the Rangoon correspondent of the Pioneer says:—The Taeping route from Momein to Bhamo will be well protected this season. The Chinese authorities have raised a levy for the protection of caravans as far as the British frontier, and from the frontier to Bhamo our two posts on the Nampaung stream and at Mannaung will undertake similar duty. These two posts have been established. That at Mannaung consists of 200 military police, as provided in the Upper Burma Police Reorganisation Scheme, and that at Nampaung of 100 men, 3rd Burma, under Lieutenant Hurley. Regular patrols are now working between Mannaung and Bhamo, and if caravans take advantage of them they should be free from the molestation of Kachins, whose vagaries have hitherto been a constant source of annoyance and danger.

THE SCHEME FOR THE REORGANISATION of the Lower Burma police has been sanctioned by the Government of India. Two batteries of military police are to be formed, one of 20 companies with headquarters at Rangoon, and one of 12 companies with headquarters at Toungoo. The civil police are to be Burmese only, except in Rangoon and Moulmain, and are to be mainly occupied in the prevention and detection of crime. A training school is to be established at headquarters. The sanction of the Secretary of State is needed for the appointment of adjutants. The reorganisation is to be begun at once.

MR. H. DALY, who acted as superintendent in the Northern Shan States last year, has submitted a very interesting account of the district to the Local Government. The picture which he draws is for the most part by no means encouraging, and it distinctly conveys the impression that if the Shan country is to be brought into line with the rest of the province it will require the firmest and most vigorous administration during the next four years. Except perhaps the Theebaw Tsawbwa, none of the native chiefs exercise any real and active control throughout the States. The people, it is said, are fleeced by the minor officials, and criminal justice is administered in a cruel and haphazard fashion. In Mr. Daly's opinion it will be impossible to effect any lasting improvements until a trained Dewan is appointed for each State. Each of the chiefs should be required to frame a form of budget for his State, subject to the approval of the superintendent, fixing the amount to be devoted to the private expenditure of the ruling family, and making reasonable provision for the administration of civil and criminal justice, police and public works. In the meanwhile, the Chief Commissioner is indisposed to adopt the suggestion that a heavy fine be imposed on the Jungnaing Tsawbwa for his remissness in the payment of tribute. It is objected that the money would in all probability be wrung from the people, who are not to blame in the matter.

PUNJAB, N.-W.P., OUDE, &c.

SOME RUSSIAN TRADERS had arrived at Rawul Pindi, and are staying in the Serai in the Sudder Bazar.

ACCORDING TO THE LAHORE PAPERS, persons disguised as fakirs are again wandering about in the Punjab, pretending that they possess herbal secrets by which the can convert copper or silver into gold, eventually decamping with the copper and silver entrusted to them. The other day one of these sham fakirs came to a cloth merchant at Jhelum, and was kind enough to turn a copper pice into gold. Then the swindler got some eight hundred rupees worth of jewellery from the man and promised to return him ten times its value in gold. For about two days and nights they watched the magic furnace together, but on the eclipse night the sham fakir went to the river to bathe in the sacred stream of the Jhelum, and disappeared with the booty. The foolish cloth merchant has lost all his own jewellery as well as much of his neighbours'.

THE BOOKING CLERK, Mulchand, of the North-Western Railway, who was prosecuted for criminal breach of trust, has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

THE BAND OF RUFIANS who disturbed the peace of Agra on Sept. 10, breaking into the boarding-house of the female students belonging to the Lady Lyall Hospital, and committing other outrages, have been brought to book. Of the nine men concerned, one is still at large, one was admitted as Queen's evidence, and the remaining seven were sentenced by the Sessions Judge to transportation for life.

IT WILL BE REMEMBERED that in April 1890, a murderous attack was made on the Superintendent of the Rampore Police while on his way to Moradabad, and in connection therewith three men were arrested and placed on their trial before Mr. H. F. Evans, the Sessions Judge of Moradabad, who convicted and sentenced them each to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. Against this sentence an appeal was preferred to the High Court, under section 285, Criminal Procedure Code, the objection taken being that at the trial in question all the assessors were not present throughout the proceedings. The High Court, allowing the objection, directed a new trial according to the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. The fresh trial was lately held by Mr. Mulock, the present Sessions Judge, and resulted in the acquittal and discharge of two of the accused, viz., Mahmood Khan and Abdul Majeed, while the third man, Chiddan, having been found guilty, has been sentenced to ten years' rigorous imprisonment.

In an official order on the Punjab Irrigation Report for 1890-91, it is stated that the good work done by Mr. Higham, Superintending Engineer, and his staff seem to Sir James Lyall to deserve special recognition with reference to the very good progress made in the construction of the new Sirsa Branch of the Western Jumna Canal, and in the clearing out of drainage channels in the Delhi Division, a most important sanitary work; also with reference to the improved working and earnings of the Sirhind and Western Jumna Canals. The interest charges on the Sirhind Canal were for the first time covered by the net earnings and a surplus secured. Sir James Lyall also concurs with Colonel Outley in considering that Mr. Maclean deserves special credit for the great progress made on the Head Works of the Chenab Canal, and that the very good work done by Mr. Benton in renewals of the head works and emergent repairs of the Bari Doab Canal calls for recognition. The canals of the Province are already yielding a handsome profit, and it seems certain that the rate of profit will largely and steadily increase in the next few years. In addition to the profit to the revenues of the State, there are other economical and political advantages to be derived from canal extension in the Punjab. Sir James Lyall hopes that this will be recognised, and that it will be held to be a good reason for special treatment of the Province in the matter of liberal supply of funds for irrigation projects.

HYDERABAD.

THE Pioneer publishes the following telegram, dated Dec. 6, from its correspondent at Hyderabad:—

The rubarite ordered in connection with the rain-compelling experiments has arrived, but these experiments have been postponed until the atmospheric conditions become more favourable. Meanwhile Mr. A. J. Daplop, Inspector-General of Revenue, is in communication on the subject with Lieutenant Mansfield, R.N.R., of Bombay, who has invented inexpensive machinery for exploding the rubarite at a high altitude. Mr. Mohamad Ahmad, barrister-at-law, and son of the Nawab Moshtak Hoosain, has been appointed an honorary member of the Minister's staff as a mark of personal distinction. He will shortly leave for Madras to practice at the bar there.

Major Percy Gough, Miscellaneous and Military Secretary, has returned from leave, much benefited in health, and has resumed charge of his duties.

Captain Masters, Cantonment Magistrate at Secunderabad, has been confirmed in his appointment. This news has been received with great satisfaction, as Captain Masters is deservedly popular with all classes, and during the time he has been here has carried out a great many improvements in connection with the populous Secunderabad bazaars and cantonments.

Mr. Plowden is nearly all right again, and is able to get about.

The outlook in some of the districts is rather gloomy, and scarcity is apprehended. The Nizam's Government are fully prepared to meet the scarcity, and plans and estimates for starting relief works are ready to hand.

The Commission appointed to inquire into the debts of the State will sit shortly. Mr. Ali Raza Khan, a Judge of the High Court, will be the secretary to the Commission, and as these duties will occupy him for some two years or so, Mr. Nizamuddin Ahmed of the Berar Commission will be appointed to the High Court during that time.

Mr. Gallagher, having been appointed Superintendent of His Highness the Nizam's Central Printing Press, will sever his connection with the Deccan Standard, the publication of which will cease at the end of the year.

CENTRAL ASIAN NOTES.

TELEGRAPHING from Teheran on Dec. 26, the correspondent of the Times said:—"The demonstration against the tobacco monopoly has so far been conducted in an orderly spirit, but the crisis has been allowed to continue too long, and the people are becoming exasperated at the Government's delay in publishing the notification in Teheran of the abolition of the internal monopoly, after having informed the provincial governors that it should be carried out. Placards threatening the lives of Europeans were posted up yesterday in the bazaars. The Governor of Kasvin has come to Teheran, troubles of the same nature having broken out there." The expected proclamation, however, was issued the next day, being as follows:—

"His Imperial Majesty, extending his favour towards the whole population of the country, has cancelled and abolished the monopoly throughout the whole kingdom on tumbeki, or waterpipe tobacco, and tutun, or ordinary tobacco, and on other smoking material. Owners of such are at liberty throughout the whole kingdom to buy and sell from and to whomsoever they please, as before; they are under no obligation whatever from this date, and are entirely free in the purchase and commerce of tumbeki, tutun, &c., and quite independent in the use of their goods. This is advertised and issued for the information of the whole population."

The general opinion, a subsequent telegram says, is that this proclamation will calm the excitement. Meanwhile the police-station has been occupied by troops. The question of compensation to the corporation is being considered by the Government. The Shah's Government considers that the text of the Imperial proclamation relating to tobacco is applicable to the interior of Persia only, and that it maintains the corporation monopoly of exports. Measures of security have been thoroughly taken, and the town is quite quiet.

The Shah has gone out shooting.

The Standard publishes the following telegram from Sebastopol, dated Dec. 26:—

Some time ago I reported that a Russian expedition was being equipped for the exploration of Tibet and the survey of the northern frontier of China. This expedition has since been brought prominently before the notice of Europe by the Pamir incident. I am now informed by the same authority that fresh troops are to be sent into that part of Central Asia, and, in addition to the usual equipment for taking the field, they will be provided with several mountain guns. No doubt timely warning will reach the British authorities in India of this fresh marauding force of Russian soldiers, for it is nothing better, and its doings will, of course, be closely watched by the British Government.

France is displaying remarkable activity in the matter of Central Asian exploration, two new missions having followed quite recently on the heels of Messrs. Bonvalot and Prince Henry of Orleans's expedition. M. Joseph Martin has travelled from China and Mongolia along the southern edge of the desert of Chinese Turkestan; while Messrs. Dutreil de Rhins and Grenard have been traversing the region about Khotan, where the Russian explorers (Colonel Pevtsov and Captain Gromchevsky) were heard of not long since. M. Grenard, whose letters to his father—published by the Paris Geographical Society—are bright and interesting, says that he was shown "la plus généreuse hospitalité" by Captain Younghusband at Kashgar, who is de facto British Consul there, though not officially recognised as such. M. Grenard adds with amusing candour that in accepting Captain Younghusband's hospitality he and his companion had no thought of offending the susceptibilities of M. Petrovski, the Russian Consul; in fact, they sought out Captain Younghusband at M. Petrovski's suggestion, as the latter was daily expecting M. Martin, and had no other quarters to offer. M. Grenard says he established the most friendly relations with Mr. Macartney, Captain Younghusband's assistant, who is of Anglo-Chinese extraction, and acts as Chinese interpreter. These letters have come by the lengthy roundabout route of Russian Turkestan, and are, of course, of earlier date than the comparatively recent news of Captain Younghusband's rencontre with the Russians on the Pamir.

It is notified in the Russian official Gazette that, by order of the Czar, the 3rd Battery of the 20th Brigade of Artillery will bear the following badges of distinction:—"For the conquest of the Western Caucasus in 1864; for the heroic defence of Bayazid in June, 1877; and for the capture by assault of the fortress of Geck-Tepe in January, 1881."

The Ameer of Cabul's recent proclamation forbidding lavish expenditure on funerals is, says the Pioneer, characteristically addressed to "men of sense and understanding." His Highness quotes a verse from the Koran—"Verily the prodigals have been the brethren of devils"—and adds that if any one does not place his faith in the clear injunctions of the Koran and the authentic Hadis, "he shall be turned out of the presence of God and shall deserve the fire of hell, from which may God protect us." It does not appear that any special circumstances have arisen to call forth this proclamation, though the death-rate of Cabul is probably higher than usual owing to the outbreaks of cholera. But whatever may have been the influences at work on Abdul Rahman's mind, he is to be congratulated on having done a sensible thing. He must now be classed among the social reformers of the East, whatever defects he may have as the ruler of a savage and turbulent race.

More Afghan refugees of note, the Lahore paper says, have arrived in India. Sirdar Muhammad Ali Khan, a noted leader in Seistan, with two of his brothers and twelve servants, reached Peshawur from Cabul a few days ago. These men were expelled from Seistan in the time of the Ameer Shere Ali for intriguing with the Shah of Persia. They then took up their abode at Chaghansur, close to the frontier between Afghanistan and Beloochistan. They are said to have hospitably treated and invited the Boundary Commission under Sir West Ridgeway, and were afterwards allowed to return to Afghanistan, being summoned to Cabul by the present Ameer, who gave them an allowance. A year ago the Ameer, for some political reason, ordered them to live at Cabul permanently and send for their families. They, on the contrary, sent their families to Persia. This angered the Ameer, who has expelled them once more from Afghanistan.

The Lahore paper learns from its frontier correspondents that the notorious refugee and adventurer, Nur Mahomed, who some years ago disappeared from Peshawur and for a while snatched Khost from the Ameer, is coming back to India. It is said that the ex-Ameer Yakoub Khan, who was lately betrothed to Nur Mahomed's daughter, has successfully interceded for him; and that the threat of arresting him if ever he ventured upon British territory has been withdrawn.

The Pioneer writes:—We announced some time ago that the Ameer of Cabul had expressed his willingness to reduce the duties levied upon exports from India into Afghanistan, with a view to increasing the trade between the two countries. So far nothing has been done, and he has consequently been charged with having broken his word. But there are two sides to the question. It seems that when his Highness summoned the chief traders about him at Cabul and discussed the matter, he asked that in return for the reductions contemplated they should cease to use roundabout routes to Central Asia, and send all their goods direct to Afghanistan. He in return undertook that the ad valorem rates should be justly calculated, one of the great grievances of the merchants being that his officials in the most arbitrary way fixed the values of the goods in transit. There can be no doubt that this was done with a view to obtaining large revenue from the kafilas, and the natural result was that trade was seriously checked. The Punjab traders, however, were loth to give the undertaking required, feeling, perhaps, that hereafter false complaints might be lodged against them of using the Persian route, in which case their representatives at Cabul would certainly be mulcted in heavy fines. The Ameer has, therefore, moved no further in the matter, but this by no means implies that he is not prepared to carry out the fiscal reform which he promised. It was something to have induced him even to consider this subject of the taxation of trade, and it would be a pity if nothing were to come of his negotiations with the Indian traders. The latter may claim to know their own business best; but if they are really in earnest in desiring to bring about a revival of trade with Afghanistan and Central Asia, they might give the undertaking asked of them. They might take such precautions as would effectually prevent their being charged with double-dealing, for the Ameer is not easily hoodwinked, and he has a rough-and-ready way of making his orders respected when once he has issued them. If he had English merchants alone to deal with, we are convinced that a good understanding would be arrived at without further delay.

Crime in Madras in 1890.—The salient features as regards the state of crime in the Madras Presidency last year are thus recapitulated in the report of the Madras High Court:—A slight decrease of crime under the Penal Code accompanied by a considerable increase under special and local laws; and a check in the continued decrease in the percentage of convictions under the Penal Code and a striking falling off under special and local laws. The chief features of last year in the business done by Criminal Courts were:—(1) A continuance of the decrease in the number of cases received and disposed of by village magistrates accompanied by a noteworthy increase in the total institutions and disposals of original work in all classes of regular magistrates' courts in the mofussil and in the total percentage of convictions; (2) an increase both in original and appellate work received and disposed of by the sessions courts, and an improvement in the percentage of convictions; (3) a continued falling off in the number of cases received and disposed of by the Presidency magistrates, and a better discrimination in awarding fines; and (4) a striking increase in the number of sessions cases filed in, and disposed of by, the High Court, and a slight decrease in the number of appeals instituted, accompanied by an increase in the number disposed of.

NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST.

THE following telegrams have been received since our last issue : —

SINGAPORE, Dec. 27 (Times).—Imperial decrees received from Peking and dated Dec. 17 admit that severe fighting lasted from the 3rd to the 7th. They state that 2,000 rebels were killed and 50 of the leaders were beheaded. A list of officers deemed worthy of honours is being prepared.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 21 (Reuter).—A letter received here to-day from Shanghai states that the French and Russian Ministers at Peking insist upon being received in audience in the Imperial Palace itself. The Ministers who were received at the Chinese New Year in the so-called Hall of Tributary Nations stipulated, in accepting that place for the function, that they were making a concession which they should not be asked to repeat. The Tsung-li-Yamen assured them that a suitable hall would be prepared for the occasion before the next annual audience. The hall not being ready, the Austrian Minister declined to be received in the one in which his colleagues had their audience, and threatened to demand his credentials and return to Tokio. He was, therefore, received in a seldom-used hall in another part of the Palace grounds. The French and Russian Ministers, being in no hurry to leave, are firm in their demand, and are determined to be received in the Palace. This agreement, the letter remarks, indicates a Franco-Russian entente in regard to China. It is very natural that the two Powers who are constantly liable to frontier questions with China should come to such an agreement. If the incursions of Chinese pirates do not cease, reprisals will be undertaken in force, and China will be compelled to withdraw her troops a distance of 75 miles from the French and Russian frontiers, to rectify these frontiers, and to pay an indemnity. The letter, in conclusion, observes that France and Russia are aggrieved at seeing that first Germany and then Great Britain have advanced into advantageous positions in China, while they themselves are left out in the cold.

The Convener of the Foreign Missions Committee of the Church of Scotland has received, under date of Nov. 13, an important letter from the Rev. George Cockburn, of Ichang. Writing from Shanghai, he says the idea that the recent riots in China were anti-missionary and patriotic has been exploded throughout the whole country. They have been simply anti-foreign, stirred up solely by officials and their underlings, the only part of China where any widespread antipathy to foreigners exists being Hunan, into which the officials have carefully prevented foreigners from entering.

On Dec. 27 the Chinese Legation in Paris made public a statement of the measures taken by the Government at Peking for the settlement of the difficulties with European Powers occasioned by the attacks on foreigners at various towns on the Yangtse river during last summer. After observing that order has now been completely restored throughout the Yangtse region, the Chinese communication states that the attacks upon Christians and the plundering of their dwellings were carried out, or instigated, by bands of men belonging to the secret society of the Kolao-Hui. Owing to the vigorous steps taken by the Chinese Government there has been no recurrence of the riots since the last rising at Ichang in September last. To repair the damage done and to prevent a repetition of the recent troubles, the Chinese Government has adopted the following measures :—Indemnities amounting in all to 400,000 taels, or about 100,000£, have been paid to the Christian missions of all nationalities and to the families of the only two foreigners killed—a missionary and a Customs official, both Englishmen. Severe penalties have been inflicted upon some ten officials for neglect of duty. About a hundred persons were arrested for having taken part in the riots, and of these four have been executed, while the rest have been condemned to punishments of various kinds. Particular orders have been issued to Chinese war-vessels and to the military garrisons to afford protection to the lives and property of Christians. The authors of pamphlets inciting the people against foreigners will in future be condemned to death. Besides the above measures, as it is known that the disturbances were the work of the Kolao-Hui, a large number of persons known to belong to that organisation have been put to death. The rising which occurred about a month ago in Mongolia was, it is explained, in no way connected with the events in the south of the Empire, its object being simply plunder without any distinction between Christians and others. The rising, which was of an entirely local character, has been suppressed. Finally, it is stated that China will neglect none of her international obligations, and the hope is expressed that the publication of the present note will allay public anxiety in Europe, and will put an end to all the exaggerated and malicious rumours which are being circulated regarding affairs in the Celestial Empire.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 23 (Times).—There has been a Malay rising in Pahang. An English magistrate has been fired at. A body of armed police has been sent from Selangor. The trouble is attributed to local hostility to the Malay Sultan.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 24 (Times).—The Malay rising in Pahang has not yet been suppressed. The Malays are leaving the mining camps for the jungle. Some of the Malay police are deserting.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 25 (Reuter).—The rising which has broken out among the Malays in Pahang is confined to a portion only of the mining district. At Raub the natives refused to work and left the mines, which, however, according to intelligence received here, are quite safe. A serious conflict occurred between the authorities and the rioters, who are headed by Orang Kyah. Mr. Townson, the mine inspector, received gunshot wounds in the arm and ribs, and a Sikh policeman was also seriously wounded. Both of them have returned to Peking. Eight policemen and five boatmen are missing, and it is feared that they have fallen into the hands of the rioters. Some Malay policemen at Lebok and Tuah have deserted the stations and are reported to have joined the rising. A Sikh force of fifty men has left Peking in order to arrest Orang Kyah.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 28 (Times).—The Pahang Malay chief is now in the jungle with several hundred followers. They have ample food supply seized from the mining stores. Public opinion in the Straits Settlements is that the Government has not sent a sufficient force, there being only some seventy Asiatic police.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 24 (Times).—Dr. Macgowan, of Bangkok, has published a letter in which he alleges that the British Minister in Siam was the means of getting him dismissed from the Siamese service. The Minister is going to prosecute Dr. Macgowan in the Consular Court. The Chief Justice will shortly leave Singapore for Bangkok in order to try the case.

The Japan papers from Yokohama to Nov. 11, and Kobe Nov. 13, bring the following items of intelligence :—They are still full of earthquake news. There was a landslip on the northern side of Fujiyama, which has altered its shape. The Tokaido Railway is open again, except for twenty-eight miles between Nagoya and Tarui. In this section three large rivers have to be crossed, and it is improbable that the bridges can be rebuilt, and the whole line re-opened, before next June.—The U.S.S. Charleston, bearing the flag of Admiral Belknap, arrived at Yokohama on Nov. 8.—The jury at the inquest on the late Mr. W. G. Johnson of Kobe found that he committed suicide while suffering from severe mental depression.—The Empress Dowager visited Kobe on Nov. 11, and her maids of honour wore costumes and head-dresses such as the Hiogo News has never previously witnessed.

The overland China mail of Nov. 26 gives the following summary of Hong Kong news :—Three meetings of the Legislative Council have been held during the week, and have been attended with a good deal of friction. The Government are endeavouring to hurry the passage of the large long-delayed Merchant Shipping Consolidation Bill through committee, and the unofficials will not move so fast as the officials wish. Considerable progress has, however, been made with that big Bill. The Estimates, which include a vote practically re-establishing the ecclesiastical subsidy and a vote for a new gaol that is not required, were approved by the Finance Committee, after a somewhat sharp discussion. In consequence of the increasing cost of the administrative staff of the colony, Mr. Whitehead intends to move at an early meeting of Council "that Government appoint a Commission composed of Members exclusive of Government officials with full powers to inquire into and report on the working of all the departments of the Government with the view to retrenchment, and as to the desirability or otherwise of the redistribution of work, the amalgamation of certain offices, the increasing of the hours of the official day, privileges in the way of leave, &c."—E. L. Woodin has been brought back to Hong Kong and charged at the Police Court with embezzling $100,000 belonging to the P. and O. Company and with falsifying books.

According to the Pioneer, Major E. G. Barrow, who has been appointed commandant of the new Hong Kong Regiment, arrives in India shortly. Recruiting is now going on for this battalion, 75 per cent. of the strength being men volunteering from the native army. Captain Faithful, Second-in-Command, has proceeded to Hong Kong. The regiment will be organised in four companies of 250 each. It will be equipped in India, with the exception of the rifles, which will be issued at Hong Kong.

The following official notification has been published at Singapore :—

"THE PAHANG RAILWAY SCHEME.

"Railway from Seremban, in the Protected Native State of Sungei Ujong (in continuation of the railway from Port Dickson to Seremban), via Kwala Pilah, in the Protected Native State of Negri Sembilan, to Semantan, in the Protected Native State of Pahang.

"Proposals will be received on or before the 15th April, 1892, at the office of the Crown Agents for the Colonies, Downing Street, London, S.W., or at the Colonial Secretary's Office, Singapore, for a Concession for the above railway, commonly known as the Pahang Railway scheme. The Native States concerned are prepared to grant to the Concessionaires the following advantages :—

"Remission of all duties, fees, and other imposts on all materials required for the construction of the railway. Permission to use free of charge any materials to be found in the country which are the property of the State. The use of prison labour when available at subsistence rates, subject to rules as to supervision, kind of work, and the like. Free land grants (on the alternate block system) in the unoccupied parts of the country, provided no private or commercial rights are in existence. The land (where the property of the State) required for the purposes of the railway, and power to acquire on payment of compensation any private land required. Free use of the various plans, surveys, and reports of the line now in course of preparation and almost finished.

"Note.—There is no land available for block grants between Seremban and Kwala Pilah.

"The Concession would be granted subject to conditions to be settled hereafter. It might be granted in respect of any section or sections of the whole line.

"Copies of the plans, surveys, and reports can be seen at the office of the Crown Agents, London, or at the Colonial Secretary's office, Singapore.

"The probable distances are as follows :—

"(a) Seremban via Pukit Putus to Kwala Pilah, 23½ miles.

"(b) Kwala Pilah to Kampong Sereting, 12 miles.

"(c) Kampong Sereting to a point near Bukit Pasoh, about 16 miles.

"(d) Bukit Pasoh to Kwala Semantan (Kampong Temerloh), about 28 miles.

"By his Excellency's command,

"A. P. TALBOT, Acting Colonial Secretary.

"Colonial Secretary's Office, Singapore, Nov. 18."

OUR BOOK NOTICES.

THE HYMNS OF THE RIG-VEDA.*

THE first half of the Fourth Volume of Mr. Griffith's translation of the Rig-Veda has now reached this country; and it carries the work to the middle of the Tenth and last Mandala. The hymns of the Ninth Mandala, which this Part also contains, are certainly most remarkable specimens of adoration. They are, one and all, ascriptions of praise to Soma, the personified Moon-plant, or Acid asclepias, from the juice of which an intoxicating beverage was prepared, which was offered to the gods in sacrifice. These hymns owe their existence to the effect produced upon simple minds by witnessing the effects of intoxication. All the phenomena of that condition are hymned, conjointly and separately, as manifestations of divine power; and the mysterious liquor was offered to the gods in order to produce similar feelings of hilarity in them, and to stimulate them to combat with the powers of darkness in behalf of the worshipper. The spiritualised Bacchanalian character of these ditties forms a unique study; for no other religious system of the world ever raised alcohol to the rank of a deity.

The hymns of the Tenth Mandala are a somewhat miscellaneous collection. Their ostensible authors are mostly mythological beings, some of them are gods, and the sons of gods, and some are women. They are addressed not only to gods, but to other ideas and objects, such as heaven, earth, water, death, and even to dice! The verses addressed to this last deity have a strange interest, for they enshrine the bitter remorse of some reckless gambler of the antique world. The scene is terribly realistic; and though composed 4,000 years ago, the words might have been written yesterday. The regretful poet cries:—"When the brown dice, thrown on the board, have rattled, like a fond girl I seek the place of meeting. The gamester seeks the gaming-house, and wonders, his body all afire, Shall I be lucky? Still do the dice increase his eager longing, staking his gains against his adversary. Cast on the board, like lumps of magic charcoal, though cold themselves they burn the heart to ashes. The gambler's wife is left forlorn and wretched; the mother mourns the son who wanders homeless. Sad is the gambler . . . he yokes the brown steeds in the early morning, and when the sun goes down, sinks down himself an outcast. Play not with dice; no, cultivate thy corn-land, enjoy the grain, and deem that wealth sufficient. There are thy cattle, there thy wife, O gambler!"

There is a marvellous pathos in many of these ancient poems of the Rig-veda; and some of them are not destitute of humour, as, for example, the 112th poem of the Ninth Mandala. The bits of slang Sanskrit in this production show that it might be rendered in some such fashion as the following:—"We are a shifty lot; man is up to many dodges. The priest looks out for a customer; the wheelwright seeks damaged carts, and the doctor damaged carcasses. Let the liquor flow! The armourer wants good sticks, feathers, and flints for his arrows; and then he wants someone with the cash to pay for them. Let the liquor flow! I am a bard, my dad's a leech, mammy grinds corn; we all run for what we can get, like cows to a pasture. Let the liquor flow! A horse likes an easy cart; a gay fellow likes a laugh; a young man likes his sweetheart; a frog likes water. Let the liquor flow!" Mr. Griffith does not translate it in this way, but he considers it to be "an old popular song transformed into an address to Soma (alcohol) by attaching to each stanza a refrain which has no connection with the subject of the song." The serious rendering of the refrain is, "Flow, Soma, flow for Indra's sake"; but taken in connection with the rollicking character of the verses, "Let the liquor flow," seems quite appropriate. The whole poem is, in fact, the counterpart of "Let the world jog on as it will; we'll be free and easy still."

The conclusion of Mr. Griffith's excellent work will be looked for with interest. He has given new life to these antique poems, and has placed them within the reach of all who wish to know the thoughts, the hopes, the struggles, the arts, the cares, the religion, the philosophy, and the civilisation of the earliest representatives of our own section of mankind.

The Staff Corps.—The Civil and Military Gazette, in alluding to the Staff Corps movement, says:—It may be taken as settled that memorialising the House of Commons is regular and constitutional, and memorialists need apprehend nothing. Those who have not yet sent in memorials must decide for themselves whether or not to send them in now. There is, admittedly, one consideration to hold them back, and that is the knowledge that they will act without the avowed consent or, we might rather say, against the implied dissent of the authorities. Against this they must weigh their duty to themselves, their brother officers, and their branch of the Service, and the certainty that they are doing nothing irregular. It is a matter upon which each man must choose for himself and show the courage of his own convictions; but we imagine that with many a strong argument for joining the movement will be the fact that the authorities have indirectly endeavoured to intimidate them from doing what they have a perfect constitutional right to do in their own interests. To sum up, we think that the opposition and discouragement which the movement has met with has not been justified by reason, and will not stand the test of Parliamentary inquiry, and that perseverance will ensure some measure of relief being granted to grievances which can be proved to exist.

Crime in Bombay.—From a resolution issued by the Indian Government on the state of crime and working of the police in the various districts of the Bombay Presidency it appears that in 1890 there were reported 105,898 cognisable and non-cognisable offences as compared with 95,453 in 1889 and 95,961 in 1888. The number of persons arrested or appearing on process before the courts in 1890 was 163,136 as compared with 152,665 in 1889 and 152,879 in 1888. The number of persons convicted was 46,808, or 28.6 per cent., which was very nearly the same proportion as in 1889. At first sight it would seem as if crime had materially increased in 1890, while the means of detection made no progress; but the increase was entirely confined to non-cognisable offences. Of the reported cases of 1890, 31,191 only, as contrasted with 36,388 in 1889, related to cognisable crime; and the number of persons arrested in connection with that description of crime was only 40,691, as contrasted with 44,183 in the former year. Of those arrested for cognisable offences in 1890, 22,096, or 54.3 per cent., were convicted, as compared with 56.6 per cent. in 1889. Separating cognisable offences under the Indian Penal Code from all other cognisable cases, it appears that out of 30,426 persons arrested in connection with the former class 13,727, or 45.1 per cent., were convicted against 46.4 per cent. in 1889. Out of 10,265 persons arrested in connection with cognisable offences under other laws (Class 6), 8,369, or 81.5 per cent., were convicted, as contrasted with 84.2 per cent. in 1889. The number of non-cognisable offences reported in 1890 was 74,707, as compared with 59,070 in 1889, and the number of persons appearing before the courts in connection with these offences was 122,445, as compared with 108,482. Convictions were obtained against 20.1 per cent. of the persons arraigned, as compared with 17.7 in 1889. The police were only employed in 1.8 per cent. of the cases, and therefore the very small percentage of convictions reflects no discredit on the force.

Education in Baroda.—An official paper recently laid before H.H. the Gaekwar gives some interesting particulars with regard to the remarkable progress of education in Baroda State during the past twenty years. It was in 1871 that the foundation of this progress was laid, and in four years seventy schools have been built, and accommodated some 6,000 pupils. By 1880, the number of schools had risen to 180, and the pupils to 17,000; in 1885, there were 761 schools with 27,000 pupils; in 1890, there were 448 schools with 46,000 pupils, and at the present time there are 515 schools with 54,030 pupils. It is not merely with elementary education that this progress is so marked. In addition to the "three R's," various useful subjects have been introduced and taught to the pupils with most successful results. The experiment of adding a seventh standard to the existing curriculum of studies in most of the higher grade schools has also been successfully tried, and, at the special desire of the Gaekwar, Sanskrit is taught in many of the large schools as a classical language. The teaching of music on scientific principles to the boys and girls, as an accomplishment, has also been growing popular, and the moral and physical education of the children has been receiving special attention. Steps have been taken too for introducing technical education into the State. The Kalabhavana, with a suitable laboratory and workshop, was opened in the past year, and put under the charge of Professor T. K. Gajjar, M.A., B.Sc. The course of studies includes drawing, dyeing, carpentry, and mechanical engineering, and the total number of pupils in these branches is 255—namely, drawing sixty-four, dyeing forty-four, carpentry forty-four, and mechanical engineering 103. Female education is also progressing satisfactorily. Last year there were thirty-four girls' schools with 3,600 girls attending them, and there are now forty-two with 5,000 girls in them, while the number of Zenana classes is five, with 222 pupils. All this is eminently gratifying.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES.

REFERRING to the Resolution on the Uncovenanted Civil Service, given in another column, the Englishman says:—For our own part we regret that the Government of India should have taken up a position which will only aggravate the feeling of discontent that prevails so widely, and which will, at the same time, give colour to the notion that the hostile influence of the other Indian Services is all-powerful with the head of the administration. It is not thus that the agitation of the Uncovenanted Service is likely to be extinguished. The Service has waited patiently for a settlement of its claims, and it is now almost certain to transfer the question to an English platform, where it will be viewed apart from the official prejudices which are apparently fatal to its consideration in this country.

The Times of India of Dec. 12 says:—The representative of the Bombay Presidency in the Viceregal Legislative Council—the Hon. Mr. Nugent—has just left for Calcutta to resume his legislative functions. During the last sessions of the Council Mr. Nugent did distinguished service in several directions—notably in connection with Factory Legislation and the Age of Consent Bill. His views, which were in harmony alike with those of the Local Government and with enlightened public opinion on this side of India, were expressed with singular independence and clearness of diction, and displayed a statesmanlike grasp of the questions involved. His manly outspokenness contributed in a large measure to save India from the oppressive industrial legislation in which a mischievous agitation initiated and fanned by selfishness under the garb of philanthropy seemed at one time to be only too likely to end. Not less fearless and straightforward, though more in accord with the views of the Council generally, were the contributions which he made after wading through "filthy floods of loathsome literature" to the deliberations on the vexed question of raising the age of consent. We are not aware whether any proposals for legislation of equal importance will be brought before the Council at Calcutta this session. But if they are, the public have every reason to believe that the broad sympathies, the ripe judgment, the keen sense of justice, the mastery of detail, and the varied experience of the Member for Bombay will not fail to be of high service in the Council Chamber.

In April last the Madras Government encroached upon the rights of the Chief Justice of Madras by attempting to fill vacancies in the Ministerial establishment of the High Court. The Chief Justice and other Judges naturally resented any interference from Government, and addressed a letter of remonstrance to the Secretary of State for India. The letter is still before the Viceroy in Council, who, before forwarding it, thought it necessary to make reference to the High Court. The Government of India, in thus making the reference, virtually admitted that when the local Government has approved of the creation of an appointment under Letters Patent it cannot abolish that appointment without the consent of the Chief Justice. With regard to the Clerk of the Crown, the Supreme Government doubts whether the Madras Government had ever given its sanction to its creation. The Judges of the High Court have been informed by the Government of India that the office of Clerk of the Crown cannot be abolished by the Madras Government, though the Government of India considers the Madras Government had no intention of encroaching on the rights and privileges of the Chief Justice. The High Court still maintains that the existence and legal powers of the Chief Justice were entirely ignored by the Madras Government, for when the Chief Justice protested against the action of the local Government, the latter took no notice, and still asserted an incontestable right to appoint the Ministerial officers of the High Court. The matter has again been referred to the Secretary of State.

The Hon. Mr. Robert Smeaton, who has recently been appointed a member of the Local Legislative Council for the North-West Provinces and Oude, remains in office, it is understood, as Financial Secretary to the Local Government until the spring of 1892.

The vacancies next year among the Assistant Superintendents on 150 rs. per mensem, in the Northern India Salt Revenue Department, will be filled up by competition for the first time. The examination of the selected candidates for the department will be held at Allahabad on Jan. 9, 1892, and following days, simultaneously with that prescribed for filling up vacancies in the clerical establishment (Lower Division) of the Secretariat offices of the Government of India and attached offices. The number of appointments to be competed for is two.

The Leprosy Commission.—Remarking that the report of the Leprosy Commissioners has now been presented to the committee for whom they acted, but that the text of the report cannot be completed until about March next, as it is necessary to wait for the completion of the imperial census, the British Medical Journal gives a forecast of its probable contents. It will be found that the evidence as to the contagion, heredity, and the spread of leprosy has been impartially sifted. It is believed that the census returns will show a marked relative, if not an absolute, decrease in the amount of leprosy prevalent in India. There appears to have been much exaggeration of the amount of leprosy in India, the figures for the British Empire alone having been stated at 500,000, while it would appear that 100,000 is nearer the truth. The decrease in leprosy in India, which it is believed the census will show, will relieve the Government of a considerable responsibility. As to the question of the actual amount and practical risk of contagion, it seems likely to result from inquiries that in this case, as with tuberculosis, it has been much overrated, and that contagion may be found to be rather theoretically possible than practically probable. There is a great amount of evidence already in favour of the non-hereditary character of the disease, authentic congenital cases having apparently never been recorded. The conclusions of the Committee are not likely to alter this state of facts.

THE TRANSLITERATION OF ORIENTAL NAMES.

ADDISON in the Spectator makes MR. WILLIAM HONEYCOMB declare "with a little passion" that he never liked pedantry in spelling, and that for his part he spelt like a gentleman and not like a scholar. To judge from the endless variation in the way of spelling the names that figure in the history and geography of countries with alphabets unlike our own, there must be a great number of people of WILL HONEYCOMB'S way of thinking. There is nothing new in such variation. HORNE TOOKE in LANDOR'S "Imaginary Conversations" observes, "we are become well acquainted with MAHOMED; but every man who has travelled in the East brings home a new name for the prophet, and trims his turban to his own taste." Orientalists, both travellers and scholars, have continued to this day to trim their turbans in any number of different modes; and there are still more ways than one of spelling the name of a religious teacher whom our forefathers called MAHOUND, and who is now described by authority of the GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA in Council as MUHAMMAD. And the question which agitated the Spectator's friend is once more being forced into prominence. The Council of the Royal Geographical Society has circulated a paper in which attention is drawn to the urgent necessity of adopting a uniform system of spelling for geographical names. This was also insisted on by COLONEL HOLDICH, R.E., at the recent International Congress of Geographers at Berne. At the Oriental Congress, too, steps were taken to collect and formulate the opinions of members on this important matter with a view, we understand, to propounding quite a new scheme of transliteration.

As regards Oriental names, geographical and historical, the movement—if that term may be fitly used—has a peculiar significance just now. The completion of the new census will necessitate a thorough revisal of all Indian gazetteers and of a large number of official reports, so that it is highly desirable to proceed on a plan which is at once uniform and authorised. Although a more general discussion of the subject has been started by the Council of the Royal Geographical Society, we may here confine our observations to that particular branch of it with which we are more directly concerned—that is, with the spelling of Indian names. To begin with, it may be noted that the Royal Geographical Society has adopted for some years past what is known as the Hunterian system, for Indian names. The Hunterian system is a simplified form of that prescribed by the great Orientalist SIR WILLIAM JONES. It has many strong recommendations. It may be understood without any severe strain on the intellect; it dispenses with all diacritical marks except the acute accent; and as far as Indian place names go, it can be applied with very little trouble by merely taking the index to the "Imperial Gazetteer of India" as a guide. Moreover this system has been adopted by the Government of India as well as by the Royal Geographical Society. On the other hand there are disadvantages. It is not strictly followed by the India Office. In very few of the voluminous publications issued by order of the SECRETARY OF STATE in Council are place names invariably spelt as they are in the "Gazetteer." It does not agree with the system adopted by the Royal Asiatic Society. Last of all, and this strikes us as a very grave objection, it differs from the system adopted by the Royal Geographical Society for names of places outside India. Except for Indian names, the Royal Geographical Society uses the acute accent to denote the syllable on which stress is laid, for example, Somáli, Tel-el-Kebír. SIR WILLIAM HUNTER uses this accent for quite a different purpose—namely, to mark a long vowel. In words like Dinápur, Lohárdagá, spelt as in the "Imperial Gazetteer," the stress is distinctly not on the accented syllable; and SIR WILLIAM HUNTER'S accent does not imply a stress. We therefore have, according to the Royal Geographical Society's scheme, names of places in India spelt according to one system; names of places beyond the border spelt according to another. At the same time many trans-frontier names are mentioned in the "Imperial Gazetteer," and are spelt according to the Hunterian system, which in these cases is not recognised by the Royal Geographical Society. The fact is that the whole subject of Oriental transliteration requires to be reconsidered; and until some uniform system is formulated and practised with the sanction of the leading authorities, it can hardly be expected that the newspaper press will abandon its present habit of private judgment. In the preface to the first edition of the "Imperial Gazetteer," SIR WILLIAM HUNTER stated that his system was "irresistibly forcing its way into the English press." As a matter of fact, it has not even been adopted by the Times.

The obvious method of procedure would be for the Royal Geographical Society to take counsel with the India Office. Any system of transliteration agreed on between the Society and such delegates as the SECRETARY OF STATE might appoint would have a fair chance of becoming general throughout the British Empire. But it will not do to have two or three systems in force at one and the same time. A name like Peshawur ought not to be spelt in one way by the Indian authorities, in another by the India Office; and by both, according to a system which does not apply to places in Afghanistan a few miles distant. We may furthermore point out, even the names printed in the "Proceedings of the Royal Geographical Society" are not always spelt in accordance with the Rules which the President and Council would prescribe for public use.

WE understand that LIEUTENANT-COLONEL E. DURAND, C.B., is unlikely to return to his post as Resident at Khatmandu, Nepal, and that he will probably retire from the Service. This will leave a most desirable appointment in the Indian Political Department vacant.

The Queen has appointed Ney Elias, Esq., C.I.E., to be her Majesty's Consul-General for the Provinces of Khorassan and Seistan, to reside at Meshed.

Prince Henry of Orleans has arrived at Saigon. He will proceed direct to Hong Kong, and afterwards to Canton, whence he will go to Haiphong.

Prince Damrong of Siam has arrived at Cairo on his homeward journey.

M. Pavie, the well-known explorer in Indo-China, has been appointed French Consul-General at Bangkok.

Orders have been sent from the War Office for the 2nd battalion of the Royal West Kent Regiment, now at Malta, to embark on her Majesty's ship Serapis on Saturday next for India, to be stationed at Chakrata.

A telegram received at the Admiralty yesterday states that the Commander-in-Chief on the China Station was at Shanghai on the 26th inst., and will leave for Hong Kong to-day (Dec. 29).

Letters dated from Malta, received at Portsmouth from the troopship Crocodile, now on her way to India, report that twenty-four hours after leaving Portsmouth she went through the most terrific gale that has been experienced by that vessel for twenty years. The storm lasted for several hours, and with every sea the vessel shipped many tons of water. The troops suffered considerably by being rolled about the ship, and so violent were the concussion that two men were killed and several injured. The Crocodile left Port Said on Dec. 19 for Bombay.

The Kreuz Zeitung expresses its satisfaction that the British Government have not been able to make such arrangements as would allow of the Indian mail being sent via Salonica, instead of Brindisi. This, it says, will give Germany time to consider whether the change from Brindisi to Salonica is advisable, and will further allow her opportunity to acquire a greater influence on this the most important of international mail routes.

COMPLETION OF THE KHOJAK TUNNEL.

The following official paper is published in the Gazette of India for Dec. 5, 1891:—

OBSERVATIONS.—The Director-General of Railways forwards a short Preliminary Report from Mr. G. P. Rose, the Superintendent of Works of the Chaman Extension, reporting the completion of the Khojak Tunnel and of the extension of the Railway to New Chaman.

The tunnel, which is about 2½ miles long, was commenced on April 14, 1888, and the first construction train passed through on Sept. 5, 1891. The work was practically completed at the end of the same month.

The Director-General of Railways brings to notice the satisfactory manner in which this important project has been carried out from start to finish, recommends the grant of bonuses to certain officers and subordinates, and further asks that the Government of India may be pleased to accord its approval by an acknowledgment of the services of the officers by notification in the Gazette of India.

RESOLUTION.—His Excellency the Governor-General in Council is pleased to record his appreciation of the eminently satisfactory way in which the work has been executed in the face of grave difficulties encountered and under trying conditions of climate. He also desires that the thanks of the Government of India may be communicated to the staff engaged in the construction of this important project for the skill and energy displayed in bringing it to a successful completion.

His Excellency the Governor-General in Council desires more particularly to notice the services rendered by the following officers whose names have been especially brought forward as deserving of praise:—

- Mr. F. L. O'Callaghan, C.S.I., C.I.E., Engineer-in-Chief to May 1889.
- „ V. Rigny, Engineer-in-Chief to October 1889.
- „ F. E. Robertson, Engineer-in-Chief to December 1889.
- „ G. P. Rose, Superintendent of Works.
- „ R. W. Egerton, Executive Engineer.
- „ W. A. Johns, „ „
- „ R. J. Woods, „ „
- „ R. D. Perceval, „ „
- „ W. J. Weightman, „ „
- Captain W. J. Bythell, R.E., Assistant Engineer.
- Mr. J. E. Eaglesome, Assistant Engineer.
- „ W. F. O'Donoghue, Examiner.
- „ C. R. T. Balston, „ „
- „ M. McInerny, Storekeeper.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Director-General of Railways for information and communication to the officers concerned, and that it be published in the Gazette of India.

J. G. FORBES, Colonel, R.E.,
Secretary to the Govt. of India.

THE HUNZA-NAGAR EXPEDITION.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegrams have been received from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times:—

DEC. 24.—Fuller details have been received of the fighting at Nilt, in Hunza, on December 2. The enemy occupied a strong position, which had been improved by art. Colonel Durand opened fire with two mountain guns, but failed to make any impression. He therefore ordered an attack by 150 Goorkhas, under Lieutenants Boisragon and Badcock. They encountered a sharp fire, but, notwithstanding, they made their way to the inner gate, which they were unable to force open. Capt. Aylmer, who accompanied the party with some sappers, resolved to blow it in by means of gun-cotton, which was done, and the three officers rushed in, followed by 12 sepoy. A hand-to-hand fight ensued, in which Captain Aylmer and Lieutenant Badcock were severely wounded. The remainder of the storming party, who had been delayed in crossing the ravine, then came up, and, after a stubborn resistance, they drove out the enemy. The three British officers and their handful of men showed great dash and courage. It is stated that the enemy had a large number of breechloaders, but it is difficult to understand how they could have obtained them. Lieutenant Badcock's wound was a matchlock shot in the left arm which narrowly missed the artery. Captain Aylmer was still more severely wounded.

DEC. 28.—On the 20th Captain Colin Mackenzie, commanding the force at Nilt, attacked the Hunzais. Lieut. Manners Smith led an escalading party of 50 Sepoys of the 1st Regiment of the Cashmere Imperial Service troops, and was supported by Lieut. Taylor, of the 3rd Sikhs, with 50 more men. The tribesmen had erected lines of stone breastworks in a strong position on the cliffs at Mayun. The storming party advanced to close quarters under cover of a heavy rifle and shell fire, whereupon the enemy fled, losing 70 killed, many wounded, and 118 prisoners. Our troops behaved gallantly. The pursuit lasted till nightfall. The Nagar chief tendered absolute submission. Captain Mackenzie was to occupy his village on the 21st. Our loss was four Sepoys wounded.

We have received the following news from the India Office:—

“The following intelligence has been received at the India Office from Gilgit, dated Dec. 20:—Fifty men of the Cashmere Regiment, accompanied by Lieutenant Manners Smith, supported by another fifty of the same regiment under Lieutenant Taylor, scaled precipice opposite Nilt, captured the stone breastwork, the defenders being prevented from doing harm by the admirable arrangements of Captain Colin Mackenzie, commanding, who concentrated a heavy fire on them. Seventy of the enemy were killed, many wounded, and 118 taken prisoners. Finding their line pierced, the tribesmen fled. Captain Mackenzie followed rapidly, giving them no time to organise a stand. Mayun, then Gulmit and Pisan, were occupied, and the advanced force, thoroughly tired out, rested at the last-named place for the night. Casualties were four men wounded. Jafar Khan, of Nagar, has made complete submission.”

An Allahabad telegram of December 10 says:—There is no truth in a statement that two more regiments of the Cashmere Army have been ordered to march from Srinagar to Gilgit. The road over the passes is now practically closed for large bodies of men.

Mr. Olpherts, telegraph officer in charge of the survey for a line to Gilgit, had left Srinagar to examine the Zosojil Pass, which is believed to offer the best route to Astor. He probably will have to undergo considerable hardships, owing to the early fall of snow.

The returning party from Gilgit with the mules and oxen, under command of Sergeant Young, arrived at Bandapura and left that place on Nov. 29. One thousand coolies had been sent to help them to cross the Burzabal Pass, which is deeply covered with snow.

LIEUT. MANSFIELD'S BALLOON ASCENT.

PARTICULARS OF THE ACCIDENT.

THE following particulars of the terrible and fatal balloon accident to Lieut. Mansfield, short accounts of which have already been received by telegraph, are given in the Times of India of December 12:—

A terrible calamity was the outcome of Lieut. Mansfield's balloon ascent of Thursday. When at an altitude estimated by some at 1,000 feet, the balloon from some unexplained cause collapsed like a pricked bladder, and the aéronaut, the parachute, and the remains of the balloon descended with frightful rapidity, Mr. Mansfield himself being dashed to the earth with such tremendous force that life left; his crushed and mangled body within a few minutes of his descent.

THE PREPARATIONS FOR THE ASCENT.

At three o'clock, and even some time before that hour, crowds of both European and native spectators began to pour into the grounds, every seat was speedily occupied, while a vast number of persons in the reserved enclosure were only able to find standing room. A few minutes before four o'clock, his Excellency the Governor, accompanied by Capt. Cox, A.-D.-C. and Dr. Martin, his medical attendant, arrived, the band of the Marine Battalion playing the National Anthem by way of announcing his arrival. His Excellency was received by Colonel Wilson, Commissioner of Police, Bombay, Mr. H. A. Acworth, C.S., the Municipal Commissioner, and Mr. F. Southwell Piper, and conducted to a pretty little shamiana which had been erected by Mr. Carstensen, the Superintendent of the Gardens, in close proximity to the balloon, in front of which a couple of powerful telescopes, mounted on tripods, had been placed by Mr. Carl Jost, the optician of Hornby Row, in order that Lord Harris might be able to secure a full view of the ascent and descent. Lieutenant Mansfield who, as usual, was here, there, and everywhere supervising the arrangements for the ascent, was then called forward and presented to his Excellency, who warmly shook him by the hand and wished him every success in his daring venture. The plucky aéronaut in the very best of spirits immediately afterwards returned to the centre of the arena in which the balloon, held by a crowd of stalwart bluejackets from H.M.S. Marathon, was being rolled from one side to the other by the sharp breeze which had sprung up an hour or so earlier, and set about arranging the somewhat complicated lines of his parachute. These having all been arranged to his satisfaction, and all else seeming in readiness, he crossed over to Mrs. Southwell Piper, who was standing outside the little tent in which he had been quartered since Friday morning, and having handed her his naval cap, he unpinned his Royal Humane Society's medal from his breast and gave it to her, saying as he did so, "You had better take this, Mrs. Piper, as I may lose it." Then he shook her by the hand, at the same time remarking, "Good-bye, Mrs. Piper, I shall see you again soon." Full of confidence as to success, he then went back to the balloon, and having had the parachute lines placed over his left shoulder in the usual fashion, he took his seat on the small wooden trapeze below the mouth of the balloon, and a minute or two later he was heard to shout in a clear, firm voice, "Stand by, men," and immediately afterwards a loud cheer rose from the lips of the spectators as the balloon shot away, and the aéronaut responded by a wave of the hand. Before the ascent, speculation was rife all over the ground as to what height he would achieve, but from the moment of the start a hush fell over the whole crowd of spectators.

A MOMENT OF HORROR.

In the midst of this silence which had suddenly taken the place of the volubility of a moment before, the balloon was seen to swerve, strangely, first to the south-east and then to the north-west. It had risen to, perhaps, seven or eight hundred feet—some estimated the height at a thousand feet—and the aéronaut could still be plainly seen sitting on the cross bar stretched across the diameter of the "ring" of the balloon to which the netting ropes were made fast. The ring carrying the parachute lines was round his body, under the armpits, as usual, and seen through the binoculars he looked prepared for any emergency and ready to leap off at any moment. It was a theory of Lieutenant Mansfield's that whatever happened to a balloon, its occupant, if his parachute had adequate appliances, need fear nothing. If, for instance, in the case of a balloon used in warfare, the machine was fired at and perforated, the aeronaut could, by using an automatic "cut-off" instantaneously free his parachute from the balloon, and by a system of valves and guide lines, steer himself into safety. This "cut-off," which is a clever adaptation of the ordinary slip-tackle in which the grip of a hinged hook is released by the pulling of a string, was actually being made in this city for Lieutenant Mansfield at the time of his ascent. This tackle was not intended for ordinary use, but Mr. Mansfield had drawn up a programme of balloon and parachute experiments which it was his intention of exhibiting later on as an exemplification of the utility of parachuting in time of war. He intended to send up a large balloon to which, in addition to two parachutes, a basket was to be attached.

COLLAPSE OF THE BALLOON.

At a height variously estimated between six hundred and a thousand feet the balloon swerved to and fro. The movement was hardly to be accounted for by the current, for the machine seemed to shiver during the swerving. Almost before it was possible to realise what was happening, the balloon split into two. It seemed to be cut into two portions as an orange might be cut by a knife, and for a fraction of a second two attenuated balloons seemed to be trembling in the atmosphere. Then the whole structure collapsed. The sides of the balloon fell together like a crumpled handkerchief, and for a brief moment of the frightfully rapid fall nothing could be seen but the body of the aeronaut entangled in the silk and rigging of the balloon and parachute. Even at that terrible moment, however, it could be seen that the aeronaut was endeavouring to leap free of his entanglement and trust to his parachute. His attempt was vain. The remains of the balloon itself were descending, and there were no means of detaching the line which connected the parachute with the machine. Some seconds elapsed before it was possible to realise what terrible tragedy was in progress in mid-air. The great silken bag had collapsed utterly, and with its human freight was descending, a shapeless mass, at a speed impossible to estimate. As it disappeared behind the palm trees, less than half a mile off, a heart-rending cry arose from the great group of spectators. Spell-bound for the moment, as the apprehension of tragedy seized them, the crowd found voice. "My God!" cried one, "the balloon has burst." "O God, help and save him!" rang out a woman's voice. "He's killed! he's killed!" shouted others. Several women fainted, and the cries of the children, infected by the alarm of their elders, rang out over the enclosure. At the instant of the calamity, when the collapsed balloon began its rapid descent, the huge concourse of spectators stood as if turned to stone. A moment later there came from that great crowd an agonised cry, almost instantaneously followed by a wild rush in the direction towards which the balloon had fallen.

When the balloon left the ground, Mr. Cottrell, the Lieutenant's old friend and shipmate, and Mr. R. D. Hughes made their way with all haste to a carriage and pair to go off to the assistance of the aeronaut, who was expected to fall in the neighbourhood of the Gardens. But, just as they were stepping into the carriage Mr. Hughes looked round, and was completely staggered to see the balloon in a semi-collapsed state and descending to earth with fearful rapidity, Mr. Cottrell noticing the terrible spectacle practically at the same moment. At this time the aeronaut was apparently trying to break away his parachute, but it was at once only too evident that he would not succeed, for although he had, to all appearances, got free from the trapeze, he was getting entangled in the netting of the apparatus, and the balloon falling with such deadly swiftness gave him no opportunity of breaking the thin hank of rope which held the parachute to it. Without stopping to take a second look at the balloon both gentlemen rushed with the utmost speed in the direction in which it was descending. Having cleared flower-beds and other obstacles they reached a stone wall of some eight feet in height studded with broken glass. On clearing this a most shocking sight met their gaze. There, a few yards from the spot on which they alighted, was stretched the poor aeronaut, deathly pale, with the muscles of his face twitching convulsively and evidently in the throes of death. The wrecked balloon and parachute were lying around him, while under his back was the wooden trapeze on which he had so shortly before been seated. A minute or two had elapsed since he had reached the earth, but despite the fact that he was unconscious he seemed to be resting on his elbows, and his eyes, partly open, were staring up to the sky. His hands were tightly clenched, and his lips pressed closely together. With the exception of a slight graze on the chin and another mark of a similar nature on one of his temples, his face was not disfigured, but the poor fellow's legs were both horribly crushed, and the bones protruding through the flesh, a rent on the trouser of the left leg displaying a large clot of blood and a mass of splintered bone which sent a cold shiver through one as he looked on it. Brandy somewhat revived the injured man, and, after taking it, he made two efforts to speak, but both were unsuccessful. Dr. Edward McEvoy was very soon in attendance, and he had barely clambered over the wall and taken his place by the Lieutenant's side when Dr. Langley joined him; Dr. Martin, H.E. the Governor's medical attendant—who was especially dispatched to the scene by Lord Harris himself—accompanied by Captain Cox, arriving about the same time. With bated breath everybody watched the doctor's movements, but, though there was life, of hope there was none. The case was beyond all human skill, and the doctors could only incline their heads significantly, and wait for the end. A camp cot was quickly brought, and the terribly mutilated form of Mr. Mansfield was tenderly placed on it by Mr. Cottrell, with the assistance of some of the Marathon's men. The Lieutenant was still alive, but life was ebbing fast, and, as the men with their heads bared carried the all but lifeless body over the short space of ground between the spot where it had fallen and Mr. Dewey's bungalow in the Victoria Cross Road hardly a word was uttered by the crowd of persons following—only the measured tread of the party of saddened followers could be heard. The cot was deposited for a few minutes outside the bungalow, and restoratives were once more applied, but it was too late, for Lieutenant Mansfield had breathed his last.

THE INQUEST.

Dr. Thomas Blaney, the City Coroner, subsequently held an inquiry into the circumstances touching the death of Lieutenant Edward Mansfield, aged about 26 years.

Dr. Sidney Smith said: I am Surgeon to the Coroner, and live at Mazagon. I have examined the body of the deceased with the Coroner's jury in a house in Victoria Cross Road. There was no external injury to the head, beyond a small bruise on the right eyelid. The tibia and fibula of the right leg were both fractured between the middle and lower third. The tibia was protruding through the skin. There was a compound fracture of the left femur. There were no other external marks of injury. The skull was not fractured. From the evidence I have heard and the post mortem appearance, I am of opinion that death was due to injuries received by a fall from a height.

Dr. Blaney, in summing up to the jury the circumstances relating to the death of the deceased, said it appeared from the evidence before them that he had been preparing his balloon for an ascent that day in the Victoria Gardens, and seemed to have had intelligent people with him for that purpose. This could be seen from the witness belonging to the s.s. Marathon, who described how he made fast the parachute, which he said was perfectly safe. The officer of the s.s. Lombardy also said that the deceased expressed himself perfectly satisfied and that it was safe to go up with. The same witness said he took all the precautions that he knew for making the balloon as reliable as possible. There were several theories given as to the cause of the bursting of the balloon upon which the jury must formulate their own opinion. The jury had examined the balloon and had seen the way it burst from above downwards, and now it was for them to arrive at the most reasonable theory that caused the bursting. The jury had, moreover, to bear in mind that the part that had burst was not the portion which this seaman had repaired. In referring to the accident, Dr. Blaney reminded the jury that it was one of the very saddest of cases. Here was a young and promising officer with a life before him full of very great advantages to himself and family. But it was lost in this remarkable way, because accidents did very often occur in these balloon ascents. It was, indeed, a very regrettable matter, and he had no doubt the jury would regret that this accident should have occurred in this unfortunate way. The point for the jury to consider was whether everything was done that should have been done for making the ascent a safe one, or whether there was any neglect on the deceased's own part or on the part of anybody else for making a safe ascent, or whether there was anything done that should not have been done. If the jury was of opinion that everything was carried out for making the ascent a safe one, the only verdict they could return was in accordance with Dr. Smith's evidence, namely, the fall from the great height was the cause of the extinction of life. If the jury wished to put the word "accidental" into the verdict they were at liberty to do so. The word "accidental" would then mean that it could not have been foreseen and the balloon burst through accidental causes. They had either to give their verdict that the deceased died simply by the bursting of a balloon and falling to the ground, or, as Dr. Smith put it, by the accidental giving way of his balloon whilst he was ascending and falling upon the ground.

The jury, without retiring, returned a verdict that "The death of the deceased was caused by the accidental bursting of a balloon at a high altitude, when he was making a balloon ascent from the Victoria Gardens."

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral of Lieutenant Mansfield took place at four o'clock on Dec. 11. The body had lain during the night at Mr. Dewey's bungalow, where the inquest was held, under the care of a watch of sailors from H.M.S. Marathon. In the course of the next morning it was removed to the bungalow of Mr. Thomas Lee, at The Willows, Mazagon, from which the funeral cortege left at 4 P.M. His Excellency the Governor was present with a part of his staff, and there was a very large concourse of persons.

TERRIBLE RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

FULL particulars are given in the papers received by the present mail of the terrible railway accident which occurred on the North-Western Railway on Dec. 6, when two trains ran into each other at about 1.30 between Satghara and Okara stations. The following official telegrams have been issued by the North-Western Railway management:—Telegram from S. M., Okara, despatched at 1.15 of 5th inst.:—"One up Calcutta mail started from here at 1.13. Satghara has started 8 down Calcutta mail on false line clear. Both trains on road from opposite directions." Telegram from S. M., Okara, despatched at 2.50 of date:—"One up and 8 down collided four miles from Okara, between Satghara and Okara, at about 1.30. Engines derailed; some carriages smashed; some human lives lost and injured; medical and other assistance urgently wanted; line blocked. Exact information not received. One first-class passenger has come in and gave the information." From inquiries made at the railway station it was found that only the European first-class passenger was booked by the train from Lahore and one second-class passenger. From early morning the platform of the Lahore railway station was crowded with European and native gentlemen and ladies, who besieged the telegraph office at the station, making anxious inquiries as to the number of dead and wounded, and sent several urgent telegrams to the station at Okara, to the address of their relatives and friends who were supposed to have left Lahore by the train, inquiring as to their safety, but no replies to telegrams were received till 12 A.M. The special train with the heads of the several departments of the railway, including the officiating manager, Colonel Boughey, and the Civil Surgeon, left Lahore at 7 A.M. for the scene of the accident, and another special train, in which the Assistant Inspector-General of the Railway Police was to have gone, left at 12 A.M., to bring the dead and the wounded back to Lahore, where efficient arrangements for the treatment of the wounded were made. The latter special was timed to return to Lahore by 3 P.M. This train, however, owing to long detentions on the road, did not arrive at Lahore till a few minutes after six in the evening with the mails and passengers, which were transhipped at the scene of the accident, together with the wounded, of whom fifty were brought to Lahore in brake vans and covered goods waggons, in charge of Dr. Center and Assistant-Surgeon Dhulip Singh. There was stated to be altogether 150 persons injured, of whom about 100 were seriously wounded. There were forty persons killed, two of these being native employés of the railway. The dead were left at Okara. Drivers Field and Gough and the Assistant Locomotive Superintendent, Mr. Bailey, narrowly escaped; Mr. Field and Mr. Bailey having jumped out of the engine prior to the collision, and Gough and his fireman having been, according to their own statement, thrown out by the shock. Both the European guards also escaped injury. Of the total number of wounded several were taken by Dr. Crossby to Montgomery for treatment and fifty were brought to Lahore, while the rest were taken away by their friends and relatives without medical treatment. At Wanradharam, where the train was detained for two hours owing to the engine having gone to Changa Manga for water, the Civil Surgeon performed an operation on a wounded man in the train, amputating his leg, the operation being urgently needed. On arrival of the wounded at Lahore a large number of people rushed on to the platform; among these were the relatives of the wounded men, who exhibited great signs of grief and tried to console the wounded. Three third-class carriages were smashed to splinters. The engines and the permanent way also suffered considerably. The wounded, among whom are some hopeless cases, were carried from the railway station in doolies and charpoys to the Mayo Hospital for treatment, where accommodation was reserved for them at the request of the railway authorities. The native stationmaster to whose neglect the accident is attributed says that the driver of the up-train snatched the telegram, while passing through the station, from the hand of a sweeper, and omitted to receive the "all-right" signal. He will be prosecuted. The latest official version to hand places the killed at thirty-eight.—Allahabad Morning Post, December 7.

Until official reports are published, says the Pioneer of Dec. 7, it is impossible to speak with confidence of the details of the accident between Okara and Satghara stations, but from the narrative of those present the facts are as follows:—Both trains had received "line clear," but that given at Satghara station was wrongly given, as the Okara stationmaster had cancelled "line clear" sent to Satghara. The two trains met each other on the single line of rails. The driver, named Field, and Mr. Bailey, Assistant Locomotive Superintendent of the railway, were on the engine of the train from Lahore, and observed a red light in the distance. They thought at first they must be nearer Okara than they had imagined, but when they also noticed sparks they recognised that something was wrong, and Driver Field, who behaved well throughout, slowed his engine to twelve miles an hour. Nothing appears to have been noticed on the other train, which dashed up at full speed. Seeing this, Field and Bailey jumped off the engine, shouting to the native driver to do the same. He did not, and was smashed.

A terrible scene then presented itself, a large number of dead being horribly mangled and jammed together, so that an enumeration was only possible by counting the heads found besides those who were killed and wounded. A very slight majority of the passengers were unhurt and unaware that an accident had taken place. Many were not even awakened. This was owing to two circumstances. First, on the train from Lahore a bolt appears to have broken behind the third-class carriage next the engine, so that while most in that carriage were killed all the rest of the train rebounded and hardly even felt the shock. The second circumstance is that in the train from Mooltan large bogey carriage near the engine appears to have acted like a battering ram, crushing the carriages and killing the occupants between itself and the engine, but protecting the carriages behind from injury. All the killed were coolies or workmen. Only one boy was injured and not one woman or child. The only European hurt was a soldier, Corporal Corfield, Warwickshire Regiment, who has a slight bruise on his forehead. He gave great help in extricating the dead and wounded. About fourteen wounded who required medical attendance came to Lahore and about ten went to Montgomery. Four of the wounded have since been discharged from hospital, able to walk. Among the wounded was a pleader of Lahore, named Elahi Buksh. One old man had his leg amputated en route. Most of the wounded suffered a concussion of the spine. The stationmaster who caused the accident explains that he "gave line clear" to the station sweeper for the driver, and when "line clear" was cancelled he sent for it from the sweeper, but the latter had already given it to the driver and the train had gone.

Everyone speaks highly of the services rendered by the railway staff and the medical staff. Traffic was restored by next morning by means of a diversion at the scene of the accident. Three hundred rupees were found on the dead.

The Population of Japan.—The census of the Japanese Empire on the last day of last year showed a population of 40,453,451, of which 20,431,097 were males, and 20,022,354 females. The total number of dwelling-houses was 7,806,052. These figures show an increase over the previous year (the Japanese census being an annual one) of 34,820 houses and 381,441 persons. According to social status there were 3,768 persons belonging to the noble class, 2,008,641 to the gentry, or old military, and 38,441,052 heimin, or "common people."

MANIPORE.

The Indian Mirror describes the death of the ex-Maharaja of Manipore as "the most atrocious of modern political crimes." He died, we are told, of "sheer starvation," for which the Government of India is held responsible. At the same time, the writer acknowledges that an allowance of 250 rs. a month was placed at the disposal of the deceased on his withdrawing from Calcutta! Another native paper, the Hindu Patrika, holds that the ex-Maharaja succumbed of a broken heart. "As a pious Baishnava and devoted follower of Sri Gouranga, he must have got the 'lotus feet' of him for whom his heart had wept so long." The Patrika prudently leaves the question of the ex-Maharaja's supposed grievances to a higher tribunal, but does not fail to indicate its sympathy with the view that Government has been guilty of an "atrocious" crime.

According to the Pioneer, two of the three Manipori Princes in Calcutta are ill, Pucca Senha being in rather a critical state. They persisted in rejecting the filtered water provided for them and their followers, preferring to bathe in and drink from a dirty tank near their residence. They also rejected all offers of medical aid. It is not to be wondered at that the ex-Maharaja died outright. Dr. Raye has visited the invalids, who have now agreed to accept his treatment. One Prince, who is in good health, left Calcutta on Dec. 3 with his followers. Pucca Senha and a third brother, with twelve followers, remain behind pending the recovery of the former.

COMMERCIAL.

CALCUTTA, December 8.

THE Directors of the Bank of Bengal at their meeting held on Dec. 3, made no change in the rate of interest, the official minimum remaining at 2½ per cent.

The following changes have taken place in the Bank's figures for the week ending Dec. 1:—

LIABILITIES.

Treasury Balance at Head Office	Rs. 11,46,877	Decrease
Do. at Branches	77,402	Increase
Other Deposits	26,09,672	Decrease
Post Bills	23,672	Increase

ASSETS.

Bank's Investments	Rs. 1,89,820	Increase
Loans	11,53,120	Increase
Accounts of Credits	5,63,176	Decrease
Mercantile Bills	3,21,314	Decrease
Cash at Head Office	25,52,331	Decrease
Do. at Branches	18,84,243	Decrease

The analysis of the above figures shows an increase of over 28½ lacs in the ordinary trade demand, made up as follows:—By a decrease of over 26 lacs in "Other Deposits" and an increase of over 11½ lacs in "Loans," minus an increase of about ¼ of a lac in "Post Bills," together with a decrease of over 5½ lacs in "Accounts of Credits" and about 3½ lacs in "Mercantile Bills." The treasury balance at head office stands decreased by about 11½ lacs, while there is an increase of over ½ of a lac at the branches. The Bank's investments were increased to the extent of about 2 lacs. The final result of these changes is a decrease of over 25½ lacs in the cash at head office, and about 15 lacs at the branches, making the exact total 4,73,73,405 rs., equal to 57·2 per cent. of the liabilities of the Bank, against a proportion of 59·5 per cent. last week.

EXCHANGE.—A steadier feeling has been experienced in Exchange. The rise in bar silver caused rates to advance 3·32, and although there has been a slight decline since the highest point was reached, an upward tendency has again been observed.

TEA.—The sales of Dec. 3 consisted of 13,800 packages, of which 13,600 were sold. There was rather better competition generally. The higher grades were again in most request. Common kinds showed no material change. About 11,500 packages will be offered next Thursday.

JUTE.—Towards the latter end of last week a good business was done for America, some 20,000 bales being sold at 35·8 rs. to 36 rs., which shows an advance of 1·8 rs. since the beginning of the month. The news of these sales set the loose Jute market on fire, and the excitement still continues, many dealers refusing to sell at all. Balers have consequently raised their pretensions and now ask impossible rates.

GUNNIES.—Prices have ruled fairly steady, but business has not been on a large scale. Burma buyers took a further line of C's for the season, and some small business is reported in E bags for January, May. At the close the rise in Jute is making mills less anxious for business.

HESSIANS are firm with a moderate business doing in wheat bags for San Francisco, and 8 oz. 40" cloth for New York.

JOINT STOCK SHARES.—Business in the share market has slackened off considerably, and if the transactions in jute mill scrip are excepted, it has been next to nothing. In jute, Barnagores were in good request at the commencement, and prices rapidly rose from 94 to 100, which was the highest point touched, but at the close they are slightly easier. Fort Glosters, too, appear firmer, and quote a shade better. Howrahs (both Preference and Ordinary) are steady at quotations, while Budge-Budges are decidedly weaker. In gold, Sonapets prices have recovered fully 1 a. Bengal gold and silvers, too, have been very steady with upward tendency. In other stocks there has been scarcely anything doing. Tea is utterly neglected, and not a single transaction has been reported. Cotton is in no better position, and in miscellaneous companies, with the exception of a few shares in some favourite stocks which have been taken up for investment, the business has been practically nil. Bank shares are in fair request, and are readily saleable at 1,000 rs.

BANK OF BENGA.

Rate of Interest for Demand Loans' 2½ per cent.

BOMBAY, December 11.

The export markets are quiet. In cotton, the new crop of which is coming to market much later than last season's, only a few small lots of early arrivals have been taken by exporters, while purchases of new and old stuff by spinners have been upon a very small scale; and in wheat, receipts of which show an excess of not far from half a million tons compared with last year's supplies, transactions have been upon a small or moderate scale in a dull or quiet market. Exchange has shown little movement, and rates are exactly on a level with those which previously ruled, the most noticeable feature having been the dulness of business both ways. Government paper has receded ½ per cent. in Fours. Freight rates are weak, with only a moderate demand for prompt shipment. There has been a fair retail demand in the import market, and prices are generally maintained in spite of lower quotations from Manchester, but wholesale dealers are still irregular buyers.

MONEY.—Although the Presidency Bank's cash balance at the close of last week, standing at 368½ lacs, showed an increase of little more than a lac during the period covered by the statement against an addition of 6½ lacs in the week preceding, the demand for money for purposes of trade had not become greater, and the financial position generally was virtually unchanged, though the first pickings of the new crop of cotton have (later than last season) begun to come to market. In the items given in the return, which go to indicate the movement in the trade demand, there had been the large addition of 29 lacs to Private Deposits; and though Loans, instead of falling off as they had done in the previous week, had increased by nearly 7½ lacs, while Bills Discounted had increased by nearly 5 lacs, the net diminution in the trade demand was represented in the return by no less than 16½ lacs, or more than double the falling off disclosed by the previous statement. This gain in the balance, however, was neutralised to a great extent by some rather heavy withdrawals of Government Deposits. No change has been made in the Bank's rates, and 2 per cent. remains the minimum.

Imports.—PIECE-GOODS.—The wholesale demand for staple grey goods has continued irregular; but there has been a steady retail inquiry. Rates generally have been maintained at the level of previous quotations with a few unimportant exceptions, but dealers are willing enough to realise their holdings on the basis of current prices. Stocks are somewhat reduced. In bleached goods, light weights of shirtings and medium makes of mulls and Jaconets have been in good demand; other descriptions show no change in position or value. Dyed printed Turkey red and local goods show no change. The week's clearances of imported goods have been about 4,000 packages; and of local goods, 2,000 bales.

YARNS.—The market for imported twist has been quiet with only a small business passing, but prices are quite unchanged. Sales of local spinnings at Hong Kong were 4,500 bales, and at Shanghai 6,500 bales, for the fortnight ending Dec. 8, with exchange at Hong Kong on Bombay at 22½ rs. China buyers here have operated to a small extent, the sales for the week having aggregated about 1,000 bales at slightly easier figures, and the market closes dull.

METALS.—A large business has been done in copper in a firm market, and prices have advanced 10 a. per cwt. Yellow metal has been taken to a moderate extent at an advance of 2 a. per cwt., at which the market is steady. Iron has been steady at previous rates, with not much doing in any description.

COAL.—This market has been weak. Sales have been reported since last mail left of Powell's Duffryn, January-February shipment, at 15½ rs. per ton, and of Davison's West Hartley, December-January shipment, from 14 rs. to 13½ rs. per ton.

Exports.—COTTON.—The feeling has been quiet, with some little fluctuation in rates for the new crop; but business has been upon a very small scale, shippers having taken only a few hundred bales in the aggregate of early parcels of New Oomra growths, and a little Bengal; while the mills have bought about 3,000 bales of New Oomra descriptions, and old Oomra, and Dhollera kinds, and old Compta Ginned. The market closes quiet, with prices exactly where they were a week ago. The arrivals of new cotton during the week have been 5,100 bales, compared with 25,300 bales received during the same period last year; and the receipts of new cotton, so far, are 70,500 bales more than they were in 1890 at this time.

WHEAT.—Business in this staple has been upon a small or at most a moderate scale, in a quiet or dull market, but without any quotable change in prices. The excess in arrivals of wheat in Bombay this year compared with last is no less than 423,958 cwt.

SEEDS closed steady on Dec. 5 with moderate export business passing, and with rates half an anna per cwt. higher for linseed and 8 annas per candy up in Gingelly; and, on the market reopening on Dec. 7, an active demand from shippers was felt for both the above descriptions, and a large business was done at a further advance of ½ anna per cwt. in the former, and 8 annas per candy in the latter in a firm market. The activity continued on the following day, and another rise, to the same extent, was established; but thereafter inquiry subsided, and only a moderate business was done, though the tone of the market remained steady and prices unchanged.

ANNUAL BONUS POLICIES. THEIR SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

I.—Economy of Premium at Outset of Assurance.
 The Premium charged by the "UNIVERSAL," on the Policy being effected, and irrespective of reduction by Cash Bonus annually after six payments, has always been from 5 to 10 per cent. lower than the average scale of Premiums charged by such few other Life Offices that divide Bonuses every year. The rates of the "UNIVERSAL" are also more economical than those of the average of Offices declaring Bonuses only once every five years.
II.—Low Rates of Premium Reduced by Annual Cash Bonus.
 The practice of an Annual Division of Profits has long been considered by leading authorities to be the most just and regular that can be adopted. Its success in the case of the "UNIVERSAL" has been shown in more than half a century's experience, by enabling returns of Premium to be made to the assured averaging upwards of 45 per cent. of the original rates charged, thus practically reducing the average outlay for the Policy to 55 per cent., or 11s. in the pound, of the contract rates stipulated to be paid.
III.—Large Reversionary Bonuses Annually Added.
 The sum allotted to each Policy at the yearly Division of Profits may be applied either in reduction of the current year's Premium, or in annual augmentation of the amount assured, by the addition to the Policy of such Reversionary Bonus as each year's return of premium will assure as a Single Premium at the then age.
